There was considerable business. At the time I went in there, in fact, I worked nights. I don't know how many cases there were, but there were quite a great many cases.

Q. You were also asked, were you not?-

Did you ever have occasion to discuss the indebtedness or did the indebtedness arise in your favor from your work with Judge Rankin that you discussed with Judge Ritter?

And you answered "Yes", did you not?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you not also asked?-

Tell us about that; when and where and what happened?

And did you not answer as follows?-

Answer. At the time I went in the office there were certain cases that Judge Ritter and Judge Rankin talked about that Judge Ritter retained an interest in, and I was notified of that, and the arrangement was that on all other cases, whether pending or not; that is, all new cases, I would receive the full percentage on. All pending cases, with the exception of the ones that were named, I would be paid according to the amount of work done since I went into the office. That arrangement had been gained. into the office. That arrangement had been going on for about a year, I think, and I was down in Miami, and every time I was down here I took occasion to drop in and speak to Judge Ritter.

That was your answer?—A. That is right.

Q. You were also asked by Mr. Hoffman, or rather you were interrupted, and Mr. Hoffman said, "All right, go ahead", and you said-

Answer. I mentioned to him one time—he asked me how my association was, and I said, "All right; I am working hard." I remember one thing he said. He said, "Well, if you will work hard and speed Judge Rankin up and keep those clients," he said, "he has got some excellent clients, and if you can hold them your percentage will make you a nice little piece of money itself." I told him at that time that I was very well satisfied except the money that was coming to me came very slow; in other words, that I thought the fees were earned, and it was a long time afterward before I got my 15 percent, and I would have to ask for it. Not that I didn't get it; I don't mean I didn't get it, but I figured it was embarrassing to keep asking for it.

Is that correct?-A. That is correct. That was my testimony.

Q. You were also asked, were you not?-

You didn't get it as promptly as possible?

And you answered?-

I just made a statement to Judge Ritter.

Was that your answer?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were further asked, were you not:

Do you recall anything stated by Judge Ritter at that time in relation to any debt due to him?

And did you not answer as follows:

Answer. Yes, sir; very distinctly. He told me at that time that that was one of Judge Rankin's faults or failings. That he did not go out and collect money like he should, and that sometimes he was slow in turning it over. He told me he said, "Why, Jack, all this time he has never paid me what he owes me from our dissolution."

Is that correct?—A. That is correct.

Q. You were further asked, were you not:

Now, do you recall when that conversation took place, or about

And did you not answer as follows:

Answer. Yes, sir. That was around the first of the year of 1930. At least it was some time during the winter of 1930. He told me at that time he said, "However, I want you to know Judge Rankin is honest"; and he said, "He will eventually pay you"; and neither one of us said anything disparaging against Judge Rankin; and I am not insinuating anything now.

Is that correct?—A. That is right.

Q. On cross-examination by Mr. Hoffman, did you not sav--A. On cross-examination?

Q. I beg your pardon. Then Mr. Hoffman said, "Take the witness"; and the witness, yourself, volunteered this:

I have something else to say.

A. That is right.

Q. Mr. Hoffman said, "Go ahead"; and then you continued. did you not, as follows:

Later, after this famous Whitehall case was started, which I got a part of, I made a special trip to Miami to see Judge Ritter to ask him his advice as to whether or not he thought—he was the one who heard the arrangement I made with Judge Rankin—and whether or not he thought I would be expecting too much to expect 15 percent of that fee when I had not participated in the case; and I again made a slight complaint about getting my money in dribbles, but eventually getting them; and I remember that that was in the winter of 1931; and the reason I recall it distinctly is because night before last I sat with an old man that I had talked with just after I left Judge Ritter. Judge Ritter at that time told me again, he said, "Now, Judge Rankin is honest"; and from my association with him I knew that he was. "However, just now he has paid me a part of what he owes me with all this money he has collected", I said. I was complaining with money coming in that I should have been paid promptly my percentage, which I have since been paid.

Then were you not cross-examined by Mr. Youmans, being asked this question:

In 1931, the date that you state Judge Ritter said he had just been paid part of his money, did Judge Ritter state then that he had been concerned about that very much?

And did you not answer:

No, sir.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you not further questioned as follows:

Was there any indication, or did he give any indication that he had been concerned as to whether Rankin was going to pay him or not?

And did you not answer:

No. sir.

A. That is right.

Q. Were you not further questioned as follows:

Mr. Salisbury, you stated that you talked to Judge Ritter about the time of this dissolution, and he told you to come in there with Mr. Rankin and that Mr. Rankin was going to have lots of business and he needed help.

Is that correct?-A. Right.

Q. And you answered, did you not:

Yes, sir. In fact, I looked the books over myself and ascertained the business.

Is that correct?-A. That is right.

Q. Were you not further asked:

You stated you had to work very hard and you worked at night sometimes?

And you answered:

Some nights.

A. That is right.

Q. And were you not further asked:

Did the business begin coming in as you state Judge Ritter said it would?

And did you not reply:

Yes, sir; the business come in pretty well.

A. That is right.

Q. You were further questioned, were you not, as follows: Did you pay anything to get in with Judge Rankin?

And you answered.

No, sir.

A. That is right.

Q. You were further questioned:

Were you to participate in the law library when you went in there?

And you answered:

No, sir; I had my own.

A. That is right.

Q. Were you not further questioned as follows:

When you went in were you to participate in all the new and old business 15 percent?

And did you not answer:

I was to participate my full 15 percent on all new business, and get my percentage on the work done on the business in the office when I came in.

A. That is right.

Q. And were you not further questioned:

Did you and Mr. Rankin make any income-tax returns on your partnership business?

And did you not answer:

I am not in partners with Judge Rankin. I made my personal one; yes, sir.

A. That is right.

Q. Were you not further questioned by Mr. Hooper, a member of the subcommittee?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he not question you as follows:

Are you still with Judge Rankin?

And did you not answer:

Yes, sir

And Mr. Hooper continued questioning you:

In the same capacity or are you a partner now?

And you answered:

No; the arrangement is slightly changed. I get my office space and telephone in return for the very little I do now.

A. Yes, sir

Q. And were you further questioned by Mr. Hooper, as follows:

But you don't have a partnership?

And you answered:

No, sir; never have had a partnership.

Then, being questioned by Mr. TARVER, one of the subcommittee, were you not asked this question:

How much did you get of the Whitehall fee from Judge Rankin?

And did you not reply:

I haven't got the figures with me, but it was either $2,200 or $2,600; around 15 percent. However, we made a blanket settlement at the last that was satisfactory to both of us. Now, I got a little more than that; that was what I got up to the time we made our settlement, and then I got an additional payment.

And then were you not further questioned by Mr. TARVER, as follows:

How much did you get in fees in cases which were pending at the time you became associated with Mr. Rankin?

And did you not answer:

You mean how much did my percentage amount to out of the cases that were on file in the office when I went over there?

Mr. TARVER said:

That's right.

And did you not answer:

Well, now, I couldn't tell you exactly. It was according to the amount of work done, for instance, if I would take care of a brief in a case—

And then you were interrupted by Mr. TARVER with this question:

We have gone over that before. I thought you might approximately recall the amount received from those cases. If you don't, all right.

And did you not answer:

No. sir: I do not recall that,

A. That is right.

Q. Is not that all of the testimony that you gave before the subcommittee?—A. Yes, sir; that is correct.

Q. You did not testify before the subcommittee the same as you have testified before this honorable Court, did you?—
A. I think I explained that to you. I did not have a chance to talk to Mr. Hoffman except about 2 minutes before I went on that stand.

Q. Please answer categorically.—A. You heard how I testified. That was my testimony before the subcommittee;

Q. You said nothing in the testimony before the subcommittee about the conversation with Judge Ritter that you testified about before this honorable Court, when you said this on yesterday:

He-

Meaning Judge Ritter-

said at that time and in my presence and to me, he said, "Jack, I have sold out lock, stock, and barrel to Judge Rankin, with the exception of that picture of Chief Justice Marshall, and I will give that to you."

You said nothing about that before the subcommittee, did you?—A. No; but that is my testimony and the truth.

Q. Yes?—A. That is right.

Q. When you were before the subcommittee you knew all the facts that you now know, did you not?—A. I did not recall everything I could testify to at that time; but I have very diligently attempted to truthfully tell it this time, which I am doing.

- Q. So that you have been very diligent in getting together the testimony that you have given before this honorable Court; is that correct?—A. Not getting together; refreshing my memory.
- Q. With whom did you refresh your memory on that subject?—A. I refreshed my memory on that subject through Mr. Callaway for one, who is here, on the sale. On what was said at the time I went in, I still have the picture of Chief Justice Marshall, and that recalled it to my mind when Judge—
- Q. But you had the picture of Chief Justice Marshall at the time you testified before the subcommittee, did you not?—A. That is right; yes, sir.
- Q. And Mr. Callaway was not present at that time, was he?—A. At which time?
- Q. At the time you testified before the subcommittee.—
 A. You said he was what—was not what?
- Q. Mr. Callaway was not present at the time of the conversation between you and Judge Ritter, was he?—A. This conversation—
- Q. Please answer my question.—A. I do not know which conversation you are referring to.
- Q. I am talking about the conversation that you stated, in this Court, took place between you and Judge Ritter.—A. And Judge Rankin. That is my—refresh your memory, and I will tell you. The conversation that I had when Judge Ritter said he had sold out to Judge Rankin was in Judge Rankin's office, Judge Rankin present and Judge Ritter present and myself present, and that is when I went into that office.
- Q. And you said not one word about that at the time you were interrogated before the subcommittee?—A. I told Mr. Hoffman—
- Q. Please answer my question.—A. Not on the stand; no, sir. The minute I got off I told Mr. Hoffman about it.
- Q. Mr. Salisbury, I perceive you are quite willing to volunteer. I am going to ask you to please answer my questions.—A. I am trying to.
- Q. Then answer them directly, and not volunteer.—Did you talk to Judge Ritter about that conversation since the investigation began?—A. At any time since to him?
 - Q. Yes .- A. Yes, sir.
- Q. So that you refreshed your memory by talking to Judge Ritter, did you not?—A. No, sir.
- Q. You did talk with him, did you not?—A. I talked with him and told him my recollection and refreshed his memory.
- Q. So that he did not remember it?—A. He remembered the conversation.
- Q. Did not Judge Ritter remember this conversation without your refreshing his memory?—A. He remembered the conversation; yes, sir; but I told him what I remembered of that conversation when I went into that office.
- Q. When did you first speak to Judge Ritter about this new piece of evidence you have given before the Court?—A. I think it was after I testified before the subcommittee at Miami, Fla.
- Q. How long afterward?—A. Immediately after I got off the stand I talked to Judge Ritter and Mr. Hoffman.
- Q. In the room there? Is that right?—A. In Judge Ritter's chambers, after the hearing before the subcommittee when I testified.
- Q. And after that the subcommittee had further hearings, did it not?—A. I think they did.
- Q. And after that Judge Ritter testified, did he not?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Before the subcommittee?—A. Yes, sir. I think it was after my testimony. I am not sure.
- Q. And did you talk to Judge Rankin about it later, too?—A. No, sir; I have not talked to Judge Rankin about that business since I left.
- Q. How many times since the subcommittee made this investigation did you talk to Judge Ritter about what the conversation was at the time of the dissolution?—A. I think that one time in his chambers, during the hearing of the subcommittee, and I think in Mr. Walsh's office yesterday or the day before.
- Q. So that during the hearings of the subcommittee you talked to Judge Ritter as to what this conversation was?—

- A. I do not remember exactly what I told him, but I talked to him about remembering when I went into the firm, what was said. I do not remember my words.
- Q. That was during the hearing of the subcommittee, was it not?—A. Yes, sir; right after I testified.
- Q. Yet you did not ask to go back on the stand and correct or amend your testimony, did you?—A. I did not ask to amend or correct it, either; no, sir.
- Q. You did not tell any of the subcommittee that you had further information which you had failed to testify, and ask to go back on the witness stand?—A. I told Mr. Hoffman, and he said he did not think it was necessary.
- Q. Mr. Salisbury, you received, under your agreement with Judge Rankin, 15 percent of the fees which he took in during the time you were with him, did you not?—A. You say that I received it?
- Q. Did you not?—A. No; I was supposed to receive 15 percent of the fees he collected.
- Q. Did you or did you not receive your 15 percent?—A. I do not believe I did; no, sir.
- Q. Did you ever sit down with Judge Rankin and have a calculation of what you claimed was 15 percent of the amount of fees he received?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Do you know what he did receive?—A. You mean the whole time I was with Judge Rankin?
 - Q. Your 15 percent?-A. No; I do not.
- Q. You have gone to great trouble to go through all of the dockets and all these figures and testify, and yet you have not found out what your 15 percent would be equal to?—A. I have a record of what my 15 percent was; yes, sir. I keep books myself.
- Q. Do you know how much your 15 percent was?—A. I could not tell you now; no, sir.
- Q. Have you any means of ascertaining it during the time of the session of this Court?—A. I think I could wire West Palm Beach and get it back here.
- Q. You came here prepared to testify more or less as to fees received by Judge Rankin?—A. No, no; I did not come prepared to testify as to anything collected by Judge Rankin.
- Q. Did you not know that if you knew 15 percent of the fees collected by Judge Rankin at that time that it would be very easy to ascertain 100 percent of those fees?—A. No, sir; I did not know that.
- Q. Why not?—A. Because I did not get my 15 percent of what was collected.
- Q. Please listen to the question. I asked you, if you knew what 15 percent of the collections made by Judge Rankin amounted to, that it would be easy to ascertain the total collections that he made?—A. No, it would not, because I said my 15 percent did not represent 15 percent of the amount collected.
- Q. You insisted that you were entitled to 15 percent of this $75,000 fee?—A. No, sir; no, sir; not at all.
- Q. Was not that the purpose of your visit to Judge Rankin?—A. I was entitled to 15 percent of the actual money which Rankin got out of that fee.
 - Q. Do you know how much that was?
- Mr. BULKLEY. Mr. President, I desire to submit two questions.
- The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Counsel will continue this examination, and at the appropriate time the other questions will be asked.
- Mr. Manager PERKINS. I beg the Chair's pardon.
- The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If counsel is not ready, never mind. The Senator from Ohio sent forward two questions which will be read by the clerk.
- The legislative clerk read the first question propounded by Mr. Bulkley, as follows:
- What was your share of the $15,000 which Judge Rankin got in the Whitehall case, and what was your share of the $75,000 which he later got in the same case?
- A. My share was supposed to be 15 percent of all moneys collected by Judge Rankin, but I did not get 15 percent. As I say, as I recall, I got between $2,000 and $3,000 out of that case.

Mr. BULKLEY. Mr. President, I submit that that does not answer the question as to what was his share of that sir. $75,000 fee.

A. I got out of that particular fee about $2,600. Maybe $3,000.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will read the next question.

The legislative clerk read the next question propounded by Mr. Bulkley, as follows:

How much of these two amounts was actually paid to you, and when?

A. About that much paid to me, off and on, over a period of quite a while. Well, it would not be paid to me in a lump sum. I mean, I would get $500, or $400, or $50, or $100.

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. President, it is now within 3 minutes of the time fixed by order of the Court for taking a recess, and we should like to examine the exhibits offered by the counsel for the respondent. We might recess now, and we would perhaps be prepared to continue at the opening of the afternoon session.

RECESS

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the Court will stand in recess until the hour of 2:15 p.m.

Thereupon (at 1 o'clock and 28 minutes p. m.) the Senate, sitting for the trial of the articles of impeachment against Halsted L. Ritter, United States district judge for the southern district of Florida, took a recess until 2 o'clock and 15 minutes p. m., at which time it reassembled.

Mr. ROBINSON. I suggest the absence of a quorum. The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Connally	La Follette	Reynolds
Ashurst	Coolidge	Lewis	Robinson
Austin	Couzens	Logan	Russell
Bachman	Davis	Lonergan	Schwellenbach
Bailey	Donahey	McGill	Sheppard
Barbour	Duffy	McKellar	Shipstead
Barkley	Fletcher	McNary	Smith
Benson	Frazier	Maloney	Steiwer
Black	George	Metcalf	Thomas, Okla.
Bone	Gerry	Minton	Thomas, Utah
Brown	Gibson	Murphy	Townsend
Bulkley	Guffey	Murray	Truman
Bulow	Hale	Neely	Vandenberg
Burke	Harrison	Norris	Van Nuys
Byrd	Hastings	Nye	Wagner
Byrnes	Hatch	O'Mahoney	Walsh
U(100) - (7/A TO 357) 1	Hayden	Overton	Wheeler
Capper	Johnson	Pittman	White
Caraway		Pope	WILLIAM
Carey	Keyes	Radcliffe
Clark	King	Radcline

The VICE PRESIDENT. Seventy-eight Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present. Counsel may proceed.

CROSS-EXAMINATION OF J. W. SALISBURY (CONTINUED)

By Mr. Manager PERKINS:

Q. Mr. Salisbury, how long have you known Judge Ritter?—A. I have known Judge Ritter since I was a small boy, probably 20 years or more.

Q. You are very good friends, are you not?—A. I have been very good friends with his son. I went to school with his son.

Q. You have from time to time sought Judge Ritter's advice about various matters?—A. Sought his advice?

Q. Yes .- A. I cannot remember any instances.

Q. Did Judge Ritter appoint you special master in various cases?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. In how many cases did he appoint you special master?—A. Quite a number; probably 20 or 25, maybe 30.

Q. Maybe more than 30?—A. No; I would not say more than 30.

Q. Beginning at what time?—A. From the time he went on the bench.

Q. Down to what time?—A. I do not imagine I have had a reference to me in probably the last year. The attorneys designate the lawyer they want the case referred to.

Q. Judge Ritter has also appointed you receiver at various times?—A. Not at various times; at one time.

Q. In what case were you receiver?—A. The Everglades Club of Palm Beach.

Q. Did you receive a substantial fee out of that?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How much?-A. $7,500.

Mr. Manager PERKINS. That is all.

Mr. WALSH (of counsel). That is all; thank you, Mr. Salisbury.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The witness may stand aside.

Mr. WALSH (of counsel). I will ask Judge Ritter to take the stand.

DIRECT EXAMINATION OF HALSTED L. RITTER

Halsted L. Ritter, having been duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

By Mr. WALSH (of counsel):

Q. Your name is Halsted L. Ritter?-A. It is.

Q. And you are judge of the United States District Court for the Southern District of Florida?—A. I am.

Q. How long have you been judge?—A. I took my oath of office on the 25th day of February 1929.

Q. At what date did you come to the State of Florida?—A. I arrived in Miami, Fla., I think it was the 4th day of December 1929. I had been—

Q. Wait a minute, Judge. "Nineteen hundred and twentynine", you said.—A. I beg your pardon; 1925. I had been here previous to that time, but that is—I have been down there ever since that date.

Q. Prior to moving to Florida, where did you live?—A. I lived for 30 years in Denver, Colo.

Q. I know that you expressed a desire not to go into it in detail. Were your law practice, and the positions you held in Denver, correctly stated by me in the opening statement which I made?—A. They were.

Q. I will not ask you to go over them again.—A. Thank you.

Q. How long did you practice law there, you say—35 years?—A. Thirty years.

Q. What was the nature or size of your practice there, generally speaking? Take the average of 15 or 20 years, and state, perhaps, what your income from legal fees was.—A. Well, I was in the general practice in Denver. What do you want—how much I made?

Q. Yes; how much you made. Say take an average for 15 or 20 years before you left Denver.—A. Well, it averaged—it was somewhere on an average between $10,000, and one year I made $75,000.

Q. What would it average up, say, for the last 10 or 15 years, if you can give it offhand?—A. Between twenty-five and thirty thousand dollars.

Q. Judge, I believe you stated that you desire to make your own statement and your own explanation regarding the matters that have been in the testimony here since this impeachment case started. Is that correct?—A. Well, I thought I would prefer to make my statement rather than to have you continue to ask questions.

Q. Very good, Judge; you may just go ahead now and make your own statement.—A. The first matter which seems to be presented here with a grievance is the Whitehall case.

Now, I emphatically deny that I knew anything about that Whitehall case until it came before me on the 16th day of October 1929. I had never talked with anybody about it. Nobody had ever mentioned it, or intimated to me that any such case was in my court; and I never knew any of the background of the Whitehall case until it was disclosed in the hearing in Miami in November 1933, and in more detailed fashion here before this honorable body.

It came before me for the first time, without any knowledge on my part, when, on the 16th day of October 1929, Mr. McPherson and Judge Rankin appeared before me in the matter, Judge Rankin asking an order permitting the intervention of some bondholders, and Mr. McPherson asking for time to file affidavits and an answer on the part of some of the defendants.

The intervention petitions were presented to me at that time in the presence of Mr. McPherson by Judge Rankin, and I signed the order permitting the intervention in the presence of Mr. McPherson, representing the defendants; and I granted Mr. McPherson time until the 28th day of October to present his affidavits in opposition to the prayer of the bill.

I knew nothing of the background of the interveners or of the petition presented by Judge Rankin. It was simply stated that they were bondholders. I noticed that the case had been brought by Holland for and on behalf of all the bondholders of the bonds; and any bondholder, therefore, had a perfect right at any time to intervene in the case in his own

The next proceeding in that case was on the 28th day of October, when the matter of a receivership application came before me. All the parties were present; due notice had been given; and the first thing that attracted my attention to that case was that the attorney for the defendant in the case arose and introduced the plaintiff, and said that the plaintiff desired to make some statement. The plaintiff's counsel, Rankin & Metcalf, had started to present the case when they were interrupted by the attorney for the defendant, who said that the plaintiff desired to make a statement.

That was a most astonishing situation. I had never had that experience in any case before, and at once it occurred to me that there might be something wrong about the case. Otherwise, why should the defendant's counsel introduce the plaintiff?

Now, while that is 6 years and more ago, I distinctly remember, because of the startling situation at the time, that Mr. Holland arose after his request being made by counsel for the defendant, and he said, "I am a lawyer. I reside in Boston. I am the plaintiff in this case, and I do not desire anything done in the case."

Now, that is all Mr. Holland said. I, being much surprised, said, "Well, have you been paid?" Naturally, the inference occurred to my mind that the plaintiff had been bought off, or that he was instituting this case and wanted to keep it on the books as a sort of a hold-up proposition. I could not tolerate such a thing of that kind in my court; and I told him that I did not think that a nonresident should come into my court and start a case, and then stand up when it came up on this important matter of a receivership and say that he did not want anything done in the case, when he had counsel present; and if he was to control the case, it occurred to me, when he had lawyers present, and I should act upon what he said, I did not see how we could ever make progress in the case and get it to final conclusion. If a nonresident had to be notified about the case, and was conducting his own case, I did not see how we could ever push the case through.

I had examined the pleadings in the case, as I often do when I know a case is coming on of importance, and it had been called to my attention on the 16th of October; and I found that the allegations of the complaint made very serious charges against the defendant trustee of the first-mortgage bondholders, charging that he was a son of W. J. Moore, who controlled the American Bond & Mortgage Co., and that the second- and third-mortgage trustees were dummies of the American Bond & Mortgage Co., and that they had conspired together to get control of the Whitehall Hotel, and the third mortgage had been foreclosed and bought in for a very insignificant amount-I think it was $2,600-and that by that method they had created a deficiency, and they were seeking then to enter into possession of the property, subject to the first and second mortgage, and thus get control of the rents and profits of the hotel for the coming season, to apply not to the first-mortgage bondholders but to their own benefit and profit and to the payment of the inferior

Also, there was on file at that time an answer by the Whitehall Building & Operating Co., and this answer was as

Comes now Whitehall Building & Operating Co., a Florida corpo ration, one of the defendants in the above-styled cause to the bill of complaint filed herein, and makes answer thereto, as follows

Now, the Whitehall Building & Operating Co. was the mortgagor, the company that issued all these bonds-

The said company hereby accepts service of subpena in said cause and appears thereto.

The said company admits all the allegations of the bill of complaint; admits its insolvency and that it has been heretofore adjudicated a bankrupt; admits that all of its outstanding bonds sued under and by virtue of the trust deed or mortgage referred to in said bill of complaint are past due and payable and consents that the court enter a decree to this effect; consents that the

that the court enter a decree to this effect; consents that the plaintiffs herein may proceed with the foreclosure of said trust deed or mortgage in behalf of themselves and all other bond and coupon holders similarly situated of this issue.

Admits that in article IX, section (b), of the trust deed or mortgage, said defendant, as mortgagor, its successors and assigns, consented that the court shall appoint a receiver without notice of the property covered by said indenture, and all rents, issues, earnings, and profits arising from said premises, in the event of the institution of foreclosure proceedings.

It hereby further consents that the court forthwith appoint a receiver for said property, waiving all further notice.

receiver for said property, waiving all further notice.
(Signed) WHITEHALL BUILDING & OPERATING CO.

And that was on file at the time of the hearing.

It appeared from the bill of complaint filed in the case that W. J. Moore owned 50 percent of the Building & Operating Co., and Sweeny and Bemis owned the other 50 percent. So I saw that all parties were before me asking for this receivership, and that it was not necessary, therefore, for the consent of the trustee under the first mortgage to be had, although he was there opposing it.

Furthermore, examining the mortgage which was attached to the bill, I found these provisions which I will read. You will find them in the trust deed, and it will be easier for me to have them copied down here.

First, $50,000 of bonds were necessary to make a demand on the trustee to foreclose because of default in the payment of principal and interest of the bonds.

The bill alleged that demand had been made, or that it was unnecessary to make demand, and would be futile to make such a demand, because of the adverse interests of the trustees under the bonds, and because of the conspiracy with the creditors of the company and with the second- and third-mortgage trustees. So they said that obviated the making of a demand on the trustee.

The mortgage provided further:

Nothing in this article contained shall be so construed waiver of or a limitation of, or prohibition against the right of any holder of bonds past due, either by lapse of time or by declaration for default by the trustee as aforesaid, or of coupons past due, or of both bonds and coupons past due, without any request to foreclose of the trustee whatever, to sue or commence foreclosure proceedings of this trust deed to enforce the payment of such past-due obligations which have matured regularly according to the trust thereof cording to the tenor thereof.

While the trustee under the first mortgage, Mr. Harold A. Moore, did oppose the appointment of a receiver, but did not ask that the case be dismissed, I saw that any bondholder was by the deed itself permitted to appear and ask for the foreclosure, and there were other bondholders in the case, representing more than the jurisdictional amount under the statute, asking for the foreclosure of the mortgage, and I could not consider Mr. Holland's request to allow nothing to be done when there were other plaintiffs who were insisting that something be done.

There had been an answer filed by Harold A. Moore, trustee under the first-mortgage bonds, asking that he be permitted to foreclose, and asserting that he had a claim against the first-mortgage bondholders which was prior in right by reason of some expenditures which he had made, and was asking as a cross-claim, counterclaim, that the court adjudicate that matter and give him a lien superior in right to the bonds.

So, with that situation confronting me, and believing that all parties before the court were, on the record, asking for the appointment of a receiver, and that the position of Mr. Holland was untenable when he said he did not want anything done, I concluded I could not surrender to Mr. Holland's demand, and I thought as I looked at the record that it was a fight between the plaintiff and Harold A. Moore, the trustee under the first mortgage; that it was a fight to see which one should foreclose that trust deed and get the fees.

The necessity for a receiver was apparent to me, because I knew that property; I had lived in West Palm Beach and Palm Beach before I went on the bench, and, although I had not been in this hotel, I knew about it. In order to operate a hotel like that they have to commence 2 months before to get it in shape, and the season was about to open, and I knew this property, from the pleadings, could not go back to the Whitehall Building & Operating Co., because that company was insolvent and had gone through bankruptcy. So it could not go to the first trustee. The only way in the world to settle this controversy in that time was to appoint a receiver, and the only objection made by the defendants was that they wanted to more or less dictate and control the person appointed as receiver.

With all those facts before me, and no knowledge of the background whatever, just taking the case as it was presented to me as the judge at that time, I saw it was necessary to appoint a receiver, and I knew as the result of the bankruptcy proceedings and the reports which had come to me that Mr. Walter Richardson had handled that hotel for the preceding year under bankruptcy, assisted by Mr. Bemis and Mr. Sweeny, with perfect satisfaction to everybedy. There never was any objection to any conduct or report made by Mr. Richardson when he was acting as trustee under bankruptcy.

The creditors had a meeting and they selected Mr. Richardson as trustee—he was not appointed by the court—and knowing that the season was about to open, this hotel required an experienced man to take hold of it.

It was not an ordinary hotel which any hotelman of slight experience could handle. It was a very exclusive place in Palm Beach, where in those days there were people who had money to spend, and spend lavishly, and this was a hotel which appealed to the rich, who wanted exclusion, and that clientele was known to Mr. Bemis and Mr. Sweeny. Mr. Bemis was operating, and had been for some 30 years, the hotels owned by the Florida East Coast Railroad at Palm Beach—the old Royal Poinciana and the Breakers Hotel. He was one of the best-known hotelmen in the United States, as was Mr. Sweeny, and they were able to shift to the Whitehall a clientele that could pay the fancy prices charged there; and the situation had shown that the year previous under bankruptcy they had made $300,000 net out of operations, something never heard of before in the operation of that hotel.

So I thought of Mr. Richardson at once as the man to continue, under the situation as it had been the year previous, the operation of that hotel. Nobody suggested Mr. Richardson to me; I had never talked with anybody about it, but it just occurred to me, from my own knowledge of the situation, that he was the man to appoint; and I so stated at that time.

Mr. McPherson said he desired to file some affidavits in opposition to Mr. Richardson, and after the hearing in the morning I gave him until 2 o'clock, and at 2 o'clock he presented some letters. I do not now remember what they were, but I did not think they disqualified Mr. Richardson to act in the situation, which required the immediate set-up of a force to take hold of that hotel; and I said so. But in order that there might be no criticism or misunderstanding about what Mr. Richardson would do, I said, "In order that everybody may know what he is doing and how he is going to operate that hotel I will appoint two attorneys for him, one from each side of the case, and we will thus be able, each side, to check him up and see what is going on, and bring anything to the attention of the court that is not right." And I did so.

Mr. McPherson, I think it was, suggested that Mr. Bemis might be the receiver. I knew Mr. Bemis was too busy a man to give any details to the management, but I knew he was interested in the hotel and probably would cooperate, as he had done the year previous, and then, as suggested by Mr. McPherson, we put in the order that Mr. Bemis and Mr. Sweeny should be employed by the receiver to assist in the operation of the hotel.

Now, everybody seemed to be satisfied. No objections were ever made. No motion to dismiss the case was ever filed. Mr. Richardson went on and operated that hotel for 2 years, and nobody ever objected to his reports. No criticism ever came to me about what he did. And when he filed his final report no objections were made to it, but everybody had notice. And never, until this investigation started down in Miami, did we ever hear anything about Mr. Richardson in reference to the background which has been detailed. But as a receiver he was a complete success, and they made some $600,000 in operating this hotel, and the bondholders were protected, and the bondholders' committee which absorbed Mr. Holland's bonds went right on with the case clear through and adopted that case for their own benefit, and everybody seemed to be satisfied with what was done.

There came before me the petition of Judge Rankin for a conservation fee. The attorney for the plaintiff which brings a fund into the court by virtue of the action which he brings, which fund had been theretofore distributed and used in a wrongful way by other persons—he brings it in for the benefit of the bondholders—it is well known in the law that he is entitled to some fee. It is held from the Supreme Court down to the State court decisions that that is the law, and he is entitled to something; and when the matter came before me on that phase of it, Judge Rankin had a brief in which the cases were set out and abundantly supported his contention.

Mr. Bowen, the attorney for the defendant, conceded and said, "I think Judge Rankin is entitled to something, but we do not know what the amount is." And we all agreed that I should allow $2,500 as just an advance on what he should ultimately receive, and Mr. McPherson asked time to file objections in opposition to Judge Rankin's contentions.

Judge Rankin came to see me two or three times after that, saying no objections had been filed to the granting of this conservation fee and "I should like to have it allowed." "Well", I said, "Judge Rankin, I am not going to decide on this question. There seems to be some opposition to the amount of your fee, and I am going to send it over to Judge Akerman and let him settle it"; and I wrote the letter which is in evidence. I thought the letter was plain enough; that all the matter that could be presented to him was the conservation fee, and that is all I intended. And Judge Rankin, after there were no objections made, went over to Tampa and had the hearing before Judge Akerman; and Judge Akerman entered this order. Now, Judge Akerman's order recites that it is the fee for conserving the assets, and nothing else, and that is all I ever thought it was. I never paid any attention to it after that. The amount fixed was by him. Nobody ever complained of it. No objections were ever filed to it. None of the parties to the case ever asked to have it pulled down. And never until this investigation started did anybody ever raise a question about it.

I am not chargeable with that $15,000. No objections appearing before me at any time, it came up for a final decree, everybody having due notice. I think a few days before I heard the matter of the final decree Mr. McPherson came to my chambers and said, "Judge, we have settled this case." "Well", I said, "I am mighty thankful you have." If there is anything that pleases the judge, it is to have the litigants go out and settle it. That is the best way to get rid of the case and make them all happy. And he said, "We have agreed on our attorneys' fees." "Well", I said, "all right. File in the court your agreement of division of fees so a record may be made of it." He said, "How do you want the fee allowed? How are you going to allow the fee?" "Well", I said, "in cases of this kind it is always customary to allow the fee in the name of the counsel for the plaintiff. That is the way it is always done, because the plaintiff's counsel is entitled to remuneration for the foreclosure of a mortgage, and if you have all been in this case, as you all have, and all think you are entitled to some of the fee, I hope you will not take my time to sit down and hear the evidence as to what each lawyer has done, and compel me to fix the allowance. If you have agreed on it, I am mighty glad."

So I fixed the date for hearing of the final decree, and all parties came before me. And they presented me a form of decree which they said they had all agreed on. The attorneys had said that they had agreed on the fee and the way the fee should be paid. If I wanted to allow it all in the name of the plaintiff it made no difference. They had agreed how it should be distributed. "Well", I said, "has everybody agreed to this final decree now, as to its terms and its allowances?" and they assured me everybody had agreed.

"Well", I said, "who represents the bondholders here?" "Well", Mr. Bowen said, "I represent the defendant, Harold A. Moore, and I have been in close touch with the bondholders' committee, and they have got a copy of this decree which we propose to enter, and they have agreed to it." "Well", I said. "I am going to require every person here—every attorney here representing these interests-to sign this decree before I do." And you will find their signatures—all the attorneys—you will find their signatures right on this decree which has been entered here. They signed it before I did. And I said, "Now, this bondholders' committee is represented by attorneys in Chicago." "Yes." "Well, I want you to call up right here in my chambers; I want you to call up those lawyers or somebody in Chicago representing the bondholders' committee, and ask them if it is all right to enter this decree." And in my chambers Mr. Bowen called up Chicago and got the chairman of the bondholders' committee, or the attorneys, and said, "We are about to submit this final decree to the judge, and he wants to know if it is all right with you." And they said it was all right.

There was also before me at that time four affidavits signed by four of the most reputable and able lawyers in the State of Florida—Mr. Winters, Judge Donnell, Mr. Fisher, and Mr. Johnson. And in those affidavits—and that is the way we usually in our court do where it comes to a question of fee—instead of bringing the lawyers in and swearing them and taking their testimony, both in the State court and in the Federal court, we take affidavits from the lawyers in references. And there were four affidavits all saying that $75,000 was a proper fee in the case. Everybody interested in the case said $75,000 was a proper fee. "We have all agreed on it."

Now, what else would a judge do under those circumstances? Just, I think, what I did. Here was a settlement, and it occurred to me that $75,000 was not an excessive fee where there was $3,500,000, including interest, involved. There were 270 papers filed in the case. I did not know all that the attorneys had done, but I knew that there must be something done in the case, quite a bit, between the contending parties, and they all agreed on it, and I allowed it. That is what I did.

I respectfully submit that there was no corruption, there was nothing back of it; and if there was no corruption, if I used my best judgment, as I did, at the time, I claim that I ought not to be criticized for it.

And in the attack that was made afterward on that decree by Mr. Kirkland, who agreed to it all, there was no criticism offered of me. Every lawyer in the case said that I had been imposed upon. Nobody charged me with any corruption or dishonesty, and I was perfectly honest. I used my best judgment all through that Whitehall case, and that Whitehall case is one case out of 7,000 cases which I have attended to. And that is 6 years or more ago. And the very cases that brought this investigation of me have been dismissed out of this hearing, and they have gone back to my first year—7 years ago—to bring these charges against me in one case out of 7,000.

The next thing I am charged with is taking $4,500 from Judge Rankin. When I formed a partnership with Judge Rankin in November 1926 we were not young men. I had come down to Florida because my wife had worn out in the Denver climate, a mile above sea, which had wrecked her nerves, and there had to be a change of climate. We found that Florida was a healthful place for her, where she could regain her health, and consequently I pulled up my roots in Denver, where I had been for 30 years, and, at 57 years of age, I started all over again to practice law. Judge Rankin had moved down from Alabama to open his practice there. Well, we started in, of course, to build up our practice; and the first year we did very well, considering everything. We got some clients and made some friends. I did not want a const and myself about collections sum; that lump sum was the thing. We got some clients and made some friends. I took the mas. The banks were not of I was busy at something; I Sunday intervened, and Mc concerned, gentlemen, the part was arranged at the time I anybody for a minute would and myself about collections sum; that lump sum was the payments made to me by Judge Rankin in November 1926 we were not young men. I had I was busy at something; I sunday intervened, and Mc concerned, gentlemen, the payments arranged at the time I anybody for a minute would a estate business who gave me their business, and I had correspondence with lawyers in Chicago and in the East for whom I had done business in Colorado, and when they found I was down in Florida they turned their business to me. The second year we did better. We started with a couple of offices, and the second year we had to move into larger quarters. We fitted up a modern law office. We had a good library and proper equipment and had to employ a clerk. Business was coming in, and we made a good living that year. Then came along the appointment to the bench which I received from President Coolidge.

When I left the office we had pending some 50 cases; and, if I may have the list of Mr. Salisbury that was introduced here, I want to state that I went over this list in West Palm Beach before coming to Washington for this hearing, and I know, of my own knowledge, that every case on this list was on the books when I left that firm or was pending for a suit by virtue of previous conferences and correspondence.

I had built up that business; 95 percent of all the business there I had brought into that firm; and I felt that when I left that business I should not make a gift of it to Judge Rankin. I did not see why I should leave all the office equipment and the library and 50 cases, in which I figured there was at least $35,000, and get nothing out of it. I said to Judge Rankin, "I am leaving here; you have got the business; you fix your own price; I know you are in debt; you have got children to educate at college; you want to buy of me; now, fix the price today." And he said, "$5,000"; and I said, "Very well; I want you to have it."

At that time, with all these cases pending, I thought Judge Rankin needed some help to push them along. I figured that he could get at least $20,000 out of these cases, and I insisted that Mr. Salisbury be called into the office to assist him to push these cases along and get the money out of them. Judge Rankin agreed, and Mr. Salisbury went into the office on an arrangement, which he has detailed here, and he worked on these cases. These cases are all found on the docket in the office of Ritter & Rankin. The amounts involved in the cases are worth considering, not because I know what Judge Rankin collected, but when I went out of that office, looking over this list of the amount involved in the various cases, I thought there was at least $20,000 that could be obtained from those cases, and I gave Judge Rankin the best of it, and allowed him to take the business for that sum of money, to pay me when he could.

I knew he would have to pay some debts, and I never asked him for the money. I was going on the bench, where I got a yearly salary I could live on—provided I did not have an investigation—and I knew that he would have to use the money that he collected out of these cases, but I thought he would some day gather enough to pay me. That is the reason I never pressed him. When he came to my chambers with the cash, $2,500, the first time, I asked him why he did not give me a check, and he made the same explanation about it that he did here in testifying. Well, I did not think much about it at that time. I did not think about his having received that fee previously. There was the money. I had waited a long time for it. The bank situation was in a precarious way. There were runs on the banks, and just before that day the second largest bank in Miami had failed. I took the money the day before Christmas. The banks were not open on Christmas day. Friday I was busy at something; I do not hold court on Saturday. Sunday intervened, and Monday I put the money in the bank. It was a perfectly honest transaction, so far as I am concerned, gentlemen, the payment of an honest debt which was arranged at the time I left the firm. I do not think anybody for a minute would say that I should have given all that business to Rankin and not gotten anything out of it. I did not want a constant accounting between Rankin and myself about collections in each case; I wanted a lump sum; that lump sum was the arrangement made; and the payments made to me by Judge Rankin were payments on that debt, honestly created, for a consideration, which was He paid me $2,000 along in April following, and I took that right to the bank. Other payments were made until he paid me $5,000, and I gave him a receipt for it. That is all there is to that case.

Then, as to the practicing of law. The Brazilian Court case we had when I left the firm was in the course of adjustment. It had been a long drawn-out case, with difficult problems, and had involved more than was anticipated when we took the case on the basis of $4,000; and it was afterward so recognized by Mr. Mulford and his attorney, Mr. Brodek. When I left the firm I said to Judge Rankin, "Now there are a few cases that I am going to reserve; I need some ready money: I have got to move from West Palm Beach down to Miami, and the Brazilian Court matter offers the first opportunity to get some ready money; I am going to reserve all I can get out of that case for my own use." Judge Rankin said that it was all right. So I rendered a bill to Mr. Mulford for $1,945, which was the balance due our firm, and I sent him a statement. I have a copy of that statement right here-$1.945.23. But there was $1.445.23 of that which we had expended for Mr. Mulford and his company and that was not income. Only $500 was income; that is the balance due on the $4,000. Here is a statement, gentlemen, if you would like to have it. If not, I should like to have it put in evidence. There was only $500 left of income. I cannot, after 6 years or more, now remember what deduction I made from that $500. Some items I paid out; but I reported in my income tax $331.40, I think, together with the $2,000 which Mr. Brodek gave me as my income for the year 1929. I was not practicing law; I was just collecting from Mr. Mulford some money that was due for work which had been fully performed prior to my going on the bench. In the letter which has been introduced in evidence here, in which I said I would look after the matter, or something of that kind, I only meant that in case—and Judge Rankin and I had conducted this business through the firm-it became necessary for me to give some information about what I had done to Judge Rankin to carry it on, I would be duty bound to give it; but I never did a single thing in that case after this payment to me of $2,000 by Mr. Brodek for the work I had done before I went on the bench. Judge Rankin took the case; he took an appeal in the case. But they will say, "The decree in the Brazilian Court case was not entered until June, and you wrote for this money in March." On the 2d day of March, Judge Chillingworth, the judge of the State court in West Palm Beach, wrote a letter to Judge Rankin-and it is in evidence here-telling him that he was going to decide the case in our favor on all points, and for him to prepare the decree according to the findings, a copy of which was attached to the letter. Judge Rankin told me about that. I took that to be an adjudication of our case, and after that I wrote on March 11 to Mr. Brodek asking for this additional $2,000. Later Judge Rankin got $2,000, the same as I did. when the matter was closed up, out of the receivership fund which went to Mulford. So that we got equal amounts; and that was all there was to that case, gentlemen.

That is all there was to that case. I was not practicing law. I was simply trying to close up a matter in which I had been interested and in which I thought some money was coming to me, and I tried to get it and I never did anything else.

Now, the Francis matter. Mr. Francis was a friend of mine for 15 years. I knew him in Colorado where he often visited. When I came down to Florida I found him there. He had invested quite a bit of money in property, and naturally he turned to me as his friend to tell me about his troubles. He had other attorneys. He had Mr. Bowen. We were intimate friends. His wife and my wife and myself were children in Indianapolis in the public schools, and so we were very close. I never rendered him a bill. I never made any entry on the books of what I did for him. Although he would tell me about his affairs I always considered that it was friendship, and you know friendship dissolves often the cold relations of attorney and client. In this case there was no attorney and client. It was a friendship between Mr. Francis and myself extending over a number of years.

He lived at Miami Beach and had a home there, but he spent most of his time in Flint, Mich., where he had a large business. He would come down to Miami frequently just for a few days. He wanted us to find a home in Miami Beach, so Mrs. Ritter and myself roamed that country to find a location. One day we were driving over there on Reovo Alto Island and saw a real-estate office, and we inquired what property there was for sale on that island and were told by the real-estate man there that there was one lot. Lots were selling for $10,000, but he said he had one lot which would take $7,500 cash, for sale by a person who desired immediate sale. We looked at the lot. Some days after that we were over at Mr. Francis' house and I told him about the lot and he said, "We will go over and look at So he and his wife and Mrs. Ritter and myself went over and looked at the lot, and he said he thought it was a good buy, but that is all he said.

A few days after that we were over at dinner at Mr. Francis' house, and just as we were leaving he put a check for $7,500 in my hands and said, "Go and buy that lot and build a house on it. Take the title in your name or my name." I was surprised. I took the money. It was a pure gift, so far as I was concerned, and it was not taxable at that time. I bought the lot, putting the check in my name in the bank, had the title examined and the papers made, and I paid $7,500 for that lot.

I kept that lot, knowing that I was expected to build on it, and I expected if I did build on it that Francis would more or less finance me in the arrangement; but after 3 or 4 months I found a home in Coconut Grove, a suburb of Miami, which fit our purpose and which I could acquire at a reasonable price on some installment payments. So we decided that, not having any money to build a house over there, we would buy this house, which we could, and that lot over there would stand until we could see what we could do with it with Mr. Francis.

After I bought that lot with that check, Francis was in Miami Beach very few times. When he would come down and I would mention the subject of the lot, he would throw me off and say, "Oh, well, we will take care of that some day." He died in July 1931, after months of lingering sickness.

A few days after his death, talking over with his wife his affairs, she wanted to know what I knew about it. I told her about the lot. I said, "I have always considered that a gift on the condition that I build a home on it, and I cannot do it. The lot must go back to you or some arrangement must be made. I never rendered any bill to Mr. Francis. I never kept any account of anything I did for him. He may have been motivated in a way, because he thought he owed me something, to give me that $7,500." She said, "I know it is a gift, and he intended for you to have it." I said, "I want some basis made for it and, if I can take the lot and get out of it whatever I can get out of it, we will consider it as a final settlement and conclusion of any fee or any obligation he might owe me." She said, "Very well."

I thought at that time that whatever I got out of that lot would be income which should be returned for taxable purposes. I had not returned the lot in my income tax prior to that time because it was not taxable. Going along until this investigation started down in Miami, they commenced to accuse me of various things. My bank account had been examined, and every dollar that I had taken in for the last 10 years had had to be accounted for. A meticulous examination of everything I had done had been gone into. I looked into the law and I found that I should have returned that lot at its appraised value when I made the settlement with Mrs. Francis instead of waiting until I sold it. I therefore amended my income tax for 1931. I had the property appraised. I sent the appraisal along with my amendment to the revenue officer at Jacksonville and put that lot in at $4,000, which was the appraised price, and I paid the income tax.

They charge me with practicing law for Francis in reference to the Spanish River Co. In 1927 I had contacted Mr. Geist, asking him if he would not arrange it for Mr. Francis, who had invested some $85,000 in the purchase of lots which were owned by the Mizner Development Co., which had gone into bankruptcy, and asked Geist if he would not arrange it so Mr. Francis could have that property under the original purchase contract and pay the balance of the install-ments due. Mr. Geist said, "Some day we will arrange that matter."

It ran along through 1928. It was not settled. Mr. Francis wanted me to ask Mr. Geist if he would not arrange a settlement, so I wrote a letter, after I went on the bench, to Mr. Geist calling his attention to the fact that he had agreed to close the matter up with Mr. Francis and asking if he would not do it.

It was a pure business matter. There was no law attached to it. It was simply a business transaction as between Francis and Geist in reference to the method as to how that purchase should be revived and the payments made. That is all I did. I did not advise Mr. Francis anything about that because I had advised him before I went on the bench. I advised Geist that he should fix this up with Francis. All I did after I went on the bench was simply to call his attention to what he had agreed to do. He did send me some deeds or something, and I turned them right over to Francis.

One day Mr. Geist telephoned me and asked if Mr. Francis and Mrs. Francis and Mrs. Ritter and myself would come to the Boca Raton Club and have lunch. We went up for lunch. After lunch Francis and Geist and, I think, Gedney, went back into a room and there they settled the matter. was not present at that time. I had nothing to do with advising about the settlement. After they had settled the matter I was told, when they came out, how they had settled it. I did not settle it. I did not have anything to do with it. It was purely a business matter. I was not in any sense of the word practicing law.

Those two matters I closed up after I went on the bench. They had been pending before. More than 6 years ago they charge me with practicing law during the first 60 days when I was on the bench-7 years ago. If I had been practicing law or doing anything since these last 5 years that would have been brought into this investigation.

Now, then, my income tax: They charge that I rendered a wrong income tax in 1929 and 1930, willfully and knowingly to defraud the Government of some money.

In 1929 a gentleman asked me to produce my office copy of my income-tax report, because the Government has destroyed it. I produced it. They have not introduced it in evidence. I have it here, and I am willing to introduce it in evidence. It shows every dollar of income that I took during that year. The $1,945 which they say I did not return is this statement here, showing that $1,445.23 of it was money which I had paid out for my client and for which I should have a return, and which was not income.

In 1930 I had a loss of $4,874 and some cents, which is fully explained in my income-tax return which I have here and am ready to introduce. It was a loss from the sale of some property in Colorado, and I set it all out in detail in my income tax. I made out that report on the 14th of March, just the day before it was due; and I put down that loss; and I did not in my report put down $5,300 that I had taken in because, taking out my exemption, it left only $1,800, and that, over against $4,800, showed no income payable.

I appreciate the fact that it would have been better if I had set out all that $5,300, now, under these situations; but there would not have been one dollar payable to the Government for income tax in 1930 as against that loss of $4,800, so there was not one dollar due. There would not have been one dollar due if I had put in that money that I had received, and my loss was O. K.'d by the Department and accepted and marked "paid."

I think I have gone through what has been charged against me here on my side, gentlemen.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, I desire to submit several

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Bachman in the chair). The Senator from Missouri desires to submit some questions, which the clerk will read.

The Chief Clerk read the first question propounded by Mr. CLARK, as follows:

Did Rankin tell you on December 24 that he feared that if he paid you by check it might subject both of you to criticism?

The Chief Clerk read the next question propounded by Mr. CLARK, as follows:

Did you agree with Rankin upon this point?

A. I did not think it would subject us to criticism; but if he thought so, the money was there, and I had waited a long time for it, and I did not know whether I would get it if I did not take it. I took it.

The Chief Clerk read the next question propounded by Mr. CLARK, as follows:

If the transaction was an honest one, why did you and Rankin fear the effect of making a record of it?

A. I had no fear in the world of it.

The Chief Clerk read the next question propounded by Mr. CLARK, as follows:

Have you made a practice, in any other instance since you have been on the bench, of accepting payments in cash in payment of antecedent debts?

A. No, sir; that is the only time I ever did.

Mr. DUFFY. Mr. President, I submit a question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wisconsin submits a question, which the clerk will read.

The Chief Clerk read the question propounded by Mr. DUFFY, as follows:

Is it your contention that, although you said in your letter to Judge Akerman that you wanted him to pass upon the total allow-ance for Judge Rankin, that you at that time expected that addi-tional attorneys' fees would be later allowed to Judge Rankin?

A. I beg pardon?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will again read the question.

The Chief Clerk reread the question.

A. I knew that in the completion of the foreclosure there would be a foreclosure fee allowed, and the conservation fee was something separate and independent of it.

Mr. McGILL. Mr. President, I submit several questions. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kansas presents several questions, which the clerk will read.

The Chief Clerk read the first question propounded by Mr. McGill, as follows:

Judge Rankin having been your law partner, was it not just as embarrassing to you to pass upon the final allowance of attorneys' fees to him as it would have been to have passed upon the amount of the conservation fee which had been allowed him?

A. The situation was quite different, because in the final decree everybody agreed to it, and the evidence was that it was reasonable, and there was no contest, and I did not have to decide it. I accepted what everybody thought was the right thing to do; and we busy judges do that often when parties all agree in a settlement of a case; we accept it; and that is what I did then.

The Chief Clerk read the next question propounded by Mr. McGill, as follows:

Did you anticipate, when the fee of $75,000 was allowed, that Judge Rankin would pay you from the proceeds?

A. I never thought a thing about it. I never anticipated it, never thought about it.

The Chief Clerk read the next question propounded by Mr. McGill. as follows:

You did not wish to pass upon the conservation fee to be allowed Judge Rankin because of the fact that he had been your law partner, did you?

A. Yes, sir. There was a contest about that, the only contest in the case, and I wanted it passed on by another judge. They all agreed that he was entitled to a conservation fee, and $2,500 had been agreed to by all present; but what his total should be I passed it over to Judge Akerman, and I intended only to pass over to him the question of the amount of the conservation fee, and his order shows that is all he passed on.

The Chief Clerk read the next question propounded by Mr. McGill, as follows:

After you became a Federal judge, each time Rankin made you a payment he made the payment in cash, did he not?

A. He did.

The Chief Clerk read the next question propounded by Mr. McGill, as follows:

If, when he paid you in cash the first time, you inquired why he had not brought you a check, did it not occur to you as unusual that other payments by him were in cash?

A. Well, he made the second payment in cash, as he had made the first, under the same reason he gave, and I did not think anything about it. I just took the money.

Mr. McGILL. Mr. President, I do not regard that answer as an answer to the last question. I should like to have the last question read again, and have the witness answer it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will again read the last question.

The Chief Clerk again read the last question propounded by Mr. McGill, as follows:

If, when he paid you in cash the first time, you inquired why he had not brought you a check, did it not occur to you as unusual that other payments by him were in cash?

A. It did not, because he had made the first payment in cash. I did not think there was anything unusual in making the second payment in cash if he wanted to do it that way.

Have I answered the question?

The Chief Clerk read the next question propounded by Mr. McGill. as follows:

Since you have been a Federal judge, has Rankin made you a payment by check, or otherwise than by cash?

A. He made two payments by check to complete the $5,000. One check, I think, was for $209, and another check for $300, which completed his $5,000; and the second check, I gave him the receipt.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, I should like to ask several questions.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Carolina submits several questions, which the clerk will read.

The Chief Clerk read the first question propounded by Mr. REYNOLDS, as follows:

How much cash did you actually pay for the lot priced to you at $7,500?

A. I paid $7,500, as my account will show in the hands of the managers for the House. They have the whole account here, my bank account, what I paid out; and I have the deeds here.

The Chief Clerk read the next question propounded by Mr. REYNOLDS, as follows:

If you paid $7,500, did you get any rebate or cut-back?

A. Not one dime; and I sold the lot about 2 months ago for $3,500 as the best price I could get for it.

The Chief Clerk read the next question propounded by Mr. Reynolds, as follows:

Why did you accept a $7,500 gift from Mr. Francis?

A. Why, I accepted it because it was a gift—he was a friend of mine—just the same as I would accept a gift from anybody. I knew he wanted me to build there, to build on the lot, and I knew he was interested, and it was out of the kindness of his heart that he gave it to me. That is all I can tell you.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, I desire to submit a question. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Missouri presents a question, which will be read.

The Chief Clerk read the question propounded by Mr. CLARK, as follows:

Did you attach any importance to the coincidence that within a few hours after collecting a large fee allowed him by you, brought you a large sum in cash to your chambers and paid it to you?

A. I can honestly say that it never occurred to me at the time how long before he got that money. I never thought of that at that time. The money had been agreed upon; it was his money; and I do not remember that I had in mind at all when he got his allowance.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, I send several questions to the desk, which I desire to have asked.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the first question.

The Chief Clerk read the first question propounded by Mr. Walsh, as follows:

Do you consider that a judge performs his duty by accepting the agreement of counsel with respect to receivership fees without considering any of the further circumstances?

A. I think that a judge is justified in taking the agreement of the parties and the affidavits of disinterested lawyers, and looking at the matter himself from all conditions, and making an allowance in that way.

The Chief Clerk read the second question propounded by Mr. Walsh, as follows:

In your opinion, what circumstances should a judge take into consideration in fixing legal fees in a receivership case?

A. I suppose that is predicated upon those reasons existing among the parties or counsel. The judge should consider first the value of the property and what the bondholders realized. He should consider the amount of work which the lawyers did in the case. He should consider the benefits that accrued to the bondholders or the successful party in the litigation. And he should consider what might be in his knowledge in some cases allowed as a comparison.

The Chief Clerk read the third question propounded by Mr. Walsh, as follows:

In determining fees in a receivership case, should the judge, in your opinion, take into consideration the standing of the lawyer, his probable legal income, the time taken from his regular business, as well as the value of the property managed by the receiver and the benefits that accrued to the creditors?

A. I think I have just answered that, except as to the ability of the lawyer. I think a lawyer, even a young man, who probably has his first case, who has done a very fine piece of work and succeeded, is entitled to just as much as the man who has practiced for 40 years and has the leadership of the bar.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I send a question forward which I desire to have propounded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the question.

The Chief Clerk read the question propounded by Mr. McKellar, as follows:

How long after the entry of the decree did you receive from Rankin the $2,000 or $2,500?

A. I received the first $2,500 on December 24, 1930. The second payment was made in April 1931.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, that does not answer the question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will again read the question.

The Chief Clerk again read the question propounded by Mr. McKellar, as follows:

How long after the entry of the decree did you receive from Rankin the $2,000 or $2,500?

A. May I have the date of the decree?

Mr. HOFFMAN. December 24, 1930.

A. The first payment was made on the same day, December 24

Mr. McKELLAR. I send a second question to the desk. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will propound the question.

The Chief Clerk read the question propounded by Mr. McKellar, as follows:

Was it not the same morning?

A. I do not know whether it was morning or afternoon, but it was the same day.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I send a question to the desk to be asked of the witness.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the question.

The Chief Clerk read the question propounded by Mr. Barkley, as follows:

If you did not expect Rankin to pay you out of the large fee you were allowing him on December 24, 1930, when and out of what fund did you expect him to pay you?

A. I expected him to pay me, when we made the deal, out of what he collected from the cases that were in the office, and he had collected out of those fees, according to the examination which Mr. Mulherin, the investigator for the committee made, $9,225, and I know of a $7,500 fee that he has earned, which is a good fee, and there were other matters. He had collected some $20,000 out of those cases that he had not paid me a cent out of. I expected him to pay me out of that.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, I send to the desk several questions which I desire to have propounded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the questions.

The Chief Clerk read the first question propounded by Mr. REYNOLDS, as follows:

You said you accepted a gift of $7,500 from Francis just because he was a friend of yours. Is it your custom to accept money gifts from all who offer them, or is it that you accept money gifts only from certain ones?

A. It was the first time in my life that anybody in my acquaintance thought well enough of me to give me anything.

The Chief Clerk read the second question propounded by Mr. REYNOLDS, as follows:

Have you ever accepted a gift from anyone else?

A. I never have.

The Chief Clerk read the third question propounded by Mr. REYNOLDS, as follows:

Since you have been judge has anyone else ever offered you a gift; and if so, did you accept it?

A. I have never been tempted. Nobody has ever offered me anything, nobody has ever in any way intimated, or poked anything at me.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, I send two questions to the desk to be propounded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the questions.

The Chief Clerk read the first question propounded by Mr. Schwellenbach, as follows:

What was the date of the $7,500 Francis check?

A. I think it was April 19, 1930, or 1931.

The Chief Clerk read the second question propounded by Mr. Schwellenbach, as follows:

What was the extent of the Francis fortune at the time, if you know?

A. I do not know. Mr. Francis was a very wealthy man. He had large holdings. He had a home worth a half a million dollars in Miami Beach, and he had other property investments in Florida. I think he had invested about a million dollars, and that did not exhaust his resources.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, I submit a question which I desire to have answered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the question.

The Chief Clerk read the question propounded by Mr. O'MAHONEY, as follows:

When Mr. Rankin made the explanation to you of his reason for paying you in cash, did he refer to the Whitehall fee?

A. He never said a word about it.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, I should like to propound a question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the question.

The Chief Clerk read the question propounded by Mr. REYNOLDS, as follows:

You stated a moment ago that you had never been tempted before. Then please tell us why you fell for the temptation of Mr. Francis in accepting his $7,500.

A. I did not mean to intimate that I was tempted. I meant to say that while Mr. Francis was my friend and wanted me to build over there, he was willing to provide the lot on which I might build a house because of our friendship, and because of some things that I might have done for him. That is all I can say.

Mr. McGILL. Mr. President, I send forward a question to be asked.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the question.

The Chief Clerk read the question propounded by Mr. McGill, as follows:

When Rankin made you payments by check, were any such payments made at a time soon after the allowance of a fee by you to him in your court?

A. They were not.

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. President, I desire to propound a question, which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the question.

The Chief Clerk read the question propounded by Mr. Davis, as follows:

Did Francis have any litigation before your court at the time you accepted the $7,500 gift?

A. He had no litigation before my court then nor has he had any since. I never anticipated he would have any. He had a business that would never produce any litigation in my court.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I wish to ask the witness two questions.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the questions.

The Chief Clerk read the first question propounded by Mr. Connally, as follows:

After you agreed upon $5,000 as due from Rankin for your part of the law business, did you ever press Rankin for the payment prior to entry of the decree in the Whitehall case?

A. I never pressed him at any time, not even then. I was willing to wait until he would report to me and pay me the amount that he owed me out of the business that he had in the office, and collections that he would make.

The Chief Clerk read the second question propounded by Mr. Connally, as follows:

If you did not, why did you not press him when you knew he had collected $20,000?

A. Well, I just never thought about it. I thought he would pay me sometime. It just never occurred to me to say anything about it, and I did not.

Mr. POPE. Mr. President, I should like to have asked of the witness the questions which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the questions

The Chief Clerk read the questions propounded by Mr. Pope, as follows:

Exactly what did Rankin do to earn the $15,000 conservation fee in this case?

A. That was before Judge Akerman. I do not know. It was all put up to him. I did not hear what was presented, and I had nothing to do with the allowance of that $15,000.

Was there anything more than a bookkeeping entry?

A. I do not know, because I did not hear the matter.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I send a question to the desk to be asked of the witness.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the question.

The Chief Clerk read the question propounded by Mr. McKellar, as follows:

Was the $2,000 or $2,500 paid to you in your chambers or court room.

A. It was paid to me in my chambers.

Mr. LONERGAN. Mr. President, I should like to have the clerk read the question I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the question.

The Chief Clerk read the question propounded by Mr. Lonergan, as follows:

On whose complaint were the pending charges filed against you by the Judiciary Committee of the House of Representatives?

A. On what?

The Chief Clerk (reading):

On whose complaint were the pending charges filed against you by the Judiciary Committee of the House of Representatives?

A. I would like to know that myself, gentlemen. I have no definite information, and I could not charge anybody without some definite information, and I cannot tell you. I know that the cases that were dismissed out of this proceeding, particularly the Rate case and the Trust Co. cases. that happened in 1933, were the immediate causes of starting, by the parties interested in those cases, charges against me; but I cannot name anybody, and I ought not to do so.

The Chief Clerk read the next question propounded by Mr. Lonergan, as follows:

Why were the complaints made?

A. Please do not ask me to state that. I have a surmise, but I have no facts.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I submit a question which I desire to have read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the question.

The Chief Clerk read the question propounded by Mr. BARKLEY, as follows:

When you made the allowance of $75,000, did you know how it was to be divided among those agreeing to it?

A. A general statement had been made to me about it, and I required them to file in the case a statement about the division, and that is on file in the Whitehall case.

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President, I submit a question which I ask to have read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the ques-

The Chief Clerk read the question propounded by Mr. OVERTON, as follows:

Did your income-tax return for the calendar year 1931 show the sums that you received from Rankin in 1931?

A. Yes; it did. I put in the $2,500 that I had received the year previous—I put in my report in that year.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I send forward a question which I ask to have read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the question.

The Chief Clerk read the question propounded by Mr. CONNALLY, as follows:

You have just said you expected Rankin to pay you from fees collected, and you also testified he had collected $20,000 from such If you expected such payment, why did you never demand or request payment?

A. Simply because I trusted him and expected that he would pay me out of what he collected. I felt friendly to the man, and I wanted him to succeed and pay his debts and to get a home, if necessary; and I was perfectly willing to wait until he could get the money and pay me.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, I send forward two questions, which I ask to have read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the

The Chief Clerk read the first question propounded by Mr. CLARK, as follows:

Did you retain in a tin box in your office for 7 months, some $500 out of the $2,500 paid you on December 24, 1930?

A. The bank situation in Miami was then very precarious, and I held back $500 of the first $2,500 which Rankin paid me, and put it in my safe or in a box, and added a little to it from time to time until I felt the bank situation was all over again; and I think every citizen in Miami kept a cash balance somewhere around him at that time, because of the bank situation. That is the reason I did it.

The Chief Clerk read the next question propounded by Mr. CLARK, as follows:

Why did you deposit $2,000 of the sum received in cash immediately and retain the other $500 in a tin box for several months?

A. By April 31 the bank situation had cleared up, and I deposited the money as soon as I got it.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, I send forward several questions, which I ask to have read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the questions.

The Chief Clerk read the questions propounded by Mr. REYNOLDS, as follows:

Who was present besides you and Rankin when the $2,500 cash was paid you?

A. Nobody.

Having answered that no one was present, please tell us if there as anyone in your chambers with you when Rankin first entered with the money.

A. I do not remember that there was.

Before Rankin arrived with the money had he phoned you that he was coming to see you?

A. He had not.

What time of the day was it that Rankin came with the money?

A. The best of my recollection is that it was a little after noon. I cannot fix it any better than that.

What were you doing in your chambers at that time of day?

A. Well, now, that is nearly 7 years ago, and I want to tell you that I cannot, offhand, remember.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I send forward a question which I ask to have read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the

The Chief Clerk read the question propounded by Mr. BARKLEY, as follows:

When Rankin and Richardson conferred with you in Brooklyn, did you know that suit was to be filed, and that the clerk of the court was to be asked not to divulge the filing of the suit until you returned to Miami?

A. I never talked with Mr. Richardson in Brooklyn or New York, and I never talked to Rankin about the case at all. It was never mentioned. I knew nothing about it.

Mr. BULKLEY. Mr. President, I send to the desk a question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Ohio presents a question which the clerk will read.

The Chief Clerk read the question propounded by Mr. BULKLEY, as follows:

Was there any evidence of assent by clients to the $75,000 Whitehall fee, other than the agreement among the lawyers?

A. There was a bondholders' committee that had over 93 percent of the bonds deposited who consented to it, and I thought they were the main people in interest, and that that was sufficient indication that they felt it was reasonable, and were willing to pay it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Bachman in the chair). What is the further pleasure of counsel for the respondent?

By Mr. WALSH (of counsel):

Q. Have you the final decree there, Judge?-A. No; I have

Q. To refresh your memory, I will ask you, following the last interrogation by a member of the Court, if this is not what appears upon the final decree itself?-

Done and ordered in open court at Miami, Fla., this 24th day of December, A. D. 1930.

HALSTED L. RITTER United States District Judge.

Approved.

LOFTIN, STOKES & CALKINS, By B. C. COLEMAN, Attorneys for Whitehall Building & Operating Co., SHUTTS & BOWEN, Attorneys for Harold A. Moore, Individually and Trustee.
A. L. RANKIN,
Attorney for Complainants and Intervener.
Walter S. Richardson,
Trustee in Bankruptcy.

By separate consent instrument the following agreed:

James R. Roads, attorney for American Bond & Mortgage Co.; American Trust & Safe Deposit Co.; Kenneth W. Moore; Kathryne K. Moore, his wife; Hayden W. Ward, individually and trustee. Wilson Trammell, attorney for George H. Thomas, trustee.

A. Yes, sir; that is part of the record.

Q. I think there are one or two questions that I should like to ask you, Judge.

Have you the check of Francis there—the Francis check? Well, I will just ask you the question, Was not that in 1929 instead of 1930?—A. 1929. I think it was in the month of March, within 4 or 5 weeks after I went on the bench.

- Q. Did you know Hill, the brother-in-law of Mr. Rankin?—A. I did not.
- Q. You overlooked an answer to the specification against you that you improperly accepted an invitation to stay complimentarily at the hotel that was in the hands of the receiver—the Whitehall.—A. The management repeatedly urged me to come up to see that hotel; and I thought that the property being in my court, and I would have to fix an upset price, and not being familiar with the inside, and especially it being urged that they had to make repairs because of the hurricane. I went up there the first time and stayed overnight. The hurricane had badly damaged the building, and the question was how much money to spend on it. What was the immediate work to be done that would be approved? And only by personal inspection could I find out that fact. So I went there at the management's request, and I did not pay anything. I did not think I was required to pay anything. The management said they would take care of it, and I thought it was a legitimate part of the expense.

The second time I went up there was the closing of the season, Washington's Birthday. They had a celebration, and they had a lot of invited guests there, and I was one of them, and my wife; and we were there as guests of the receiver and Mr. Bemis. I knew nothing about my daughter and my son or about my secretary being there at all.

Q. Judge, the managers abandoned that, apparently. They did not ask any questions about it. I take it that it is abandoned. I am just asking you about the occasions that were introduced in evidence.

Mr. LONERGAN. Mr. President, I submit a question to be asked the witness.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. George in the chair). The Senator from Connecticut propounds a question, which will be read.

The legislative clerk read the question propounded by Mr. Lonergan, as follows:

Please repeat last conversation you had with Mrs. Francis regarding building lot or proceeds of sale thereof.

A. Mrs. Francis knew nothing about this $7,500 and the purchase of the lot until I told her about it. She said she knew that Dick wanted me to have a lot to build on, and that I had done a lot of things for him, and she wanted me to take the lot. I said there was a condition attached to it that I build on that lot, and I did not feel that I should hold it under those conditions as a gift or in trust for that purpose. She said, "Well, you take the lot; I know Dick owes you something." I said, "Well, I will take the lot, and whatever I get out of it I will credit to income as having been paid in satisfaction of any claim I might have for legal services; you are going to close this estate, and if the matter comes up in the estate we can show a consideration. At this time it is upon that basis." And she said, "All right." It was on that basis, thus shifting the arrangement previously made, that I took that lot and relieved it from the obligation which the gift imposed to build on it.

Mr. WALSH (of counsel). The managers may take the witness

CROSS-EXAMINATION

By Mr. Manager HOBBS:

- Q. Judge, did you or not receive the Persian rug which is now in your living room as a gift?—A. I bought that Persian rug on the floor in my house 25 years ago in Denver, Colo.
- Q. I will ask you if you received as a gift a set of office furniture?—A. I never did.
 - Q. You never did?-A. No, sir.
- Q. I will ask you, Judge, whether or not in the allowance of the fee of $75,000 to Mr. A. L. Rankin you took into consideration the averments of the bill and the failure of any proof of any of the averments?—A. I took into consideration the fact that the bill set up a very bad situation that had been cleared up, and, I cared not whether by suit or by settlement, they had settled it.

- Q. Did you know that in the decree that you signed, the final settlement in that case, your final decree, you acquitted all of the Moores and the Moore interests and all their corporation of any fraud, and completely exonerated them from any of the charges made in the original bill?—A. I knew there had been a settlement made, and that was part of the settlement.
- Q. Did you know that that part of the decree was in the decree?—A. Why, certainly; I read it.
- Q. And you signed it knowing that it acquitted the Moores of any fraud or chicanery?—A. It is what the parties all agreed on in the final decree.
- Q. Judge, you knew that that part that you read of article 7 of the deed of trust was merely a part of the articles, did you not?—A. I knew it was a very vital and separate and distinct part of the agreement of the trustees; yes.
- Q. And do you mean to tell this honorable Court that your interpretation as a lawyer and a judge is that that part could be interpreted in the way that you say you interpreted it?—A. Otherwise I would not have testified that way.
- Q. Do you mean to say that you think that any bondholder under the deed of trust securing the first mortgage in the Whitehall case could have filed a suit to foreclose at any time after default?—A. The deed says so.
- Q. And that was your interpretation?—A. That was my interpretation.
- Q. And that was why you thought that Mr. Holland had no right to stop that suit?—A. I thought that he could not stop the others who had a perfect right to prosecute the suit; yes, sir.
- Q. And so your declination to allow him to stop his suit was based upon your interpretation of article 7 of the deed of trust and that part of it which you have just read?—A. How can a judge proceed in a case unless he uses his judgment and does the best he can? Yes, sir.
- Q. I think, in answer to your question, that many times they proceed otherwise.—A. You charged it in this case, and I would like to have you prove it.
- Q. Judge, you say that the first time you went up to Whitehall was on the invitation of the management to inspect the storm damage?—A. That is what I said.
- Q. What were the dates?—A. I cannot tell you; I do not know; I do not remember.
- Q. Was the hotel open or closed?—A. It had not opened yet, as I remember; but you have the dates there. I cannot tell you; I do not remember.
- Q. Was the hotel in operation when you stopped there overnight?—A. Well, sir, I do not remember. That was over 7 years ago.
- Q. You do not remember whether the hotel was in operation or not?—A. Lots of things occur in 7 years that one cannot remember very easily.
- Q. And do you remember seeing any other guests there?—A. I do not.
- Q. Are you under the impression that you were the only guest at that hotel at that time?—A. I simply have no impression about it; I do not remember.
- Q. Did you eat any meals in the hotel during that stay?—
 A. I do not think so. I do not remember during that first time. I know on Washington's Birthday we had dinner.
- Q. On Washington's Birthday of what year?—A. What is fixed in your notes? I forget what the year was. What was the date and what was the year, Mr. Manager?
- Q. I really do not know, Judge.—A. Then we neither one know. [Laughter.]
- Q. But I am not on the witness stand, if you please, sir, and you are, and I am asking you.—A. I do not remember.
- Q. Do you recall what year it was?-A. I do not.
- Q. Was it the year after the storm?—A. I told you I cannot remember.
- Q. How long after the storm, Judge, would you estimate it was when you made your first visit?—A. I cannot tell you; I do not remember that long ago.
- Q. Judge, were the covers on the upholstered furniture in the Whitehall as you went in?
- Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, I inquire if questions are in order now or should Senators wait?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state to the Senator from North Carolina that questions by Senators are in order at any time.

Mr. REYNOLDS. I submit several questions which I ask to have propounded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The questions submitted by the Senator from North Carolina will be read.

The legislative clerk read the first question propounded by Mr. REYNOLDS, as follows:

Who, if anybody, was present when Mr. Francis gave you his check for $7,500 as a gift?

A. Mrs. Ritter.

The legislative clerk read the second question propounded by Mr. REYNOLDS, as follows:

I believe that you stated that no one was present when Rankin handed you the $2,500, and now you say that no one was present when Francis gave you $7,500. Is that correct?

A. No one was present when Rankin paid me, but my wife was present when Francis put that check in my hand at the door as we were leaving his house.

The legislative clerk read the next question propounded by Mr. REYNOLDS, as follows:

Has anyone ever given you anything when anybody else was present?

A. Let me have that question.

(The witness was handed the written question.)

Has anyone ever given you anything when anybody else was present?

I simply cannot answer that question. I should like to if it could be elaborated a little more. Yes; I have been given a drink when somebody was present, but I cannot answer the question: I am sorry.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I submit a question to be asked the witness.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina propounds a question, which will be read.

The legislative clerk read the question propounded by Mr. Byrnes, as follows:

If you told Mrs. Francis that you would consider the lot as payment for services rendered to Francis, did you give to Rankin, your partner, any part of that money?

A. That Francis matter was never considered a part of the firm business. No entry was ever made on the books. It was well understood that he was a personal friend of mine, and we never considered it as any business in the law firm at all. I never intended to charge him, and I never did charge him for what I did.

By Mr. Manager HOBBS:

Q. You stated in your testimony before the subcommittee at Miami that you knew he would pay you for your services in his own good time, or words to that effect, did you not?-A. I supposed that some time we would have some kind of an arrangement; yes.

Q. Did you or not swear that way at Miami?—A. If the record says so I probably did.

Q. Judge, you say you never knew anything of the background in the Whitehall case until the fall of 1933, when the subcommittee was making its examination down there?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. You knew something of the background, did you not, when Mr. McPherson exhibited the letters and documents to you and read them in open court at the hearing on October 28, 1929?-A. When that case came on I thought there was some background to it, but that did not disclose the situation at all.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, I desire to propound a question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Missouri propounds a question, which the clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read the question propounded by Mr. CLARK, as follows:

If Francis had paid you in cash for your services before his death, would you have considered this a partnership matter in which you should account to Rankin?

A. In no way. It was never considered a part of the firm business. Rankin well knew and we agreed, and I told him he was just a friend of mine I was advising from time to time and that it was no part of the firm's business.

By Mr. Manager HOBBS:

Q. When you were being examined in Miami, Fla., before the subcommittee, did not this take place, as recorded on page 700 of the transcript of the testimony?

Mr. Youmans. Judge Ritter, I gather from this statement that Mr. Youmans. Judge Ritter, I gather from this statement that this $7,500 was a gift to you from Mr. Francis?

Judge Ritter. Well, it was partly a gift and it may have been his idea of settling for what I had done for him. It was a combination. It was more than I would have charged him if I had rendered a bill to him.

Mr. Youmans. How much would you have charged him if you had rendered a bill?

Judge Ritter. I do not know. I cannot itemize it.
Mr. Youmans. Did you report this $7,500 in your income-tax returns?

Judge Ritter. Yes; I paid a tax on it.
Mr. Youmans. Then you considered it compensation for services and not a gift?

Judge Errree. I paid income taxes on it so there would be no question about it.

question about it.

Mr. Youmans. When were those services rendered?
Judge Ritter. Covering a period of about 7 years, I guess.
Mr. Youmans. Were any of these services rendered in Florida?
Judge Ritter. Yes; all of them.
Mr. Youmans. All of them were rendered in Florida?
Judge Ritter. Well, it covered a period of about 5 years, I guess.
Mr. Youmans. Those services were rendered during your partnership with Mr. Rankin, were they not?

Judge Ritter. Partly then and partly before; but when I formed the partnership with Mr. Rankin I said the Francis matter was a personal matter, and that it would not be treated as a firm matter.
Mr. Youmans. This was specifically excluded from partnership matters.

matters

matters.

Judge Ritter. Yes.

Mr. Youmans. In this statement you state specifically that you have no claim or had no claim against Mr. Francis.

Judge Ritter. I never rendered him a bill. He was a personal friend of mine and an intimate friend. I knew that sometime he would now me. This friend of mine and an intimate friend. I knew that sometime he would make a settlement or that sometime he would pay me. This is the way it happened in this $7,500.

I will ask if you gave that testimony under oath in Miami before the subcommittee?

A. I did, but I did not go into the explanation there as I have here, and add to it. It was a hurried meeting down there.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I submit a question, which I desire to ask the witness.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the question submitted by the Senator from Tennessee.

The legislative clerk read the question propounded by Mr. McKellar, as follows:

Did you give half of the additional fee of $2,000 you charged the Mulford people to Rankin?

A. I did not, because Judge Rankin got an equal amount later when the case was closed up, from the receiver, and I got my half, $2,000, earlier, because I needed the money and wanted it, so that Rankin in the end got $4,000 and I got $4,000 out of that foreclosure.

By Mr. Manager HOBBS:

Q. Mr. Rankin did not get that until much later, did he?-A. No; he got that later.

Q. He took the appeal in the case, did he not?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. You never told him anything about getting that $2,000 until much later, did you?-A. When I left the firm I stated that I told him I was going to get out of the Brazilian Court matter what I could.

Q. You never told him about getting the $2,000, did you?-A. It was told him in the final arrangement when he came to make his final decree and get the $8,000 paid by the receiver.

Q. You do not mean to say that Rankin got $2,000 for services performed prior to your taking the bench?-A. I do. sir.

Q. You do?-A. Yes, sir. That is exactly what happened. He got $2,500 afterward when he took the appeal. the case was closed in the lower court and the appeal was taken he was paid $2,500 more for that. I never got a dime of it, of course, because that was after I went on the bench. Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, I submit a question for the witness.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the question submitted by the Senator from Indiana.

The legislative clerk read the question propounded by the Senator from Indiana, as follows:

If these services to Francis were rendered in Florida and extended over a period of 5 years or more, then some of the services were rendered after you went on the bench, as you were only in Florida 4 years before you went on the bench, were they not?

A. I never rendered any service to Francis after I went on the bench. Everything I did for Francis was before I went on the bench. After I went on the bench we may have had some conversation about what happened prior, but I never did anything for him. I did not do anything for him after I went on the bench.

By Mr. Manager HOBBS:

Q. Judge, you stated in your testimony at Miami that you did settle $200,000 worth of claims against J. R. Francis involved in the Cocoa Beach transaction, and that you did write the contracts in and by which that settlement was put through for him, and that you did verify that contract after you went on the bench, did you not?—A. Everything in that matter had been closed up some time before I went on the bench. One day they brought in a contract and said, "Judge, is this the contract that you drew?" I said, "Yes." That is all there was to it. I simply said, "Yes; that is the contract", and that is all.

Q. Do you mean to say that there was no correspondence between you and a New York law firm after you went on the bench with respect to certain changes they wish made in that contract that you drew?—A. I do not recall any.

Q. Do you mean to say there was no correspondence between you and a Detroit lawyer with respect to changes that were made in that contract that you drew in behalf of certain clients of his living in Michigan?—A. I do not recall any.

Q. Will you say that there was none?—A. I—yes; there was not that I can recall.

Q. So you verified the contract merely by saying "yes"?-A. I said, "Yes; that is the contract I drew."

Q. And that was all that was asked you?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And they submitted it to you to find out if that was the contract you drew?—A. That is all there was to it.

Q. Judge, when Mr. McPherson presented in court on October 18 the letters and telegrams which he read to you, they showed that Walter S. Richardson had been for 6 months during the time he was trustee in bankruptcy scheming and planning to get control of that property left in his hands after his official term or tenure of office had expired, did they not?—A. Yes. I did not disqualify him, hedged about as I did hedge him afterward on the receivership. I did not think that disqualified him, because he knew all about the property.

Q. And you think it is perfectly proper, and that a trustee in bankruptcy should conduct himself in that way during his tenure of office?—A. I did not think that the matter presented to me disqualified Mr. Richardson at that time.

Q. And you thought he was perfectly qualified, in spite of the showing that he had solicited clients both to initiate the suit and to intervene for A. L. Rankin? You thought that that did not disqualify him?—A. I did.

Q. You did think it disqualified him?—A. I did not; and his record afterward, in conducting the case, showed I was right.

Q. Judge, you said in your statement, without interrogation, that he made a net profit of $600,000 on the operation of that hotel; did you not?—A. I think the record shows that,

Q. You think the record shows that. His own final report as receiver does not show it; does it?—A. I do not know.

Q. Judge Ritter, do you not know, as a matter of fact, that only $12,000 was turned over by him to himself as receiver—that is, I mean, that he himself, as trustee in bankruptcy, at the termination of his trusteeship turned over only $12,000 to the receivership?—A. I do not know it now. The record will show it.

Q. Do you not know, although there was a net operating profit shown after paying off the cooks and chambermaids of some $300,000, that all of that was paid out in fees and expenses except $19,000 for both years, and that the bondholders never got a dime out of the whole three-season operation by Walter S. Richardson? Do you know that?—A. The records will show. I know that no bondholder or anybody ever raised the question. Nobody ever objected. Nobody said it was wrong; and they all approved his reports and what he had done; and nobody ever objected to it until they started this investigation on me by some stranger outside of the case.

Q. So at the time you allowed A. L. Rankin, as attorney for the complainants in this matter, this fee of $75,000, you thought that the management had resulted in some benefit to the first-mortgage bondholders; did you?—A. I certainly did: and it had.

Q. Sir?-A. And it had.

Q. It had?—A. Yes.

Q. To what extent, and how?—A. They got the property at a price which raised the value of their bonds from 10 or 15 cents up to about 60 cents in value.

Q. Why, Judge, they surrendered their bonds; did they not?—A. Certainly they surrendered their bonds; but they surrendered them to get the property.

Q. It would have been far better for them to surrender the bonds than to pay cash; would it not?—A. They would have had to do that or pay cash, one or the other. Bonds or cash had to be paid.

Q. And, Judge, you knew at that time that Walter Richardson or his immediate family had bought in, at prices ranging from 3 or 4 cents on the dollar to 10 cents, $48,700 worth of those unsurrendered bonds?—A. I never knew a thing about it.

Q. You did not?—A. No; sir; I never knew a thing about it.

Q. And you did not know that the whole purpose of the upset price being fixed was so that he would get 60 cents on the dollar for his bonds?—A. No, sir; I did not know anything of the kind, and that is not true. It was set there so that every bondholder could have his interest in that property in proportion to the amount of bonds he held.

Q. Judge Ritter, do you know whether or not a single first-mortgage bondholder has ever gotten one dime out of that Whitehall Hotel property or out of his bonds?—A. I know they got the property. I do not know whether they made any money out of it, but they got it in payment for their bonds.

Q. I will ask you, Judge, as the judge who tried this case, if you do not know that when this proceeding was started the first-mortgage bondholders had a first mortgage on that property with the right of recapture, and that when it wound up they had the property subject to a $300,000 first-mortgage prior claim?—A. I do not know a thing about it. That happened after the case was closed out in my court, if it happened at all. I knew nothing about it.

Q. Do you not know they had to put a $300,000 mortgage on it to pay the fees that you allowed?—A. I do not. That happened after the matter was all closed out in my court. I never knew a thing about it.

Q. Judge, you say that these petitions for intervention were presented to you and that you signed them on the 16th day of October 1929 in your courtroom in the presence of Mr. McPherson on the same day they were presented?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were any notices given to anyone?—A. I do not know. I do not remember.

Q. Judge, you knew that rule 22 of the practice in your own court condemned that kind of a thing, did you not—A. No; I did not, because this suit was brought on behalf of all bondholders, and any bondholder had the right to come in at any time. That notice, provided there, is a notice given where one seeks to intervene that has some separate possible antagonistic claim or element that has to be tried in the case, and notice must be given to everybody so that matter may be contested, if necessary; but here no notice was required. There had been no pleadings filed in the case; and these bondholders, by perfect right, had come in even without giving anybody notice. If they had given notice, it would not affect their rights. Nobody complained of their coming in as interveners. Nobody ever objected to it. No motion was ever filed to discharge them. Everybody accepted them in, and the case went right along. The bondholders' committee, stepping into the case, went right along to conclusion on behalf of all parties in interest.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, I submit a question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Washington submits a question which the clerk will read.

The legislative clerk read the question propounded by Mr. Schwellenbach, as follows:

Do you think, where attorneys involved in a mortgage foreclosure must usually agree upon fees to be paid to each of them out of the corpus of the estate that there is no duty upon the court to scrutinize the transaction to determine the reasonableness of the fees which the lawyers split up between themselves?

A. I think there is a duty for the court to scrutinize it, and I think I scrutinized this; and there was enough evidence before me that it was a reasonable fee, and particularly when the bondholders, who were the parties interested in it, said they would like to pay it, and they agreed. Of course, a judge must not blindly do a thing. I did not in this case. I think it was a fair fee. That was my best judgment about it, honest judgment, without any previous consultation or knowing anything about it from anybody except at the time it was presented to me; and I was honest in what I did.

By Mr. Manager HOBBS:

Q. Judge Ritter, you say that the answer of the Whitehall Building & Operating Co. had been filed, and admitted the allegations of the bill.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. But you neglected to read who signed that answer. By whom was it signed?—A. It is signed:

Whitehall Building & Operating Co., by Martin Sweeny, president. Attest: Edward C. Sweeny, secretary.

Q. And you also knew and have testified on your direct examination that you knew it was a contest between the Sweenys and Bemis on the one hand and the Moore interests on the other?—A. Well, I say that from the setting of the case as presented to me at that time, I suspicioned that to be true; but this entry of appearance and consent entered by Sweeny was never objected to by White, by Moore, or any of the Moores. Nobody ever said that was wrong and wanted to pull it down. Nobody has ever complained of it.

Q. But it was filed by Martin Sweeny, whom you knew to have an antagonistic interest to the Moores.—A. I did not know at that time anything about the antagonism between Sweeny and Moore. All I saw was that paper and the bill, which recited that Moore owned 50 percent and Sweeny owned 50 percent of the operating company. That is all I had before me.

Q. Judge, you say that the bill of complaint itself, in the part which you read, averred that a demand on the trustee to foreclose was necessary, and that it had either been done or that it was waived because it would be futile?—A. That is what the bill alleged.

Q. So the bill itself averred that?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. In the absence, then, of testimony which would prove fraud on the part of the Moores, demand, according to the averments of that bill, was necessary, was it not?—A. No, sir.

Q. Because of the quotation of article 7 that you read?—A. Because it was feared that the trustee in bankruptcy was antagonistic to the bondholders, and had been neglecting his duty, and had refused to foreclose that mortgage, although it had been in default for many, many months.

Q. Pardon me, Judge. Do you not mean the trustee under the mortgage?—A. I mean the trust deed, securing $2,000,000 worth of bonds, that was in controversy.

Q. I was simply calling attention to the fact that you said the trustee in bankruptcy.—A. I meant the trustee under the bonds. I beg your pardon.

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. President, I submit a question which I desire to have asked of the witness.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the question.

The legislative clerk read the question propounded by Mr. Davis, as follows:

Did Attorneys Shutts and Bowen and Metcalf discuss with you their fee, which was a part of the full fee of $75,000 allowed Rankin?

A. They did not separately. It was simply at the time when we had the decree before us, and the statement by which they had divided the fee among themselves. There was no separate discussion about any separate attorney in the matter, because the fee covered all the claims in the case.

By Mr. Manager HOBBS:

Q. Judge, was or not the bankruptcy wholly and completely terminated in a separate and distinct procedure, distinct and separate utterly from the receivership case in your court?—A. Yes; it was. I do not know whether it had been completely closed out at the time of that hearing or not, but it was separate; yes.

Q. It is your practice to allow fees for services performed by attorneys in bankruptcy proceedings in the wholly separate proceedings of a receivership thereafter?—A. An attorney's fees are first allowed by the referee in bankruptcy, and then, if there is any trouble about it, they come up to me for a review.

Q. I am asking if it is your practice to allow in receivership proceedings fees for services performed by attorneys in the bankruptcy case?—A. Not unless there is some reason for it.

Q. What was your reason for allowing Shutts & Bowen this $6,500 fee for services performed in the bankruptcy?—A. It appears in the decree what it was for. I cannot remember now; but the decree provides it.

Q. The decree provides, if you will recall, that it was for services performed in the bankruptcy phase of the Whitehall matter.—A. Very well. The bankruptcy matter—from the bankruptcy it slid into this receivership, and the parties agreed that that was a fair thing to do; so I thought it was.

Q. Judge, do you not know that they made the application before the referee in bankruptcy for that very fee, and that he denied it?—A. I do not.

Q. You say that when you came to Florida you started in to practice law?—A. Yes; certainly I did.

Q. For the purpose of refreshing your recollection——.
A. I beg your pardon.

Q. Did you not accept the secretaryship of a real-estate corporation?—A. Of course, I was not admitted to practice until I took the examination, in June 1926, and, of course, I could not practice prior to that time. I beg your pardon.

Q. That is perfectly all right. You did accept the secretaryship of one of those boom real-estate corporations, which burst in your face very shortly?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. At the time you undertook it they agreed to pay you $25,000 a year as salary, did they not?—A. Yes; they did.

Q. You say that the reason why you deposited the money which Mr. Rankin gave you in the privacy of your chambers on December 24, 1930, in your strongbox instead of the bank was on account of the fact that the City National Bank of Miami had failed the day before, and that the condition of the banks was considered as precarious.—A. I deposited that money, I think, 4 or 5 days afterward. On Christmas, of course, the banks were closed, and Friday is my motion day, and Saturday I do not hold court, or Sunday. I think I put it in on Monday.

Q. You did so, and you put it in on the fifth day?—A. Yes.

Q. I am asking, if the banks' condition in Miami was precarious enough to be the reason for your leaving $500 in your tin box in the privacy of your office for 7 months, why was it not sufficiently precarious to keep you from depositing two thousand other dollars that you had in cash?—A. Mr. Hobbs, I thought I would just keep a little cash on hand in the drawer, so that I could have it, out of that money.

Q. So you were willing to risk $2,000 but were not willing to risk $500?—A. You can go on and put it that way.

- Q. And you kept it out only 5 days, I mean the $2,000?-A. Yes.
- Q. So the reason you kept it out, then, was engagements in your court, and not the precarious condition of the banks?-A. Well, I think there was a combination of both ideas in my mind at that time, sir.
- Q. Judge, do you mean to say that you thought the condition of the Miami First National was precarious?-A. There was a run on it.
- Q. And did you think it was precarious on the 24th?—A. I did not know. I knew there was a run on it, and you get apprehensive if there is a run on a bank. I could not tell. But I did have confidence in it.
- Q. You say that $500 which you had in your tin box and kept there for 7 months grew until it amounted to $1,100?-A. Yes, sir; and I deposited the $1,100.
- Q. You deposited that on the 10th day of July 1931, did you not?-A. I guess that is the correct date.
- Q. That was not, according to your testimony, then, the identical $1,100 that you drew out in May?-A. Was not what? I did not get your question.
- Q. I am questioning whether you recall or not that in May you drew out the identical amount of the $1,100 which you put back in in July?—A. If I did, I did.
- Q. For the purpose of refreshing your recollection, was not that the $1,100 which you deposited back in July?-A. No; it had nothing to do with it.
- Q. So this $500 grew to be $1,100?-A. I added some to it. My wife had saved some money, and we finally decided it was foolish to keep the cash out, and I put it back in the bank.
- Q. What did you do with that $1,100 that you drew out on the 15th day of May; do you remember?—A. What year?
- Q. 1931.—A. Mr. Hobbs, I could not tell you now what I did with that. That is 5 or 6 years ago. I cannot tell you.
- Q. Judge, we will now take up the Brodek case, if you

In your letter to Mr. Brodek you stated that this was one of a few matters that you were presuming to continue in until finally finished up, or words to that effect; did you not?-A. Yes.

- Q. You stated that you were going to try to get a receiver appointed who would be amenable to your directions; did you not?-A. Well, I meant that Judge Rankin would do it. I did not mean that I would have anything to do with it. My language was a little strong, but I never did anything in that case at all, and I should not have written in that way; and it says in the beginning of that letter that A. L. Rankin will take care of matters, and Mr. Brodek so understood.
- Q. If you referred to Mr. Rankin, why did you say "we"? [Reading:]
- I do not know whether any appeal will be taken in the case or not; but, if so, we hope to get Mr. Howard Paschal or some other person as receiver who will be amenable to our directions.
- A. I had not gotten away from the "we" used in that partnership matter. That was just about a few weeks after I went on the bench, and I just had not gotten away from the "we" idea, I guess. I did not mean that I would have anything to do with it, and I did not.

 Q. If you used "we" in that paragraph as meaning Mr.
- Rankin, why, when you come down to what you are going to do about it, do you say?-

And this matter is one among very few which I am assuming to continue my interest in until finally closed up.

- A. I meant by that that I would probably have to give some information to Judge Rankin about what I had done in the case. I had conducted it all the time and took care of it, and I simply meant that I would have to continue my interest in it to the extent of giving what information I had about it; that is all.
- Q. And did you or not consult with Judge Rankin about the case as it progressed?-A. I never did. After that time all money was sent to him. I never talked with him about it. I never had anything to do with the case.
- Q. Were you or not in Judge Rankin's office, as he testified, when Mr. D'Esterre or his attorneys made you a propo- | Francis told you that her husband had always considered sition of a 50-percent settlement?-A. I have forgotten whether I was or not. If so, it was simply I happened to be in there. It was not a conference for the purpose of my deciding anything at all. It was simply a business proposition as to whether they should accept a settlement or not. I think that Mr. Paschal and maybe Judge Rankin or Mr. Salisbury came to my chambers one day and said, "We have got an offer of settlement of this case." "Well," I said, "if you have, it is a business matter for you to decide, and I haven't anything to do with it", because the law had all been settled, and it was a purely business matter, and I did not enter into it at all.

Q. Now, Judge, we have come to the Francis matter.

You testified down in Miami before the subcommittee that in addition to saving Mr. Francis $200,000 that was claimed against him by the settlement of those claims through the contract which you drew before you went on the bench. which contract you testified was verified by you after you went on the bench, and as to which you now tell us that the verification meant simply a statement of "Yes; that is the contract I drew", wholly apart and distinct from that matter you saved Mr. Francis $85,000 that he invested in the socalled Boca Raton property by your influence with a Mr. Clarence Geist, who was the proprietor of that property; did you not?

- A. Yes, sir.
- Q. You testified that those services were all performed at least 2 years before you went on the bench?-A. Yes, sir. I do not say during 2 years. I started in to get the settlement for Mr. Francis 2 years before I went on the bench.
- Q. Judge, did you not say that "everything in that transaction had been completed at least 2 years before I went on the bench"?-A. I should not have said that if I did. because they were not.
- Q. Did you not testify that your efforts began in 1926 and continued up to sometime in 1927 or 1928?-A. Well, they were beyond that, because I had arranged with Mr. Geist to recognize Mr. Francis' rights to purchase the property and complete his installments, and he had told me he would do that. That was long before I went on the bench. It was not a legal matter. That Francis matter was not legal at all. It was purely a business matter-how much Francis would pay, and that was for him to do, and I had nothing to do with it at all.
- Q. And yet, Judge, these letters that you began to write on February 3, 1930, and continued on through the year, culminating with this letter in 1931 in which you criticized the type of warranty deed contained in the deeds, were written, were they not?-A. Yes, sir.
- Q. And those deeds were reformed to meet your criticism, were they not?-A. I think so.
- Q. And you were there when the escrow agreements were delivered under which the deeds were delivered?-A. I was not.
- Q. You said that you were in the club.-A. I was not at the meeting at all. Mr. Francis and Mr. Geist and Mr. Gedney went out in a room by themselves, and I went out with the women and lay on the beach. I had nothing to do with it.
- Q. But you were at the club when these negotiations went on?-A. Yes, sir; I was.
- Q. That income-tax-return amendment that you made in 1934 was after the investigation by the Subcommittee of the Judiciary down in Miami, was it not?—A. I beg your pardon; what was that?
- Q. I say, that amendment that you filed to your 1931 income-tax return?—A. Yes, sir; that was.
- Q. And that was what called it to your attention?-A. Yes. You see, I explained that when I got the lot I thought whatever I sold that lot for would be what money I got, and I would return it as income; but I found out afterward I should have returned it at its appraised value when I got it in 1931, so I amended my report and put it in.
- Q. Judge, you testified on direct examination, in answer to one of the Senator's questions, did you not, that Mrs.

that as a gift, and that she wanted you to have it; and then did you not add, "and I thought at that time that whatever I got out of that lot would be taxable income"?—A. Yes, sir; at that time of settlement with her.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, may I inquire of the managers whether they are prepared to conclude the cross-examination this afternoon?

Mr. Manager HOBBS. Yes, sir. So far as I am concerned, I shall be through in just one or two questions.

Mr. ROBINSON. Very well.

By Mr. Manager HOBBS:

Q. At the time, then, of the settlement with Mrs. Francis, as you call it—that statement that she made to you—it was in 1931, was it not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You thought then that whatever money you got out of that lot would be taxable income?—A. Yes.

Q. And yet you did not return it, and you did not amend your return until 1934, when, on February 13, you made and swore to that return?—A. Yes. I had not sold the property.

Q. You had not sold it then either, had you?—A. No. I say I had not sold it so as to realize anything to report on my income.

Q. But you got $7,500 in cash and you put that into your bank account, did you not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then, some 2 months later, you wrote your check on that bank account for a warranty deed to Halsted L. Ritter, did you not?—A. Yes. I did not know it was that long.

Q. And there were not any strings to it?-A. No, sir.

Q. In the written statement you said it was to be taken in trust and you took a straight warranty deed, didn't you?—A. Certainly. I said I took it with the understanding I had to build on it and I held it in trust for that purpose.

Q. In your amended return that you filed in 1934 you used these words with respect to that Francis lot, did you not, "as attorney fee"?—A. I settled it with Mrs. Francis at that time, and at that time the conditions were changed and I took it unconditionally at that time and I made my return. Yes, sir; that is the way I thought about it and the way I handled it.

Q. And yet in that amended return you did not say, "Received from Mrs. J. R. Francis", did you?—A. Why, no. I just said, "Received as attorney's fee."

Q. No, sir; you said, "From J. R. Francis."—A. All right. Possibly I did.

Q. You paid no income tax on any income in 1929, did you?—A. There was none to pay.

Q. That was the reason why you did not schedule it?— A. That is the reason I did not pay any.

Q. You did not schedule the Francis fee?—A. No; that was not income.

Q. You got the $7,500 in cash, did you not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. In 1930 you did not schedule one cent of the $5,300 worth of income that you received in cash from your law practice, did you?—A. No; because I had $4,874 loss that year and there would be no income tax to pay.

Q. Was not that $4,800 loss that you talk about claimed on top of a $9,600 deduction you had formerly made for depreciation out of the net value or cost value of your property in Denver?—A. No, sir. It was a direct loss which was recognized by the internal-revenue collector on the statement that I made in my return. It was accepted and granted to me as a loss and was so regarded.

Q. Judge, there was nothing of taxable income whatsoever returned in your return, was there?—A. Because there would be nothing in the world to be paid against that loss.

Q. Just one more question and I am done. You were in financial straits, were you not, from 1926 to 1929?—A. No; I would not call it "financial straits." I had enough to live on.

Q. You were not able to pay your debts, were you?—A. Yes; I was paying my debts right along.

Q. You had not paid your taxes, had you, for 4 years on your apartment house in Denver?—A. That was a separate matter. I had it in the hands of an agent out there, and I found he had not, and that is the reason why I sold the property and took my loss on it and got rid of it. I did not include that in my answer to you. I did not know you had that in mind.

Q. You wrote your agent out there that the reason you would not sell was because you could not sell until you got some ready money which you badly needed?—A. I probably needed money. I do not know just what you are talking about.

Q. Did not you write your agent out there that unless he could trade for some other property which could be mortgaged so as to get you some ready cash, you could not float because you had to have some money?—A. That might be true. I just could not handle that place out there in Denver and that is the reason I sold it. I had a mortgage on it for $25,000 and I could not meet it and interest was coming due. When I answered you awhile ago, I meant I had enough to live on down here and was getting along very well. I did not think about the Denver property. I reported it as a loss and it was approved by the collector of internal revenue.

Mr. Manager HOBBS. That is all.

Mr. WALSH (of counsel). That is all, Judge Ritter.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, I send to the desk a question to be propounded to the witness.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the question submitted by the Senator from Wyoming.

The legislative clerk read the question propounded by Mr. O'MAHONEY, as follows:

Bearing in mind your testimony that Mr. Rankin did not refer to the Whitehall fee when he made his cash payment to you, do you care to comment on the fact that he made payments to you by check both before and after the cash payments out of the Whitehall fee as indicated by the exhibits on pages 370 and 372 of the record before us?

A. I really would like to answer the Senator on this question, but I may be a little obtuse.

Bearing in mind your testimony that Mr. Rankin did not refer to the Whitehall Co. when he made his cash payment to you, do you care to comment on the fact that the payments he made to you both before and after the cash payments in the Whitehall case were by check, as indicated by the exhibits.

I hope I have made myself clear, but probably not. I cannot see what comment I could make. I have explained here that he brought me cash and why I took it and why I asked him for a check. I just do not know how to answer any further.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, I submit another question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the question submitted by the Senator from Wyoming.

The legislative clerk read the question propounded by Mr. O'MAHONEY, as follows:

What was his explanation for paying by cash?

A. He said that he thought that if he paid me by check it would be known that he was giving me checks and those checks could not be registered against a particular case in the office and therefore it might cause us embarrassment. He did send me checks later, which checks were out of collections made in his office and the checks given me could be checked back against that very case. In this matter, if he gave me a check, it could not be checked back against anything that was in the office at that time, and he thought it might create an embarrassing situation if somebody did not know all the facts in the case, and offered that as a reason and I accepted his reason at the time and took the money.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, I submit another question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the question submitted by the Senator from Wyoming.

The legislative clerk read the question propounded by Mr. O'Mahoney, as follows:

Was he not paying on the $5,000 purchase price for the business and not for particular cases?

A. Yes, sir; that is what he was paying for, the purchase price of the property.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I am informed by the managers on the part of the House that they desire to produce some rebuttal testimony. The hour of 5 o'clock having arrived, unless there is objection, I move that the Senate, sitting for the trial of the articles of impeachment, adjourn until 12 o'clock noon on Monday next.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Arkansas.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock p. m.) the Senate, sitting for the trial of the articles of impeachment, adjourned until Monday, April 13, 1936, at 12 o'clock meridian.

SENATE

Monday, April 13, 1936

(Legislative day of Monday, Feb. 24, 1936)

IMPEACHMENT OF HALSTED L. RITTER

The Senate, sitting for the trial of the articles of impeachment against Halsted L. Ritter, judge of the United States District Court for the Southern District of Florida, met at 12 o'clock meridian.

The managers on the part of the House, Hon. HATTON W. SUMNERS, of Texas; Hon. RANDOLPH PERKINS, of New Jersey; and Hon. Sam Hobbs, of Alabama, accompanied by the clerk of the Committee on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives, Elmore Whitehurst, and by Thomas M. Mulherin, special agent, Federal Bureau of Investigation, Department of Justice, appeared in the seats provided for them.

The respondent, Halsted L. Ritter, with his counsel, Frank P. Walsh, Esq., and Carl T. Hoffman, Esq., and R. O. Cullen, Esq., of Miami, Fla., associated with Mr. Hoffman, appeared in the seats assigned them.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Sergeant at Arms by proclamation will open the proceedings of the Senate sitting for the trial of the articles of impeachment.

The Sergeant at Arms made the usual proclamation.

On request of Mr. ASHURST, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of the Senate. sitting for the trial of the articles of impeachment, for Saturday, April 11, 1936, was dispensed with, and the Journal was approved.

Mr. ROBINSON. I suggest the absence of a quorum. The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will call the roll. The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Clark	Johnson	Pope
Ashurst	Connally	Keyes	Radcliffe
Austin	Coolidge	King	Reynolds
Bachman	Copeland	La Follette	Robinson
Bailey	Couzens	Logan	Schwellenbach
Barbour	Davis	Lonergan	Sheppard
Barkley	Donahey	Long	Shipstead
Benson	Duffy	McAdoo	Smith
Bilbo	Fletcher	McGill	Steiwer
Bone	Frazier	McKellar	Thomas, Okla.
Borah	George	McNary	Thomas, Utah
Brown	Gerry	Maloney	Townsend
Bulkley	Gibson	Metcalf	Truman
Bulow	Glass	Minton	Vandenberg
Burke	Guffey	Murphy	Van Nuys
Byrd	Hale	Murray	Wagner
Byrnes	Harrison	Norris	Walsh
Capper	Hastings	Nye	Wheeler
Caraway	Hatch	O'Mahoney	White
Carey	Hayden	Overton
Chavez	Holt	Pittman

Mr. ROBINSON. I announce that the junior Senator from Alabama [Mr. Bankhead], the Senator from Colorado [Mr. COSTIGAN], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCARRAN], and the Senator from Florida [Mr. TRAMMELL] are absent from the Senate because of illness, and that the junior Senator from Illinois [Mr. DIETERICH], the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. Gore], the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. Moore], the Senator from Georgia [Mr. Russell], the senior Senator from Alabama [Mr. Black], the senior Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS], and the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. NEELY] are necessarily detained from the Senate.

Mr. AUSTIN. I announce that the Senator from Iowa [Mr. Dickinson] is necessarily absent.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Eighty-two Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

(At this point, on request of Mr. Robinson and by unanimous consent, the Senate sitting for the trial of the articles of impeachment, suspended its session in order to receive a message from the President of the United States, by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries. The message having been received, and noted elsewhere in the Record of today's legislative proceedings, on motion of Mr. Robinson, the Senate resumed its session sitting for the trial of the articles of impeachment.)

The VICE PRESIDENT. What is the pleasure of the managers on the part of the House and counsel for the respondent?

Mr. WALSH (of counsel). Mr. President, I have not quite finished. I should like to take up a matter with the chairman of the managers.

(Mr. Walsh, of counsel, and Mr. Manager Sumners briefly conferred.)

Mr. WALSH (of counsel). Mr. President, the manager says he would like to ask the respondent another question or two. So please resume the stand, Judge Ritter.

Judge Ritter resumed the stand.

FURTHER CROSS-EXAMINATION OF HALSTED L. RITTER

By Mr. Manager SUMNERS:

Q. Judge Ritter, when you and Judge Rankin formed your association, Judge Rankin had a good, workable library, did he not?—A. He had it at his home in Andalusia, Ala. He brought it down later for our library. Yes, sir.

- Q. You had been, I believe, while practicing law in Denver, using an office in a building where there was a library for the use of the tenants, and therefore you, I believe, did not have very much of a library at that time?-A. No; we did not have to buy books. We used the building library. But I had a little private library in my own office, which I brought down. I do not remember how many volumes, but I know I brought down the Centennial Digest and the Decennial Digest. I brought down quite a number of books. I cannot tell you just how many. We had a very good, workable library.
- Q. I will ask you, Judge Ritter, if this was not your statement before the committee when it had its hearings in

When I decided to go in with Judge Rankin I did not send for the few books which I had out there, and while I do not think it is incumbent on me to go into the details of the situation, I just want to say that I brought down the Century Digest and the Decennial Digest, which out West was a very outstanding work tool, but which down here is not much used. Judge Rankin said he traded that off for $100; if he had let me know about it I would have paid him much more for it, and I wish I had it in my library

A. Yes, sir; I testified that way.

Q. Do you recall any books you brought down there except the two sets of books mentioned in this statement?—A. I had some textbooks, as I remember, on questions of bonds and questions of rates and questions of trusteeships. I just cannot recall now.

Q. It is a fact, however, is it not, that Judge Rankin had the library with which you worked, in the main, which constituted the contribution to the books?-A. Yes, sir; his contribution was far greater than mine.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. I am sorry, Mr. President, but I do not seem to find in my portfolio the matter about which I intended to interrogate the witness. It will save time to have him stand aside and let me call him again.

Mr. WALSH (of counsel). Let me ask him a question or two first.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Very well.

FURTHER REDIRECT EXAMINATION

By Mr. WALSH (of counsel):

Q. As a matter of fact, when you went into partnership you fused the library, did you not?-A. We did.

Q. And it all became a part of the partnership assets?— A. Yes, sir.

to respondent's exhibit no. 45 the other day, which was the inventory of the books which are alleged to have been in the office at the time of the dissolution, the number of the books was not figured up, and I now announce the number. There were 894 books on the list.

By Mr. Manager SUMNERS:

Q. The books which were on that list were made up in the main of books which Judge Rankin had at the time when you and he became associated. Is not that true, Judge Ritter?-A. Yes; we put all our books together and counted them an asset of the firm.

Q. You intended at that time that the firm was to have some greater degree of permanence than developed?-A. I am sorry; I did not get the question. Q. At the time you and he formed your relationship was it not contemplated that the firm would have a greater degree of permanency than it developed to have?-A. We expected to spend the rest of our lives practicing law there and we bought books afterward. The firm bought books and added to our library out of our earnings.

Q. When you formed your copartnership arrangement, I believe you stated you did not have any written agreement of association. Judge Ritter, is not this what happened, that you and Judge Rankin just moved in together and you put in your books and your furniture that you had, and he put in his books and what furniture he had, and you went to practicing law without any understanding or definite agreement with regard to who should own the property that each of you brought into the office?-A. No, sir; that is not the fact. All the property was to go as common property in which each partner had a one-half interest, and it became an asset of the firm.

Q. Do you mean if you had dissolved the next day after that association was established you would have owned half the books Judge Rankin brought into the office?-A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. That is all.

By Mr. WALSH (of counsel):

Q. May I ask a question which has been suggested to me. Are there or not upon this list of books which you have given me any books that were purchased after the partnership dissolution?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I believe you misunderstood me. They were not put upon the list, were they, after the dissolution?-A. Put there after the dissolution?

Q. Yes .- A. No, sir. That is the list that was made up at the time of the dissolution.

Mr. WALSH (of counsel). That is all.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Let the witness stand aside. Are there any other witnesses, gentlemen?

Mr. WALSH (of counsel). I have the testimony of one witness to read. I have submitted it to the managers.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Have my cocounsel examined the data you propose to offer?

Mr. WALSH (of counsel). I do not know. I gave it to you in the first instance. Unless you gave it to them they have not examined it. I desire to read the testimony of this

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair inquired if other witnesses were to be called, but understood it was desired to have a conference between the managers on the part of the House and counsel for the respondent.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. I have the data now for which I was looking a moment ago. Let the respondent again take the stand.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The respondent will take the stand again.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Mr. President, we offer at this time photostatic copy of letters written by the respondent to Hon. William D. Mitchell, dated December 19, 1929; a letter of January 29, 1930, to Hon. Walter H. Newton, Secretary to the President at that time, and a letter to Hon. William D. Mitchell, Attorney General, dated January 23, 1930, and a letter of April 9, 1933, addressed to Hon. Norman J.

Mr. WALSH (of counsel). May I look at the letter, please? Let Judge Ritter read it first. I should like to read the has been mixed up from the beginning of the Whitehall

Mr. WALSH (of counsel). When I called your attention | letter before it is offered. I have never heard of these letters before, and should like to consider them.

The WITNESS. Yes; I wrote that-

Mr. WALSH (of counsel). No; please do not make any answer until I read the letters. I have never seen these. [After reading letter.] I object to this as irrelevant and immaterial.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. The others are of the same

Mr. WALSH (of counsel). I think they are not only immaterial but if they are the same as the first letter which I have read they are highly objectionable. They prove no issue in this case whatsoever, and they might inject an issue which would be prejudicial to the respondent. I should like the Vice President to look at the letter and consider my objection to it.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. The others are the same. I will send them all up to the Vice President.

Mr. WALSH (of counsel). I have not seen them. I should like to see each one of them.

(The letters were handed to Mr. Walsh, of counsel, and were then handed to the Vice President.)

The VICE PRESIDENT. What is the object of the testimony proposed to be introduced?

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Mr. President, the letters are offered for the purpose of showing the length to which the respondent was willing to go at that time in behalf of his former partner. The Chair will recall that the letters were written a few months after the transactions in the courtroom of Judge Ritter, when, as we claim, Judge Ritter was advised of the facts and circumstances which showed a champertous inception of the Whitehall case. The letters contain statements—and I only go this far—by Judge Ritter with regard to the qualifications, character, and professional equipment of his former partner. I think they throw a great deal of light upon the relationship between these two gentlemen with regard to whom it is charged in this case that a conspiracy existed, and money passed from one to the other with regard to the Whitehall case; and, to be entirely candid with the Chair, I think the letters touch the question this case. Mr. WALSH (of counsel). Mr. President, I desire to renew my objection, and to enter on behalf of the respondent as strong a protest as I know how to enter.

of the veracity of the respondent—an important matter in

I say that the interjection into the case at this hour of a matter that is entirely political, because part of it is brought out here, might obscure some of the elements in the case that we, at least, have been attempting to carry along to refute the charge that has been made. I do not understand that it would be any reflection upon the judge to admit the letters. At that time he had every confidence in this man, if the matter may be so expressed. At that time he was as innocent as he now claims to be. So I say, this being purely a political matter, that it might interfere with the serene flow of evidence to bring about a just result in this high Court of Impeachment. I say that the introduction into the case of that element-I will not characterize the reason for offering it—is so far away from the question of the honesty of the respondent that it might prejudice him in a way that I think every member of the Court ought to desire to be, and should be, far above.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Mr. President, may I make just one observation?

Whatever in the letters has any smack of politics, has any reference to politics, the managers would be glad to have deleted from the letters; but the letters contain statements by the respondent with reference to the character and qualifications of his former law partner which we think, under the circumstances, in view of the character of the Court that is trying this question, would be of value to the Court in determining some of the most fundamental questions that arise in the case, namely, the integrity of the respondent, the credibility of the respondent, and the length to which the respondent was willing to go in order to render service to Mr. Rankin, with whom it is contended in this case he case, before the Whitehall case, and extending now after the partnership had been dissolved, not only seeking to serve Mr. Rankin by appointments in his court but, we claim, seeking to put him upon the bench, and making statements in that effort.

Mr. WALSH (of counsel). Mr. President, may I say one more word? Notwithstanding that my distinguished opponent has notified the Senate what is in the letters, and notwithstanding the fact that he is urging that there is no politics in suggesting appointments, I still desire to protest.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair would like to submit this question to the Senate, but the unfortunate part of the matter is that submitting it to the Senate would be equivalent to admitting the letters in evidence, because they would have to be read.

The Chair thinks the Court is sufficiently informed to discriminate between political and legal evidence. The Chair is going to admit the evidence.

Mr. WALSH (of counsel). Is there anything more from the judge?

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. No, sir. Mr. WALSH (of counsel). You may retire, then, Judge. The VICE PRESIDENT. Has the respondent any other witnesses?

Mr. WALSH (of counsel). The respondent will rest, except for one thing—as soon as the letters that Your Honor has admitted shall have been read.

Mr. Manager HOBBS. I ask to have the letters marked as exhibits.

(The documents were marked, respectively, "Managers' Exhibit A-27", "Managers' Exhibit A-28", "Managers' Exhibit A-29", and "Managers' Exhibit A-30."

(Mr. Manager Hobbs proceeded to read Managers' Exhibit A-27, and read as follows:)

MANAGERS' EXHIBIT A-27

UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE'S CHAMBERS, Southern District of Florida, Miami, Florida, December 19, 1929.

Halsted L. Ritter, Judge.

Honorable William D. Mitchell,

Attorney General, Washington, D. C.

Sir: I am advised that Honorable Henry D. Clayton, judge of the United States Court for the Middle District of Alabama, has asked retirement. If this is true, I desire to recommend most strongly than the successor of A. L. Benkin, of Andrews for the appointment as his successor of A. L. Rankin, of Andalusia, Alabama, whom I have known for a number of years.

Judge Rankin was judge of the Law and Equity Court for Cov-

Judge Rankin was judge of the Law and Equity Court for Covington County, in that State, for a number of years, and has practiced in the Alabama bar 25 years, being a member of all the courts. He is a man of exceptional ability, thoroughly versed in the law, is of unquestionable integrity, and well known throughout the State of Alabama. He has the judicial temperament in a high degree, and would fill the position with great honor and satisfaction, I feel certain.

He was an argent supporter.

He was an ardent supporter-

Mr. Manager HOBBS. I will leave that out.

Mr. WALSH (of counsel). I think if any of the letter is to be read, it should all be read.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Let it all be read.

(Mr. Manager Hobbs resumed and concluded the reading of the letter, as follows:)

He was an ardent supporter of President Hoover in the last elec-He was an ardent supporter of President Hoover in the last election, although he had been identified prior thereto with the Democratic Party. He is thoroughly in sympathy with the enforcement of law, as pronounced by the President and yourself; is in complete accord with the prohibition law, and would be fearless, impartial, and positive on the bench. He is an active member of the Baptist Church, and has been actively interested in all movements for the betterment of social conditions.

Yours very truly,

HALSTED L. RITTER.

(Mr. Manager Hobbs read Managers' Exhibits A-28, A-29, and A-30, as follows:)

MANAGERS' EXHIBIT A-28

HALSTED L. RITTER,
UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE,
Miama, Florida, January 23, 1930

Miama, Florida, January 23, 1930

Honorable William D. Mitchell,

Attorney General, Washington, D. C.

Dear Mr. Mitchell: Supplementing my former letter concerning Judge A. L. Rankin, who is an applicant for appointment as Federal judge in the middle district of Alabama, I want to say that we were partners in the practice of law in West Palm Beach, Florida, under the name of Ritter and Rankin, for two years immediately preceding any appointment. I therefore am in a position to say that I regard Judge Rankin as in every way qualified for the position he seeks. He has no superior in the South as a common law lawyer. He maintains always the high ideals of the profession. He will lift the court to which he is appointed into a position of dignity and respect, and bring to the performance of his duties a judicial mind, a keen sense of justice, and an independence, which are qualifications which should characterize a Federal judge.

Yours very truly,

HALSTED L. RITTER.

MANAGERS' EXHIBIT A-29

HALSTED L. RITTER United States District Judge, Miami, Florida, January 23, 1930.

Honorable Walter H. Newton, Secretary to the President, White House, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MR. NEWTON: By reason of the death of Judge Clayton there is a vacancy in the middle district of Alabama. My former there is a vacancy in the middle district of Alabama. My former law partner, Judge A. L. Rankin, is an applicant for the place. I want to say that Judge Rankin is a man of the highest character and integrity. He is one of the ablest common-law lawyers in the South. We were partners in the practice of law in West Palm Beach before my appointment to the bench. I know of no man better qualified from the standpoint of experience, ability, and character for the position. He had six years experience as judge of the State court in Alabama and is well known throughout the State. Believing so thoroughly in his qualifications, I could not resist writing you this personal note.

I hope some day to meet you and establish our friendship, for I have heard many fine things about you.

Yours sincerely,

Yours sincerely.

HALSTED L. RITTER.

MANAGERS' EXHIBIT A-30

Halsted L. Ritter, Judge.

United States District Judge's Chambers, Southern District of Florida, Miami, Florida, April 9, 1930.

Miami, Florida, April 9, 1930.

Honorable Norman J. Morrison,
Assistant Attorney General, Washington, D. C.

Dear Mr. Morrison: My former law partner, Judge A. L. Rankin, is on the list of those being considered for the vacancy on the Federal bench in Alabama caused by the death of Judge Clayton. He has many strong endorsements and is in every way, in my judgment, well qualified for the position. He is a Hoover Democrat and was active for Hoover during the last election.

The Judge came down to Vest Palm Beach during the boom

The Judge came down to West Palm Beach during the boom days, where I met him. He had land interests in this State, which lured him to stay. I myself was uncertain at the time whether I would remain in Florida, so we decided to form a team anyway for our mutual interests, and we continued with the understanding that Judge Rankin might at any time go back to Alabama.

understand the real difficulty in considering his appointment is the fact that he took up his residence in Florida and abandoned his Alabama residence, but I know that he never fully did that and always considered himself a resident of Alabama and voted there.

there. I am wondering whether you would not, if the opportunity offers in talking to Mr. Sisson, suggest that you know from information received from me, if you think best, that Judge Rankin never abandoned his Alabama residence, and that should not stand in the way of his being considered for the position. I don't want you to inconvenience yourself, but just thought that perhaps the matter might come up because of your having been down here in various cases, whereby you might just suggest that you did not believe that Rankin's application should be prejudiced by the fact that he practiced law for several years past in Florida.

Hoping you are well, and that we may see you down here again some day, I am,

Yours sincerely,

Yours sincerely.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there any further testimony? Mr. Manager HOBBS. Yes, Mr. President. We would like to have Judge Freeland.

Mr. WALSH (of counsel). I have not finished. I will now read the testimony of Mrs. Helen Francis, taken in the investigation prior to this hearing.

(Mr. Walsh, of counsel, thereupon read as follows:)

TESTIMONY OF MRS. HELEN FRANCIS, MIAMI BEACH, FLA.

(The witness was previously sworn by Mr. TARVER.) Mr. Youmans. Will you state your name and residence?
Mrs. Francis. Helen Francis; 4621 Collins Avenue, Miami Beach.
Mr. Youmans. Mrs. Francis, how long have you been a resident of Miami Beach, Fla.?

Mrs. Francis. Since about 1925, I think, 1925 or 1926.

Mr. Youmans. And you and your husband had been residing in Miami Beach, Fla., as your residence for a good many years prior to his death, had you not?

Mrs. Francis. Oh, yes. Mr. Youmans. Mrs. Francis, when did you first become acquainted with Judge Ritter?

Mrs. Francis. A great many years ago—all my life. Mr. Youmans. Where were you reared, Mrs. Francis? Mrs. Francis. Indianapolis.

Mr. Youmans. You knew him when you were a child? Mrs. Francis. Yes; and my father and mother knew his father and mother.

Mr. Mr. Youmans. Do you know how long your husband knew Judge Ritter?

Judge Ritter?

Mrs. Francis. I cannot answer that accurately, but I know they met in the West one of my years in California; I do not know just what year, but a great many years ago.

Mr. Youmans. For the last 8 or 10 years were you and your husband associated very much with Judge Ritter?

Mrs. Francis. Yes; ever since the Ritters came to Florida.

Mr. Youmans. I believe they lived in—

Mrs. Francis. West Palm Beach.

Mr. Youmans. Intil he became judge?

Mr. Youmans. Until he became judge? Mrs. Francis. Yes.

Mr. Youmans. Did you visit them up there quite often? Mrs. Francis. Yes. Mr. Youmans. Did they visit you quite often?

Mrs. Francis. Quite often.
Mr. Youmans. Were you ever in his office?
Mrs. Francis. You mean in Palm Beach?

Mr. Youmans. Yes. Mrs. Francis. I do not think so; I cannot recollect that I was Mr. Youmans. Do you know that your husband ever visited Judge Ritter's office in West Palm Beach?
Mrs. Francis. Well, I do not know that he did.

Mr. Youmans. You never did go to Judge Ritter's office with your husband?

Mrs. Francis. Never.
Mr. Youmans. Did your husband discuss his business matters with you, Mrs. Francis?

Mrs. Francis. No; he did not.
Mr. Youmans. Did you know in a general way about his busi-

Mrs. Francis. I did not.

Mr. Youmans. Did you know that your husband had made a loan of $15,000 to the Palm Beach Bus Co., in which Judge Ritter was interested?

Mrs. Francis. I knew there was something about some business up there, but just exactly what, I did not know.

Mr. Youmans. Your husband did not tell you about that?

Mrs. Francis. No; he did not. Just in a general way I knew there was something, but I did not know what it was.

Mr. Youmans. Did he ever discuss with you the fact that he had a $15,000 note?

Mrs. Francis. He never did.

Mr. Youmans. And that he had been unable to collect that? Mrs. Francis. Oh, no; never.

Mrs. Francis. Oh, no; never.
Mr. Youmans. Did you consider Judge Ritter any better friend of your family than lots of your other friends?
Mrs. Francis. Yes; I believe I did.
Mr. Youmans. Did you consider him the best friend that you had?

Mrs. Francis. I never gave it a thought. I think he and his wife are two of my very best friends.

Mr. Youmans. Did you have other friends you felt as close to as you did to Judge Ritter and his family?

Mrs. Francis. At the moment I cannot recall any.
Mr. Youmans. Did your husband invest to a considerable extent in Florida properties during what was known as the "real-estate boom" down here in 1925?
Mrs. Francis. He did.

Mr. Youmans. Do you know approximately how much he invested in Florida properties at that time?

Mrs. Francis, I do not know now. Mr. Youmans. Was it in the neighborhood of a million dollars or more?

Mrs. Francis. I do not know.
Mr. Youmans. Did he have some trouble about those properties after the boom was over?
Mrs. Francis. I cannot answer.

Mrs. Francis. I cannot answer.
Mr. Youmans. You do not know about that?
Mrs. Francis. No.
Mr. Youmans. Do you know whether any creditors were giving him any trouble after the boom was over in 1925?
Mrs. Francis. Not to my knowledge.
Mr. Youmans. And along, say, in 1927, 1928, or 1929, did you know of any creditors that were giving Mr. Francis some trouble?
Mrs. Francis. No. Mrs. Francis. No.

Mr. Youmans. Did he owe any money, to your knowledge?

Mrs. Francis. I do not know of any.
Mr. Youmans. Did he pay cash for all the properties that he bought down here?

Mrs. Francis. I do not know; as far as I know, he did. I do not

Mr. Youmans. You do not know whether he did or not?
Mrs. Francis. No; I do not.
Mr. Youmans. Mr. Francis carried a considerable bit of life insurance, did he not?
Mrs. Francis. I think he did.

Youmans. Do you know about how much life insurance he

Mrs. Francis. I do not know, because it was mixed up there with business in the factory, I believe, and I do not know.
Mr. Youmans. With the factory in Flint?
Mrs. Francis. Yes.

Mr. Youmans. That is Flint, Mich.? Mrs. Francis. Yes.

Mr. Youmans. Was that where you came from?
Mrs. Francis. That is where the factory was located.
Mr. Youmans. And there was a lot of insurance in connection with the factory?

Mrs. Francis, That is my understanding; I could not be absolutely truthful about it,

Mr. Youmans. Do you know whether or not Mr. Francis had any financial difficulties and was unable to keep up the premiums on the insurance for a time?

Mrs. Francis. Why, not to my knowledge.

Mr. Youmans. Do you know whether or not some of his creditors carried his insurance for him and kept the premiums up for him in order to keep the insurance in good standing?

Mrs. Francis. I do not know—
Mr. Youmans. You do not know about that. Did you ever make any agreement with any of his creditors by which they would pay the premiums on his insurance and keep it in good standing, pro-vided they could be paid out of the insurance? Mrs. Francis. No. Mr. Youmans. You never made any such agreement?

Mrs. Francis. No.
Mr. Youmans. Were you present when your husband made a gift of $7,500 to Judge Ritter?

Mrs. Francis. I was not.
Mr. Youmans. When did you first learn of that gift?
Mrs. Francis. A little after Mr. Francis' passing.
Mr. Youmans. Who brought that to your attention first?
Mrs. Francis. I think Judge Ritter.
Mr. Youmans. What was the occasion of his calling your attention to the cattle. tion to this gift?

Mrs. Francis. I do not know; in speaking of general affairs, I think, but I do know it was a gift, and I think in payment of services, as I recall.

Mr. Youmans. Do you know of any services that Judge Ritter had rendered to your husband?

Mrs. Francis. I know, in a general way, about quite a good deal of services concerning Boca Raton, and some lands, perhaps, fronting on the beach.

Mr. Youmans. Was your husband interested in Boca Raton? Mrs. Francis. Yes.

Mr. Youmans. What else was he interested in down there, in a business way? Mrs. Francis. Except real estate, I know of nothing else.

Mr. Youmans. What other real estate was he interested in?
Mrs. Francis. There was Miami Beach, Coco Beach—I do not know all; he did not tell me.

Mr. Youmans. Was he buying or selling real estate?

Mrs. Francis. Buying, not noticeably the selling.

Mr. Youmans. Did he not have some difficulties about all that real estate after the boom was over and prices had dropped, and real estate became more or less worthless?

Mrs. Francis. Except that it was a burden on my hands, I do not know of any know of any.

Mr. Youmans. You do not know of any other trouble, except as a burden? Mrs. Francis. No; I do not.

Mr. Youmans. Why was it a burden?
Mrs. Francis. Oh, just because we did not want it.

Mr. Youmans. You could not get rid of it? Mrs. Francis. No.

Mr. Youmans. Could you not give it away?
Mrs. Francis. We did not try that.
Mr. Youmans. What did Judge Ritter say to you about this $7,500 gift, when he brought it to your attention?

Mrs. Francis. I cannot recall that. It was shortly after Mr. Mrs. Francis. I cannot recall that. It was shortly after Mr. Francis' passing, and I do not recall, but I do know it was intended as a gift, because Mr. Francis had taken me over to see a lot and told me the judge was going to build there. I knew it was Judge Ritter's lot, and I knew it was a gift from Mr. Francis to the judge. Mr. Youmans. Mr. Francis had taken you over to point out to you the lot that was purchased with the $7,500?

Mrs. Francis. Yes; because he thought the judge was going to build there

Mr. Youmans. And told you that was Judge Ritter's lot? Mrs. Francis. Yes; he did. Mr. Youmans. Did he tell you he had given that lot to Judge Ritter?

Mrs. Francis. He did not. Mr. Youmans. Did he tell you he had given Judge Ritter the money to buy that lot?

Mrs. Francis. He did not; he was not that type of man.
Mr. Youmans. Mrs. Francis, after your husband's death, did you find any record of the $7,500 gift in the records of your husband's estate?

Mrs. Francis. No; I did not

Mr. Youmans. Never saw any reference to that at all. Do you know why your husband made a gift of $7,500 to Judge Ritter?

Mrs. Francis. Knowing my husband, he was very apt to do that, partly for services and partly because he was generous. He was exceptionally fond of Judge Ritter.

Mr. Youmans. Judge Ritter's statement shows it was not for services, but it was a gift.

Mrs. Francis. It might have been; I do not know. I do not know; but that is very probably true, if Judge Ritter says that.

Mr. Youmans. Do you know of any of your other good friends that your husband had made a gift to? Mrs. Francis. Indeed, I do.

Mr. Youmans. You do? Mrs. Francis. Yes, sir. Mr. Youmans. Do you know of any other judges to whom your

Mr. Youmans. Do you know of any other judges to whom your husband had given large sums of money?

Mrs. Francis. No; no other judges.

Mr. Youmans. Judge Ritter is the only judge that your husband had ever given any large sum of money to, to your knowledge?

Mrs. Francis. To my knowledge.

Mr. Youmans. Do you know about the date of that gift?

Mrs. Francis. No; I do not.

Mr. Youmans. It was after Judge Ritter had been appointed a Federal judge, was it not?

Mrs. Francis. I cannot answer that.

Mr. Youmans. Do you know when Judge Ritter became a Federal judge?

judge?

Mrs. Francis. No, sir; I do not.
Mr. Youmans. Did your husband ever tell you about any legal services that Judge Ritter had rendered him?
Mrs. Francis. Oh, no; because it was all done in such a friendly way; but I know that he depended on Judge Ritter a great deal for all of his Florida advice.

Mr. Youmans. Mrs. Francis, Judge Ritter's statement says your husband had become entangled in legal difficulties on account of all these Florida purchases.

Mrs. Francis. That might be, but I could not tell you. He did

Mrs. Francis. That might be, but I could not tell you. He did not discuss it with me.

Mr. Youmans. You never heard of your husband being in any legal difficulties on account of these Florida purchases?

Mrs. Francis. I did not.

Mr. Youmans. Did your husband owe a good deal of money to the plant in Michigan you were speaking of?

Mrs. Francis. If he did, I did not know it.

Mr. Youmans. Did your husband owe a good deal of money to some trust company in Cleveland, Ohio?

Mrs. Francis. I do not know that; I think not—

Mr. Youmans. Do you know whether any ancillary papers have been taken out with reference to your husband's estate in Cleveland, Ohio? Ohio?

Mrs. Francis. My son is ancillary. Mr. Youmans. Those papers are in the court records at Cleveland, Ohio?

Mrs. Francis. I do not know. I turned everything over to my son, and I do not know.

Mr. Youmans. Were ancillary papers taken out in Flint, Mich., do you know?

Mrs. Francis. I do not know whether they were taken out in Flint or Detroit; I do not know.

Mr. Youmans. What other lawyers did your husband have advising him about his business matters?

Mrs. Francis. I cannot think of—there is one in Flint, I think; I cannot think of his name.

Mr. Youmans. Is that a big law firm?
Mrs. Francis. Really, I cannot answer that question. We just had one lawyer in Flint that looked after our affairs—I mean Michigan affairs.

Mr. Youmans. He had patent attorneys?

Mrs. Francis. No; he had patent attorneys in Washington and in Chicago; I do not know their names.

Mr. Youmans. What other attorneys did he have in Florida? Mrs. Francis. I think he consulted Shutts & Bowen on several

Mr. Youmans. As a matter of fact, did they handle practically all of his business pertaining to all his large real-estate purchases?

Mrs. Francis. I do not know.
Mr. Youmans. Do you know of any other attorneys he had besides Shutts & Bowen? Mrs. Francis. No.

Mr. Youmans. Did he have any attorneys in Palm Beach or West Palm Beach?

Palm Beach?
Mrs. Francis. Yes, sir; the judge.
Mr. Youmans. Besides the judge, I mean.
Mrs. Francis. Not to my knowledge.
Mr. Youmans. When did Mr. Yates first become your attorney?
Mrs. Francis. After the passing of Mr. Francis.
Mr. Youmans. Did he represent your husband in any matters at all before your husband's death?
Mrs. Francis. I cannot answer that question, unless he did when he was connected with Shutts & Bowen.
Mr. Youmans. Judge Ritter in his statement says Mr. Francis.

Mr. Youmans. Judge Ritter in his statement says Mr. Francis had become entangled in legal difficulties on account of his purchases down here, and he mentions the fact that he had a beautiful home in Miami Beach at 4621 Collins Avenue. Were there any legal difficulties in connection with that home, Mrs. Francis?

Mrs. Francis. I do not know; I do not think so; not as far as that particular matter was concerned.

Mr. Youmans. Do you know whether there was any mortgagage on your home?

Mrs. Francis, There is no mortgage on the home.

Mr. Youmans. Was there in 1928 or 1929?

Mrs. Francis. I do not think so.
Mr. Youmans. As a matter of fact, was the advice Judge Ritter gave your husband given principally when they were out riding on Sunday afternoons and on other occasions in a social way, or was that in the office, do you know?

Mrs. Francis. I do not know.

Mr. Youmans. Are you an executrix in your husband's will down here?

Mrs. Francis. I am.
Mr. Youmans. Did you ever make any attempt to collect the $15,000 note that the Palm Beach Bus Co. gave your husband? Mrs. Francis. No.

Mr. Youmans. Have you ever said anything to anybody about that note?

Mrs, Francis. I do not know anything about it. Mr. Youmans. Did you know Judge Ritter was interested in that bus company?

Mrs. Francis. I knew there was something he and Mr. Francis were interested in together. I do not know anything about it; to tell you the truth, I could not tell you a straight story.

Mr. Youmans. You knew your husband had such a note, did you not?

Mrs. Francis. No; I did not know anything about a note; I did not

Mr. Youmans. After your husband's death, when you were gathering your information about his estate and preparing an inventory to be filed, you found that note among the assets?

Mrs. Francis. I did not find anything, because I turned that all over to my son.

Mr. Youmans. So you in person, then, did not help prepare this inventory?

Mrs. Francis. I had nothing to do with it.

Mrs. Francis. I had nothing to do with it.
Mr. Youmans. Was your son down here at the time this inventory was prepared and filed in the court here?
Mrs. Francis. I do not know.
Mr. Youmans. You never did talk to Judge Ritter about the collection of that $15,000 note?
Mrs. Francis. No.
Mr. Youmans. Do you know whether your son did or not?
Mrs. Francis. I do not.
Mr. Youmans. Do you know whether your attorney ever attempted to collect that $15,000 note?
Mrs. Francis. I do not know.
Mr. Youmans. Do you know whether or not your husband ever threatened to sue Judge Ritter on account of that $15,000 note?
Mrs. Francis. He never would do such a thing.
Mr. Youmans. Are you sure of that?

Mrs. Francis. He never would do such a thing.
Mr. Youmans. Are you sure of that?
Mrs. Francis. Absolutely.
Mr. Youmans. Did Judge Ritter say anything to you about paying back the $7,500?
Mrs. Francis. No; there was no reason why he should.
Mr. Youmans. That was just a straight out gift because of the love and affection your husband felt for Judge Ritter, was it?
Mrs. Francis. That is my understanding.
Mr. Youmans. That is all.
Mr. Hoffman. We have no questions.

Mr. WALSH (of counsel). I might add that I believe that

Mr. Youmans and Mr. Tarver, the gentlemen mentioned, were representing the managers on the part of the House at that time.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there any further testimony, gentlemen?

Mr. WALSH (of counsel). No, your honor; the respondent closes.

REBUTTAL EVIDENCE ON BEHALF OF THE HOUSE MANAGERS

Mr. Manager HOBBS. Ask Judge Freeland to be called,

DIRECT EXAMINATION OF W. L. FREELAND

W. L. Freeland, having been duly sworn, was examined and testified, as follows:

By Mr. Manager Hobbs:

Q. Your name, please.—A. W. L. Freeland.

Q. You are a practicing attorney in the city of Miami, Fla.?—A. I am; yes, sir.

Q. Have you ever been on the bench down there?-A. I have; yes, sir. I served 51/2 years as circuit judge.

Q. Of the State court in Florida?-A. Circuit judge of the eleventh judicial circuit of Florida.

Q. Judge Freeland, exclusive of the time that you were on the bench, how long have you been practicing law in Florida?-A. I was admitted to practice law in Florida in 1911, and practiced continuously from that time until the present, with the exception of a period of a year during the World War and a period of 51/2 years that I served as circuit judge.

Q. Are you familiar with the fees allowed in foreclosure cases in Florida?-A. I am.

Q. Judge, I will ask you if you ever heard of any such thing in a foreclosure case as a conservation fee?-A. No, sir; I never have.

Q. Is there any such fee allowable under the Florida practice, in your opinion?—A. No, sir. I have never heard of any such fee in a foreclosure suit.

Q. Judge, did you hear the testimony given by Judge A. L. Rankin in this case?—A. Yes; I heard him testify. I am quite sure that I heard all of it. I may have missed some small part of it.

Q. Did you hear him testify as to the service he performed in the Whitehall case?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you examined the exhibit introduced in evidence by the respondent listing the several hundred items of procedure in that case?

Mr. WALSH (of counsel). One minute, please. If Your Honor please, I object to any testimony upon that question as not being proper rebuttal. The law is that they should introduce in support of their charges all the testimony they have on a subject or all the testimony that they could get. They put on two witnesses, and we met them with four witnesses, and we left off three witnesses, two of whom have been excused. There is no difference of opinion on that proposition of law in any cases. If they undertake to reopen that again, we would have a right to put on other witnesses if we could get them. It is a violation of the practice in every court in the United States.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Just what is the status of that matter? Let us see if the Chair understands it. The witness, Mr. Rankin, gave his testimony before the court. You undertake to show by this witness that he has examined that testimony, and then to interrogate him as to the correctness of the fees that he allowed; is that it?

Mr. Manager HOBBS. Yes, sir.

The VICE PRESIDENT. It seems to me this is proper testimony. He could not put on this witness before Mr. Rankin testified.

Mr. WALSH (of counsel). If Your Honor please, Mr. Rankin testified, and so did all the witnesses, on the question of fees. That is a part of the case in chief. Now we meet that by our testimony, and our testimony, I will say for the purpose of this argument, might perhaps overwhelm their testimony. They cannot, when they close their case and we close ours, put in testimony of like character as they put in directly. It would be a manifest injustice to this respondent to do so, and it would be a violation of the order and rule of procedure in every court, State and Federal, that I know anything of in the United States.

Mr. Manager HOBBS. May it please the Court, we take the position that this is an expert, qualified under the rules of evidence to give testimony upon this subject, provided he has knowledge of the matters about which he is giving hypothetical testimony. Until he heard the evidence, both in behalf of the House and in behalf of the respondent, he would not be fully advised as to these matters sufficiently to give him a standing to testify upon a hypothetical case.

Mr. WALSH (of counsel). One minute. Mr. Davis was an expert. Judge Akerman was an expert. Every witness we put upon the stand was an expert on that subject. Is it now contended by counsel on the other side that after the case is closed and, perchance, now we have allowed our witnesses to go, content with the showing made by you and the showing made by us, that you can again reopen that question at the close of the case and put in testimony of another expert or more experts as to fees? I submit that is highly improper, and it would be very unjust to the respondent.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair thinks the objection is well taken. You should have put the witness on the stand at the proper time in the case.

Mr. Manager HOBBS. All right, sir.

Judge Chillingworth, Mr. Paul D. Barnes, Mr. William L. Freeland, Mr. H. H. Eyles, and Mr. Marshall F. Sanders will be excused.

Mr. WALSH (of counsel). Mr. President, I should not want to characterize that statement, but I hope the gentleman did not put that in with the idea of suggesting to the Court that he had other witnesses that he was not putting on. I do not think that is proper.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senate is sitting as a jury. The Chair believes it is a jury which will not be influenced by statements of that kind. This jury is not young or is not what might be designated as "trash", so it could be thought that it would be influenced by any such matter.

Mr. WALSH (of counsel). I should not want to say that I think it would be influenced. In my practice of law I try to observe every rule, and I should attempt especially to keep every rule when I am undertaking—poor as it is—to represent a person in the highest Court known to the Constitution of this country.

Mr. Manager HOBBS. Mr. President, I wish to say to the Court that nothing was further from my mind. It was only in my mind to excuse these witnesses.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there any further testimony on the part of the House managers or the respondent?

Mr. WALSH (of counsel). We have none.

Mr. Manager HOBBS. We should like to have Judge A. L. Rankin called merely for the purpose of identifying some documents.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Call Mr. Rankin.

FURTHER REDIRECT EXAMINATION OF A. L. BANKIN

By Mr. Manager HOBBS:

Q. Judge Rankin, I will ask you, please, to look at this paper which I hand you.

(The witness examined the paper.)

Mr. WALSH (of counsel). May I see it?

Mr. Manager HOBBS. You may show it to opposing counsel.

Mr. WALSH (of counsel). (After examining paper.) This has not been admitted in evidence before?

Mr. Manager HOBBS. I do not think so.

Mr. WALSH (of counsel). We have no objection.

By Mr. Manager HOBBS:

Q. Judge Rankin, I ask you if this is a statement that you had prepared or prepared yourself and submitted in the subcommittee during the hearings?—A. To the best of my recollection it is.

Mr. Manager HOBBS. We offer this in evidence and ask that it be given the appropriate exhibit number.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the manager desire it to be read at this time?

Mr. WALSH (of counsel). One moment, if Your Honor please. I object to that for the same reason heretofore given. The manager examined this witness on the topic; he put him on as his own witness, and went into the entire question as to what was taken in and what they had in fees, and all about it. Now he cannot add to it after we have closed our case.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair thinks the witness could identify the paper, if there is any objection to the paper being put in.

Mr. WALSH (of counsel). I object to the introduction of the paper.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the counsel object because it has not been put in before?

Mr. WALSH (of counsel). I object on account of the fact that it is not rebuttal; that the manager introduced evidence that lasted more than a day on the very subject that he now wishes to offer something else.

Mr. Manager HOBBS. May it please the Court, just one statement. I challenge the statement that the witness was examined about anything even remotely related to this matter on direct examination.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair is going to admit the paper.

(The paper was admitted in evidence and marked "Managers' Exhibit A-31.")

Mr. WALSH (of counsel). May I have that document? (The paper was handed to Mr. Walsh, of counsel.)

Mr. Manager HOBBS. With the permission of the Presiding Officer, I read this exhibit now.

MANAGERS' EXHIBIT A-31

Collected fees by A. L. Rankin from cases pending when H. L. Ritter retired Feb. 25, 1929, and not reserved by H. L. Ritter

Case no.	Style	Fee paid by—	Fee collected	Uncollected but pend- ing and conditional
7357 231	S. E. Nichols v. Frank H. Brown et al. Highsmith v. Okeechobee Co	Frank H. Brown By Geo. Coleman $97.50 By High- smith 202.50	$300.00	$500 additional to be paid when judgment
4271 4052 6346	Briar Holding Co. et al. v. Palm Beach Bank & Trust Co. Constance Birchard v. Florida Power & Light Co. In re Thomas M. Campbell, deceased. Palm Beach Allapattah Co., Inc., v. Allapattah Land Co., et al.	By Fred. Bleil, officer Briar Bldg. By plaintiff By Baker Camp- bell. By Howard Cole, one of defend- ants.	1, 225. 00 62, 50 150. 00 250. 00	collected.
	To be paid when Allapattah extingent if case is won.) Total contingent in Allapattah			$3, 250. 00 3, 500. 00
M	2 Otal Contingent in Amapatem		2, 287. 50	6, 750. 00

By Mr. Manager HOBBS:

Q. Judge Rankin, I will ask you if you did not testify, when giving your testimony before the committee at Miami, in answer to this question by Mr. SUMNERS:

Mr. Rankin, there were other cases that you testified with reference to, pending on your docket, but I understand from the statement made that with reference to the other cases they were either insignificant in the amount of fees expected, or they had already been paid and distributed between you and Judge Ritter?

And if you did not answer, "That is right?"-A. As I recall it, I did.

Q. I will ask you to look at this statement, Judge Rankin, and ask if you filed that in the hearing before the subcommittee at Miami, or had it done?

(The paper was handed to the witness, who examined it.) Mr. Manager HOBBS. Please show it to counsel for the respondent.

(The paper was handed to Mr. Walsh, of counsel, who examined it.)

By Mr. Manager HOBBS:

Q. Judge, did you make that statement or cause it to be made and filed in the hearing at Miami before the subcommittee?-A. I did.

Mr. Manager HOBBS. We offer this in evidence and ask that it be given an appropriate number, and printed in full in the RECORD.

(The statement was admitted in evidence and marked "Managers' Exhibit A-32.")

Mr. Manager HOBBS. I will read the statement, as fol-

MANAGERS' EXHIBIT A-32

Statement of fees collected and divided on cases pending at the time of dissolution of the firm of Ritter and Rankin, which were not included in the sale of Halsted L. Ritter's interest in the 7277 Chancery Circuit Court, Indianapolis Life Insurance Company vs. Sunshine Construction Company, Inc., foreclosure; and 7240 Chancery Circuit Court, Indianapolis Life Insurance Company vs. H. J. Israel and Alma Kirby Israel, foreclosure, fee col-

Agreement with Halsted L. Ritter, that he was to receive $100.00 of the total fee when transaction was consummated, check to Halsted L. Ritter, Dec. 5. 1929___

2. C. Leo Lutz vs. Gordon Thorne, judgment sold for $2,098.32.

Lutz was a real estate agent, representing Dr. Frederick Bliel; suit was brought in the name of Lutz.

Fee was based on 20% of amount recovered from closed bank, and divided equally.

Amount collected for Dr. Bliel

Managers' Exhibit A-32-Continued

Statement of fees collected and divided on cases pending at the time of dissolution of the firm of Ritter and Rankin, which were not included in the sale of Halsted L. Ritter's interest in the firm-Continued

2. C. Leo Lutz vs. Gordon Thorne-Continued. Distribution:

Check of Dr. Bliel__ $1,678.67

Amount collected __ Distribution: _ $25, 922, 38

Frederick Bliel. __ $20, 402.37 2, 590, 90 Halsted L. Ritter_ Retained by Rankin for fee and ex-2, 929, 11 penses.

By Mr. Manager HOBBS:

Q. Judge Rankin, I will ask you to look at this statement, which shows a list of the law library and equipment of H. L. Ritter, at the time the partnership began, and ask you if you caused that to be made and filed in the hearings at Miami?-A. (After examining document.) To the best of my recollection, I did.

Mr. Manager HOBBS. We offer that in evidence, and ask that it be given an appropriate number.

(The statement was admitted in evidence and marked "Managers' Exhibit A-33.")

By Mr. Manager HOBBS:

Q. I will ask you to look at this list headed "List of library and equipment of A. L. Rankin, at the time the partnership began", and state if that statement was made by you and filed with the subcommittee at the hearings in Miami.-A. (After examining document.) It was caused to be made.

Q. Did you submit it in your evidence at the hearings?-A. It is fairly correct.

Mr. Manager HOBBS. I show it to opposing counsel and ask that it be admitted in evidence and given an appropriate number.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It may be received and numbered.

(The statement was admitted in evidence and marked "Managers' Exhibit No. A-34.")

Mr. Manager HOBBS. I now read the first statement identified by the witness, as follows:

Managers' Exhibit No. A-33

LIST OF LIBRARY AND EQUIPMENT OF H. L. RITTER AT THE TIME PART-NERSHIP BEGAN

Law books: Cook on Corporations, 5 volumes; Carson's Florida Common Law Pleading; General Laws of Florida, 1921, 1923, 1925; Jones on Legal Forms; Mills Annotated Code, 1925; Revised General Statutes of Florida, 1920; Mills Annotated Statutes 1891 to Equipment: One desk, one book cabinet, and three chairs.

I now read the second statement, being a list of library and equipment belonging to A. L. Rankin at the time the partnership began, as follows:

MANAGERS' EXHIBIT No. A-34

LIST OF LIBRARY AND EQUIPMENT OF A. L. RANKIN AT THE TIME PART-NERSHIP BEGAN

Law books: Florida State Reports, 5 volumes; Southern Re-Law books: Florida State Reports, 5 volumes; Southern Reporter, volumes 1 to 60; American Decisions; American Reports and American State Reports; Lawyers Reports annotated, 100 volumes; Cyclopedia of Law and Procedure, 50 volumes; United States Supreme Court Reports; Cyclopedia of Pleading and Practice, 23 volumes; Purdy's Beach on Corporations, 3 volumes; Cyclopedia of Words and Phrases, 8 volumes; Cyclopedia of Evidence, 10 volumes 19 volumes.

Equipment: Two desks, book cabinets, and six chairs.

By Mr. Manager HOBBS:

$300.00

100.00

Q. With reference to the statement just read I will ask you if it is not a fact that you sold American Decisions and American Reports and State Reports for $100, as testified _ 2,098.32 in Florida, on a trade-in?—A. No, sir.

Q. What was it you traded in—the Decennial?—A. I do not recall.

Q. I will ask you to look at this statement which I now hand you, purporting to be a list of library and equipment of Ritter & Rankin in 1929, and ask you if you caused that to be made and introduced at the hearings before the subcommittee in Miami?-A. (After examining document). Yes: I caused that to be made.

Q. And you submitted it as a true and correct statement to the subcommittee, did you not?—A. Yes; I did.

By Mr. Manager HOBBS:

Q. Judge Rankin, I will ask you if many of the books that you listed there as being in the library of Ritter & Rankin at the time of dissolution of the firm were not then being bought on the installment plan by you?-A. No. To the best of my recollection we had one set of law books-and I do not recall whether it was included there—that we bought. I think it was Ruling Case Law.

Q. I will ask if you did not testify at Miami as follows: We bought Ruling Case Law and A. L. R., but we bought them on the installment plan, and I took over—we paid, I think, about $100 on them.

A. If it says so in the record, I certainly testified to that. Q. Does it say so in the record? I hand you the record.

A. (After examining the record.) Yes.

Q. That is it on page 276?—A. Yes.

Mr. Manager HOBBS. We offer in evidence this list of law library books and ask that it be given an exhibit number.

(The document was marked "Managers' Exhibit A-35.") (Mr. Manager Hobbs read managers' exhibit A-35, as follows:)

MANAGERS' EXHIBIT A-35

LIST OF LIBRARY OF RITTER & RANKIN AT TIME OF DISSOLUTION FEBRUARY 1929

Law books: Cook on Corporations; Carson's Florida Common Law Pleading; General Laws of Florida, 1921, 1923, 1925; Jones on Legal Forms; Mills' Annotated Code, 1925; Revised General Statutes of Florida, 1920; Mills' Annotated Statutes, 1891-96; Florida State Reports, volues 1 to 22; Southern Reporter, volumes 1 to 60; State Reports, volues 1 to 22; Southern Reporter, volumes 1 to 60; American Decisions, American Reports, and American State Reports; Lawyers' Reports Annotated, 100 volumes; Cyclopedia of Law and Procedure, 50 volumes; United States Supreme Court Reports; Cyclopedia of Pleading and Practice, 23 volumes, Purdy's Beach on Corporations, 3 volumes; Cyclopedia of Words and Phrases, 8 volumes; Cyclopedia of Evidence, 19 volumes; Ruling Case Law 28 volumes; A.L. P. volumes; 1 to 82. Case Law, 28 volumes; A. L. R., volumes 1 to 83.

Equipment: 5 desks, davenport, book cabinets, stationery cabinet, chairs, and typewriter.

By Mr. Manager HOBBS:

Q. Judge Rankin, I will ask you to look at this income-tax return of yours for 1931 and see if this is a true and correct copy, according to your recollection and best judgment, of the return you made for the calendar year 1931 for incometax purposes.—A. (After examining document.) Yes.

Q. Judge, I will ask you to look at this, please, and see how much you listed there, 2 years after the dissolution of the partnership, as expended by you for law books.

Mr. WALSH (of counsel). I object to that as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and being in no way binding upon the respondent.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair thinks all this testimony has gone in on both sides as to the value of the partnership assets. The objection is overruled.

A. (After examining document further.) I do not see any item on there.

By Mr. Manager HOBBS:

Q. Judge, you listed in 1931 "Books for library, $1,375", did you not, as expended in 1931?-A. Expended in 1931?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. No. If that is on there that way, I did not intend it.

Q. You have here "Explanation of deductions claimed on lines 5 and 16, "Rent and light, telephone", and so on, "Books for library, "$1,375."-A. Well, I did not pay anything like that, and I misunderstood it if it is on there.

Q. In the 1930 return you showed over $700 expended in the same way, did you not?—A. If that statement shows that, I did not understand it at the time. I left it-

Mr. Manager HOBBS. We introduce the 1931 income-tax return to A. L. Rankin. The other one has already been introduced. We ask that these certified copies be given appropriate numbers.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The documents referred to will be received in evidence and appropriately numbered.

(The 1930 income-tax return was marked "Managers' Exhibit A-35", and the 1931 income-tax return was marked "Managers' Exhibit A-36.")

By Mr. Manager HOBBS:

Q. Judge Rankin, I show you three stock certificates of the Palm Beach Bus Service, Inc., and ask you if they are the certificates issued by you and signed by you as secretary and by Judge Ritter as vice president. Look at those three, please.

(The stock certificates were handed to the witness.)

Mr. WALSH (of counsel). I would like to see those.

Mr. Manager HOBBS. Yes. I ask that they be handed to opposing counsel.

The WITNESS. Yes.

(The documents were handed to Mr. Walsh, of counsel.)

Mr. WALSH (of counsel). I object to this offer for two reasons: First, there is no charge or specification laid in any of the seven articles with respect to this. The second reason is that if there had been, the managers had their opportunity to introduce it in their case in chief.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. What do the managers say to that?

Mr. Manager HOBBS. We have this to say, Mr. President, that in the case in chief a statement was identified by the witness Rankin, and introduced, showing that a part of the consideration for the $5,000 which he and Judge Ritter both have testified-

Mr. WALSH (of counsel). I withdraw the objection, Mr. President. I forgot that. Go right ahead and introduce it.
Mr. Manager HOBBS. We introduce those three certificates, and ask that they be given appropriate numbers.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is so ordered.

(Stock certificate no. 6 was marked "Managers' Exhibit A-37", the stock certificate no. 7 was marked "Managers' Exhibit A-38", and the stock certificate no. 8 was marked "Managers' Exhibit A-39."

Mr. Manager HOBBS. These certificates are numbered, respectively, 6, 7, and 8. They are signed by Judge Ritter as vice president, and two out of the three are signed by A. L. Rankin as secretary. They are dated October 26, 1929. and they are issued to H. L. Ritter for 50 shares, 25 shares. and 25 shares, respectively. The first one is marked across its face "Canceled."

By Mr. Manager HOBBS:

Q. Judge Rankin, I show you the minutes of special meeting of the stockholders and the directors of Palm Beach Bus Service, Inc., held on the 17th day of February A. D. 1930 and ask you if you signed those minutes as secretary?

(The paper was handed to the witness who examined it.) A. Yes.

Mr. Manager HOBBS. I show the document to opposing counsel. [After counsel had examined same.] I introduce this paper in evidence and ask that it be given the appropriate exhibit number.

(The document was marked "Managers' Exhibit A-40.") Mr. Manager HOBBS. I read as follows:

MANAGERS' EXHIBIT A-40

MINUTES OF SPECIAL MEETING OF STOCKHOLDERS AND DIRECTORS OF PALM BEACH BUS SERVICE, INC., HELD ON THE 17TH DAY OF FEBRUARY A. D. 1930

A. D. 1930

A special joint meeting of the stockholders and directors of Palm Beach Bus Service, Inc., pursuant to call of the president, was held at 812 Comeau Building, West Palm Beach, Florida, at eleven o'clock a. m., on the 17th day of February, A. D. 1930.

There were present at said meeting V. S. Mulford, president of Mulford Realty Company, which corporation is the owner of one hundred and fifty (150) shares out of the two hundred (200) shares of capital stock of said corporation, the remaining fifty (50) shares being held by H. L. Ritter and A. L. Rankin, A. L. Rankin was present in person at said meeting and represented H. L. Ritter by proxy, both as stockholder and director. All of the stockholders and directors being present or represented by proxy.

Mr. V. S. Mulford stated at the meeting that his business was such that practically all of his time was required in New York, and that he could give no time to the affairs of the Palm Beach Bus Service, Inc., and for this reason his resignation as president was tendered. Upon motion to be made and carried, Mr. Mulford's resignation as president was accepted. Mr. Mulford then put in nomination the name of Judge H. L. Ritter for president, which nomination was seconded, and on motion duly made and carried he was elected president.

he was elected president.

A. L. Rankin then put in the resignation of H. L. Ritter as vice president of the corporation, and on motion duly made and seconded his resignation as vice president was accepted.

Mr. Mulford then stated at the meeting that he had sold one share of stock to J. Lamar Webb, of Palm Beach, Florida, and was now transferring this share of stock to him; and that he would put in nomination Mr. J. Lamar Webb for vice president of the corporation. This nomination was seconded, and upon motion duly made and carried Mr. J. Lamar Webb was elected vice president of the corporation.

Upon motion duly made and carried J. Lamar Webb was also Upon motion duly made and carried J. Lamar webb was also made a director of the corporation.

Upon motion duly made and carried the president and secretary of the corporation were authorized and directed to execute to Mulford Realty Company the corporation's note for $2,635 for moneys borrowed from the Mulford Realty Company to be used in the purchase of new busses for the corporation, and as security for said note and said indebtedness to execute a mortgage to Mulford Realty Company on the presents of the corporation. ford Realty Company on the property owned by the corporation if required by it.

There being no further business the meeting adjourned.

(Signed) A. L. RANKIN,

Secretary.

Approved.

V. S. MULFORD, President.

By Mr. Manager HOBBS:

Q. Judge Rankin, that was a true and correct minute of that meeting, was it not?-A. Yes.

Mr. Manager HOBBS. That is all, sir.

FURTHER RECROSS-EXAMINATION

By Mr. WALSH (of counsel):

Q. Judge Rankin, I wanted to ask you a question or two. These various statements that have been offered to you were made during the House hearings down in Florida, were they not, in 1933 and 1934?-A. They were.

Q. And did you make them to the committee or did you make them to the investigators of the committee? I will ask you again. Please be sure that you understand me, will you, when you answer?-A. Yes, sir.

Q. I say, did you make these reports initially to the investigators of the committee?-A. It is my judgment I did.

Q. And about how many reports would you say that you made to the investigators?—A. Well, those are the reports-

RECESS

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The hour of 1:30 having arrived, in accordance with the order heretofore entered. the Senate will stand in recess until the hour of 2:15 p. m.

Thereupon (at 1 o'clock and 30 minutes p. m.) the Senate, sitting for the trial of the articles of impeachment, took a recess until 2 o'clock and 15 minutes p. m., at which time it reassembled.

Mr. ROBINSON. I suggest the absence of a quorum. The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators

answered to their names:

Adams Ashurst Clark Johnson Pope Radcliffe Connally Keyes Coolidge Copeland Couzens Austin Bachman Bailey King La Follette Logan Reynolds Robinson Schwellenbach Sheppard Shipstead Barbour Davis Lonergan Donahey Duffy Long McAdoo Barkley Benson Smith Fletcher Frazier Steiwer Thomas, Okla. Thomas, Utah McGill McKellar Bilbo Bone Borah George McNary Brown Bulkley Gerry Gibson Malon Townsend Metcalf Truman Bulow Glass Minton Vandenberg Guffey Murphy Burke Van Nuvs Hale Harrison Hastings Murray Norris Wagner Walsh Byrd Byrnes Capper Nye O'Mahoney Wheeler Caraway Hatch White Carey Hayden Overton Chavez Holt Pittman

The VICE PRESIDENT. Eighty-two Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present. What is the pleasure of the managers on the part of the House or counsel for the respondent?

(At this point, on request of Mr. Robinson, and by unanimous consent, the Senate, sitting for the trial of the articles of impeachment, suspended its session in order to receive a message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Haltigan, one of its reading clerks. The message having been received, and noted elsewhere in the RECORD of today's legislative proceedings, on motion of Mr. Robinson, the Senate resumed its session sitting for the trial of the articles of impeach-

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I inquire if all the testimony has been adduced?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The present occupant of the chair was not in the chair when the Court took a recess. Is the evidence concluded in the case, gentlemen?

Mr. WALSH (of counsel). It is on behalf of the respondent, except for a few questions to ask the witness, who was on the stand at the time of taking a recess.

Mr. Manager HOBBS. We have two more exhibits to

The VICE PRESIDENT. Let the witness resume the stand.

FURTHER CROSS-EXAMINATION OF A. L. RANKIN

By Mr. WALSH (of counsel):

Q. When you left the stand I was asking how many statements you had made about this matter during the investigation in Florida. Do you know?-A. I do not recall.

Q. How many did you make to the investigators?-A. I made two or three to the best of my recollection.

Q. How many did you make to the committee?-A. I made those that were handed to me and identified.

Q. Did you make any others?-A. As I recall it, after the hearing, a day or two after the hearing, I made a list for Mr. Mulherin.

Q. I will ask you to look at the paper which I now hand you and ask if this is a list of cases which you made for Mr. Mulherin.—A. (After examining paper.) As I recall, it is.

Mr. WALSH (of counsel). I believe this has not been introduced in evidence. If you gentlemen will look at it I will introduce it now.

(The managers examined the paper.)

Mr. WALSH (of counsel). I introduce this document in evidence, headed "List of cases on docket at the time Halsted L. Ritter was appointed Federal judge", and ask that it be given an appropriate number.

The VICE PRESIDENT. It will be received and appropriately marked.

(The document was admitted in evidence and marked "Respondent's Exhibit No. 48.)

By Mr. WALSH (of counsel):

Q. I will ask you if it is not a fact that Mr. Mulherin, to whom you gave this statement, testified before the same committee and stated, among other things:

Mr. Mulherin. On November 3, 1933, A. L. Rankin furnished me with a list of cases which he stated were those pending at the time of the dissolution of the partnership of Ritter & Rankin. This list included 41 cases, 3 of which were later stated by Mr. Rankin to have been concluded before the dissolution of the partnership.

Is that correct?—A. As I recall it, it is correct.

Q. I will ask you if the following was not also stated by Mr. Mulherin, representing the House committee, referring to this list that they had just offered in evidence:

That is signed by A. L. Rankin in my presence on December 6, 1933.

A. L. Rankin stated that the $3,950 in fees shown by the statement just furnished you is not the whole of moneys received by him from clients brought to him by Judge Ritter but was all he could recall at the time of the preparation of the list.

Is that correct?—A. That is correct.

Q. Did you examine this long list that was introduced here while Mr. Salisbury was on the witness stand?-A. I exQ. And did you help in the preparation of it?—A. I did.

Q. Did you give all the information that you could give as to the amounts received when this was gotten up?—A. I gave all that I could give.

Q. Were they checked off by Mr. Salisbury and the accountant?—A. They were.

Q. I will ask you just one question about this. This has all been introduced except the bottom figures. The bottom figures are:

H. L. Ritter received $2,899.90. A. L. Rankin received $2,999.91. I will ask you whether or not those were the moneys received at the time of the dissolution in cases which had been fully tried, and in which there was nothing to do but collect the fees. Look at that. If that is not correct, state what it is. Is that anything more than the Matusek case?—A. This is correct, so far as my record shows.

is correct, so far as my record shows.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. President, we note that respondent's exhibit 47 has not been printed in full in the RECORD. We ask that that be done.

There being no objection, respondent's exhibit 47 was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

RESPONDENT'S EXHIBIT 47

List of clients of the firm of Ritter & Rankin at the time of dissolution of the partnership Feb. 15, 1929, cases pending or in progress at the time, as well as work done subsequent to dissolution for clients brought into the firm by Ritter during the time he was a partner in the firm.

Court no.	Date filed or appeared	Style of case	Representing	Nature	Amount unorg voorde to	1128 (O. K., J. W. S.)	Indianapolis Life Ins. Co. vs. Cherry	*Plaintiff	Mortgage foreclosure ($300	$3, 700. 0
672	* 3-25-29 (O. K., J. W. S.)	Indianapolis Life Ins. Co. vs. Alma Gates	*Plaintiff	lace anote)	3, 500. 0
	(O. K., J. W. S.) (O. K., J. W. S.) 1-23-29 (O. K., J. W. S.)	Indianapolis Life Ins. Co. vs. E. A. Coates	*Plaintiff Plaintiff *Plaintiff	" ($200) " ($200)
457	1-23-29 (O. K., J. W. S.)	Indianapolis Life Ins. Co. vs. H. J. Jury	*Plaintiff	less costs). " ($300	1 4, 888. 5
300		Lanfranchi, Inc. vs. Luckenbach Lanfranchi, Inc. vs. Long & Baker	*Plaintiff	Collection open account	2, 000. 0 3, 960. 0
0928 (Dade)	* 6- 1-28 (O. K., J. W. S.)	O. J. Myers, Receiver, vs. Lockhart & Stapper Nichols vs. Brown	*Defendant	Promissory note	75, 000. 0 12, 500. 0
777	* 4-23-28 (O. K., J. W. S.)	Real Estate Bldg., Inc. vs. Stiles C. Hall (judgment obtained 1-15-29, collected 4-17-29).	*Plaintiff
. P. Court		Webb vs. Noet. Weatherby vs. Clayton	*Defendant *Plaintiff	Claim Recovery bank deposits	96.
295 97 (Martin)	3-31-28 (O. K., J. W. S.)	Tucker vs. Taylor	*Plaintiff	Damages	1, 572. 6 1, 800. 0
5240		Tucker vs. Addison, Mizner, & Paris Singer Thomas vs. Addison, Mizner, & Paris Singer	•Plaintiff	contract.	6, 500. (45, 000. (
5384	2-8-20 (O K I W S)	Stine vs. Benston	*Defendant	contract. Contract damages	1000000000
7376	12-22-28 (O. K., J. W. S.)	Smith vs. Smith Ritter vs. Manning (for client)	*Plaintiff	Divorce
1846 1776	4-23-28 (O. K., J. W. S.)	Real Estate Bldg., Inc. vs. Cohen.	*Plaintiff	Damages	3, 750. 0
3573 3515}2 cases	10-29-27 (O. K., J. W. S.)	Pierce & Stevenson vs. N. J., Florida Land Co	*Defendant	Commission	23, 996. 5
7096	1- 7-29 (O. K., J. W. S.)	Palm Beach Co. vs. Benston	*Defendant		1, 980. (
5346	2-25-28 (O. K., J. W. S.)	Palm Beach Allapatah Co., vs. Allapatah Land Co., Howard Cole & Faith B. Cole.		Equity suit
5460	*3- 8-29 (O. K., J. W. S.) *1928 (O. K., J. W. S.)	Noel vs. J. B. McDonald Co- Palms Ice Co. Matter (office client)	*Plaintiff Owner	Sale of plant and dissolution corporation ($800).	1,500.0
Co. Ct	3-25-29 (O. K., J. W. S.) 1- 9-29 (O. K., J. W. S.)	Malcolm vs. Pace Linderman vs. Duncan	*Plaintiff *Defendant	Claim ($50)	200. 0 1, 000. 0
4555446	1- 4-28 (O. K., J. W. S.)	Johnson vs. Jett	*Plaintiff	_ Damages	5, 000.
4445	1- 4-28 (O. K., J. W. S.) 4- 1-28 (O. K., J. W. S.)	Roberson vs. Jett	*Plaintiff	Damages	5, 000. 0
5533 231 (Okeechobee)	5-14-27 (O. K., J. W. S.)	Highsmith vs. Okeechobee Co. (this fee was $2,500, Geo. Coleman sharing 50%). Fernandez vs. Addison Mizner & Paris Singer	*Plaintiff	Collection judgment ($500 or $600).	10, 000.0
5355	1-23-29 (O. K., J. W. S.)		Plaintiff *Defendant	contract.	6, 500. (
799 (Indian River) - 5620	3- 8-29 (O. K., J. W. S.)	Gulf Stream Investment Co. vs. Harman, et al	*Plaintiff	_ Distress rent ($75?)	700.
4637 5239		Ingalls Iron Works vs. Vonbehren et al. Davis vs. Addison Mizner and Paris Singer	*Defendant *Plaintiff	Damages	8, 000. 0 65, 000. 0
5354		Calhoun vs. Addison Mizner and Paris Singer	*Plaintiff	Recover amount paid land contract.	3, 500.
72334271	10-24-28 (O. K., J. W. S.) 5-19-28 (O. K., J. W. S.)	Central Farmers Trust Co. vs. Mortgage Finance Co	*Plaintiff	Bill for receiver	3, 500. (
	8-16-27 (O. K., J. W. S.)	Birchard vs. Florida Power & Light Co	*Plaintiff	dismissed). Damages	2, 500. 6 6, 000.
5830 U. S. Ct	10- 4-29 (O. K., J. W. S.) 7-18-28 (O. K., J. W. S.) 7-29-29 (O. K., J. W. S.)	Benston vs. Lake View Co Ernst & Ernst vs. Pine Wood Development Co	*Plaintiff	Damages (interest in land)	6, 000. 0 7, 127. 7
5848	7-29-29 (O. K., J. W. S.)	John J. Hanson vs. Montgomery	*Plaintiff	_ Civil	1, 866.
6525 L	2021	Everglades Club vs. A. Sherman Downs	*Defendant	II ami, on notest.	50, 000.
	*9-20-28 (O. K., J. W. S.) *1929 (O. K., J. W. S.) 2-14-29 (O. K., J. W. S.)	Smith McDonald Ins. Co., Claim	*Plaintiff	Adjustment (Ins. Co.) Repair building	2, 257.3 850.0
	2-14-29 (O. K., J. W. S.)	Moorman vs. Smart	Plaintin	- Collection notes	6, 000.
7777	4-29-29 (O. K., J. W. S.) Out	Oldhann vs. Weatherby	Plaintiff	Accounting Rent claim
0007	* 4-22-29 (O. K., J. W. S.) * 1928 (O. K., J. W. S.)	Thomas Amory vs. W. C. Rhodes	*Plaintiff	Damages Collection retain ($50) title	450.0
4271	8-10-27 (O. K., J. W. S.) 6-11-28 (O. K., J. W. S.)	Briar Holding Co. vs. Palm Beach Bank & Trust	*Plaintiff *Defendant	note. Recover bank deposits Damages	14, 283. 7 2, 000. 0
	ADDITIONAL	FEES NOT LISTED ABOVE, EARNED AND COLLECTED SUBSEC	QUENT TO FEB. 15,	1929	o calle
The state of the s		(*Jessup, Inc
The second		Watt-Sinclair, Inc *Worth Avenue Corporation
THE REPORT OF	(O. K., J. W. S. They	/*Worth Avenue Investment Co
The state of	were clients of the office.)	*Mulford Realty Corporation *Jno. J. Hanson

RESPONDENT'S EXHIBIT 47-Continued

List of clients of the firm of Ritter & Rankin at the time of dissolution of the partnership Feb. 15, 1929, cases pending or in progress at that time, as well as work done subsequent to dissolution for clients brought into the firm by Ritter during the time he was a partner in the firm—Continued

FEES ALREADY EARNED AND DIVIDED ON CASES IN OFFICE AT TIME OF DISSOLUTION

Court no.	Date filed or ap- peared	Style of case	Representing	Involved	Amount
7270 3	11-17-28 11-20-28 1-21-27 2-28-28	Indianapolis Life Ins. Co. vs. H. J. Israel et al	Mortgage foreclosure	$3, 500. 00 3, 605. 00 25, 922, 38 2, 098. 32	$100.00 200.00 5, 181.81 418.00
H. L. Ritter received A. L. Rankin received		Total			5, 899. 8

O. K. in office.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, I submit a question.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from North Carolina propounds a question which will be read by the clerk.

The Chief Clerk read the question propounded by Mr. REYNOLDS, as follows:

Did you at any time infer, suggest, or request support of you as district judge of Alabama to succeed Judge Clayton?

A. Read the question again.

The Chief Clerk re-read the question.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, you will notice the question says "Judge Ritter's support."

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will again read the question, and the witness will answer it.

The Chief Clerk again read the question propounded by Mr. Reynolds, as follows:

Did you at any time infer, suggest, or request Judge Ritter's support of you as district judge of Alabama to succeed Judge Clayton?

A. I did.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I submit two questions which I desire to propound to the witness.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Wisconsin submits two questions which will be read by the clerk.

The Chief Clerk read the first question propounded by Mr. La Follette, as follows:

How many cases have you had in Judge Ritter's court?

A. I do not recall the exact number, but not very many.

The Chief Clerk read the next question propounded by Mr. La Follette, as follows:

Were you ever allowed any fees by Judge Ritter other than those you received in connection with the Whitehall case?

A. As I recall, two or three small fees for acting as special master.

Mr. McADOO. Mr. President, I submit a question.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from California propounds a question, which the clerk will read.

The Chief Clerk read the question propounded by Mr. McAdoo, as follows:

How long had you resided in Florida before you sought appointment as district judge in Alabama?

A. I do not recall; but I maintained my citizenship in Alabama, paid taxes, had property there, and I voted there, and was voting there at the time that I filed that application.

Mr. McADOO. Mr. President, I should like an answer to the question I submitted.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from California does not think the witness has fully answered the question.

Mr. McADOO. No; he has not. He does not tell how long he had resided in Florida before he sought the judge-ship in Alabama.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will again read the question, and the witness will answer it more fully if he can.

(The written question propounded by Mr. McAdoo was handed to the witness, who examined it.)

The WITNESS. I had been in Florida, practicing law in Florida, as I recall it, about 4 years.

Mr. McADOO. The question is how long he had resided there.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will have to propound his inquiry in writing. The rules require all inquiries by Senators to be propounded in writing.

Mr. McADOO. Mr. President, I ask that the question be again read by the clerk, because it is a simple question, and can be answered.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will again read the question.

The Chief Clerk again read the question propounded by Mr. McAdoo, as follows:

How long had you resided in Florida before you sought appointment as district judge in Alabama?

A. Well, I do not just know how to answer the question. The question of residence is a very broad question—where you reside—but I had been in Florida, I had been living in Florida, about 4 years, to the best of my recollection.

By Mr. WALSH (of counsel):

Q. I wish you would look at the case at the top of the second page of respondent's exhibit no. 47, and state whether or not you recall that case as being in your office at the time of the dissolution.—A. (After examining document). Yes; I recall that case.

Q. Has that case ever been brought to a final close; and if so, when?—A. Yes; it has, some 3 or 4 months ago.

Q. I see that case is entitled "Palm Beach Allapatah Co. against Allapatah Land Co.", and the amount involved is quite a large amount. Did you have any guarantor on that fee?—A. That was a case—

Q. Can you answer? Did you have a guarantor for that fee? Did any person guarantee the payment of it?—A. Yes; Howard Cole.

Q. Where does Howard Cole live?—A. He was one of the defendants.

Q. Where does he live?-A. He lived in New York.

Q. Was he a man of means at that time, so far as you know, and is he now?—A. Well, he had, and I understand he still has, large property holdings.

Q. How much is the fee in that case?—A. The original fee was $7,000 if we won and $3,500 if we lost.

Q. Did you win or lose?—A. We won it.

Mr. WALSH (of counsel). I think that is all.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Are there any other questions? Mr. Manager HOBBS. Yes, sir.

FURTHER REDIRECT EXAMINATION

By Mr. Manager HOBBS:

Q. Judge Rankin, why did you, on September 1, 1926, make a residence affidavit for the purpose of registering as a qualified voter in precinct 12, West Palm Beach, Fla., if you considered yourself still a resident of Alabama?—A. Well, I did that.

Q. And you voted down there, did you not?—A. My recollection is that I never voted in Florida.

Q. But you renewed your registration, did you not?—A. I did register there, and then, after I registered there, I changed my mind about it and decided, on account of all my property interests in Alabama, that I would maintain my voting place in Alabama.

Q. And your registration has been renewed from that good hour to this, has it not?—A. It has been what?

Q. Renewed in Florida?-A. No; I reregistered.

Q. I say, you reregistered every 2 years, did you not?—Yes. No; I do not recall that I reregistered every 2 years, but I have reregistered there.

Q. And you registered your wife; you took her with you and registered her on May 19, 1928, did you not?—A. I believe that I did, or she did.

Mr. McGILL. Mr. President, I send forward several questions.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Kansas propounds several questions which will be read by the clerk.

The Chief Clerk read the first question propounded by Mr. McGill, as follows:

Were you ever admitted to the practice of law in Florida?

A. Yes.

The Chief Clerk read the next question propounded by Mr. McGill, as follows:

When were you so admitted, if you were admitted?

A. I was admitted in 1926.

The Chief Clerk read the next question propounded by Mr. McGill, as follows:

In order to be licensed to practice law in Florida, did you have to be a citizen of that State?

A. I believe so.

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. President, I submit a question.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Pennsylvania propounds an inquiry, which will be read by the clerk.

The Chief Clerk read the question propounded by Mr. Davis, as follows:

You testified that as master in Judge Ritter's court you were allowed a few small fees. What do you call small fees?

A. Well, as I recall it, I was paid $500 in two or three cases, and then—now, I remember another case. Shall I proceed?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will reread the question

The Chief Clerk again read the question propounded by Mr. Davis, as follows:

You testified that as master in Judge Ritter's court you were allowed a few small fees. What do you call small fees?

A. Well, I call $500 a small fee.

By Mr. WALSH (of counsel):

Q. What was the one you say you remember? Did you remember another one? I thought you said, in answer to the question of a Member of the Court, that you remembered another.—A. Yes. I had overlooked being special master in the Comeau foreclosure. In that suit I was appointed special master to hear the testimony and make finding of both law and fact, and in that case, to the best of my recollection, I have drawn something like four or five thousand dollars.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, I desire to submit a question. The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will read the question propounded by the Senator from Massachusetts.

The Chief Clerk read the question propounded by Mr. Walsh, as follows:

When you signed the final agreement that led to the decree for final attorney's fees as "A. L. Rankin, attorney for complainants and interveners", what complainants and interveners did you represent? Name them all.

A. I represented the complainants that were named; I do not recall just now the complainants named in the bill of complaint and the interveners.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, I should like to have the question answered.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Read the latter part of the question. The witness may wish to answer it further.

The Chief Clerk read the latter part of the question propounded by Mr. Walsh, as follows:

What complainants and interveners did you represent? Name them all.

A. May I see the bill of complaint?

(The bill of complaint was handed to the witness.)

A. Bert E. Holland, Catherine Sugden, a widow, and Whitfield W. Johnson, as trustees, and A. W. Kirkland, Eugenia A. Shopps, and A. H. Hill, as interveners. Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, I desire to submit a question. The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will read the question. The Chief Clerk read the question propounded by Mr. Clark, as follows:

Had you not been discharged as attorney for the complainant of record?

A. I did not consider that I had, for the reason that he had sworn in court, or made the statement in court, that he had transferred and assigned, or deposited all of his bonds with the bondholders' committee, and therefore he had no power or control over the litigation. I so considered.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, I desire to pro-pound a question.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will read the question. The Chief Clerk read the question propounded by Mr. Schwellenbach, as follows:

Just what does a client have to do to discharge you as his lawyer?

A. He has to have control and authority over the suit.

Mr. BACHMAN. Mr. President, I submit a question to be propounded.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will read the question. The Chief Clerk read the question propounded by Mr. Bachman, as follows:

As an applicant for the district judgeship in Alabama to succeed Judge Clayton, did you approach Judge Ritter for his support, or did he suggest the application to you? When and where were conferences between you and Judge Ritter held as to this application, and what was their tenor?

A. As I remember, Judge Ritter did not suggest or request or had nothing to do with my filing an application. I approached him one day in Miami and told him that I either had or would file my application, and asked him if he would write me a letter of recommendation, and he said he would. I do not recall that I had any conversation with him other than that over the matter.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, I desire to submit another question

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will read the question.

The Chief Clerk read the question propounded by Mr.

CLARK, as follows:

Did you file an amended bill in the name of Holland some 2 months after Holland had discharged you as his attorney?

A. I think the record shows that I did.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I suggest several questions to be asked of the witness.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will read the questions.

The Chief Clerk read the questions propounded by Mr.

King, as follows:

Did you represent all the first-mortgage bondholders through the bondholders' committee.

A. I did not.

Were all the bondholders represented by the bondholders' committee?

A. As I recall it, there were about 90 to 93 percent.

Did the bondholders regard you as their attorney, and did you regard yourself as their attorney?

A. I did not regard myself as their attorney. At the same time, I felt that if the bondholders' committee wanted this suit dismissed, they would give me instructions to dismiss it.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I send two questions to the desk to be asked of the witness.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will read the questions. The Chief Clerk read the questions propounded by Mr. Adams, as follows:

Were you employed as attorney by the bondholders' committee to which you say Holland had transferred his interests?

A. I was not.

If not, how did you continue to appear as attorney for either Holland or the committee?

A. I was not employed by Holland. (To the clerk:) Read that question again.

The Chief Clerk again read the questions, as follows:

Were you employed as attorney by the bondholders' committee to which you say Holland had transferred his interests?

A. I was not employed.

If not, how did you continue to appear as attorney for either Holland or the committee?

A. Well, Mr. Holland had stated that he had transferred all of his bonds—that he and his associates had transferred all of his bonds to the bondholders' committee, and I construed that to mean that he had no power or authority to discharge me.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, I send a question to the desk to be asked of the witness.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will read the question. The Chief Clerk read the question propounded by Mr. O'Mahoney, as follows:

Did you serve as city attorney at West Palm Beach?

A. I did not.

Mr. McGILL. Mr. President, I desire to submit a question. The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will read the question. The Chief Clerk read the question propounded by Mr. McGILL, as follows:

When Judge Ritter recommended to Attorney General Mitchell that you be appointed United States district judge in Alabama, do you not know from your association and conversation with him that Judge Ritter knew you were a citizen of Florida?

A. I cannot say that he did.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Have the managers any further questions?

By Mr. Manager HOBBS:

Q. Judge, you have in front of you a statement which I want you to examine and identify, and state whether or not you had that statement made, and whether you presented it to the subcommittee at the hearing in Miami.—A. [Examining statement.] I did.

Q. Was it correct at that time? Did you know it to be?—A. It was correct, to the best of my knowledge, at the time.

Mr. Manager HOBBS. Mr. President, we should like to offer that in evidence after it has been shown to opposing counsel, and ask that it be given an appropriate exhibit number.

(The document was marked "Managers' Exhibit A-41.") Mr. Manager HOBBS. That is all, Judge.

FURTHER RECROSS-EXAMINATION

By Mr. WALSH (of counsel):

Q. Look at that statement, please, Judge, and see whether or not that is the statement you gave to Mr. Mulherin, and told him that there were other cases, but those were all you could remember at that time.—A. That is true. This statement was made along about the time of the hearing in Miami, as I recall it; and afterward I told Mr. Mulherin, as I formerly testified here, that there were some other collections that I had made, and I would have to go through my records in order to determine just what they were.

Q. And you heard Mr. Mulherin testify to that fact, did you not, when he testified before the subcommittee in Florida?—A. No; I do not recall that I heard him.

Mr. WALSH (of counsel). That is all.

FURTHER REDIRECT EXAMINATION

By Mr. Manager HOBBS:

Q. Do you know that the hearings down there were in November, and that you gave him this statement on December 6?—A. That might be true.

Q. After the hearings were concluded?—A. Well, if that is the date, it probably is.

Mr. Manager HOBBS. We have already offered this paper in evidence. I will now read it [reading]:

MANAGERS' EXHIBIT A-41

Amounts collected from clients of H. L. Ritter from business brought to A. L. Rankin by them since dissolution of partnership to 11. D. Manutin by their street dissolution of pur	e teet atech

Jessup, Inc., Palm Beach	$400 400
Lanfranchi, Inc., and allied corporations, Palm Beach	900
Worth Ave. Corporation and allied corporations, Palm I Worth Ave. Investments and allied corporations, Palm I	Beach_ 2,000 Beach_ 250

3,950

(Signed) A. L. RANKIN.

Mr. WALSH (of counsel). Mr. Mulherin, be sworn.

DIRECT EXAMINATION OF THOMAS M. MULHERIN

Thomas M. Mulherin, having been duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

By Mr. WALSH (of counsel):

Q. Mr. Mulherin, I want to ask you just one question, and it is this: This is the $3,950 item that was just introduced in evidence. When you introduced that in evidence before the subcommittee, I will ask you if you did not make the following statement:

That is signed by A. L. Rankin in my presence on December 6, 1933.

A. Yes, sir; I did.

Q. [Reading:]

A. L. Rankin stated that the $3,950 in fees shown by the statement just furnished you is not the whole of moneys received by him from clients brought to him by Judge Ritter, but was all he could recall at the time of the preparation of the list.

A. I did. I submitted that list to the subcommittee at that time.

Q. I just asked you whether or not you made that statement, Mr. Mulherin.—A. I did; yes, sir.

Q. All right. Now you may make any explanation you may think proper.—A. I submitted that list to the subcommittee at that time. They neglected to print the heading as well as the body of it. It obviously is an item of good will, rather than fees received from pending cases. In other words, they are moneys received from clients which were brought to the firm of Rankin through the instrumentality of Judge Ritter after Judge Ritter took the bench. That is the inference I gather.

Mr. WALSH (of counsel). That is all.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Stand aside. Is there any further testimony?

Mr. WALSH (of counsel). I desire to ask one more question of the witness who just left the stand.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Mr. Rankin, will you step back?

FURTHER CROSS-EXAMINATION OF A. L. RANKIN

By Mr. WALSH (of counsel):

Q. A member of the Court sent you up a question, the purport of which was whether or not you had been city attorney at Palm Beach. You never were city attorney at Palm Beach?—A. I never have; no, sir.

Q. Did I understand you to testify on your direct examination that you were county attorney of Palm Beach County?—A. Yes.

Q. Then I will follow the question that was not repeated after the city attorney question. Are you still county attorney of Palm Beach County?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. When were you appointed county attorney of Palm Beach County?—A. I was appointed or elected by the Board of County Commissioners of Palm Beach County in 1933.

Mr. WALSH (of counsel). That is all.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, I send forward a question which I ask to have read.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will read the inquiry to the witness.

The Chief Clerk read the question propounded by Mr. O'Mahoney, as follows:

Was that before or after the vacancy in the Alabama bench?

A. That was subsequent to that.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Are there any further questions? If not, the witness is excused.

Mr. WALSH (of counsel). You are excused.

Mr. Manager HOBBS. Mr. President, we should like to offer in evidence the copy furnished us by Judge Ritter of his 1929 income-tax return, and ask to have it marked with the appropriate identification number as an exhibit.

(The income-tax return was marked "Managers' Exhibit A-42", and is as follows:)

December 6, 1933.

MANAGERS' EXHIBIT A-42

[Italics show answers by person filing return]

TREASURY DEPART- MENT TO REASURY DEPART- MENT INTERNAL REVENUE SERV- ICE DUPLICATE DUPLICATE DETACH AND RETAIN THIS COPY AND THE INSTRUCTIONS TREASURY DEPART- MENT FOR NET INCOMES FROM SALARIES OR WAGES OF MORE THAN $5,000, AND INCOMES FROM BUSINESS, PROFESSION, RENTS, OR SALE OF PROPERTY FOR CALENDAR YEAR 1929 File this return with the collector of internal revenue for your district on or before March 15, 1930 Print name and address plainly below Name, Halsted L. Ritter. Street and number, or rural route, U. S. District Court. Post office, County, State, Miami, Fla.									DUPLICATE IF YOU NEED ASSISTANCE, GO TO A DEPUTY COLLECTOR OR TO THE COLLECTOR'S OFFICE
3. Is 1 4. Sta 5. We	this a joint return of hu te name of husband or ffice where it was sent. ere you married and liv	Occupation, ant of the United S 28, to what Collectsband and wife? wife if a separate ing with husband	Judge, U. Atates?tor's office was return was more wife on the	S. District Court. it sent?ade and the Collector's	7. If your state and nature 8. How many age or ince	re persons closely re is in respect to que e of changedependent persons apable of self-suppo	of your taxable year s lated to you? stions 5 and 6 changed (other than husband rt were receiving thei ear?	during the year or wife) under r chief support fr	, state date 18 years of om you on
2. Ir 3. Ir 4. Ir 5. Ir 6. Ir 7. R 8. P 9. D 10. T 11. O (b	acome from Business or therest on Bank Depositerest on Tax-free Covacome from Partnership acome from Fiduciaries ents and Royalties. (rofit from Sale of Real ividends on Stock of Earable Interest on Libther Income (including) Total Income in It axes Paid. (Explain in cases Paid. (Explain in cases by Fire, Storm, ead Debts. (Explain in ontributions. (Explain in ontributions.)	Profession. (From ts, Notes, Corpora enant Bonds Upons). (State name and State na	m Schedule A tition Bonds, et n Which a Tai nd address) d address) ands, etc. (Fr ons. From Schedul k of foreign co		of income):	s	(Explain in Schedule	$3, 607. 33 2, $31. 41 1, 230. 54 1, 230. 62 656. 10 500. 00 8, 607. 33	$12, 169. 26 $11, 470. 05 699. 21
_	EARNED INC	OME CREDIT		CC	MPUTATIO	N OF TAX (SEE	Instruction 23)
22. L 23. B 24. A 25. A 26. A 27. N 28. N 29. N 30. S 31. T		r $30,000)	$,500.00 34 $	3. Net Income (Item 20 about Less: Dividends (Item 9) Interest on Liber (Item 10) Credit for Depende	8)	$ 46. N 47. St 48. Tr 49. Tr 50. Tr $ 50. Tr $ 51. Le 54. In $ 55. Be		tal of Itams 44 to r Loss (123/4% of etween Items 48 ax on Earned In- us 51) at Source reign country or	$ $ $
	Payment	An	nount	Date .		k or M. O. No.	Bank o	or office of issue
First

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE

[Page 2 of duplicate income-tax blank of Halsted L. Ritter]
SCHEDULE A—INCOME FROM BUSINESS OR PROFESSION (SEE INSTRUCTION 2)

Total receipts from business of	or profession	(state kind of h	usines	s). Lawyer 1	ıntil Feb	. 25 and U. S.	Dis't J	Tudge since					$12, 169
Cost of Go	ODS SOLD			83 70	130	Отни	R BUS	INESS DEDUCT	IONS
2. Labor			$		10. St	daries not inc	luded a	s "Labor," in	Line	2. (Do not			Aboveto
3. Material and supplies					The second	deduct compe	nsation	for your servi- debtedness to o	ces)		$		is distrib ed under
 Material and supplies Merchandise bought for sale. Other costs (itemize below or 	on separate	sheet)			12. T	exes on busine	ss and	business prope	rty				come other sid
 Other costs (itemize below or Plus inventory at beginning 	of year				14. B	ad debts arisin	ng from	sales or servicence, and dep	es				this shee
7. Total (Lines 2 to 6)			$			table provided	at foo	t of page)
8. Less inventory at end of year					16. R	ent, repairs, a separate sheet	nd othe	er expenses (ite	mized	below or on
9. Net Cost of Goods Sold (Line	7 minus Lin	ne 8)	$		17.								12.6
Enter "C," or "C or M," on are valued at cost, or cost or ma			hether	inventories	and the state of					Item 2)		XXXXXXXXXXX	ACT OF PERSONS
Explanation of deductions claim		5 and 16 EDULE B-I
	bon	EDUBE D	11001	dis FROM	101514 11	AND NOT	ABIII	I and and a	OCITOR	1			A CANADA
1. Kind of Property		2. Amount Re	ceived	3. Cost or as of Ma 1913, Whi Greater	arch 1.	4. Depreci (Explain in at Foot of	n Table	5. Repai	irs	6. Other Exp (Itemize Be	enses low)		t Profit as Item
Apartment House, Denver, Colo.	$5,455	00	$53, 504 As of Sept.	1923.	$1,605	15	$889	85	$1,729	50	$1,	230
Explanation of deductions claim		nn 6: Coal, jani ULE C-PRO		ter, electricity, FROM SAL	and gen				NDS,	ETC.
			1		- 14							1	1 540
1. Kind of Property		2. Date Acqu	uired	3. Amot Receive		4. Deprecia Allowable Acquisit	Since	5. Cost or V as of March 1 Whichever C	1, 1913,	6. Subsequ Improveme		7. Net Profit (Enter as Item 8)
-				$		$	ļ	8		$		$
State how property was acquire	d
SCHEDULE D-CA	PITAL NE	T GAIN OR	Loss	FROM SAL	E OF	ASSETS HE	LD M	ORE THAN	TWO	YEARS (SEE	INSTR	uction 8a)
1. Kind of Property	2. Date		Sold	4. Amount R	eceived	5. Depreciat lowable Si quisition	ion Al- nce Ac-	6. Cost or as of Ma 1913, Which Greater	rch 1,	7. Subsequents provements Capital D tions	s, and	8. Net G (Enter Item 4	121/2%
	Mo. Day Y	ear Mo. Day	Year		1		T		1				-
••••••										$		$
State how property was acquire										THE PERSON		SHISTON
SCHEDULE E	-INTERES	ST ON LIBE	RTY	BONDS AN	D OTI	HER OBLIG	ATION	IS OR SECU	RITIE	S (SEE INSTI	RUCTIO	N 10)	HIT A
1. Obligation	ons or Securit	ies		2. Intereceived or			t Owne	4. Prince Amou Exempt Taxati	nt From	5. Amount O in Excess of emption		Cess 0	nt in l of Exen (Enter
() () () () () () () ()							1		I				1
 (a) Obligations of a State, Territ or the District of Columbia 	8			$		$		A11		XXXXXX	xx	xxxx	xxx
 (b) Securities issued under Federand Certificates of Indebte (c) Liberty 3½% Bonds and certificates 	edness issued other obligati	after June 17, 1	1929 State	8				All		xxxxx	xx	xxxx	xx issued on or before Sept U. S. possessions								All		xxxxxx	xx	xxxx	x x x
(d) Liberty 4% and 414% Bo issued before June 18, 19	nds, Certific 29, Treasury	ates of Indeb	Saving	S			1	E TOTAL				138
Certificates								$5,000		$		$
(e) Treasury Notes								None				l
Taxes paid on apartment hou Salary as United States Distr Contributions to Y. M. C. A	se above and i	Southern Distri	shings,	Denver, Colo		ONS CLAIN	IED II	N ITEMS 1,	14, 16, 1	17, AND 18
EX	PLANATIO	ON OF DED	UCTI	ON FOR D	EPREC	IATION CI	AIME	D IN SCHE	DULE	S A AND B
1. Kind of Propert (If Buildings, State Materis	y of which	2. Date Ac	howlend	3. Age V	When	4. Probabl	e Life	5. Cost or Va of Mar. 1,	1913,	Amount of	Depre	ciation Ch	arged of
Constructed)	i or waicu	Z. Date Ro	quirou	Acqui	red	After Acqui	rement	Whichever C (Exclusive of		6. Previous	Years	7. Th	is Year
6 apartment house, brick and conc	rete	Sept. 23, 192	25	New		30 years		$50, 504	40	$9,630	18	$1,	605
EXPLANATION	OF DEDU	CTION FOR	LOSS	SES BY FIR	RE, ST	ORM, ETC.,	CLAI	MED IN SC	HEDU	LE A, AND	IN IT	TEM 15	ST.
1. Kind of Property		2. Date Acq	uired	3. Cost or V of March Which Greater	1, 1913,	4. Subsequer		5. Depreciati lowable Acquisition	Since	6. Insurance Salvage Va		7. Deduc	tible L
	FICE						1		1			$

Mr. Manager HOBBS. Mr. President, we also offer in evidence two sheets, being photostat copies of Judge Ritter's bank account in the First National Bank of Miami, Fla. We (The documents were marked "Managers' Exhibit A-43", ask that they be given a number and printed in the RECORD. sheets 1 and 2, and are as follows:)

THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK MIAMI, FLORIDA

Name: Mail H. L. Ritter or Grace M. Ritter. Address: Office of U. S. Dist. Ct., P. O. Bldg., city.

Old balance Date		Checks in detail			Date	Deposits	Date	New bal- ance
		Balance	brought for	ward	Apr. 9, '31	414.40	Apr. 9, '31	414.40
414. 40	Apr. 9, '31	7. 15	4. 50 2. 95	26. 89			Apr. 9, '31	362.3
362, 36 334, 86	Apr. 9, '31	27.50	- Swas			the Water Bu	Apr. 9, '31	334. 86 320. 8
320. 86 205. 86	Apr. 13, '31	100.00	15. 00			THE STREET	Apr. 9, '31 Apr. 9, '31 Apr. 13, '31 Apr. 14, '31 Apr. 14, '31 Apr. 15, '31 Apr. 18, '31 Apr. 20, '31 Apr. 20, '31 Apr. 20, '31 Apr. 21, '31 Apr. 22, '31 Apr. 22, '31	205. 8
200.86		Part Carl			Apr. 15, '31	2,000.00	Apr. 15, '31	2, 200. 8
2, 200. 86 2, 102. 11	Apr. 18, '31	88.75	10.00		production of the	ALL HOME UM	Apr. 18, '31	2, 200. 8 2, 102. 1 2, 096. 1
2, 096. 11 2, 081. 11	Apr. 18, '31 Apr. 20, '31 Apr. 20, '31 Apr. 20, '31 Apr. 21, '31 Apr. 23, '31 Apr. 23, '31 Apr. 24, '31 Apr. 24, '31 Apr. 28, '31 Apr. 28, '31 Apr. 28, '31 Apr. 28, '31 Apr. 29, '31 Apr. 29, '31 Apr. 29, '31 Apr. 30, '31 May 1, '31 May 2, '31 May 2, '31 May 2, '31 May 2, '31 May 5, '31 May 6, '31 May 6, '31 May 6, '31 May 6, '31 May 12, '31 May 12, '31 May 13, '31 May 14, '31 May 15, '31 May 15, '31 May 14, '31 May 15, '31 May 16, '31	15. 00 35. 83	6.00			181 200 1119	Apr. 20, '31	2, 081. 1
2, 039. 28 1, 839. 28	Apr. 22, '31	200.00					Apr. 22, '31	1, 839. 2 1, 739. 2
1, 739. 28	Apr. 24, '31	15.00			A STATE OF THE STA		Apr. 24, '31	1, 724. 2
1, 724. 28 1, 709. 28	Apr. 24, '31	15.00	E) 1288			2000	Apr. 22, '31 Apr. 24, '31 Apr. 24, '31 Apr. 24, '31 Apr. 25, '31 Apr. 25, '31 Apr. 28, '31 Apr. 28, '31 Apr. 28, '31 Apr. 30, '31 May 1, '31 May 2, '31 May 4, '31	1, 709. 2 1, 703. 2
1, 703. 28 1, 447. 43	Apr. 28, '31	5. 85 21. 75	200.00				Apr. 28, '31	1, 497. 4: 1, 475. 6:
1, 475. 68	Apr. 29, '31	15.00	7.00				Apr. 29, '31	1, 453. 6
1, 453. 68 1, 430. 80	May 1, '31	22.88	-	100			May 1, '31	1, 430. 8 1, 415. 4
1, 415. 49 1, 351. 24	May 2, '31	64. 25	180.00			No Victoria	May 2, '31	1, 351. 2 1, 161. 2
1, 161. 24 1, 967. 76	May 2, '31	1 26, 81 26, 08			May 2, '31 May 2, '31	1 833, 33	May 2, '31	1, 967. 7 1, 968. 4
1, 968. 49	May 4, '31	4.50	000 00	07.00	May a, or	- 20.01	May 4, '31	1, 963. 9
1, 963, 99	May 5, '31	15.00	266. 66	25. 00		HALL CO. H. T. C.	May 5, '31	1, 652. 3
1, 652. 33 1, 644. 61	May 5, '31	7.72					May 5, '31	1, 644. 6 1, 641. 6
1, 641. 61	May 6, '31	8.31 5.00	4. 42 3. 04	7.50 24.26				7,000
-	May 6, '31	100.00	0.01	24, 20			May 6, '31. May 6, '31. May 6, '31. May 18, '31. May 13, '31. May 14, '31. May 14, '31. May 15, '31. May 15, '31. May 16, '31. May 16, '31. May 16, '31. May 21, '31. May 21, '31. May 22, '31. May 22, '31. May 23, '31. May 28, '31. Jun. 2, '31. Jun. 2, '31. Jun. 2, '31. Jun. 4, '31. Jun. 4, '31. Jun. 6, '31. Jun. 6, '31. Jun. 10, '31. Jun. 13, '31. Jun. 13, '31. Jun. 16, '31. Jun. 16, '31. Jun. 18, '31. Jun. 2, '31. Jun. 18, '31. Jun. 18, '31. Jun. 18, '31. Jun. 2, '31. Jun. 18, '31. Jun. 18, '31. Jun. 2, '31. Jun. 18, '31. Jun. 2, '31. Jun. 18, '31. Jun. 2, '31. Jun. 3, '31. Jun. 18, '31. Jun. 2, '31. Jun. 18, '31. Jun. 2, '31. Jun. 2, '31. Jun. 3, '31. Jun. 18, '31. Jun. 2, '31. Jun. 3, '31. Jun. 18, '31. Jun. 2, '31. Jun. 3, '31. Jun. 18, '31. Jun. 2, '31. Jun. 3, '31. Jun. 3, '31. Jun. 18, '31. Jun. 2, '31.	1, 489. 0 1, 459. 9
1, 489. 08 1, 459. 99	May 6, '31	29. 09	II I PARK	71 2000			May 12, '31	1, 459. 9 1, 359. 9
1, 359, 99 1, 357, 49	May 13, '31	2.50	1				May 13, '31	1, 357. 4: 1, 257. 4:
1, 257. 49	May 14, '31	12.00					May 14, '31	1, 245. 4
1, 245. 49 1, 244. 30	May 15, '31	1, 100. 00					May 15, '31	1, 244. 3
144, 30	May 16, '31	Balance brou	ight forwar	d	May 16, '31	144.30	May 16, '31	144.3 112.4
112, 41 80, 23	May 16, '31 May 18, '31 May 21, '31 May 21, '31 May 23, '31 May 28, '31 Jun. 1, '31 Jun. 2, '31 Jun. 2, '31 Jun. 4, '31 Jun. 4, '31 Jun. 5, '31 Jun. 6, '31 Jun. 6, '31 Jun. 8, '31 Jun. 8, '31	32, 18 11, 76				S C R DIE STAN	May 18, '31	80. 2 68. 4
68, 47	May 21, '31	22. 28					May 21, '31	46. 1
46. 19 31, 24	May 28, '31	14. 95 18. 00				The real spines	May 28, '31	31. 2 13. 2
13. 24 546. 57	Jun. 1, '31	300.00			Jun. 1, '31	* 833, 33	Jun. 1, '31	546. 5 527. 9
527. 92 235. 18	Jun. 2, '31	226. 66 1. 85	26. 08 7. 00				Jun. 2, '31	235. 1 226. 3
226. 33	Jun. 4, '31	3. 15	8. 02		Jun. 4, '31		Jun. 4, '31	215. 1
215. 16 207. 16	Jun. 5, '31	8.00	27.75	5, 25			Jun. 5, '31	207. 1
160. 80 103. 30	Jun. 6, '31	7.50	50.00				Jun. 6, '31	103. 3 101. 3
101.30	Jun. 8, '31	3.83	2.00				Jun. 8, '31	95. 4
95. 47 90. 43	Jun. 10, 31	5.04		= = 1	Jun. 10, '31	100.00	Jun. 10, '31	90. 4 190. 4
190. 43 90. 43	Jun. 10, '31	100.00				SECTION AND VALUE	Jun. 10, '31 Jun. 13, '31	90. 4
65. 43 46. 05	Jun. 10, '31	19. 38 7. 36				Ser Dorse	Jun. 16, '31	46.0 38.6
38.69	Jun. 18, '31	18.00					Jun. 18, '31	20. 6
20. 69 15. 74	Jun. 16, 31 Jun. 18, '31. Jun. 20, '31 Jun. 26, '31 Jun. 30, '31 Jul. 2, '31. Jul. 3, '31 Jul. 3, '31 Jul. 6, '31 Jul. 7, '31	4, 95 19, 45					Jun. 20, '31 Jun. 26, '31. Jun. 30, '31. Jul. 2, '31. Jul. 3, '31. Jul. 3, '31. Jul. 6, '31. Jul. 7, '31.	15. 7 3. 7
3. 71 779. 63	Jun. 30, '31	50.00 18.00			Jun. 30, '31	833. 34	Jun. 30, '31	779. 6
761, 63	Jul. 3, '31	289. 08 11. 10					Jul. 3, '31	472.5
472, 55 461, 45	Jul. 6, '31	7.80					Jul. 6, '31	453. 6
453. 65 449. 50			7.81	27.50			Jul. 7, '31 Jul. 7, '31	449. 5
410. 99 400. 39	Jul. 7, '31	10.60					Jul. 7, '31 Jul. 8, '31 Jul. 9, '31 Jul. 9, '31	400.3
392. 47 384. 97	Jul. 8, '31	7. 50		The state of the s		Self-	Jul. 9, '31	384.9
381, 22	Jul. 9, '31 Jul. 10, '31	3, 75	4.00		Y-1 10 101		Jul. 10, '31 Jul. 10, '31	381. 2 373. 4
373. 47 1, 473. 47	Jul. 10, '31	50.00			Jul. 10, '31	1, 100. 00	Int 10 '21	1 493 4
1, 423, 47	Jul. 11, '31	5. 10	NEVEL S			THE RESERVE	Jul. 11, 31	1,418.3
1, 418. 37 1, 396. 29 1, 385. 84	Jul. 13, '31 Jul. 14, '31	10.45					Jul. 13, '31	1, 396. 2 1, 385. 8
1, 357, 46	Jul. 16, '31 Jul. 16, '31	28.38 125.00	Alla Tor	B		/ BEES !	Jul. 16, '31 Jul. 16, '31	1, 357. 4 1, 232. 4
1, 232, 46 1, 228, 96	Jul. 16, '31 Jul. 17, '31 Jul. 18, '31	3. 50 41. 03	111111111111111111111111111111111111111			Land Van	Jul. 17, '31	1, 228. 9 1, 187. 9
1, 187. 93	Jul. 18, 51 Jul. 22, '31 Jul. 22, '31 Jul. 22, '31	2.05					Jul. 13, '31 Jul. 14, '31 Jul. 16, '31 Jul. 16, '31 Jul. 17, '31 Jul. 17, '31 Jul. 18, '31 Jul. 22, '31 Jul. 22, '31	1, 185. 8
1, 185. 88 1, 100. 88	Tul 90 /91	85. 00 50. 00	CC .		S HENRI CONTRACTOR	10117 32	Jul. 22, '31 Jul. 22, '31	1, 100. 8 1, 050. 8

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there any further testimony to be offered?

Mr. Manager HOBBS. That is all, may it please the Court.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does that close the case for you, Mr. Counsel?

Mr. WALSH (of counsel). Yes, Mr. President.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The evidence is closed.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, the Senator from Utah [Mr. King] will present an order.

Mr. KING. I submit an order for the consideration of the Court.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The proposed order will be read. The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Ordered, That the time for final argument of the case of Halsted L. Ritter shall be limited to 4 hours, which said time shall be divided equally between the managers on the part of the House of Representatives and the counsel for the respondent, and the time thus assigned to each side shall be divided as each side for itself may determine.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Do the managers on the part of the House and counsel for the respondent desire to make any argument whatever? That is the first thing the Court desires to ascertain. The next thing is as to the limitation of time.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I suggest that before submitting the order I had ascertained that the counsel for the managers and the counsel for the respondent desired to make arguments.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair had understood that probably the case would be submitted to the jury without argument.

Is there objection to the order presented by the Senator from Utah?

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Mr. President, I assume it is understood that the managers on the part of the House will open and close.

The VICE PRESIDENT. That is the general practice in court procedure, as the Chair understands.

Is there objection to the proposed order?

There being no objection, the order submitted by Mr. King was entered.

DISMISSAL OF WITNESSES

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair will state, at the suggestion of the Sergeant at Arms, that all witnesses in the case are now excused.

The Chair recognizes the managers on the part of the House to proceed with the argument.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I should like to ask the managers on the part of the House a question. Do the managers desire to open their argument now, or within the next 20 minutes; or what is their pleasure in the matter?

The VICE PRESIDENT. What are the wishes of the managers?

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Mr. President, of course, we are glad to act in accordance with the convenience and wishes of the Senate; but if the matter is left entirely to the managers on the part of the House, we are ready to proceed now, if the Court is willing.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Very well.

ARGUMENT ON BEHALF OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES BY MR.
MANAGER HOBBS

Mr. Manager HOBBS (speaking from in front of the Vice President's desk). Mr. President, Members of the High Court of Impeachment, my distinguished opponents, and colleagues, this, it seems to me, is the voice of 124,000,000 people, for the articles of impeachment in this case are brought in the name of the House of Representatives of the United States Congress and of all the people of the United States. Therefore at the very outset I wish to make it clear that at no time when any manager on the part of the House is speaking—and I feel sure that the distinguished counsel representing the respondent will feel the same responsibility—will we descend from the high level of fairness and impartiality which governed the presentation of the evidence.

The managers on the part of the House are here, as you distinguished gentlemen know, in obedience to the mandate of the House of Representatives. We are here as the servants of the Senate. The whole purpose of the argument which we shall try to advance in this case shall not for one second be construed by us as being to make an impression or to make a speech or to seek to sway one iota the mind of a single Senator. What we shall try to do is to advance for your consideration in an orderly presentation a digest of the evidence, in the hope that it may be of service to you in your weighing the vast mass of testimony which has been presented.

The statement of the law of the case, as we see it, will largely be left to the distinguished chairman of the Judiciary Committee of the House [Mr. Manager Sumners], the chairman of the managers on the part of the House in this case, and I will not attempt to go into that, save to observe these three points which, to my mind, should be in the minds of the Members of this high Court of Impeachment at all times in weighing this evidence:

First, that impeachment trials are not criminal trials in any sense of the word.

Second, that the burden of proof in this case is not "beyond a reasonable doubt", as it is in criminal cases.

Third, that the presumption of innocence, which attends a defendant in a criminal case, is not to be indulged in behalf of the respondent in an impeachment trial.

Those three principles of law, I believe, are well recognized, and we respectfully ask the Members of this high Court of Impeachment to bear them in mind.

The present distinguished senior Senator from Nebraska [Mr. Norris], when acting as one of the managers on the part of the House in the impeachment trial of Judge Robert W. Archbald, made as clear and cogent a statement as has ever been made upon the subject of impeachable conduct. With his kind permission, I should like to take that as my text, so to speak, for the remarks that will follow:

If judges can hold their offices only during good behavior, then it necessarily and logically follows that they cannot hold their offices when they have been convicted of any behavior that is not good. If good behavior is an essential of holding the office, then misbehavior is a sufficient reason for removal from office.

May I now take up, seriatim, some important points in the testimony of Judge Ritter.

I respectfully refer the Members of this distinguished body to page 275 of the book that is before you, the pamphlet containing the proceedings in this case, if you care to follow me. I desire to call your attention to what I conceive to be the most flagrant attempt to mislead this Court and its Members that has been undertaken during the course of this trial.

When Judge Ritter took the witness stand in his own behalf and made a statement, unguided by questions from counsel, he said that it was easier to read what he had copied from article 7 of the deed of trust than it would be to read the deed of trust or the pertinent provisions of that article. I call your attention solemnly to the fact that he omitted the most vital, the only really important part of that paragraph of article 7, which he said he was reading, to wit, he left out the provision that bondholders holding less than $50,000, the qualifying amount, while they could proceed to foreclose the mortgage for their own benefit, must do so in subordination to the continuing lien of the mortgage, and that they should proceed only for themselves, and the rights which they acquired would be junior and subordinate to the rights of the continuing lien of the trust deed or mortgage. May I quote the words which constitute this vital omission?

Subject to the continuing lien of this trust deed (and junior and subordinate thereto).

I submit that article 7 was emasculated by the omission which Judge Ritter made. It included the heart of the paragraph he purported to quote, which I have just quoted. There is nowhere in that article, or anywhere else, any provision giving bondholders holding less than the qualifying amount any remedy whatsoever to sue or foreclose for other bondholders or to intervene, but to the contrary, in the next succeeding article, article 8, where foreclosures are provided for, this matter is again taken up and made clear.

I am not going to take your time to read in its entirety either of those sections, but the article from which Judge Ritter claimed to be quoting deals with the power to declare bonds due after default. The next section or article gives the right of foreclosure. I submit that the omission may not have been accidental, and I urge you most earnestly to read those two articles of the original deed of trust for yourselves—article 7 and article 8. Such reading will show, I venture to predict, a deliberate purpose of Judge Ritter to mislead you by his testimony.

Judge Ritter also testified that the bill alleged that a demand had been made on Trustee Moore, or that such a demand would have been futile. I can find no such averment in the bill. No one had a right to intervene; no one had a right to foreclose unless the qualifying amount of bonds—$50,000—was in his possession, unless there was fraud alleged and proven, and we have undisputed evidence in this case that there was no such testimony ever taken, and that when the testimony was taken disproving fraud Mr. Rankin did not even see fit to file a cross-interrogatory, much less to go to Chicago and resist. Rankin admits that the testimony taken in Chicago disproved his averment of fraud in the case.

Then, although he had averred, and sworn to the averment on information and belief, that Moore and his associates had been guilty of fraud, collusion, and conspiracy; yet, in the final decree, which he swears he wrote, he specifically acquits them of that charge. Therefore we submit that there was no basis whatsoever, in law or in fact, upon which the final decree in this case could have been rendered. There was no word of evidence taken in support of the averments of the bill of complaint. The only ground upon which any one of them, except Bert Holland, had any standing whatsoever in the court was completely dissipated, absolutely taken away by the terms of the final decree itself, and when it was adjudged that the Moores were not guilty of fraud, collusion, or conspiracy, the right of action, which had been asserted on that ground alone, ceased, and no valid decree could possibly have been rendered. The case was dead!

Please bear in mind that even with Bert Holland in the case—and he had twice discharged Rankin, the latter time in writing-the case could not lawfully proceed to final decree, for only when they had made a deposit of the money necessary to defray or indemnify against the cost and expenses of the foreclosure, and had shown demand had been made upon the trustee named in the deed of trust, or had shown fraud on the part of the trustee had they any standing whatsoever in any court to foreclose the mortgage. If fraud be stricken down-and there was not a scintilla of evidence to prove it, while the proof and the decree were both contra-there can be no standing in court of any complaint or intervener in the case, because the evidence is utterly silent as to any demand made upon the trustee to foreclose or as to the deposit of money to indemnify. Hence, the final decree in the Whitehall case was an illegal nullity.

The next point I wish to make with reference to Judge Ritter's testimony is that he swore he thought on the first hearing, October 28, 1929, that it was a fight between Holland and Moore to see who would get the fees. Yet near the top of the same page—5371—on which his testimony just referred to appears in the Record he had sworn that he naturally thought that Mr. Moore had bought Holland off, and that they were working together. Here we have an absolute inconsistency, a contradiction of himself. I merely desire to call your attention thereto, in passing.

Judge Ritter further testified that over $600,000 net profit was made under Richardson's administration as receiver (Record, p. 5372). I desire to call your attention to the final report of Walter S. Richardson, under oath, in the file of the Whitehall case, which is in evidence in this case. When you read it you will see that Mr. Winters, under oath here, told you the unvarnished truth when he said that after two seasons of administration under Walter S. Richardson, although $600,000 of operating profits was shown on the face after paying the cooks and chambermaids, yet only $19,000 of the $600,000 ever found its way into the channels of the court for distribution to the bondholders (Record, p. 5340. All the rest was dissipated by the fees which Judge Ritter allowed to Walter S. Richardson, his attorneys, and to A. L. Rankin and the other attorneys in the case. And of this $19,000, $12,000 came from the administration of the hotel in the bankruptcy, the year before.

So, out of some $1,000,000 of so-called profits from the operation of the Whitehall Hotel during the 3 years of Richardson, the total turned over by Richardson to Winters for distribution among the nondepositing bondholders, was $19,000. The rest had gone for fees and expenses. And Richardson got a considerable part of that $19,000. The depositing bondholders, 93 percent of all first-mortgage bondholders, got nothing.

They talk about a conservation fee. Conservation of what? Whitehall stood and still stands. The land has not disappeared, and neither have the buildings. The first-mortgage bondholders had a first mortgage on all the property, authorizing the trustee named therein to ask for a receivership and take possession, as he did long before any proceedings in this case were ever started. He had possession of it at the time for the benefit of the first-mortgage bondholders.

What was conserved? Certainly not the proceeds which came from the operation of that hotel during the administration of Walter S. Richardson as receiver.

To sum it up, here is the situation I challenge anyone to dispute. When the first-mortgage bondholders started they had a first mortgage, paramount and supreme, upon the Whitehall Hotel and everything in it, and upon the income. When Richardson, Rankin, and Ritter finished with them they had the property, which they had in their possession before this suit was filed; but, instead of a clear title to it, as they had when they started, it was then subject to the $300,000 mortgage which had to be put on there to pay off Walter S. Richardson and his wife, who had bought up for a song $48,700 of the nondeposited bonds during his trust administration, and the fees of Richardson, Rankin, and the others.

Do not misunderstand me. We hold no brief for that committee. We hold no brief for the Moores. We hold no brief for anyone except the sovereign people of the United States.

Who was consulted of those who really had an interest in the division of the money, namely, the ones who had invested their hard-earned money in those bonds? Not one! Of course the committee was paid, and paid handsomely, out of the proceeds of the $300,000 mortgage, but the investors, supposedly represented by that committee, got nothing. Some $152,000, I think it was, including the $19,000, went to pay off Walter S. Richardson and his wife and the other nondepositing bondholders, and the fees allowed by Judge Ritter.

The next point I want to make is that Judge Ritter says in his testimony that although he wrote Judge Akerman to fix the total allowance to be made to Judge A. L. Rankin, his former law partner, for his services in the Whitehall case, he did not mean that; he meant the total conservation fee. I am not going to argue that in detail.

I just call your attention to the discrepancy in his testimony, the conflict between the letter itself, which he wrote (Record, p. 5168). Judge Akerman has explained to you gentlemen he took that letter at face value, and without reading, signed the decree or order granting the conservation fee to A. L. Rankin, which he thought was a "total allowance" for all services, throughout the case. Judge Akerman "trusted not wisely, but too well."

The last point of this kind that I wish to take time to call to your attention is Judge Ritter's testimony in regard to when he first visited the hotel. It does not make much difference, but he was trying to show that because of the storm—which took place in September—he went there and stopped at the hotel to inspect the damage. The minute the cross-examination started on it he apparently recognized the fact that he could not have stopped in a hotel which was closed, and, therefore, his memory failed, and he did not even remember the year of that first visit, did not remember whether he took any meals there or not, but he did remember something about Washington's Birthday. The undisputed testimony is that this hotel never opened until January 1. The damage done by the September storm must have been completely repaired before any guest was entertained in the hotel.

I call your attention from his testimony, further, to these two matters: First, the fact that he stood here on this stand and testified that he would accept a gift from anybody. A Federal judge, bound to be familiar with the canons of judicial ethics as adopted by the American Bar Association, canon 32 of which reads:

He should not accept any presents or favors from litigants, or from lawyers practising before him, or from others whose interests are likely to be submitted to him for judgment.

We may assume he knew the ancient law of Holy Writ:

Thou shalt not wrest judgment; thou shalt not respect persons, neither take a gift; for a gift doth blind the eyes of the wise, and pervert the words of the righteous.

Both of these, in specific terms, condemn such judicial conduct; yet Judge Ritter, here, before you, swears that he would accept a gift from anybody; to use his exact words, "Just the same as I would accept a gift from anybody."

The second big fact that looms as large as Mars on perihelion, is that he made no denial whatsoever in all his testimony of the engagement which he made with Judge Chillingworth. Judge Chillingworth's notation on his engagement docket of May 4, 1929, reads:

111 So. 626, Ritter-supersedeas bond.

The day before, the same docket shows, Rankin had been to see Judge Chillingworth.

I now wish to take up very briefly the facts with reference to the Brodek case—impeachment article III—and digest the evidence, if I may, proving that article. The law says that no judge may, after assuming office, exercise his profession or practice law (U. S. Judicial Code, sec. 258). Did Judge Ritter do so? I call your attention to the letter which he wrote to Mr. Brodek on March 11, 1929, barely a month after he had been confirmed by this honorable body as judge of that district. He said in that letter, if you will recall:

We shall demand a very heavy supersedeas bond, which I doubt whether D'Esterre can give.

At another place therein:

Of course, now that I am on the Federal bench, I cannot practice any further, and my partner, A. L. Rankin, will carry through the further proceedings in that case. I will, however, be consulted about matters by him until it is all closed up.

Again:

This matter is one among very few which I am assuming to continue my interest in until finally closed up.

Again:

We hope to get Mr. Howard Paschal or some other person as receiver who will be amenable to our directions.

Please bear these quotations in mind. He said that he would follow through to the end. He did. He said that he would be consulted by Rankin about the matter until it was all closed up. He evidently was. He said, "We hope to get a receiver who will be our tool." Did they? He said, "We shall demand a very heavy supersedeas bond." They both did—Judge Ritter, one for $25,000, we may be sure from the authority he cited before Judge Chillingworth when he appeared before him on May 4, 1929; Rankin, one for $35,000, according to his letter to Brodek (Record, p. 5254).

That alone shows the caliber and the character and the attitude of this man toward litigants, if possible to shut off a defendant from his right of appeal by demanding an excessive supersedeas bond—we will do it. Gentlemen of the Senate, what does that mean in the light of Judge Chillingworth's docket?

Judge Ritter, in his letter of March 11, 1929, to Brodek, promised to do that thing. Judge Chillingworth's engagement docket shows that he did it. The words and figures written there on May 4, 1929, in Judge Chillingworth's hand-writing—

111 So. 626.

One Hundred and Eleventh Southern Reporter, page 626. Ritter—supersedeas bond.

Judge Ritter has never denied it. He knows it is true. What does that mean? It means that he had an engagement with Judge Chillingworth on March 4; and the same docket shows that on the afternoon of the 3d of March the entry is:

3:00 Rankin.

Differentiating, if you please, between the two members of this partnership which had been so recently dissolved—Rankin on the afternoon of the third; Ritter on the fourth, talking about a supersedeas bond, demanding a heavy one! And the file in this case, which has been introduced in evidence with privilege of reference, shows that Rankin filed a written brief in aid of Ritter and Rankin's motion for a $35,000 supersedeas bond, and that Judge Ritter rested content with the citation of that book lying there, 111 Southern, page 626. If you will read headnote 4 in that case (Record, p. 5253) you will see that the Supreme Court of Florida there holds that in a case involving $108,000 and the judge's order fixing the amount of $6,000 attorney's fee, a supersedeas bond at $25,000 is not an abuse of judicial discretion.

In other words, we have Judge Ritter, on March 11, saying: "I am judge now. I cannot go on openly, but I will carry on to the end surreptitiously. I will consult with Rankin about this case to the end. I will keep in touch with him. I will follow through. We will see that a heavy supersedeas bond is demanded—so heavy that we hope D'Esterre cannot make it." Then we find him making an engagement with Judge Chillingworth for March 4, 1929, after he had been on the bench nearly 2 months, citing an authority, and urging, apparently, that a high supersedeas bond—to wit, $25,000—be required. The court, however, required only a $7,500 bond. So the case went on for a couple of years, and was not terminated until sometime in 1932, when the Supreme Court of Florida affirmed Judge Chillingworth. Judge Ritter said that he would carry on "until it was all closed up." Does the evidence show that he did so?

In proof of that, we have introduced letters from Rankin telling of a conference about a compromise of that case in his—Rankin's—office in West Palm Beach, where D'Esterre's attorney came and tried to compromise the case. The letter said Judge Ritter was there—"we merely smiled and gave him no satisfaction whatever."

So we have Judge Ritter in consultation about a settlement of the case in West Palm Beach in Rankin's office, and we see him up yonder in Brodek's office. Brodek says, "He did not consult with me. It was a mere luncheon engagement"—I am now reading Brodek's own words—"but—

I think I may have said to Judge Ritter something to the effect that "Rankin seems to be scared, but I do not see any reason for being scared. We are just as strong as we were before." The only thing—

Listen to this, if you please-

The only thing was to have the appeal disposed of quickly, I think I told him, because it had been hanging fire over 4 years (RECORD, p. 5332).

Gentlemen of the Senate, how else can a lawyer consult with a client? Judge Ritter goes up to New York after Rankin had written Brodek and told him that Judge Ritter would be there, and after Brodek had written back and said, "I will review the authorities you submit, familiarize myself with the law of the case, and I will see Judge Ritter when he comes." Brodek did so twice, at least; and he tells you that although they did not consult about the matter, he said to Judge Ritter, "You need not be worried. Rankin is scared, but I am not. We are just as strong as we ever were. Go down there and get that appeal disposed of as quickly as possible. The matter has been hanging fire for over 4 years."

There is only one other observation I wish to make, and | that is with respect to the fact that Judge Ritter told Mr. Brodek in that letter of March 11 twice that he was a judge on the bench, we also find from the evidence in the case that the Mulford Realty Corporation owned a hotel in his district, and had other property holdings there, so those averments of the articles of impeachment have been proved; and in proof of the further averment of our third article of impeachment, Judge Ritter swears that Rankin first learned of the $2,000 payment in July, when the final decree was rendered (RECORD, p. 5380).

So much for that. I submit that each and every word of the averments, beyond the peradventure or shadow of a doubt, has been proven, and is practically undenied. If the respondent did a single overt act in compliance with the promise contained in the letter of March 11, he is as guilty as though he had hung out his shingle, solicited the public to come to him thereby, and had run a law office in West Palm Beach.

The law recognizes no distinction. The respondent is either guilty or not guilty. If he exercised his profession in the slightest degree, he is guilty; and we show that he did. We show that he got a $2,000 fee for past-due services, they all say now—but at the same time that the respondent asked for it, he promised to "carry on." The Mulford Realty Co. had large property holdings in his district. It would be a wise move to give an extra fee to a man who, by reason of diversity of citizenship, might have had brought in his court any of those cases that might have come up in the future.

Now we go on to the Boca Raton matter, article IV.

February 3, 1930, after Judge Ritter had been on the bench for nearly a year, we find this remarkable statement in the letter which Judge Ritter then wrote. If you will look on page 5247 of the Congressional Record you will

Mr. Francis is more than a mere client . ; he is one of my intimate friends.

An absolute admission that a year after the respondent went on the bench he still had a friend who was "more than a mere client." What right does a judge on the bench have to have clients, when the law which he has sworn to uphold says he must not?

Then, on December 29, 1930, we have this promise, as set forth on page 5248 of the RECORD.

And he and I will get in touch with you at that time.

Judge Ritter says that he and Francis will get in touch with Mr. Gedney.

March 27, 1931, after Judge Ritter had been on the bench for 2 years and more, he writes this, and yet he says there were no legal services performed:

I have examined the deed, and it appears to be a special warranty.

Then, omitting some matters that are not pertinent to this inquiry:

I understand there was to be a general warranty deed, and that a policy of title insurance would be issued in conformity therewith. The deed can readily be interlined to carry out this purpose.

Then the respondent goes on with a discussion of the details of what he wants done in aid of the legal transfer of title, and he himself admitted, on the witness stand, that those deeds were rewritten or reformed to meet his legal criticisms.

Who but a lawyer would recognize the difference, after examining a deed, between a general covenant of warranty and a special warranty? The respondent admits that the deeds were reformed or rewritten to meet his criticism, and yet he says that was not practicing law.

He had conferences in his office, in chambers, in Miami, on February 19, 1931, with regard to the content of the warranty clause in those deeds with Mr. Gedney, and he never denied it.

On pages 5248 and 5249 we find evidence that there were gathered, according to Gedney's testimony, Mr. Geist, Mr. Anderson, and Mr. Francis, none of whom was a lawyer, and I that lot would be regarded rightly as returnable.'

two lawyers who, according to Mr. Gedney's theory and testimony, represented the two sides in that issue, and they were Judge Ritter and Mr. Gedney.

Gedney's testimony, on page 5251 of the Congressional RECORD, is to the effect that it was not a continuation of the former transaction, which involved the Mizner Development Co., then long since bankrupt and gone, but was an entirely new transaction, and that the receipt for the initial payment to the Spanish River Land Co. initiated it, with Judge Ritter's letter, the new one of February 3, 1930.

It is true that the fee paid by Mr. J. R. Francis to Judge Ritter was paid on April 18, 1929, by a check for $7,500; but whether it was paid before or after the services were performed, he was violating section 258 of the Judicial Code of the United States, and is guilty under that article of impeachment. He is guilty, just the same, if he exercised his profession gratuitously.

Then there was the Cocoa Beach transaction, in which he says he saved J. R. Francis $200,000, claimed of him, by drawing a contract before he went on the bench, but that it was afterward verified by him after he went on the bench. That may be only a slight infraction, but the fee was paid almost immediately after the conclusion of those services and after Judge Ritter went on the bench.

Now, very rapidly, I want to touch upon the two incometax articles. The 1929 income, the proof in this case shows, consisted (over and above his salary as judge, which was exempt) of $1,945.23 received from Mulford; $2,000 received from Brodek, which was an extra fee, paid by the bank on April 4; $120 received from Rankin on April 19; $7,500 from Francis on April 19; and $100 more from Rankin in December 1929, a split of another fee that had come in since the dissolution of the firm, making a total of $11,665.23, over and above his salary as judge.

Gentlemen, that is the issue. He admits he never paid a cent of taxes on it. What became of it? He says he returned $331.40 of the $500 which he claims was the balance of that $1,945.23 after deducting expenses. By way of parenthesis I should like to call attention to this fact just a minute. One thousand nine hundred forty-five dollars and twenty-three cents was paid. He says $1,445.23 was expense money "which we as a firm had paid out for Mulford, so I collected that and put it into my pocket." What became of Rankin's half of that refund? It is still in Judge Ritter's pocket, unless he has taken it out. But that has nothing to do with this case, except to show the practice of these part-

At least $500 as a fee was collected by him in cash, and he admits that he failed to return or pay taxes on $168.60 of it. Small? Yes; but he admits that plain violation of the law. He only denies the $7,500 which Francis paid him in cashnot in a lot, for that was an afterthought 5 years later. Any taxpayer knows that after evading the payment of income tax, if given 5 years to make up an explanation, a good one will be forthcoming. Judge Ritter desired to conceal this $7.500 for several reasons. He knew that if he scheduled that as a fee either in 1929 or 1931 it would have proved him guilty of practicing law after he went on the bench. He hoped to "get by" without returning this item of taxable income, for thereby he would save the amount of the tax thereon, would not run the risk of having to divide it with his partner, and would escape impeachment for practicing law while on the bench.

What is his belated and labored excuse? He says, "Oh, it was a gift in 1929." But in 1934 he swore it was a fee. How does he justify it? He says, "I invested that money, $7,500, in a lot, and I did it with the understanding that I was to build on that lot. Then, after the death of my lamented friend, I consulted with his widow, and she freed me of that responsibility and said, 'I knew'"—just as she said in her testimony which was read here today in her absence-"I knew that Mr. Francis considered it partly as a gift and partly in payment for your services."

Judge Ritter said, "All right; I will take it and wipe out any claim I have against him for services." Then he said, "I believed from that moment that any money I got out of

But you did not return it as income of 1931, even after you became so conscious. Why? "I did not return it," says the judge, "because I had not then sold the lot." Very plausible. But you remember the next question: "You had not sold it in 1934, either, when you did return it?" And he said, "No; I had not."

So his excuses fail. He cannot escape the fact that a part of his taxable income was not returned. He admits that himself. So much for that. He did evade the payment of the tax to the Government.

He denies that the Francis transaction was returnable. We submit that it was, and that his amended return in 1934, where he scheduled it himself in his words and swore to it as an attorney's fee, shows that it was properly returnable in 1929. Therefore he is guilty on that charge.

He admits also, categorically, in so many words, on page 5384 of the Record, that he failed to schedule in his 1930 income-tax return any part of the $5,300 of earned income over and above his salary for that year. If you can make heads or tails out of his 1930 income-tax return you can do more than anyone I have seen. But whether it be deducible that he owed a tax or not under his 1930 return, he admits that he concealed $5,300 of taxable income by failing to show it by even the scratch of a pen.

Gentlemen, having run rapidly through those five articles, I want to come now to the two others. I come now to discuss very briefly the Whitehall case. I want to call your attention to a thing which is utterly abhorrent to any standard of ethics known to any bar with which most of us are familiar. The first thing that looms large on the horizon in the consideration of that case is that the client was solicited for Rankin with his knowledge and consent. That alone, to my way of thinking, makes it a champertous and iniquitous transaction. The duty of lawyers is not to foment litigation, or to have others do it for them, but their duty is to keep down litigation wherever possible. That is a well-known, cardinal principle of professional duty and ethics.

We find, in the next place, that that client, so solicited for him with his knowledge and consent, Bert E. Holland, wired to him on October 10 not to file the bill of complaint in his name. Did he pay attention to that? Not at all. Although on October 10 Rankin wired Bert Holland that he had the bill ready and would file it "tomorrow or the next day", after receiving that reply wire from Holland he waited until the 11th, and then wired him, "I filed it yesterday afternoon." Yes; it had left Palm Beach. It may have reached Miami some time during the 11th before he sent that wire, but he admits, and you know, that it was locked up, or being confidentially guarded for the 10 days that Judge Ritter tarried in New York. Rankin admits under oath that he had the absolute control over it, and could have withdrawn the bill at any moment; and he could have done so.

But instead of obeying the instruction of his client, he said, "Here is my chance. I have a week or 10 days now to tear around and solicit other clients to thwart the will of Bert E. Holland, my only client." So he said that Walter Richardson solicited Kirkland and Shopps to intervene, although Rankin himself swore to the intervention for them. He says that he himself suggested the name of and got his own brother-in-law, A. H. Hill, of Alabama, to intervene, and that he swore that he owned that $3,800 worth of bonds, although he knew that was not true. So we have not only Rankin permitting others to do dishonorable and unethical things in his behalf, but now we have him doing it himself and admitting the crookedness here under oath.

We have him then, although he had on the 16th of October wired Bert Holland that he would not file an application for receiver for him—we have Rankin then filing in court and swearing to interventions for these three parties. We have him violating, and Judge Ritter participating in it, rule 22 of Judge Ritter's own court's rules of practice, because no notice was given to anybody. They had no right to intervene under article 7, or article 8, or any other article of the deed of trust, or laws of Florida. So the lawyers who testified in this case tell you.

So here we have the case, conceived in champerty, filed in defiance of his client's will, interventions conceived and delivered in fraud, and sworn to with the knowledge of perjury at the time the pen was touched to paper, and Rankin admits it. Those facts were presented by McPherson to Judge Ritter on the bench in his court on October 28, that is, with regard to the activities of Walter Richardson, and the telegrams and letters, soliciting those interveners. I do not mean with respect to A. H. Hill. There is no evidence that that was brought to his attention. Yet with those facts presented to him, we have Judge Ritter saying, "Why, that does not make any difference. That does not disqualify him." He appointed this man Richardson over the protest of McPherson and in spite of the evidence produced before him there.

We have Mr. Bert E. Holland, who came in there telling Judge Ritter that he wanted to withdraw or stop the suit, and five witnesses who were there, each corroborated what Mr. Holland said about it. Mr. Holland is so careful of the truth that he would not swear positively that he used the word "dismissed", but four out of the other five witnesses do swear it. He got his idea across to the judge. But what happened? In aid of that conspiracy that had been brewed Judge Ritter said: "The time has come for me to take a hand in this matter. If my coconspirators are to get the benefit of this case, I have got to step in and act positively."

So he said to Mr. Holland: "You folk from out of the State cannot file suits in this court and then come in and ask for dismissal."

Bert Holland was the only man who could, the only man who had the legal right to do it. A little later, Lautmann, representing 93 percent of all the bondholders, tried to protest, but Judge Ritter most postively and abruptly denied the request, and in language—so say McPherson and the others there: "I would not say that his language was respectful."

The judge ordered him to sit down when he was trying to voice the sentiments of 93 percent of all the bondholders. So there is the picture.

The thing goes merrily on. Not one word has been shown of any legal activity or services which Rankin rendered during the course of that case. He admits that Ernest Metcalf drew the rough draft of the original bill, and then he dictated it to a stenographer, incorporating any changes that might have occurred to him in conference with Melcalf.

Gentlemen, there is the picture. They go on up to the concluding chapter in this drama. Seventy-five thousand dollars allowed as a fee, and the only observation which I will take time to make as to that is to ask you if you think that A. L. Rankin, of whom we have made profert before you, is a $75,000-a-year man, much less a $90,000-a-year man. I am not going to insult your intelligence by arguing to you that he is worth the money. But we submit that it was a champertous case to start with, and champerty alone should deny him the right to any fee. With respect to the work that he has detailed as being done, although there are many papers filed, 90 percent of them are filed by the receiver and his attorney and for petitions for Rankin's fees to be allowed and paid pendente lite. So he is not entitled to even 10 percent of the fee allowed, because he did practically no work—took no testimony, made no fight.

The mere fact that he agreed to split his fee in half and divide it up among the opposing and other counsel in the case, shows conclusively that his services were not the basis of the allowance of that exorbitant fee.

And so it goes. You have had the testimony of man after man that there is no such thing, in a foreclosure case, under the law of Florida, as a conservation fee, and you have conclusive evidence in this case that there was no conservation of anything save for the benefit of the conspirators, each of whom, if you will pardon the expression, got a cut of the swag. That is the case, gentlemen.

This is not the case of a stupid fool ignorantly erring. It is the case of a judge on the bench, of proud lineage, they say, with a distinguished career in Colorado, elevated to the bench in Florida, transacting business in the calm, cool, suave way which he displayed before you on the witness stand, a man of outstanding intellect, as is evidenced by the speech he made to you in testifying.

That man cannot be excused as ignorant. His ability is proven by the fact that he has adroitly and plausibly explained and tried to cover up his guilt in every one of the five or six cases in which he has been caught committing impeachable offenses.

I beg of you that you consider the dignity, the grandeur, the honor of the bench. This man's crimes and misdemeanors would be heinous if they had been committed against one follow man, but he has sinned against the bench he occupied and, therefore, against all the people of the United States. This man, we say in the concluding charge, which has nothing whatever to do with the others, has by reason of his conduct, both officially and privately, brought disrepute upon the bench. Confidence in the administration of justice in his court has gone forever. If doubt once enters the mind, confidence may never be restored.

We ask you to convict, not in passion, not in prejudice, but because the evidence in this case proves conclusively, beyond any peradventure or shadow of doubt, what we maintain.

The clinching argument, which will be made in conclusion on the part of the managers by my distinguished conferee and friend, will demonstrate his guilt of each and every one of these charges. We pray you that the consideration you shall give may be, as we are sure it will be, in the spirit of high duty, nobly done. The restoration and preservation of the respect for the bench is in your hands. You fix the standard by which judicial conduct is measured. Justice lives or dies by your decisions. Pull down the pillars of this temple, and we all perish. Whatever your conclusion may be rests in the sound and enlightened discretion of Your Honors. In the performance of your duty, according to the high standard, which we feel sure is fixed in every mind in this Chamber, you shall know no fear nor favor. We reiterate that our confidence in the case we have made is unmeasured, and we commit it to you confidently in the hope that the services we have rendered, according to the mandate of the House and in the name of the House and all the people of the United States, may not be unavailing to purge the bench of this man who, the evidence in this case, we respectfully submit, shows, has disgraced it.

For right is right, as God is God!
And right the day must win!
To doubt would be disloyalty!
To falter would be sin!

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Do the managers on the part of the House desire to make further argument at this time?

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Mr. President, the managers reserve the balance of the time allotted to them for the conclusion of the argument in this matter.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Counsel on behalf of the respondent have the opportunity to proceed with their argument at the present time.

ARGUMENT ON BEHALF OF RESPONDENT BY FRANK P. WALSH, ESQ

Mr. WALSH (of counsel). Mr. President and Members of the Court of Impeachment, it would take a man bolder than myself to come before this Court hoping to meet the expectation of a tribunal consisting, in such very great measure, of lawyers who have acquitted themselves at the bar before becoming Members of the greatest legislative body in the world, sitting upon this occasion as a Court higher in authority, more sweeping in its judgments than any other known to the Constitution of the United States.

I do not feel that I can do very much to enlighten the Court, yet I wish to discuss, fairly and impassionately, the evidence in this case, and to that I will address myself if I have the intelligence and strength to do so.

We have a right to look into the surroundings; we have a right to look into the background not only of this case but of this man. I go back briefly to his career in Colorado. He was not one who devoted himself to the material profits of the law or to practice of the law exclusively; but he came of that group of lawyers, represented by many of those in whose presence I am appearing this afternoon, who give something to the public, who give something to their fellow men.

Judge Ritter has assumed in every community in which he has lived a leadership in those activities which, I believe, the world agrees are commendable on the part of a lawyer. He was selected by the Governor of Colorado as a member of the first public service commission of the State. He was the lawyer member of that commission. In 30 years of honorable practice in Denver, he rose to the leadership of the bar, and all the while engaged in public activities of a voluntary character, with the spirit of a man who looked beyond his own law office, beyond material gain, beyond the victory of the courtroom, to the upbuilding of those things which solidify a community.

Now, I am going to meet, if I possibly can, every issue that has arisen in this case. I believe I have in my mind and heart this afternoon what every Member of this Court has. We talk about other things, but always in my mind has been the question of the $5,000 paid by Rankin. Other things need explanation; other things I will be glad to discuss, if I have the power and time to do so here this afternoon, but I could not proceed with that in my mind without referring to it now.

One man paid another man $5,000. The man who received payment was a judge of one of the highest courts in christendom. He took the $5,000, and he said that it was for a debt, honestly contracted; that it was for an obligation voluntarily assumed on both sides; he said it was for the sale of a business. Now, I wish to lay down the proposition, and I will discuss it fully later, that when Judge Ritter took that money he sold his business or he sold his soul. I want to meet that question fairly and squarely before this assemblage. I would remind the Court as I stand here today that, while in my argument I sum up from the testimony, Judge Ritter has stood on this platform and exposed the innermost recesses of his heart. He raised his hand and took another oath, a very solemn one before this Court, and if he did not tell the truth, then to the despicable crime of corruption in office he added perjury.

The gentleman who preceded me said that the House managers, after 3 years of investigation, only "caught" acts of wrongdoing in four or five cases. I know that he would not intend to leave that insinuation. I will take what the Presiding Officer of this Court said when I took some exception to something else that had been brought in; that this is too high a body, these judges are too alive and sensible to their duty and to the great responsibility that devolves upon them to take an insinuation that this man committed some crime from which he escaped, that he committed some crime that was undiscoverable and that is not charged in the articles of impeachment. The truth is that they searched the record in this case from the day he went upon that bench until the day we meet these gentlemen in Miami, as appears from the evidence.

They took his bank account for every month and every day and every year, and for the same period they took his wife's bank account. They took his correspondence. They took the correspondence not only of Judge Ritter but they took the correspondence of everybody who might have been connected with him and which would have shown anything wrong or anything disgraceful. I am not going to characterize the suggestion that he committed some unnamed crime and escaped, but I am going to say that, on the basis of that record, with those documents, with all that correspondence, with all those books, with all those bank accounts, it has been demonstrated that this is an honorable and upright man who has been subjected to perhaps the most searching investigation of a member of the judiciary in the whole history of the United States.

If I depart from the evidence in this case I shall beg the pardon of my adversaries and feel, as well, that I should receive the condemnation of this honorable Court. But I must say now that there is nothing in evidence; there is not a line in all the correspondence that justly points the finger of suspicion at him, though no effort was spared to find something to his discredit. He was sitting on the bench in a community that went through two depressions and two periods of recovery; and if this man is a mystery, if this man would sell his soul, he has had an opportunity to acquire hundreds of thousands of dollars, instead of placing himself in the power of another man, giving away all that men love and hold dear, giving away all that he struggled for, the respect of his community, the respect of his wife and family, giving away everything for $5,000, to be paid on the installment plan.

There is one suspicious circumstance in the matter of the $5,000 payment, and only one, and that is that it was taken in cash. I will call attention to the elements in that transaction which, to my mind, at least, show that the truth has been told about it, but I should like, if I can possibly do so, to come to it in an orderly way and discuss the testimony that has been presented here.

I am not here to praise Judge Ritter, but I saw something manly in him the other day. I believe that a judge charged with corruption in a case who could not be aroused in the middle of the night and go before his fellow men and vindicate himself and tell the truth about it ought to come in here and plead guilty. He would not be fit to sit upon any bench otherwise. This man comes here and waives every right of a respondent on trial and takes the stand himself

I am not going to waste time in trying to answer the argument that he skipped something. That argument is not in consonance with the argument that he is a brilliant and skillful man, that he should come in and read something to the Court and omit something else. Those of you who were here will recall that many of the witnesses were interrogated on the contents of the trust deed itself.

I objected at the time on the ground that the trust deed was the best evidence, but the Presiding Officer overruled my objection, so the first opportunity I had, you will recall, I produced the documents covering everything that took place in this case and read it into the Record.

It was I who read section 7, not Judge Ritter. I read it as a whole, and I read it for the purpose of commenting upon it. I may be wrong about it and the judge may be wrong about it, but in my opinion he had a right to do everything he did there at the hearing on the receivership on October 28, 1929. I would not place my judgment against that of any other lawyer who has a different view, but I do say that under the circumstances there I believe from the evidence that he had a sound basis in law for everything he did.

Up to that point there is not a word said against this man, not a breath of dishonor, not a breath of corruption. You will recall a great deal of evidence has been put in the Record as to what preceded that meeting when a receiver was appointed. I am going to try to discuss it as briefly as possible, but what happened before that time is a very important piece of history in this case.

I lay down the definition of what a champertous proceeding is, and I say again that this proceeding had no element of champerty in it whatsoever—and why? Because the men who originated this suit, who fought for it, had the greatest interest in the case that anyone had, that any group or any corporation had, save and except the first-mortgage bondholders, who held $2,500,000 worth of bonds.

We must go back of this hearing to see the filmsiness of the charge that any lawyer, in a conspiracy with a judge, fomented this litigation. Mr. Rankin has been paraded on the witness stand to support that charge, which is disproven by every line of sworn testimony in the record of this case. I certainly would not try to be humorous about it, but there must be in your minds what is in my mind, that is, that he is the world's worst witness and he is very slow pay! [Laughter.]

I am sure you will remember how Mr. Rankin came into association with Judge Ritter. Judge Ritter had taken the bar examination at Tallahassee and there he met Rankin. The exigencies of life brought Judge Ritter there. He was not an interloper; he came to Florida on account of his wife's health and went on with the practice of his profession. Rankin was at about the same age as Judge Ritter, he was reputed to be a good common-law lawyer, and Florida, unlike Colorado, where Judge Ritter had practiced for 30 years, was a common-law State.

During the 2 years Judge Ritter was in that partnership it was conducted properly. Here were two men in their fifties, starting like boys, starting like Judge Ritter did, first with his father in Indianapolis, then in Denver. In the second year they had a net of around $10,000 profit out of their firm and had at the end of 2 years a long list of cases, according to the evidence which has been introduced here.

During all that time Judge Ritter kept the books. There was no question about that. If it had not been true these gentlemen representing the House would surely have shown it to you here.

Everything that went before the Whitehall case, both after he was on the bench and prior to his going on the bench, has been shown to you. He had no reason to believe, and no notice had been brought to him of any kind, that Judge Rankin was not fair and honest in his dealings.

The Whitehall property was already in court and in bankruptcy when Judge Ritter took office in February 1929, the third mortgage was foreclosed and the property sold for $2,600. That gave the man that bid it in, one of the Moores, the title to that property for $2,600.

The evidence shows that the Moores were planning to foreclose the second mortgage, still doing nothing about the first mortgage. H. E. Bemis and Martin Sweeny, the actual managers and original owners of the Whitehall Hotel, were opposed to that scheme; they were determined to retain control of their own property and to organize the bondholders under the first mortgage who had invested out of faith in their good name and reputation.

Martin Sweeny is named here as a coconspirator with the respondent. You heard him on the stand; he needs no defense from anyone. You know the sort of man his partner, Mr. Bemis, was. You know that everyone in this case that said anything of him at all showed that he was a man of parts, a good businessman, a loyal citizen, and a fine friend.

Mr. Rankin was asked here, in a searching and sarcastic cross-examination, whether he did not know that the Moores were trying to prevent a receivership to save a large amount of money. I am going to talk from the evidence now, and say that was not the purpose at all. I will say that what they were doing—and I am going to put it straight and boldly—was trying to steal the property, and that fact is established by the evidence that has been produced here.

Why do I say that? Martin Sweeny and Mr. Bemis and Ed Sweeny put in $437,000, buying that place. They were the ones, when the hurricane came, who endorsed the notes for $75,000. They were standing there in Florida, making a fight to hold that property.

What was Moore's proposition to them? The testimony about what happened to the Moores afterward—I shall not refer to it here—is a part of the record of the Congress and of the criminal records of the United States. Moore came and made a proposal—it was read here—that they would organize a corporation with a capital stock of $25,000 to take over and manage this concern, and he proposed to them that they go in and divide the profits in three ways. You heard me ask Martin Sweeny what Moore was to do for that. He said, "Give advice, I suppose."

Moore had gone in there, and if those men had not been men of energy and capacity and honesty, and entitled to credit from backers who had faith and confidence in their ability, he would have ruined them. Those mortgages were all mortgages that came out of the building, and the corporation that did the building was owned by the Moores. Moore went to them and proposed to take over that property and operate it.

Moore proposed to get up this corporation and he was to have half the profits, and the Sweenys and Mr. Bemis were to have the other half. Moore was to get control, and simply because they refused to yield, I do not believe it is just to drag Mr. Bemis out of the grave—because he is the man under whose direction Mr. Rankin was employed—to drag him out of the grave, with his fine reputation, and to denounce Martin Sweeny, the one who is alive, as conspirators in bringing a champertous proceeding! When the proposition was made, these men refused it. You can see what they said. It is all in writing in the correspondence which forms a part of the record in evidence.

Gentlemen of the Court, I do not know how you feel about the matter, but I do not rely very much on the testimony of anybody who claims to have a memory as to statements made in court or elsewhere, unless there is some document to back it up to show that the verity is there.

The documents are in this case. Moore wrote a letter to Sweeny when Mr. Bemis was in Paris. He knew the relationship of these men, and the letter was cleverly worded; but as sure, I believe, as I am facing you gentlemen he intended to corrupt those two young men. Mr. Martin Sweeny took that letter to his counsel, and, in indignation, told him to write a letter in reply that that man would understand. There is no use using the language here again. They did so; and so the fight went on over the control of that hotel. These men wanted it, because it was theirs. These men wanted it—when I say "these men" I mean the Sweenys and Mr. Bemis—because they had put in all of this money, an original investment of $437,000, and lost their $140,000.

They did something more than that, as shown by the evidence in this case. It was the name of Bemis, the names of Martin and Ed. Sweeny, that enabled them to book these wealthy people in the North to go down and stay at that great hotel; and they had a right to do that. They had a right to protect their own interests. They had a right to protect their own names, because many people throughout this country—many of those 7,000 bondholders depended upon them, and I do not believe I exaggerate when I say, judging from the evidence here, that none of them believed in Mr. Moore.

In that situation, after a conflict of months, Holland comes into this case. He inquires of Richardson as to whether the conditions of the first mortgage are being maintained. "Are they making the payments?"

Richardson was then trustee in bankruptcy—not by the election of Judge Ritter, who did not come into office for months afterward, but by choice of the creditors, confirmed by the then judge of the court—Richardson wrote Holland and recommended Metcalf & Hiatt as a firm of lawyers to consult on the rights of first-mortgage bondholders.

Mr. Holland went to Martin Sweeny in New York. Sweeny, acting with Bemis, wanted to get all the bonds he could. They got the bonds that were afterward put in Mr. Rankin's name. In this whole case you would think it was Mr. Rankin who is being tried. The judge knew absolutely nothing at all about those things. He has sworn to God that he knows nothing about them, and there is no witness who has come forward and given any facts at all to contradict him.

Holland made a fair agreement with Martin Sweeny and agreed to become a member of an independent bondholders' committee to perform the thing that the Sweenys wanted to do and Mr. Bemis wanted to do to foreclose the first mortgage. Martin Sweeny and his brother and Mr. Bemis agreed that they would guarantee the payment of $200,000, which would have paid the interest on the bonds, and not ask for any salaries until they paid that interest out of their successful management of the hotel.

Holland's name was put on that list and sent down to Florida.

It was in Mr. Sweeny's office in New York that the contract was made. It was in Mr. Sweeny's office that Mr. Holland arranged for the employment and the sending of the bonds and their numbers and the data for the suit to Mr. Rankin.

Mention is made of the fact that Rankin put some of the bonds used for the intervenors in the name of his brother-in-law. The judge did not know about that. It has been held over and over again that there is nothing improper about transferring or assigning an obligation either to get into a Federal court or to get out of a Federal court.

Let us see what occurred at the hearing on October 28. Holland had asked in his letter to Rankin October 3 that the suit be hurried, and Holland gave the same reason Sweeny did. Why should it be hurried? It should be hurried because the season would open and unless they acted at once they would lose the bookings which were being held up in New York.

Mr. Sweeny, at the request of Mr. Bemis, had recommended Mr. Rankin as the lawyer to file the Holland bill, as a cross suit for the benefit of all first-mortgage bondholders. Mr. Bemis may have known, or thought, as many a layman does, that it would be good to hire a man who had been in partnership with a judge. Many of you probably have had partnerships with men who were judges before or after the partnership. I have stated what might have been the case, but if that was the case the judge did not know it. He was cut off absolutely from any knowledge and cannot be charged with any responsibility with regard to it. He knew nothing about the case until it came before him in open court.

The charge in the article of impeachment is that Rankin went to New York in company with Richardson while the judge was on the bench in Brooklyn and upon that visit he conspired to bring this action into court. It is the positive evidence that Richardson never saw the judge about it and never spoke to him in regard to it. Three witnesses have sworn, in uncontradicted testimony, that there was no discussion of the case between Judge Ritter and Rankin. Remember, this was on the 24th of September. If you want to conjecture, or to entertain a suspicion, and an unworthy one, of course, there is nothing to prevent you from exercising that right; but I ask you as a Court not to allow the suspicions of an investigator, and not to allow the conjectures of anyone to take the place of positive evidence.

There is not a word of evidence that such a conference took place, so that charge is wiped out unless the Court can be induced to take mere conjecture or suspicion and place it against sworn testimony. According to all the uncontradicted testimony, none of those men ever talked to Judge Ritter about it; none of them saw him about it. Rankin went there for an express purpose; it was to have an order signed in the Highland Glades Drainage District case. The order was prepared, and Tucker, the receiver, went with him. They went there for an express purpose, and it is shown by the fact that the order was signed by Judge Ritter upon that very date. That could not have been a simulated thing, that could not have been a manufactured thing, because it is a part of the court record in an important case.

Then these men were interrogated here—I thought irrelevantly. Rankin was interrogated as to what that order was about. I do not know why that was done, but it appeared to me that it was to leave the impression that it was a bad order, that it was an order which should not have been made, that it was to reduce the taxes which should not have been reduced. That was exploded. It was an order to reduce taxes, but because later they did not take the advice of the man who originated the order, involving a compromise, and therefore the taxes were lost altogether.

The House manager who preceded me has intimated that in the receivership suit the lawyers got together and looted the revenues of the Whitehall Hotel. I cannot believe that of the men who were involved in this matter. Rankin is an humble sort. He had not been there practicing in Florida very long. Counsel would not have you believe, I am sure that Shutts & Bowen, who got a very considerable part of that fee, went in there to loot anything or to rob anybody of anything. They would not have you believe, certainly, that Mr. Loftin, later the president of the American Bar Association, or Judge Stokes, or Senator Calkins would go in there to rob anyone or to do something that was wrong.

I do not believe it, and I know that not a shred of testimony has been introduced in this case which would directly, or by any proper inference, indicate that Judge Ritter had any knowledge of such a plan or that he contributed to such a result by any act on the bench or off the bench.

His word alone should settle that, because that alone would be enough in any court to upset any conjecture or suspicion or inference. He says he was surprised when at the hearing Mr. Holland, the plaintiff, whom he did not know, was introduced by the lawyer for the defendant.

I am not very strong in the belief that Mr. Lautmann, or Mr. Grill, the young insurance man, or Mr. Fordham, could come in 6 years afterward, where the line of demarcation was so close as to whether a man said on a certain occasion, "I want the case to stand as it is", or "I want to dismiss the case", and say with certainty what Holland did at that hearing. I cannot believe that, on a line so weak as that, so dim as that, it is proper to take the belief-because it then becomes a matter of belief-of some person who heard the words something like 5 or 6 years ago.

Mr. McPherson, of the firm of Shutts & Bowen, goes on the stand here and says that he thinks Mr. Holland said he wanted to dismiss the case, but that he--McPhersonwould not be sure of anything except that Mr. Holland was there to see that they should not appoint a receiver.

Now, why should they not appoint a receiver? What was in the judge's mind at the time? He had a duty to perform, and on that occasion he had to go by the bill of complaint. He interrogates the gentleman who got up. He did not know Holland's background at that time, about his agreement with Martin Sweeny, about Holland's joining the bondholders' committee, and the letters he had sent.

There is no doubt that Holland, freely and willingly, and of his own accord, without fomenting anything, or inciting any human being, went into that matter and, on the advice of Martin Sweeny, asked Rankin to bring the suit. On that point there is not a word of countervailing evidence in the

The record here shows that after Holland entered into that agreement they formed a general bondholders' committee at Chicago, to take over the bonds of the Moore chain of hotels that went all over the United States. Sugden-the employer of Holland-was placed upon that committee, and Holland was appointed to a position out of which he received, he said, his pay from the persons for whom he was trustee. The judge, of course, knew nothing about that. Neither did Rankin. So Rankin sent Holland the telegram which you heard read in evidence, repeating the reason that Holland had theretofore given him about the opening of the hotel and the urgency of the matter. It will prevent reading all of this correspondence to refer to Holland's testimony before this Court.

I asked him the following:

Q. In answer to the wire that you sent Mr. Rankin—he sent you a wire, did he not?—A. Yes.

Q. In which he urged reasons why you should not refrain from filing the suit?—A. Yes.

Q. And you took those into consideration?—A. Yes.

Q. And then you sent him a telegram telling him to let the matter remain just as it was, but not to have a receiver appointed?—A. I did.

(That telegram was read in evidence.)

Q. Yes. So when you started down there, the matter was in status quo, was it not?—A. Well, that was the standing of the matter; yes.

Q. That was the standing of that matter until you got down there, was it not? Is that correct?—A. Yes.

I took him on further cross-examination to the record in which he had testified before the Judiciary Committee of the House in Miami in 1933. I asked him:

Q. You did not ask Judge Ritter to dismiss this suit?—A. I am not certain that I did or did not.

Then I read from his testimony before the House committee, in which he testified that he had said he wanted the case to remain just as it was and in which he made the following statement:

I stated to the judge that I wished nothing further done in that particular case that I wished the case to remain just as it was.

In the testimony here the other day I asked Mr. Holland: Q. Did you tell him that?—A. If the record so states, I suppose

Q. I am just reading this to refresh your memory. It is not a matter of contradiction. Do you now remember that that is what you stated?—A. I so assume.

The answer to the Whitehall Building & Operating Co. had been filed. That answer backed up the charge of fraud, and asked for the appointment of a receiver. Mr. McPherson, of the firm of Shutts & Bowen, protested against the appointment of a receiver. He did not want a receiver. Moore was operating the new bondholders' committee which Mr. Holland had gotten into. They wanted no receiver for the same reason that they wanted no receiver when they talked to Martin Sweeny about the matter. They wanted to take charge of that great property themselves. But Sweeny and Bemis wanted no such thing. They wanted to get control of the property to save themselves and the bondholders.

I desire to say, in passing, that I am afraid my brother upon the other side inadvertently thinks some of his questions were testimony. The question was asked whether a mortgage of $300,000 was not afterward put upon that property; and my recollection of the testimony is that the witness of whom he asked it said he knew of no such thing. I have gone through the record, and I think all that was said about that so-called mortgage was the question as to whether or not it was put on the property.

We know reasonably well what took place in the courtroom. Nothing was said about champerty; but when Mr. McPherson saw that the judge, who lived in West Palm Beach and who knew something about the property, was intent upon appointing a receiver, he came back after lunch with the proposition that they should appoint Mr. Bemis.

As I said, Sweeny and Bemis were consenting to this matter. When McPherson came back in the afternoon he brought two letters. I am not going into those letters again. I will have to ask you gentlemen of the Court to be content with your memory, unless you want some particular ones read, because it is very difficult for us who have sat at that table and who have worked day and night with this matter to carry all of it in our heads. However, I will say that the two letters put in evidence, if read alone without the context, might perhaps indicate that the lawyers were gotten into the case solely and alone by Mr. Richardson or Mr. Bemis, or both of them.

But after the body of those letters came in-not nearly all of them, but those which told the true story, which recreated the context of what was going on, and the effort that was being made-when those letters came in, the matter was made very plain.

Now, I wish again to refer to the subject of the receivership. Judge Ritter, who testified positively that he knew nothing about it in advance of the hearing, had every reason to believe that what was finally done there was satisfactory to all concerned, to Mr. Bemis, who had the experience the year before with Mr. Richardson, and who said that he would not take the receivership himself.

Mr. McPherson filed his answer and his cross-bill; and in his answer and cross-bill he asked for the identical relief. He denied the fraud, the antagonism of the trustee under the trust deed to the bondholders in the first trust deed and to the owners; but he came back and asked for the identical thing that the others asked for.

There was no champerty present. There was no such thing as a stranger to that case coming in, which would have been necessary to constitute champerty, without any reason except to profit after paying out money to carry on the litigation with an agreement that he should get from the fruits of the litigation, if successful, division of the property, either in real estate or cash. There was no such thing at all. It did not exist.

The managers asked the witness question after question. "Would you say that that was a proper fee if a man solicited a case? Would you say it was a proper fee if he did this or did that?" Well, the judge knew nothing of any solicitation or any of the other alleged acts leading up to the filing of the bill. The manager was examining on a predicate that did not exist. There was no champerty in it. If there had been champerty all they would have had to do in the beginning-I do not care when it was, even right down to writing the final decree—all they would have to do was to come in and show it; and, as Judge Davis said, they not only would have been removed from that case but they would have been subject to prosecution and to disbarment from their profession.

When that case was started it was started in the name of Bert E. Holland and others. From the common experience that we all have at the bar, we know that once the title is given to a case it remains there until the case is finished. There may be several defendants in a case; there may be several plaintiffs in it; but so long as that case is on the calendar the title of the case remains unchanged.

Mr. Rankin was examined and cross-examined. He was not our witness, but we, of course, readily yielded to the gentlemen on the other side the propriety of using him as a hostile witness and to cross-examine him as though he was our witness. When he was pressed on these questions, the most obvious thing that appeared to me, that might have been to his credit or discredit was that he did not seem to be able to answer.

I am going to say this much in his behalf. I could tell from the way he acted—and I have no doubt the Members of the Court could tell—that he is a man who is very hard of hearing, and he seemed to be trying to follow the lips as he went along. Many times I observed, as I think probably the members of the Court did, that he answered before he had a clear understanding of the question which was asked him.

Rankin came in after a receiver was appointed and made a request for a conservation fee. Judge Ritter allowed a nominal advance of $2.500.

Judge Ritter referred the matter of fixing the total amount of the conservation fee to Judge Akerman. So Rankin went to Judge Akerman, and Judge Akerman comes in here now and says that he signed the order without reading it closely; but there is the order. The order states upon its face that Rankin is to get that fee for services rendered up to that date in bringing the assets into court and nothing else.

Judge Akerman signed that order; and I want to suggest to the Court, in all justice, that being the case, it would not be fair to charge the $15,000 fee against Judge Ritter. Judge Ritter could not assume and would not assume that Judge Akerman would sign that order without reading it carefully; that he would not read the brief that the lawyer in the case presented to him. He testified that Rankin had a brief but he did not pay any attention to it; that he paid no attention to the application; that he paid no attention to the brief, and he paid no attention to the order which he signed. I offer no criticism of Judge Akerman; but I do say that it is fair to ask the Court, when it goes into its deliberation, not to use that against Judge Ritter.

This is a peculiar sort of case, not only as a case of impeachment but a peculiar case in the history of the jurisprudence of the country. Charges of favoritism are made here against Judge Ritter which would have no weight in an argument upon the stump and which are entitled to no consideration at all in a court of justice.

Judge Ritter did not bring Rankin into the Whitehall case. Rankin was selected by parties over whom the judge did not exercise a vestige of control.

The fundamental and underlying job of a lawyer in a foreclosure case is to transform a mortgage securing a debt into a fee-simple title to a piece of real estate. That is the underlying reason for the payment of fees to the lawyers engaged to obtain foreclosure of the property.

If that is not done right, if every move is not attended to, if anything essential is omitted, it may be that in a generation or two generations from the time title was thus secured or thus created, there will appear a cloud on the title which, on a building like that would be disclosed as a defect costing hundreds of thousands of dollars to correct.

You gentlemen heard the reading from the testimony given in Florida that Rankin did nothing from the time he filed the bill until the final decree. Everything that came into the case had to be examined.

We brought the whole record here. Down to the day the decree was entered there were 174 separate papers filed. More than one-half of them were filed by Rankin himself. With the others he had something to do, to pass on them or otherwise.

Now we come down to the making of the final decree.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, at this point I should like to inquire whether it would suit counsel to suspend his argument this evening at 5:15 o'clock and resume in the morning?

Mr. WALSH (of counsel). Yes; it would not only suit me and be very agreeable but I should like very much to do it. I am hurrying through the argument as rapidly as possible, but I am afraid that to conclude will take the balance of the time so generously given me.

Mr. ROBINSON. Would counsel like to suspend now?

Mr. WALSH (of counsel). I think it would be well, because it is now almost the time the Senator has suggested for suspending.

ADJOURNMENT FOR DAY AND ORDER FOR SESSIONS ON TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate, sitting for the trial of the articles of impeachment, do now adjourn until 12 o'clock noon tomorrow; that when the Senate, in legislative session, concludes its business today it take a recess until 12 o'clock noon tomorrow; and that at not later than 2 o'clock p. m. tomorrow, the Senate, sitting for the trial of the articles of impeachment, and the Senate, as in legislative session, take a recess until 12 o'clock noon on Wednesday next.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the order is made.

Thereupon (at 5 o'clock and 5 minutes p. m.) the Senate, sitting for the trial of the articles of impeachment, under the order previously entered, adjourned until tomorrow, Tuesday, April 14, 1936, at 12 o'clock meridian.

LEGISLATIVE SESSION

The Senate proceeded to the consideration of legislative business.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, before the Senate recesses under the order previously made, we should like to have a brief legislative session for the convenience of Senators who have more or less routine business to transact.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senate is in legislative session for the transaction of legislative business.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT AND THE HOUSE

(During the impeachment proceedings, on motion of Mr. Robinson, the proceedings were suspended so that, as in legislative session, the Senate might receive messages from the President of the United States and the House of Representatives. The messages follow:)

Messages in writing from the President of the United States were communicated to the Senate by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries, who also announced that the President had approved and signed the following acts and joint resolution:

On March 18, 1936:

S. 37. An act authorizing the Comptroller General of the United States to settle and adjust the claims of subcontractors and material men for material and labor furnished in the construction of a post-office and courthouse building at Rutland, Vt.:

S. 1470. An act to provide a preliminary examination of Spokane River and its tributaries in the State of Idaho, with a view to the control of their floods;

S. 2889. An act for the relief of the Bend Garage Co. and the First National Bank of Chicago;

S. 3281. An act to amend the act of February 16, 1929, entitled "An act to amend the act entitled 'An act to readjust the pay and allowances of the commissioned and enlisted personnel of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Coast Guard, Coast and Geodetic Survey, and the Public Health Service', approved June 10, 1922, as amended";

S. 3453. An act limiting the operation of sections 109 and 113 of the Criminal Code and section 190 of the Revised Statutes of the United States with respect to certain counsel; and

S. J. Res. 165. Joint resolution directing the Architect of the Capitol to accept a copy of the painting, "Liev Eiriksson Discovers America." On March 19, 1936:

S. 1307. An act to establish the Homestead National Monument of America in Gage County, Nebr.;

S. 2664. An act to aid in defraying the expenses of the third triennial meeting of the Associated Country Women of the World, to be held in this country in June 1936; and

S. 3173. An act for the relief of certain formerly enlisted members of Battery D, One Hundred and Ninety-seventh Coast Artillery (antiaircraft), New Hampshire National Guard.

On March 20, 1936:

S. 2603. An act to provide for the adjustment and settlement of certain claims arising out of the activities of the Federal Bureau of Investigation; and

S. 3978. An act relating to taxation of shares of preferred stock, capital notes, and debentures of banks while owned by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and reaffirming their immunity.

On March 21, 1936:

S. 2625. An act to extend the facilities of the Public Health Service to seamen on Government vessels not in the Military or Naval Establishments.

On March 31, 1936:

S. 3424. An act to continue Electric Home and Farm Authority as an agency of the United States until February 1937, and for other purposes; and

S. 3699. An act to authorize the coinage of 50-cent pieces in commemoration of the fiftieth anniversary of Cincinnati, Ohio, as a center of music, and its contribution to the art of music for the past 50 years.

On April 3, 1936:

S. 4212. An act to amend section 2 of the National Housing Act, relating to the insurance of loans and advances for improvements upon real property, and for other purposes.

On April 10, 1936:

S. 2496. An act to amend the Railway Labor Act;

S. 3761. An act authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to patent certain land to the town of Wamsutter, Wyo.; and

S. 3998. An act to enable the Commodity Credit Corporation to better serve the farmers in orderly marketing, and to provide credit and facilities for carrying surpluses from season to season.

On April 11, 1936:

S. 3860. An act to amend section 2 of the act entitled "An act to amend the National Defense Act", approved May 28, 1928; and

S. 3971. An act to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the St. Lawrence River at or near Ogdensburg, N. Y.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Haltigan, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House insisted upon its amendment to the bill (S. 3483) to provide for rural electrification, and for other purposes, disagreed to by the Senate; agreed to the conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. Rayburn, Mr. Huddleston, and Mr. Mapes were appointed managers on the part of the House at the conference.

PROTECTION OF LITERARY AND ARTISTIC WORKS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a message from the President of the United States, which was read, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, as follows:

To the Congress of the United States:

I commend to the favorable consideration of the Congress the enclosed report from the Secretary of State, with an accompanying memorandum, to the end that legislation may be enacted authorizing an appropriation of the sum of $6,500, or so much thereof as may be necessary for the expenses of participation by the United States in the conference at Brussels in 1936 for the purpose of revising the convention for the protection of literary and artistic works, concluded at Rome, September 9, 1886, and revised at Rome on June 2, 1928.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, April 13, 1936.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the petition of the Workers' Alliance of America, signed by David Lasser, its president, praying for the adoption of measures for the benefit of workers and relief of the unemployed, which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. TYDINGS presented a resolution adopted by the Middletown (Md.) AGHA (Anti-Ground Hog Administration), favoring an appropriation to combat the activities of the ground hog, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

He also presented a memorial of several citizens of Baltimore, Md., remonstrating against the enactment of the bill (S. 3954) to amend the Communications Act of 1934, approved June 19, 1934, for the purpose of promoting safety of life through the use of radio, and for other purposes, which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

He also presented a resolution adopted by the Mount Rainier-Brentwood (Md.) Parent-Teacher Association, favoring the enactment of legislation to abolish block-booking and blind-selling of motion-picture films, which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

Mr. COPELAND presented a resolution adopted by Madison County Pomona Grange, Cazenovia, N. Y., favoring the enactment of legislation looking to the extermination of vermin inimical to wild fowl and bird life, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

He also presented a resolution adopted by Madison County Pomona Grange, Cazenovia, N. Y., protesting against the enactment of legislation to include national waterways under the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission, which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

He also presented a resolution adopted by the board of directors of the Hamburg (N. Y.) Chamber of Commerce, protesting against the enactment of the bill (S. 4174) to foster and protect interstate commerce by authorizing the Interstate Commerce Commission to approve or disapprove of the consolidation or abandonment of carrier facilities of public service, which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

He also presented a resolution adopted by Maxim Gorki Branch, No. 705, International Workers Order, of Brooklyn, N. Y., favoring the enactment of the bill (S. 3475) to provide for the establishment of a Nation-wide system of social insurance, which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. COOLIDGE presented a letter in the nature of a petition from L. W. Hutchins, general chairman, etc., the Order of Railroad Telegraphers, System Division, No. 29, New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, Boston (Mass.) Terminal, praying for the enactment of the bill (S. 4174) to foster and protect interstate commerce by authorizing the Interstate Commerce Commission to approve or disapprove of the consolidation or abandonment of carrier facilities of public service, which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

He also presented a letter in the nature of a memorial from the bureau of transportation and public service of the New Bedford (Mass.) Board of Commerce, remonstrating against the enactment of the bill (S. 4174) to foster and protect interstate commerce by authorizing the Interstate Commerce Commission to approve or disapprove of the consolidation or abandonment of carrier facilities of public service, which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

He also presented a letter in the nature of a memorial from the bureau of transportation and public service of the New Bedford (Mass.) Board of Commerce, remonstrating against the enactment of the so-called Pettengill bill, being a bill to repeal the fourth section (long- and short-haul clause) of the Interstate Commerce Act, which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

He also presented letters in the nature of petitions from George W. King & Son and Charles D. Cady Printing Co., both of Worcester, Mass., praying for the enactment of the bill (S. 4296) to amend section 11 of the act of March 1, 1919 (40 Stat. 1270), pertaining to printing for the Government, which were referred to the Committee on Printing.

He also presented a letter in the nature of a memorial from William Minot, of Boston, Mass., remonstrating against the enactment of the so-called Robinson-Patman anti-pricediscrimination bill, which was ordered to lie on the table.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

Mr. SHEPPARD, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill (S. 4309) to increase the efficiency of the Air Corps Reserve, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 1824) thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill (S. 4265) to authorize the Secretary of War to set apart as a national cemetery certain lands of the United States Military Reservation of Fort Bliss, Tex., reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1825) thereon.

Mr. McKELLAR, from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, to which were referred the following bills, reported them each with an amendment and submitted reports thereon:

H. R. 10193. A bill to amend the act to fix the hours of duty of postal employees (Rept. No. 1826); and

H. R. 10267. A bill to provide for adjusting the compensation of division superintendents, assistant division superintendents, assistant superintendents at large, assistant superintendent in charge of car construction, chief clerks, assistant chief clerks, and clerks in charge of sections in offices of division superintendents in the Railway Mail Service, to correspond to the rates established by the Classification Act of 1923, as amended (Rept. No. 1827).

EXECUTIVE REPORTS OF A COMMITTEE

As in executive session,

Mr. McKELLAR, from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, reported favorably the nominations of sundry postmasters, which were ordered to be placed on the Executive Calendar.

ENROLLED BILLS PRESENTED

Mrs. CARAWAY, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that on April 10, 1936, that committee presented to the President of the United States the following enrolled bills:

S. 536. An act for the relief of Ada Mary Tornau;

S. 754. An act to amend section 21 of the act approved June 5, 1920, entitled "An act to provide for the promotion and maintenance of the American merchant marine, to repeal certain emergency legislation, and provide for the disposition, regulation, and use of property acquired thereunder, and for other purposes", as applied to the Virgin Islands of the United States;

S. 903. An act for the relief of the Holyoke Ice Co.;

S. 1152. An act relating to the carriage of goods by sea;

S. 1824. An act for the relief of Abraham Green;

S. 2021. An act to recognize the service of Brig. Gen. Edward R. Chrisman;

S. 2336. An act granting compensation to Mary Weller;

S. 2682. An act for the relief of Chief Carpenter William F. Twitchell, United States Navy;

S. 2697. An act for the relief of the United Pocahontas Coal Co., Crumpler, W. Va.;

S. 2922. An act for the relief of Rose Stratton;

S. 2942. An act for the relief of John Hoffman;

S. 2943. An act for the relief of John Morris;

S. 3125. An act for the relief of J. A. Hammond;

S. 3367. An act for the relief of James Gaynor;

S. 3445. An act to authorize the Secretary of Agriculture to release the claim of the United States to certain land within the Ouachita National Forest, Ark.;

S. 3655. An act for the relief of the Vermont Transit Co.,

S. 3684. An act to authorize the settlement of individual claims for personal property lost or damaged, arising out of the activities of the Civilian Conservation Corps, which have been approved by the Secretary of War;

S. 3777. An act to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to execute an agreement of indemnity to the First Granite National Bank, Augusta, Maine;

S. 3872. An act for the relief of the present leader of the Army Band; and

S. 4232. An act to create a commission and to extend further relief to water users on United States reclamation projects and on Indian irrigation projects.

BILLS INTRODUCED

Bills were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. BULKLEY:

A bill (S. 4470) to authorize the issuance of additional coins in commemoration of the fiftieth anniversary of Cincinnati, Ohio, as a center of music; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. WHITE:

A bill (S. 4471) for the relief of Frank Wheelock Plummer Breed; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma:

A bill (S. 4472) for the relief of Maurice A. Smith; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. COPELAND:

A bill (S. 4473) to amend section 24 of the Immigration Act of 1917, relating to the compensation of certain Immigration and Naturalization Service employees, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Immigration.

A bill (S. 4474) authorizing the Richmond-Brooklyn Bridge Authority, its successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across New York Bay between Brooklyn and Staten Island; and

A bill (S. 4475) to extend the jurisdiction of the Coast Guard; to the Committee on Commerce.

HOUSE BILL PLACED ON THE TABLE

The bill (H. R. 12037) relating to compacts and agreements among States in which tobacco is produced providing for the control of production of, or commerce in, tobacco in such States, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title and ordered to lie on the table.

AMENDMENTS TO RIVER AND HARBOR BILL

Mr. CAPPER and Mr. SHEPPARD each submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by them, respectively, to the bill (H. R. 8455) authorizing the construction of certain public works on rivers and harbors for flood control, and for other purposes, which were referred to the Committee on Commerce and ordered to be printed.

ANNIVERSARY OF BATTLE OF ANTIETAM-AMENDMENT

Mr. TYDINGS submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (S. 4394) to authorize the coinage of 50-cent pieces in commemoration of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the Battle of Antietam, which was referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency and ordered to be printed.

REHABILITATION LOANS TO STORM-STRICKEN AREAS—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. FLETCHER submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 11968) relating to the authority of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to make rehabilitation loans for the repair of damages caused by floods or other catastrophes, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, and 9, and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 7: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 7, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following:

"SEC. 3. Title I of the National Housing Act, as amended, is amended by inserting after section 5 thereof the following new

"Sec. 6. (a) The Administrator is authorized and empowered, upon such terms and conditions as he may prescribe, to insure banks, trust companies, personal finance companies, mortgage companies, building and loan associations, installment lending companies, and other such financial institutions, heretofore or hereafter approved by the Administrator as eligible for credit in-surance, against losses which they may sustain as a result of loans and advances of credit, and purchases of obligations representing loans and advances of credit, made by them subsequent to the date this section takes effect and prior to January 1, 1937, or such date this section takes effect and prior to January 1, 1937, or such earlier date as the President may fix by proclamation upon his determination that the emergency no longer exists, for the purpose of financing, by the owners of real property or by lessees thereof under a lease for a period of not less than one year, the restoration, rehabilitation, rebuilding and replacement of improvements on such real property and equipment and machinery thereon which were damaged or destroyed by earthquake, conflagration, tornado, cyclone, hurricane, flood, or other catastrophe in the years 1935 or 1936, either on the same site or on a new site in the same locality where the damaged or destroyed property was located. The Administrator is authorized to grant insurance under this section to any such financial institution up to 10 per centum of the total amount of loans, advances of credit, and purchases made by such financial institution for such purpose, and chases made by such financial institution for such purpose, and any insurance reserve accumulated by any such financial institution under section 2 of this title prior to April 1, 1936, shall be applicable to the payment of any losses sustained by it as a result of loans, advances of credit, or purchases insured under this of loans, advances of credit, or purchases insured under this section.

"'(b) No insurance shall be granted under this section to any such financial institution with respect to any obligation representing any such loan, advance of credit, or purchase by it (1) unless the loan bears such interest, has such maturity, and contains such other terms, conditions, and restrictions, as the Administrator shall prescribe in order to make credit available for the purposes of this section; and (2) unless the amount of such loan, advance of credit, or purchase is not in excess of $2,000, except that in the case of any such loan, advance of credit, or purchase made for the purpose of such financing with respect to apartment or multiple family houses, hotels, office, business or other commercial buildings, hospitals, orphanages, colleges, schools, churches, or manufacturing or industrial plants, such insurance may be granted if the amount of the loan, advance of credit, or purchase is not in excess of $50,000."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 8: That the House recede from its dis-

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 8: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 8, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following:

"Sec. 4. (a) The third sentence of subsection (a) of section 2 of the National Housing Act, as amended, is amended to read as follows: "The total liability incurred by the Administrator for all insurance heretofore and hereafter granted under this section and section 6 shall not exceed in the aggregate $100,000,000.'"

And the Senate agree to the same.

surance heretolore and cities agree to the same.

And the Senate agree to the same.

Duncan U. Fletcher,
Robert F. Wagner,
Robert J. Bulkley,
James Couzens,
Lohn G. Townsend, J. JOHN G. TOWNSEND, Jr., Managers on the part of the Senate.

T. ALAN GOLDSBOROUGH,
M. K. REILLY,
JESSE P. WOLCOTT,
Managers on the part of the House.

The report was agreed to.

EXPENDITURES FOR COTTON COOPERATIVES—LETTER FROM SENATOR TOWNSEND

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, in connection with Senate Report No. 1819, submitted by me and published in last Friday's Congressional Record, I ask unanimous consent to have published in the RECORD at this point a letter received by me from Hon. J. G. TOWNSEND, Jr., a Senator from the State of Delaware.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

United States Senate, Washington, D. C., April 8, 1936.

Hon. Kenneth McKellar, United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

My Dear Senator: It is my understanding that you, as chairman of the subcommittee which conducted hearings at Memphis, Tenn., from October 28, 1935, to and including November 28, 1935, authorized under Senate Resolution 185, providing for the investigation of the expenditures by the Federal Government for cotton cooperatives and their losses, are anxious to have the report of the hearings published at an early date.

In view of the fact that an early date.

In view of the fact that an early publication of the report is desired, I have signed it as a member of the subcommittee, without committing myself either in favor of or against the report, not having been able to attend the hearings nor having the opportunity of studying it fully.

I hope you understand represent the statement of the subcommittee.

I hope you understand my position in the matter and that it meets with your approval.

With kind regards, I am,

Very truly yours,

J. G. TOWNSEND, Jr.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

The PRESIDENT pro tempore, as in executive session, laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting sundry nominations, which were referred to the appropriate committees.

(For nominations this day received, see the end of Senate proceedings.)

HISTORY AND EFFECT OF SEVENTEENTH AMENDMENT TO CONSTITUTION

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have inserted in the Congressional Record a statement which was prepared as a result of a study made of the history and effect of the seventeenth amendment of the Constitution by Dr. Wallace Worthy Hall. I deem this study of sufficient public interest to justify inserting the results of the study into the RECORD at this time.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

On May 13, 1912, Congress submitted to the several States for their ratification a proposed constitutional amendment, providing for the direct election of Senators, thus culminating an 86-year congressional struggle on behalf of such an amendment. The first joint resolution, aimed at direct election, was introduced into the House on February 14, 1826. During the intervening time no less than 187 joint resolutions of a similar nature were introduced in Congress.

In taking this action Congress was but yielding to a well-nigh unanimous public opinion in favor of direct election, which was being made articulate through the contemporary press and periodicals, National and State party platforms, legislative memorials, direct petitions, and popular referends. A series of disgraceful legislative deadlocks involving senatorial elections assisted in stirring Congress to action.

Within 11 months after Congress had submitted the amendment the requisite number of States had ratified. O three (Utah, Rhode Island, and Delaware) actually rejected it.

was officially promulgated as the seventeenth amendment by Secretary of State William J. Bryan on May 31, 1913.

The beneficial results have been: (a) Elimination of legislative deadlocks often resulting in no election; (b) encouragement to the separation of State and National issues in State political camthe separation of State and National issues in State political campaigns; and (c) prevention of the recurrence of certain scandalous legislative elections. On the other hand the change has frequently necessitated the expenditure (often legitimate) of enormous sums of money to secure election to the Senate, and has greatly accentuated the time-consuming nonlegislative functions of our Senators. Furthermore, it has encouraged demagogy. Little or no change, however, is to be found in such matters as age, length of service, and the previous occupations of the Senators elected under the two systems. Popularly elected Senators have had less previous governmental service than their predecessors prior to 1913. On the other hand the Senate elected by the people has included more ex-Governors than the Senate chosen by legislatures. Men of great wealth continue to be elected to the Senate. latures. Men of great wealth continue to be elected to the Senate.

RECESS

Mr. ROBINSON. I move that the Senate take a recess until 12 o'clock noon tomorrow.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock and 7 minutes p. m.), under the order previously entered, the Senate took a recess, to meet, for the trial of the articles of impeachment against Halsted L. Ritter, tomorrow, Tuesday, April 14, 1936, at 12 o'clock meridian.

NOMINATIONS

Executive nominations received by the Senate April 13 (legislative day of Feb. 24), 1936

DIPLOMATIC AND FOREIGN SERVICE

Fay A. Des Portes, of South Carolina, now Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to Bolivia, to be Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States of America to Guatemala.

R. Henry Norweb, of Ohio, now a Foreign Service officer of class 1 and counselor of Embassy at Mexico, Mexico, to be Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States of America to Bolivia.

The following-named persons for appointment in the Foreign Service of the United States of America, as follows:

Raymond E. Cox, of New York, now a Foreign Service officer of class 3 and a secretary in the Diplomatic Service, to be also a consul general.

J. Webb Benton, of Pennsylvania, now a Foreign Service officer of class 4 and a secretary in the Diplomatic Service, to be also a consul.

Joseph F. Burt, of Illinois, now a Foreign Service officer of class 6 and a consul, and Daniel M. Braddock, of Michigan, now a Foreign Service officer of class 8 and a consul, to be also secretaries in the Diplomatic Service.

Ware Adams, of Georgia; William K. Ailshie, of Idaho; Ralph J. Blake, of Oregon; Claude B. Chiperfield, of Illinois; Albert E. Clattenburg, Jr., of Pennsylvania; Montgomery H. Colladay, of Connecticut; William S. Farrell, of New York; R. Borden Reams, of Pennsylvania; Arthur R. Ringwalt, of Nebraska; William E. Scotten, of California; Elvin Seibert, of New York; Llewellyn E. Thompson, Jr., of Colorado; and Milton Patterson Thompson, of Tennessee, now Foreign Service officers, unclassified, and vice consuls of career, to be also secretaries in the Diplomatic Service.

PUBLIC WORKS ADMINISTRATION

Alvin D. Wilder, of California, to be State director of the Public Works Administration in California.

Forrest M. Logan, of Indiana, to be State director of the Public Works Administration in Indiana.

P. Francis Hopkins, of Iowa, to be State director of the Public Works Administration in Iowa.

Robert A. Radford, of Minnesota, to be State director of the Public Works Administration in Minnesota.

Louis A. Boulay, of Ohio, to be State director of the Public Works Administration in Ohio.

John Hirst Caton, 3d, of Rhode Island, to be State director of the Public Works Administration in Rhode Island.

PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE

Assistant Surgeon Edward C. Lutton to be passed assistant surgeon in the United States Public Health Service, to rank as such from March 6, 1936.

Appointments, by Transfer, in the Regular Army

TO COAST ARTILLERY CORPS

Second Lt. Robert Emmett Gallagher, Infantry, with rank from June 13, 1933.

TO QUARTERMASTER CORPS

Maj. Theodore Porter Heap, Infantry, with rank from February 28, 1931.

Capt. Bradford W. Kunz, Infantry, with rank from March 25, 1932.

TO FINANCE DEPARTMENT

Maj. William Henry Kasten, Cavalry, with rank from April 9, 1928.

First Lt. John Raymond Gilchrist, Infantry, with rank from September 1, 1934.

TO FIELD ARTILLERY

First Lt. Joseph Franklin Trent, Infantry, with rank from October 1, 1934.

TO AIR CORPS

Second Lt. Jerome Edward Blair, 2d, Cavalry, with rank from June 12, 1934.

Second Lt. Paul Burlingame, Jr., Infantry, with rank from June 12, 1934.

Second Lt. Stanley Joseph Donovan, Infantry, with rank from June 12, 1934.

Second Lt. Edward Flanick, Field Artillery, with rank from June 12. 1934.

PROMOTIONS IN THE REGULAR ARMY

TO BE COLONELS

Lt. Col. Abbott Boone, Field Artillery, from March 24, 1936.

Lt. Col. Barton Kyle Yount, Air Corps, from April 1, 1936.

Lt. Col. Denham Bohart Crafton, Infantry, from April 1, 1936.

Lt. Col. William Carroll Christy, Cavalry, from April 1, 1936.

Lt. Col. John Logan Jenkins, Infantry, from April 1, 1936.

Lt. Col. Charles Henry White, Infantry, from April 1, 1936.

Lt. Col. Stanley Livingston James, Signal Corps, from April 1, 1936.

TO BE LIEUTENANT COLONELS

Maj. John Scott Smylie, Coast Artillery Corps, from March 24, 1936.

Maj. Lehman Wellington Miller, Corps of Engineers, from April 1, 1936, subject to examination required by law.

Maj. Douglas Lafayette Weart, Corps of Engineers, from April 1, 1936.

Maj. Earl Ewart Gesler, Corps of Engineers, from April 1,

Maj. John French Conklin, Corps of Engineers, from April 1, 1936.

Maj. William Frazer Tompkins, Corps of Engineers, from April 1, 1936.

Maj. Douglas Hamilton Gillette, Corps of Engineers, from April 1, 1936.

Maj. Paul Alfred Hodgson, Corps of Engineers, from April 1, 1936.

Maj. Donald Angus Davison, Corps of Engineers, from April 1, 1936.

Maj. Henry Spiese Aurand, Ordnance Department, from April 1, 1936.

TO BE MAJORS

Capt. George Warren Cooke, Finance Department, from April 1, 1936.

Capt. Shiras Alexander Blair, Air Corps, from April 1, 1936. Capt. Franklin Denwood Shawn, Quartermaster Corps, from April 1, 1936.

Capt. William Henry Johnson, Infantry, from March 5, 1936.

Capt. Roland Capel Bower, Quartermaster Corps, from April 4, 1936.

Capt. Donald Van Niman Bonnett, Infantry, from March 1, 1936.

Capt. Charles Stalsburg, Quartermaster Corps, from April 1, 1936.

Capt. Henry John Hunker, Quartermaster Corps, from April 1, 1936.

Capt. Frederick Eugene Hagen, Quartermaster Corps, from April 1, 1936.

Capt. Murdock Allen McFadden, Quartermaster Corps, from April 1, 1936.

Capt. Clifford Michael Ollivetti, Judge Advocate General's Department, from April 1, 1936. Capt. John Wesley Orcutt, Ordnance Department, from

April 1, 1936.

Capt. Vance Whiting Batchelor, Cavalry, from April 1, 1936.

Capt. Norman Paul Williams, Infantry, from April 1, 1936. Capt. Robert Grant Cousley, Infantry, from April 1, 1936.

MEDICAL CORPS

To be major

Capt. Otis Blaine Schreuder, Medical Corps, from March 29, 1936.

DENTAL CORPS

To be major

Capt. James Harvey Pence, Dental Corps, from April 1, 1936, subject to examination required by law.

CHAPLAIN

To be chaplain with the rank of lieutenant colonel Chaplain (Major) Milton Omar Beebe, United States Army, from March 24, 1936.

APPOINTMENT IN THE REGULAR ARMY

MEDICAL CORPS

To be first lieutenant with rank from date of appointment First Lt. Frank Hiram Van Wagoner, Medical Corps Reserve.

VETERINARY CORPS

To be first lieutenants with rank from date of appointment First Lt. Walter Tederoff Carll, Veterinary Corps Reserve. First Lt. Donald Clifford Kelley, Veterinary Corps Reserve.

PROMOTION IN THE PHILIPPINE SCOUTS

TO BE MAJOR

Capt. James Donison Carter, Philippine Scouts, from March 24, 1936.

APPOINTMENT IN THE NATIONAL GUARD OF THE UNITED STATES
GENERAL OFFICER

Brig. Gen. Newell Castle Bolton, Ohio National Guard, to be brigadier general, National Guard of the United States.

APPOINTMENTS AND PROMOTIONS IN THE NAVY

Lt. Charles H. Murphy to be a lieutenant commander in the Navy from the 1st day of July 1935.

Lt. John T. Bottom, Jr., to be a lieutenant commander in the Navy from the 1st day of September 1935.

Lt. William Hibbs to be a lieutenant commander in the Navy from the 1st day of January 1936.

Lt. (Jr. Gr.) Herbert E. Schonland to be a lieutenant in the Navy from the 1st day of September 1935.

The following-named lieutenants (junior grade) to be lieutenants in the Navy from the 1st day of October 1935:

Andrew E. Harris

Edwin R. Swinburne

Lt. (Jr. Gr.) Virgil F. Gordinier to be a lieutenant in the Navy from the 4th day of October 1935.

The following-named lieutenants (junior grade) to be lieutenants in the Navy from the 1st day of November 1935:

Arthur B. Thompson

James M. Smith

Lt. (Jr. Gr.) Percy H. Lyon to be a lieutenant in the Navy from the 1st day of December 1935.

The following-named lieutenants (junior grade) to be lieutenants in the Navy from the 1st day of January 1936:

Paul M. Clyde Charles W. Truxall Gordon B. Rainer Richard A. Guthrie

The following-named passed assistant paymasters to be paymasters in the Navy, with the rank of lieutenant commander, from the 1st day of June 1934:

Matthew T. Betton Clark H. Miley

Assistant Paymaster Philip White to be a passed assistant paymaster in the Navy, with the rank of lieutenant, from the 1st day of August 1935.

The following-named radio electricians to be chief radio electricians in the Navy, to rank with but after ensign, from the 1st day of October 1935:

Louis S. Butler Thomas C. Thrasher Faun S. Fritts Robert E. Trapeur

The following-named pharmacists to be chief pharmacists in the Navy, to rank with but after ensign, from the 1st day of October 1935:

Willard C. Calkins Ericson Fernquist Clyde V. Cuson Ralph W. Price

Carl J. Stommel

MARINE CORPS

Maj. Gilder D. Jackson, Jr., to be a lieutenant colonel in the Marine Corps from the 1st day of December 1935.

Maj. Fred G. Patchen to be a lieutenant colonel in the Marine Corps from the 9th day of February 1936.

First Lt. James Snedeker to be a captain in the Marine Corps from the 27th day of March 1936.

First Lt. John D. Blanchard to be a captain in the Marine Corps from the 1st day of April 1936.

POSTMASTERS

ALABAMA

Troy A. Phillips to be postmaster at Altoona, Ala., in place of John Thompson. Incumbent's commission expired February 9, 1936.

William Lee English to be postmaster at Elba, Ala., in place of J. W. Maddox, removed.

Sister Mary Teresa to be postmaster at Holy Trinity, Ala., in place of Sister Mary Teresa. Incumbent's commission expires May 19, 1936.

Ruth K. Bullard to be postmaster at Lockhart, Ala., in place of R. K. Bullard. Incumbent's commission expired February 9, 1936.

George B. Pickens to be postmaster at Moundville, Ala., in place of G. B. Pickens. Incumbent's commission expires May 19, 1936.

Lillian J. Arnold to be postmaster at Pisgah, Ala., in place of S. B. Wininger, deceased.

Marion R. Buckalew to be postmaster at Roanoke, Ala., in place of S. H. Tatum, removed.

William H. Stroud to be postmaster at Verbena, Ala. Office became Presidential July 1, 1935.

Velma F. Todd to be postmaster at Wilson Dam, Ala. Office became Presidential April 1, 1934.

Gladys M. Bomar to be postmaster at Woodward, Ala., in place of G. M. Bomar. Incumbent's commission expires June 1, 1936.

ALASKA

Charles A. Sheldon to be postmaster at Seward, Alaska, in place of C. A. Sheldon. Incumbent's commission expires June 1, 1936.

ARIZONA

William I. Welker to be postmaster at Bowie, Ariz., in place of W. I. Welker. Incumbent's commission expires June 23, 1936.

ARKANSAS

Alfred J. Jefferies to be postmaster at Clarendon, Ark., in place of A. J. Jefferies. Incumbent's commission expires July 7, 1936.

Lawrence H. Green to be postmaster at Crawfordville, Ark., in place of K. S. Rolley. Incumbent's commission expired January 11, 1936.

Bennie H. Lucy to be postmaster at Elaine, Ark., in place of J. D. Lowrie. Incumbent's commission expired March 23, 1936.

Hazel P. Screeton to be postmaster at Hazen, Ark., in place of C. A. Proctor. Incumbent's commission expired March 23, 1936.

Rhetta L. Cooper to be postmaster at Hughes, Ark., in place of R. L. Cooper. Incumbent's commission expires May 26, 1936.

Paul B. Garrett to be postmaster at Okolona, Ark., in place of B. O. Phelps. Incumbent's commission expired February 5, 1936.

Gertrude A. Parrish to be postmaster at Rector, Ark., in place of E. A. Casner. Incumbent's commission expired January 11, 1936.

James A. Watson to be postmaster at Springdale, Ark., in place of J. R. Joyce. Incumbent's commission expired April 1, 1936.

Joe Davidson to be postmaster at Winslow, Ark., in place of R. L. Maddox. Incumbent's commission expires April 27, 1936.

CALIFORNIA

Winfred E. Robb to be postmaster at Arlington, Calif., in place of J. D. Myers. Incumbent's commission expired March 29, 1936.

Samuel E. Burum to be postmaster at Dinuba, Calif., in place of A. G. Heerman. Incumbent's commission expired March 17, 1936.

Clyde Burgett to be postmaster at El Segundo, Calif., in place of L. P. James. Incumbent's commission expires May 10, 1936.

Sidney C. Moon to be postmaster at Hemet, Calif., in place of N. S. Dilworth. Incumbent's commission expired March 17, 1936.

Irene F. Tallis to be postmaster at Hilts, Calif., in place of B. W. Miller, deceased.

Linnie Jouett to be postmaster at Hobart Mills, Calif., in place of Linnie Jouett. Incumbent's commission expires June 28, 1936.

Eugene Francis O'Donnell to be postmaster at Hollister, Calif., in place of Daniel McCloskey. Incumbent's commission expires May 10, 1936.

Paul Vernon Howell to be postmaster at Needles, Calif., in place of E. G. Farmer. Incumbent's commission expires May 10, 1936.

Clara Belle Daly to be postmaster at Montrose, Calif., in place of F. W. Brown. Incumbent's commission expires May 10, 1936.

Jasper L. Moss to be postmaster at Morgan Hill, Calif., in place of C. G. Barnes. Incumbent's commission expired January 26, 1936.

Hugh L. Appling to be postmaster at Oakdale, Calif., in place of W. N. Garland. Incumbent's commission expired January 9, 1936.

Gertrude Ford to be postmaster at Pacific Palisades, Calif., in place of F. E. Buckner. Incumbent's commission expired January 9, 1936.

Frederick W. Kickbush to be postmaster at San Bruno, Calif., in place of G. G. Hughes. Incumbent's commission expired January 26, 1936.

Frank R. Harwood to be postmaster at Santa Ana, Calif.,

in place of T. E. Stephenson, resigned.

Walter S. Young to be postmaster at Spreckels, Calif., in place of D. L. Plant. Incumbent's commission expired December 16, 1934.

Morgan J. Kavanagh to be postmaster at Trona, Calif., in place of M. J. Kavanagh. Incumbent's commission expires June 20, 1936.

J. Howard Clark to be postmaster at Tulare, Calif., in place of R. C. Odell. Incumbent's commission expired March 17, 1936.

Milburn M. Brame to be postmaster at Turlock, Calif., in place of W. M. Brown. Incumbent's commission expired March 17, 1936.

COLORADO

Roscoe D. Mutz to be postmaster at Fowler, Colo., in place of B. H. Glaze. Incumbent's commission expired March 18, 1936.

Joseph B. Perkins to be postmaster at Fruita, Colo., in place of L. H. Dewey. Incumbent's commission expired January 22, 1936.

George W. Snider to be postmaster at Granby, Colo., in place of Frances Lessley. Incumbent's commission expired April 4, 1936.

Clyde D. Moslander to be postmaster at Grand Junction, Colo., in place of C. B. Pond. Incumbent's commission expires April 27, 1936.

Charles M. Burrell to be postmaster at New Castle, Colo., in place of E. A. Weller. Incumbent's commission expired January 22, 1936.

Anna L. Grabow to be postmaster at Ouray, Colo., in place of Anna Richards. Incumbent's commission expired January 22, 1936.

Meryl D. Haynes to be postmaster at Seibert, Colo., in place of Z. M. Hutchens. Incumbent's commission expired January 28, 1936.

Floyd E. Cooper to be postmaster at Silverton, Colo., in place of E. F. Sutherland. Incumbent's commission expires June 10, 1936.

Mark S. Cole to be postmaster at Yampa, Colo., in place of J. C. Wilson. Incumbent's commission expired February 26, 1936.

CONNECTICUT

William S. Meany to be postmaster at Greenwich, Conn., in place of Joseph Brush, removed.

Evelyn P. Estabrooks to be postmaster at Hampton, Conn. Office became Presidential July 1, 1935.

Martin J. Donahue to be postmaster at Litchfield, Conn., in place of W. B. Allen. Incumbent's commission expired January 9, 1936.

James T. Kelley to be postmaster at New Canaan, Conn., in place of W. B. Simon. Incumbent's commission expired February 10, 1936.

James C. Bransfield to be postmaster at Portland, Conn., in place of E. S. Lewis. Incumbent's commission expires June 1, 1936.

Daniel G. Sullivan to be postmaster at Watertown, Conn., in place of J. V. Abbott. Incumbent's commission expired January 9, 1936.

J. Edward LaCroix to be postmaster at Yalesville, Conn., in place of W. T. McKenzie. Incumbent's commission expired December 16, 1933.

DELAWARE

Byron C. Dunn to be postmaster at Camden, Del., in place of S. W. Miller. Incumbent's commission expired January 27, 1936.

Rhubert R. German to be postmaster at Delmar, Del., in place of R. R. German. Incumbent's commission expired February 24, 1936.

FLORIDA

Thomas J. Bulford to be postmaster at Hilliard, Fla., in place of T. J. Bulford. Incumbent's commission expired March 28, 1936.

Maggie B. Hardin to be postmaster at Pass-A-Grille Beach, Fla., in place of E. C. McPherson. Incumbent's commission expired January 9, 1934.

GEORGIA

Chessie M. Pelfrey to be postmaster at Roswell, Ga., in place of E. H. Wood. Incumbent's commission expired January 7, 1936.

Jett M. Potts to be postmaster at West Point, Ga., in place of J. M. Potts. Incumbent's commission expired February 5, 1936.

Walter R. Hall to be postmaster at Young Harris, Ga., in place of T. R. Berry. Incumbent's commission expired February 17, 1936.

IDAHO

Clarence M. Friend to be postmaster at Elk River, Idaho, in place of Norman O'Donnell. Incumbent's commission expired March 22, 1934.

ILLINOIS

John R. Engleman to be postmaster at Bellwood, Ill., in place of Herman Meyer. Incumbent's commission expired December 20, 1932.

Louis D. Fuess to be postmaster at Mount Olive, Ill., in place of H. J. Troeger. Incumbent's commission expired January 7, 1936.

Harry L. Roberts to be postmaster at Mulberry Grove, Ill., in place of F. H. Creswick. Incumbent's commission expired February 9, 1936.

Wilbert E. Poos to be postmaster at Trenton, Ill., in place of H. A. Eisenmayer. Incumbent's commission expired January 7, 1936.

Clarence N. Ginther to be postmaster at West Salem, Ill., in place of H. J. Busefink. Incumbent's commission expired January 28, 1936.

INDIANA

Nathan P. Lewis to be postmaster at Campbellsburg, Ind., in place of S. C. Morgan. Incumbent's commission expired January 22, 1936.

William H. Ashba to be postmaster at Delphi, Ind., in place of B. S. Balser. Incumbent's commission expired January 9, 1936.

Robert C. Mayhall to be postmaster at Edinburg, Ind., in place of J. A. Thompson. Incumbent's commission expired January 9, 1936.

Matthew Halbig to be postmaster at Haubstadt, Ind., in place of C. W. Bertram. Incumbent's commission expired January 9, 1936.

John Nichols to be postmaster at Odon, Ind., in place of D. M. Hayes. Incumbent's commission expired January 9, 1936

Fonzo Martin to be postmaster at Shelburn, Ind., in place of A. W. Hill. Incumbent's commission expired January 9, 1936.

Elijah A. Gebhart to be postmaster at Warren, Ind., in place of V. U. Slater. Incumbent's commission expired January 9, 1936.

IOWA

Rose M. Fischbach to be postmaster at Granville, Iowa, in place of R. M. Fischbach. Incumbent's commission expires June 1, 1936.

Vern U. Waters to be postmaster at Havelock, Iowa, in place of V. U. Waters. Incumbent's commission expires June 23, 1936.

Louis A. Hasselbrink to be postmaster at Kellogg, Iowa, in place of C. W. Woodward. Incumbent's commission expired January 12, 1936.

Joseph L. Lichty to be postmaster at Luverne, Iowa, in place of H. H. Phillips. Incumbent's commission expired January 12, 1936.

George M. Smith to be postmaster at North English, Iowa, in place of L. A. Lawler. Incumbent's commission expired January 12, 1936.

Clifford P. Shane to be postmaster at New Virginia, Iowa, in place of A. J. Irwin. Incumbent's commission expired January 12, 1936.

Viola F. McCartan to be postmaster at Pocahontas, Iowa, in place of S. L. McIntire. Incumbent's commission expired January 12, 1936.

Hattie Bandy to be postmaster at Redfield, Iowa, in place of H. F. Chance, deceased.

Lyman L. DeFreece to be postmaster at Sidney, Iowa, in place of R. B. Laird. Incumbent's commission expired June 19 1933

Peter T. Belgard to be postmaster at Tipton, Iowa, in place of T. C. Moffit, removed.

KANSAS

Julia G. Christy to be postmaster at Altamont, Kans., in place of F. E. George. Incumbent's commission expired March 23, 1936.

Lloyd A. Johnson to be postmaster at Belleville, Kans., in place of W. T. Perry. Incumbent's commission expires April 27, 1936.

Earl Hoefgen to be postmaster at Burden, Kans., in place of J. R. Galyon. Incumbent's commission expired January 8, 1936.

Otho E. McMullen to be postmaster at Courtland, Kans., in place of E. L. Kier. Incumbent's commission expires April 27, 1936.

Roy E. Wetherall to be postmaster at Cunningham, Kans., in place of H. B. Gibbens. Incumbent's commission expires May 10, 1936.

Clarence H. Johnson to be postmaster at Enterprise, Kans., in place of C. E. Meyer. Incumbent's commission expired February 5, 1936.

Gay Small to be postmaster at Galva, Kans., in place of J. I. Cramer. Incumbent's commission expired January 8, 1936.

Jack Butcher to be postmaster at Garnett, Kans., in place of A. M. Graves, deceased.

Otis Barngrover to be postmaster at Hamilton, Kans., in place of R. R. Carson. Incumbent's commission expired February 5, 1936.

Laurence C. Forker to be postmaster at Haven, Kans., in place of L. B. Blachly. Incumbent's commission expired February 5, 1936.

Otho M. Koontz to be postmaster at Jetmore, Kans., in place of J. A. McDowell. Incumbent's commission expired February 19, 1936.

Joseph M. Steffen to be postmaster at Neodesha, Kans., in place of Ernest Toomey. Incumbent's commission expired February 6, 1934.

Chester M. Cook to be postmaster at Ness City, Kans., in place of L. T. Miller. Incumbent's commission expired February 5, 1935.

Edwin Fitzgerald Hammond to be postmaster at Osage City, Kans., in place of H. F. Kiesow. Incumbent's commission expired January 8, 1936.

Mason V. Dunlap to be postmaster at Osawatomie, Kans., in place of K. O. Ranney. Incumbent's commission expired January 8, 1936.

Fred Swisher to be postmaster at Pratt, Kans., in place of A. P. Barrett. Incumbent's commission expires May 19, 1936.

Jeannette Byrnes to be postmaster at St. Marys, Kans., in place of A. E. Kerns. Incumbent's commission expired January 8, 1936.

Harry D. Burke to be postmaster at Severy, Kans., in place of A. M. Ludvickson. Incumbent's commission expired March 10, 1936.

Anna L. Hicks to be postmaster at Sharon Springs, Kans., in place of G. E. Woodhouse, Jr., removed.

Bessie M. Anderson to be postmaster at Tribune, Kans., in place of F. A. Moore, deceased.

Grover P. Nutt to be postmaster at Waverly, Kans., in place of C. E. Painter. Incumbent's commission expired January 8, 1936.

Francis M. Stocker to be postmaster at Yates Center, Kans., in place of J. F. Allen. Incumbent's commission expired January 8, 1936.

KENTUCKY

Stanley H. Jones to be postmaster at Fort Knox, Ky., in place of J. A. Hargan. Incumbent's commission expires May 19, 1936.

George M. Roach to be postmaster at Fulton, Ky., in place of C. P. Freeman, resigned.

Anna May Moore to be postmaster at Hazard, Ky., in place of Dewey Daniel. Incumbent's commission expired April 4, 1936.

Isaac N. Combs to be postmaster at Lexington, Ky., in place of G. R. Warren, retired.

George J. Covington to be postmaster at Mayfield, Ky., in place of C. T. Winslow, resigned.

Benjamin F. Shepard to be postmaster at Wayland, Ky., in place of B. F. Shepard. Incumbent's commission expired March 10, 1936.

LOUISIANA

George E. Johnson to be postmaster at Boyce, La., in place of J. T. Boone. Incumbent's commission expired December 16, 1934.

Moise Bellard to be postmaster at Church Point, La., in place of J. R. Murrel. Incumbent's commission expired January 28, 1936.

John A. Moody to be postmaster at Cotton Valley, La., in place of J. A. Moody. Incumbent's commission expires May 3, 1936.

Veronica J. Lambert to be postmaster at Goodhope, La., in place of J. G. Bourgeois, Sr., removed.

Ella A. McDowell to be postmaster at Hodge, La., in place of E. A. McDowell. Incumbent's commission expires May 23, 1936.

Lillian D. Gayle to be postmaster at Independence, La., in place of L. D. Gayle. Incumbent's commission expired March 10, 1936.

Fred E. Callaway to be postmaster at Jonesboro, La., in place of F. E. Callaway. Incumbent's commission expires June 23, 1936.

Mildred P. Prescott to be postmaster at Lutcher, La., in place of M. P. Prescott. Incumbent's commission expires June 1, 1936.

John E. Butler, Jr., to be postmaster at Port Allen, La., in place of J. E. Butler, Jr. Incumbent's commission expires May 23, 1936.

Stephen O. Wilson to be postmaster at Vivian, La., in place of S. O. Wilson. Incumbent's commission expires June 23, 1936.

MAINE

Lyman Ellis to be postmaster at Canton, Maine, in place of R. A. Bessey. Incumbent's commission expired March 28, 1936.

Frank X. Oakes to be postmaster at Fairfield, Maine, in place of C. W. McClintock. Incumbent's commission expires April 27, 1936.

William Gerald Jordan to be postmaster at Fryeburg, Maine, in place of J. E. Sargent. Incumbent's commission expired January 7, 1936.

Wade P. Clifton to be postmaster at Greenville Junction, Maine, in place of W. P. Clifton. Incumbent's commission expired February 17, 1936.

Marita E. Peabody to be postmaster at Houlton, Maine, in place of P. N. Burleigh. Incumbent's commission expired January 22, 1935.

Embert Worcester to be postmaster at Phillips, Maine, in place of C. E. Toothaker. Incumbent's commission expired March 28, 1936.

Eugene P. Lowell to be postmaster at South Paris, Maine, in place of E. R. Clifford. Incumbent's commission expired January 7, 1936.

Maynard A. Lucas to be postmaster at Union, Maine, in place of C. W. Mitchell. Incumbent's commission expired March 10, 1936.

Howard F. Wright to be postmaster at Wilton, Maine, in place of G. E. Sands. Incumbent's commission expired March 10, 1936.

Mildred A. Holbrook to be postmaster at Wiscasset, Maine, in place of P. B. Stinson. Incumbent's commission expired March 10, 1936.

MARYLAND

T. Francis Martin to be postmaster at Essex, Md., in place of J. J. Banz, resigned.

MASSACHUSETTS

Richard E. O'Brien to be postmaster at Ballard Vale, Mass., in place of G. R. Bruce. Incumbent's commission expired January 9, 1936.

Alphonse E. Roberts to be postmaster at Chicopee Falls, Mass., in place of A. E. Roberts. Incumbent's commission expires June 10, 1936.

John A. Bell to be postmaster at Leicester, Mass., in place of J. A. Bell. Incumbent's commission expires April 27, 1936.

MICHIGAN

James A. Maxwell to be postmaster at Auburn, Mich. Office became Presidential July 1, 1935.

Harold P. Snyder to be postmaster at Bear Lake, Mich., in place of M. E. Jones, removed.

William D. Pinkham to be postmaster at Belding, Mich., in place of J. G. Wilbur. Incumbent's commission expired December 11, 1932.

Anne C. Parsal to be postmaster at Benton Harbor, Mich., in place of W. E. Banyon, retired.

Samuel Robinson to be postmaster at Charlotte, Mich., in place of M. H. DeFoe. Incumbent's commission expired January 25, 1936.

Delwin J. McDonald to be postmaster at Cheboygan, Mich., in place of A. R. Gerow. Incumbent's commission expired March 10, 1936.

Francis Jackson to be postmaster at Clare, Mich., in place of L. E. Davy. Incumbent's commission expired January 7, 1936.

Elizabeth H. Ronk to be postmaster at Clarkston, Mich., in place of Floyd Andrews. Incumbent's commission expired February 5, 1936.

Frank H. Crowell to be postmaster at East Jordan, Mich., in place of W. A. Stroebel. Incumbent's commission expired February 5, 1936.

Joseph J. Voice to be postmaster at Fife Lake, Mich., in place of J. J. Voice. Incumbent's commission expires June 23, 1936.

Fred W. Zehnder to be postmaster at Frankenmuth, Mich., in place of W. J. Kern. Incumbent's commission expired January 25, 1936.

Ralph Edward Peterson to be postmaster at Frankfort, Mich., in place of M. E. Chadwick, resigned.

Robert H. Edsall to be postmaster at Greenville, Mich., in place of H. I. Walker, transferred.

Walter C. Schoof to be postmaster at Imlay City, Mich., in place of E. E. Secor. Incumbent's commission expired February 5, 1936.

James O. Peet to be postmaster at Ithaca, Mich., in place of F. J. Gibbs. Incumbent's commission expired February 5, 1936.

William A. Seegmiller to be postmaster at Owosso, Mich., in place of O. L. Sprague. Incumbent's commission expired January 25, 1936.

Frank Knight Learned to be postmaster at Plymouth, Mich., in place of B. E. Giles. Incumbent's commission expired March 22, 1936.

Myron I. Lutz to be postmaster at Pullman, Mich. Office became Presidential July 1, 1935.

Arthur J. La Bo to be postmaster at Rockwood, Mich., in place of W. F. Cunningham, removed.

MINNESOTA

Paul B. Sanderson to be postmaster at Baudette, Minn., in place of P. B. Sanderson. Incumbent's commission expired March 31, 1936.

Alvin A. Ogren to be postmaster at New London, Minn., in place of A. A. Ogren. Incumbent's commission expires April 29, 1936.

Esther Bacon to be postmaster at Pillager, Minn., in place of L. M. Bennett, resigned.

Alfred Gronner to be postmaster at Underwood, Minn., in place of Alfred Gronner. Incumbent's commission expires April 12, 1936.

Robert L. Bard to be postmaster at Wheaton, Minn., in place of E. F. Joubert. Incumbent's commission expired February 20, 1935.

MISSISSIPPI

James T. Skelton to be postmaster at Goodman, Miss., in place of J. T. Skelton. Incumbent's commission expires May 23, 1936.

Cornelius V. Thurmond to be postmaster at Mound Bayou, Miss., in place of C. V. Thurmond. Incumbent's commission expired March 23, 1936.

MISSOURI

Joseph H. Hardgrove to be postmaster at Atlanta, Mo., in place of A. C. Atterberry. Incumbent's commission expired April 16, 1934.

Harry O. Travis is to be postmaster at Belle, Mo., in place of G. R. Steiner. Incumbent's commission expires April 27, 1936.

Roy Clodfelter to be postmaster at Essex, Mo., in place of R. A. Prater. Incumbent's commission expired January 9, 1936.

George Petrus to be postmaster at Hermann, Mo., in place of J. M. Schermann. Incumbent's commission expired March 10, 1936.

Ruby M. Farr to be postmaster at Kingston, Mo., in place of M. W. Duston. Incumbent's commission expires June 1, 1936.

Newton E. Young, Sr., to be postmaster at La Plata, Mo., in place of W. T. Robinson. Incumbent's commission expired February 9, 1936.

John Y. Glasscock to be postmaster at Maysville, Mo., in place of J. B. Wilson. Incumbent's commission expires April 27, 1936.

George E. Scott to be postmaster at New Hampton, Mo., in place of J. B. Chipp. Incumbent's commission expires June 10, 1936.

Mary S. McMahill to be postmaster at Osborn, Mo., in place of Anna Everett. Incumbent's commission expires April 14, 1936.

Edgar E. Smith to be postmaster at Owensville, Mo., in place of A. B. Burchard. Incumbent's commission expired February 1, 1936.

G. Emmett Moore to be postmaster at Parkville, Mo., in place of J. W. Fleming. Incumbent's commission expired February 9, 1936.

Leonard V. Parker to be postmaster at Plattsburg, Mo., in place of W. A. Porter. Incumbent's commission expired February 9, 1936.

Floyd E. Birkhead to be postmaster at Winfield, Mo., in place of H. E. Jackson. Incumbent's commission expired January 9, 1936.

Charles H. Oney to be postmaster at Wright City, Mo., in place of C. F. Strack. Incumbent's commission expired February 9, 1936.

NEBRASKA

Carl K. McCleery to be postmaster at Blue Hill, Nebr., in place of C. K. McCleery. Incumbent's commission expired January 25, 1936.

Ethel Talcott to be postmaster at Crofton, Nebr., in place of Ethel Talcott. Incumbent's commission expires May 23, 1936.

Frank Ainsworth to be postmaster at Exeter, Nebr., in place of Frank Ainsworth. Incumbent's commission expires July 7, 1936.

Merwyn C. Johnson to be postmaster at Hyannis, Nebr., in place of M. C. Johnson. Incumbent's commission expired February 10, 1936.

Charles Hugh Miner to be postmaster at Red Cloud, Nebr., in place of E. S. Garber. Incumbent's commission expired February 9, 1936.

Albert E. Pratt to be postmaster at Tobias, Nebr., in place of A. E. Pratt. Incumbent's commission expires May 23, 1936.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

Ernest L. Richardson to be postmaster at Conway, N. H., in place of A. M. Sloans, resigned.

Mary L. Doyle to be postmaster at Hillsboro, N. H., in place of J. C. Parker, deceased.

Charles L. McGinness to be postmaster at Troy, N. H., in place of H. E. Gates. Incumbent's commission expired February 5, 1936.

NEW JERSEY

George J. Imley to be postmaster at Allenhurst, N. J., in place of A. E. Hoffman. Incumbent's commission expired February 19, 1936.

Reuben Coyte to be postmaster at Coytesville, N. J., in place of Reuben Coyte. Incumbent's commission expired February 9, 1936.

Raymond A. McGrath to be postmaster at Cresskill, N. J., in place of W. R. Mayer. Incumbent's commission expired February 25, 1935.

Raymond W. McGreevey to be postmaster at Manasquan, N. J., in place of G. C. Kloss, Incumbent's commission expired January 9, 1936.

John N. Rumley to be postmaster at Towaco, N. J., in place of L. L. Jacobus. Incumbent's commission expired December 16, 1934.

NEW MEXICO

Helen B. Hickman to be postmaster at Hurley, N. Mex., in place of H. B. Hickman. Incumbent's commission expires July 13, 1936.

NEW YORK

Agnes G. Polley to be postmaster at Andes, N. Y., in place of D. M. Dickson. Incumbent's commission expired May 2, 1934.

Joseph G. Mattes to be postmaster at Avon, N. Y., in place of W. J. Leighton. Incumbent's commission expired February 20, 1935.

February 20, 1935.

Will J. Davy to be postmaster at Bergen, N. Y., in place of W. J. Davy. Incumbent's commission expired March 23, 1936.

Perley M. Hall to be postmaster at Carthage, N. Y., in place of Michael Gleason. Incumbent's commission expired February 4, 1935.

February 4, 1935.

Joseph T. O'Donnell to be postmaster at Elizabethtown, N. Y., in place of E. E. Wood. Incumbent's commission expired February 14, 1935.

Thomas N. Manion to be postmaster at Ferndale, N. Y., in place of G. H. P. Hackett, deceased.

Sarah B. Keenan to be postmaster at Hague, N. Y., in place of S. H. Scott. Incumbent's commission expired April 22, 1934.

Dorothea E. Blum to be postmaster at Hawthorne, N. Y., in place of Alfred Cox. Incumbent's commission expired December 16, 1933.

Katherine A. Slattery to be postmaster at Maryknoll, N. Y., in place of K. A. Slattery. Incumbent's commission expired February 17, 1936.

NORTH CAROLINA

Francis L. Andrews, Jr., to be postmaster at Bethel, N. C., in place of W. H. Manning. Incumbent's commission expired March 17, 1936.

Ruth F. White to be postmaster at Colerain, N. C., in place of R. F. White. Incumbent's commission expires June 1, 1936.

Thomas W. Armstrong to be postmaster at Columbia, N. C., in place of B. R. Cohoon. Incumbent's commission expires May 19, 1936.

Basil G. Farmer to be postmaster at Elm City, N. C., in place of W. C. Thorne. Incumbent's commission expired February 9, 1936.

Benjamin Otto Turnage to be postmaster at Farmville, N. C., in place of W. G. Gay. Incumbent's commission expired April 12, 1936. Samuel Eugene Potts to be postmaster at Highlands, N. C., in place of E. C. Cleaveland. Incumbent's commission expired February 25, 1935.

Robert L. Mattocks to be postmaster at Maysville, N. C. Office became Presidential July 1, 1935.

Howard W. Moody to be postmaster at Murphy, N. C., in place of Thelma Dickey. Incumbent's commission expired March 10, 1936.

Samuel D. Mauney to be postmaster at Newton, N. C., in place of D. M. Cloninger. Incumbent's commission expired March 17, 1936.

Everett S. Stevens to be postmaster at Smithfield, N. C., in place of J. C. Stancil. Incumbent's commission expired April 4, 1936.

Kate Reagan to be postmaster at Weaverville, N. C., in place of R. E. Carmichael. Incumbent's commission expired March 10, 1936.

NORTH DAKOTA

Ethel L. Powers to be postmaster at Lawton, N. Dak. Office became Presidential July 1, 1935.

Chase E. Mulinex to be postmaster at Tolley, N. Dak., in place of C. E. Mulinex. Incumbent's commission expired March 10, 1936.

OHIO

Walter J. Miller to be postmaster at Beach City, Ohio, in place of A. B. Wingate, resigned.

Weston Thomas Dressel to be postmaster at Belpre, Ohio, in place of P. W. Athey. Incumbent's commission expires June 1, 1936.

James A. Hart to be postmaster at Beverly, Ohio, in place of N. J. Taylor. Incumbent's commission expires June 1, 1936.

Louis J. Elsaesser to be postmaster at Canton, Ohio, in place of H. H. Weiss, deceased.

Howard O. Ward to be postmaster at Cumberland, Ohio, in place of E. C. Allison. Incumbent's commission expired March 10, 1936.

Elmyra L. Griswold to be postmaster at Macedonia, Ohio, in place of E. L. Griswold. Incumbent's commission expired January 7, 1936.

John W. Berentz to be postmaster at New Matamoras, Ohio, in place of C. T. Cline. Incumbent's commission expired January 22, 1936.

Luella Sommers to be postmaster at Ottawa, Ohio, in place of Edwin Sommers, deceased.

Robert A. Durbin to be postmaster at Stockport, Ohio, in place of D. M. Lane, deceased.

Charles E. Folsom to be postmaster at Smithville, Ohio, in place of C. M. Sauder, resigned.

Charles Norman Wenzlau to be postmaster at Tippecanoe City, Ohio, in place of Henrietta Bennett. Incumbent's commission expires May 3, 1936.

Charles A. Conry to be postmaster at Wakeman, Ohio, in place of Ben J. Filkins. Incumbent's commission expired April 12, 1936.

George Geer to be postmaster at Wauseon, Ohio, in place of C. O. Eastman, Incumbent's commission expired March 10, 1936.

Jesse Ralph Short to be postmaster at Winchester, Ohio, in place of E. T. Siddens. Incumbent's commission expired January 7, 1936.

Edward J. Westerman to be postmaster at Woodsfield, Ohio, in place of A. O. Earley. Incumbent's commission expired March 10, 1936.

OKLAHOMA

Mary H. West to be postmaster at Ada, Okla., in place of J. W. Lewis. Incumbent's commission expired February 5, 1936.

Gladys E. McEwen to be postmaster at Aline, Okla., in place of G. O. Fields. Incumbent's commission expired February 3, 1936.

Wayne E. Mead to be postmaster at Allen, Okla., in place of J. K. Malone. Incumbent's commission expired February 5, 1936.

John C. Affholder to be postmaster at Blackwell, Okla., in place of T. H. W. McDowell. Incumbent's commission expired March 18, 1934.

John J. Skinner to be postmaster at Cleveland, Okla., in place of O. A. Gilbert. Incumbent's commission expired February 1, 1936.

George J. Martin to be postmaster at Guthrie, Okla., in place of F. M. Deselms, removed.

Hal A. McNutt to be postmaster at Stillwater, Okla., in place of T. W. Kelly. Incumbent's commission expired February 4, 1935.

James F. Nicholson to be postmaster at Talihina, Okla., in place of D. W. Robinson. Incumbent's commission expired December 18, 1934.

OREGON

John B. Wade to be postmaster at Bandon, Oreg., in place of A. K. Gallier. Incumbent's commission expired January 26, 1936.

Lawrence G. Allen to be postmaster at Joseph, Oreg., in place of C. V. Fairchild, removed.

Fred Randolph Peat to be postmaster at Lakeview, Oreg., in place of G. W. Johnson. Incumbent's commission expired January 26, 1936.

Merrill V. Smith to be postmaster at Lebanon, Oreg., in place of T. R. MacMillan. Incumbent's commission expired January 26, 1936.

Charles F. Cox to be postmaster at Ontario, Oreg., in place of P. W. Platt. Incumbent's commission expired February 5, 1936.

Ruth N. Johnson to be postmaster at Sheridan, Oreg., in place of G. W. Epley. Incumbent's commission expired March 23, 1936.

PENNSYLVANIA

Robert E. Giles to be postmaster at Coalport, Pa., in place of P. S. Lomire. Incumbent's commission expired February 25, 1935.

Samuel M. Carnell to be postmaster at Dott, Pa., in place of S. M. Carnell. Incumbent's commission expires May 19, 1936.

Marcella T. Pawlowski to be postmaster at Glenlyon, Pa., in place of Constanty Tarnowski. Incumbent's commission expired January 19, 1933.

Cleo W. Callaway to be postmaster at Shawnee on Delaware, Pa., in place of C. W. Callaway. Incumbent's commission expires May 3, 1936.

Oscar F. Sutliffe to be postmaster at Somerset, Pa., in place of O. F. Sutliffe. Incumbent's commission expires July 15, 1936.

James A. McCoy to be postmaster at Turtle Creek, Pa., in place of J. H. Watson. Incumbent's commission expired December 18, 1934.

PUERTO RICO

Marie O. Reyes to be postmaster at Arecibo, P. R., in place of Jose Mayol, deceased.

Juan V. Hernandez to be postmaster at San Sebastian, P. R., in place of J. V. Hernandez. Incumbent's commission expired March 28, 1936.

RHODE ISLAND

James J. Martin to be postmaster at Newport, R. I., in place of T. T. Bowler. Incumbent's commission expired February 3, 1936.

Antonio Prince to be postmaster at Woonsocket, R. I., in place of F. A. Rixford. Incumbent's commission expired February 9, 1936.

SOUTH CAROLINA

Robert Emmett Love to be postmaster at Clover, S. C., in place of W. L. Gettys. Incumbent's commission expired January 25, 1936.

James D. Mackintosh to be postmaster at McClellanville, S. C., in place of J. D. Mackintosh. Incumbent's commission expires June 10, 1936.

George K. Dominick to be postmaster at Newberry, S. C., in place of P. E. Scott. Incumbent's commission expired March 29, 1936.

John W. Geraty to be postmaster at Yonges Island, S. C., in place of J. W. Geraty. Incumbent's commission expires June 10, 1936.

SOUTH DAKOTA

Ralph L. Chambers to be postmaster at Clear Lake, S. Dak., in place of C. I. Force. Incumbent's commission expired January 25, 1936.

Emil P. A. Erdmann to be postmaster at Groton, S. Dak., in place of E. J. Meredith. Incumbent's commission expired January 25, 1936.

Arthur A. Van Voorhis to be postmaster at Hitchcock, S. Dak., in place of C. H. Cotton. Incumbent's commission expired January 25, 1936.

John T. Schneider to be postmaster at Lebanon, S. Dak., in place of Thorvalt Jordeth. Incumbent's commission expired January 25, 1936.

Anthony J. Rozum to be postmaster at Mitchell, S. Dak., in place of O. W. Coursey. Incumbent's commission expired January 25, 1936.

Helen E. Becker to be postmaster at Turton, S. Dak., in place of H. E. Becker. Incumbent's commission expires June 28, 1936.

Victor M. Dalthorp to be postmaster at Volga, S. Dak., in place of V. M. Dalthorp. Incumbent's commission expired January 26, 1936.

Thomas J. Delaney to be postmaster at Webster, S. Dak., in place of E. A. Wearne. Incumbent's commission expires April 27, 1936.

Nick V. Anton to be postmaster at Wessington Springs, S. Dak., in place of W. C. Bidleman, deceased.

TENNESSEE

Walter E. Nixon to be postmaster at Dayton, Tenn., in place of B. L. Morgan. Incumbent's commission expired January 7, 1936.

John Cort Sadler to be postmaster at Gainesboro, Tenn., in place of J. F. Gaines. Incumbent's commission expired February 5, 1936.

TEXAS

Tom Caudle to be postmaster at Ballinger, Tex., in place of J. A. Reese, resigned.

R. Nelson Gray to be postmaster at Bertram, Tex., in place of Vina Johnson. Incumbent's commission expired January 8, 1936.

Patrick S. Hendricks to be postmaster at Midlothian, Tex., in place of A. T. Baggett, Jr., Incumbent's commission expired February 19, 1936.

Thomas B. Higgins to be postmaster at Reagan, Tex., in place of T. B. Higgins. Incumbent's commission expired April 4, 1936.

William J. Davis to be postmaster at Silsbee, Tex., in place of W. J. Davis. Incumbent's commission expires May 23, 1936.

Hattie Waller to be postmaster at Trinity, Tex., in place of R. D. Gilbert. Incumbent's commission expired January 8, 1936.

Edwin C. Dickschat to be postmaster at Washington, Tex., in place of W. F. Borgstedte. Incumbent's commission expired June 2, 1934.

Chester L. Lewis to be postmaster at Wheeler, Tex., in place of C. L. Lewis. Incumbent's commission expires June 10, 1936.

VIRGINIA

Louise J. Taylor to be postmaster at Beaverdam, Va., in place of Noah Markey. Incumbent's commission expired March 10, 1936.

Andrew T. Organ to be postmaster at Chester, Va., in place of C. B. Graves. Incumbent's commission expired January 18, 1936.

Charles Alfred Goodykoontz to be postmaster at East Radford, Va., in place of J. M. Nunn. Incumbent's commission expired March 10, 1936.

John W. Helvey to be postmaster at Emory, Va., in place of L. A. Merrihue, removed.

Jesse T. Hylton to be postmaster at Hillsville, Va., in place of Clyde DeHaven, deceased.

C. E. Bristow. Incumbent's commission expired March 10,

Nannie L. Curtis to be postmaster at Lee Hall, Va., in place of N. L. Curtis. Incumbent's commission expires May 10, Thomas N. Carruthers to be postmaster at Purcellville, Va., in place of M. R. Piggott. Incumbent's commission expired January 18, 1936.

Claude Neale to be postmaster at Saluda, Va., in place of Claude Neale. Incumbent's commission expires June 28, 1936.

WASHINGTON

Harvey H. Hartley to be postmaster at Goldendale, Wash., in place of W. F. Byars. Incumbent's commission expired January 8, 1936.

WISCONSIN

Michael P. Becker to be postmaster at Brillion, Wis., in place of C. H. Kuehl. Incumbent's commission expires April

Henry J. Thoma to be postmaster at Hartford, Wis., in place of F. M. LeCount. Incumbent's commission expires April 27, 1936.

Karl C. Neubauer to be postmaster at Horicon, Wis., in place of E. C. Rehfeld. Incumbent's commission expired February 10, 1936.

William Wright to be postmaster at Kewaunee, Wis., in place of F. A. Hanson. Incumbent's commission expired February 10, 1936.

Joseph C. Harland to be postmaster at Mukwonago, Wis., in place of W. F. Martin. Incumbent's commission expired February 10, 1936.

William Reuschlein to be postmaster at Plain, Wis., in place of L. J. Bettinger. Incumbent's commission expired January 18, 1936.

Louis J. Albrecht to be postmaster at Sheboygan, Wis., in place of H. E. Thomas. Incumbent's commission expired February 10, 1936.

Allison L. McNeight to be postmaster at Stratford, Wis., in place of Mourits Mortenson. Incumbent's commission expired February 10, 1936.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

MONDAY, APRIL 13, 1936

The House met at 12 o'clock meridian.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Lord God of the rolling years, while we walk the changeful ways of time, grant us grace to feel and lament our sins. By prayer and meditation, prepare our hearts for deeper penitence and better lives. We pray for urgent wills and constructive spirits in all that we shall do, that the Republic may have a most honorable part in the world's life and character. Again we lift our souls in praise to Him who took up the morning stars and made them chime and swung them in the chanting choirs of the universe. Heavenly Father, keep alive in our breasts the One who faced failure, saved humanity, unsealed earth's tombs, and brought to man new courage and fresh inspiration. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of Thursday, April 9, 1936, was read and approved.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Sundry messages in writing from the President of the United States were communicated to the House by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries, who also informed the House that on the following dates the President approved and signed bills and joint resolutions of the House of the following titles:

On March 18, 1936:

H. R. 8886. An act to authorize the coinage of 50-cent pieces in commemoration of the sesquicentennial anniver- | Scouts of America;

Lloyd C. Pulley to be postmaster at Ivor, Va., in place of | sary of the founding of the capital of South Carolina at Columbia, S. C.;

H. R. 10265. An act to authorize the Secretary of War, the Secretary of the Navy, the Secretary of the Interior, the Secretary of Agriculture, and the Secretary of the Treasury to lend Army, Navy, Coast Guard, and other needed equipment for use at the National Jamboree of the Boy Scouts of America; and to authorize the use of property in the District of Columbia and its environs by the Boy Scouts of America at their national jamboree to be held during the summer of 1937; and

H. J. Res. 443. Joint resolution to amend Public Resolution No. 31 of the Seventy-fourth Congress, first session, approved June 17, 1935, so as to extend its provisions to cover the National Boy Scout Jamboree now scheduled to be held in 1937.

On March 19, 1936:

H. R. 9863. An act making appropriations for the Executive Office and sundry independent executive bureaus, boards, commissions, and offices for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1937, and for other purposes.

On March 30, 1936:

H. J. Res. 543. Joint resolution making an additional appropriation for the fiscal year 1936 for emergency relief of residents of the District of Columbia.

On April 10, 1936:

H. R. 381. An act granting insurance to Lydia C. Spry;

H. R. 605. An act for the relief of Joseph Maier;

H.R. 685. An act for the relief of the estate of Emil Hoyer (deceased):

H. R. 762. An act for the relief of Stanislaus Lipowicz;

H. R. 977. An act for the relief of Herman Schierhoff;

H. R. 3184. An act for the relief of H. D. Henion, Harry Wolfe, and R. W. McSorley;

H. R. 3254. An act to exempt certain small firearms from the provisions of the National Firearms Act;

H. R. 3369. An act for the relief of the State of Alabama: H.R. 4439. An act for the relief of John T. Clark, of Seattle, Wash.;

H. R. 5764. An act to compensate the Grand View Hospital and Dr. A. J. O'Brien;

H. R. 6335. An act for the relief of Sam Cable;

H. R. 7024. An act to authorize the sale by the United States to the municipality of Hot Springs, N. Mex., the north half of the southeast quarter and the northeast quarter of the southwest quarter of section 6, township 14 south, range 4 west, New Mexico principal meridian, New Mexico;

H. R. 7788. An act for the relief of Mrs. Earl H. Smith;

H. R. 8030. An act to authorize a preliminary examination of Republican River, Smoky Hill River, and minor tributaries of Kansas River, with a view to the control of their floods;

H.R. 8032. An act for the relief of the Ward Funeral Home:

H. R. 8038. An act for the relief of Edward C. Paxton;

H. R. 8061. An act for the relief of David Duquaine, Jr.;

H. R. 8110. An act for the relief of Thomas F. Gardiner;

H. R. 8300. An act to authorize a preliminary examination of Suwannee River in the State of Florida, from Florida-Georgia State line to the Gulf of Mexico;

H.R. 8559. An act to convey certain land to the city of Enfield, Conn.;

H. R. 8577. An act to amend the Teachers' Salary Act of the District of Columbia, approved June 4, 1924, as amended, in relation to raising the trade or vocational schools to the level of junior high schools, and for other purposes;

H.R. 8797. An act to provide a preliminary examination of Onondaga Creek, in Onondaga County, State of New York, with a view to the control of its floods;

H.R. 8901. An act to provide for the establishment of a Coast Guard station at or near Apostle Islands, Wis.:

H. R. 9200. An act authorizing the erection of a marker suitably marking the site of the engagement fought at Columbus, Ga., April 16, 1865;

H. R. 9671. An act to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to dispose of material to the sea-scout service of the Boy

H.R. 10182. An act to authorize the Secretary of War to acquire the timber rights on the Gigling Military Reservation (now designated as Camp Ord), in California;

H. R. 10185. An act to amend the act approved June 18, 1934, authorizing the city of Port Arthur, Tex., or the commission thereby created and its successors, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge over Lake Sabine, at or near Port Arthur, Tex., and to extend the times for commencing and completing the said bridge;

H. R. 10187. An act to extend the times commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River at or near Randolph, Mo.;

H. R. 10262. An act to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of certain bridges across the Monongahela, Allegheny, and Youghiogheny Rivers in the county of Allegheny, Pa.;

H. R. 10316. An act to legalize a bridge across Poquetanuck Cove at or near Ledyard, Conn.;

H. R. 10465. An act to legalize a bridge across Second Creek, Lauderdale County, Ala.;

H. R. 10490. An act to amend chapter 9 of the act of July 1, 1898, entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States", approved July 1, 1898, and acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto;

H. R. 10975. An act authorizing a preliminary examination of Marshy Hope Creek, a tributary of the Nanticoke River, at and within a few miles of Federalsburg, Caroline County, Md., with a view to the controlling of floods:

H.R. 11045. An act to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Ohio River between Rockport, Ind., and Owensboro, Ky.;

H.R. 11365. An act relating to the filing of copies of income returns, and for other purposes;

H. R. 11425. An act for the relief of Gustava Hanna;

H. R. 11945. An act granting the consent of Congress to the Department of Public Works of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts for the construction, maintenance, and operation of certain free highway bridges to replace bridges destroyed by flood in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts; and

H. J. Res. 305. Joint resolution accepting the invitation of the Government of France to the United States to participate in the International Exposition of Paris-Art and Technique in Modern Life-to be held at Paris, France, in 1937.

On April 11, 1936:

H. R. 6645. An act to amend the act entitled "An act to provide for the construction of certain public buildings, and for other purposes", approved May 25, 1926; and

H. R. 6982. An act to amend section 80 of chapter 9 of an act to amend the act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States", approved July 1, 1898.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Horne, its enrolling clerk, announced that the Senate had passed a joint resolution of the following title, in which the concurrence of the House is requested:

S. J. Res. 233. Joint resolution providing for the participation of the United States in the Great Lakes Exposition to be held in the State of Ohio during the year 1936, and authorizing the President to invite the Dominion of Canada to participate therein, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate disagrees to the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 3483) entitled "An act to provide for rural electrification, and for other purposes", disagreed to by the House; agrees to the conference asked by the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and appoints Mr. Fletcher, Mr. Wagner, Mr. Bulkley, Mr. Townsend, and Mr. Couzens to be the conferees on the part of the Senate.

UNEMPLOYMENT

Mr. DOBBINS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by printing a speech on the subject of Unemployment by the Honorable James M. Mead at Buffalo, N. Y., April 5, 1936, at a banquet tendered in his honor by the postal employees of Buffalo and western New

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. DOBBINS. Mr. Speaker, under leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I include the following speech on the subject of unemployment, delivered by the Honorable James M. MEAD, chairman of our Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads, at a banquet tendered in his honor by the postal employees of Buffalo and western New York, on April 5, 1936:

Mr. Chairman, distinguished and honored guests, employees of the Post Office Department, ladies, and gentlemen, while I sincerely and genuinely appreciate this evidence of your friendship and loyalty, I cannot give expression to my real feelings of gratitude because of my very limited abilities. I am, however, very proud of my association with the Postal Service, and I thoroughly enjoy the many friendships I have made among the personnel of this great service. service.

service.

I am happy to tell you that Buffalo ranks high up on the list of the major cities of the country in the efficiency and effectiveness of the Postal System. The friendly attitude of the Postmaster General and his capable associates is reflected throughout the service, and here in Western New York it can be truthfully said that patrons and employees are enjoying a New Deal that is in reality an era of good feeling and satisfactory service.

The Post Office Department in adopting the 40-hour, or 5-day, week has set a splendid example for private enterprise to follow. Just as the Postal Service took up the slack in the employment of its substitutes, so will private business take up the slack by returning millions of the unemployed to steady work again.

The governments of the world have many vexing problems to consider at this time, some of them military, others territorial, consider at this time, some of them military, others territorial, and others economic—all of them receiving the attention of layman and lawmaker. The most important national problem which must be solved at this time is unemployment. It must not be must be solved at this time is unemployment. It must not be obscured by any other issue, whether political, social, national, or international. The indisputable high efficiency of modern machine methods has destroyed work opportunities which may only be regained by a compensatory reduction of the work period, whether it be the work day or the work week.

Shortening the hours of labor will bring wage earners now without work into the Nation's contributory business organization. Increasing existing earnings and augmenting purchasing power among those who are now unemployed, is our most immediate Increasing existing earnings and augmenting purchasing power among those who are now unemployed, is our most immediate economic need. A shorter work period will release purchasing power and stipulate industrial productivity. Reduction of the work period will give to millions of our citizens a security denied them under existing circumstances. A reduction in the work period will increase by millions the consumer population for American business. It will at the same time increase our standards of living and create new and widespread demands; demands for goods as well as services. A reduction in the work period will for goods as well as services. A reduction in the work period will enable the Government to reduce relief expenditures, eliminate relief agencies, reduce Federal taxation, and balance the Federal

However, until American enterprize recognizes the justice and the need of a shorter work day it will continue to be the duty of the Federal Government to provide work for its citizens.

In every age and in every country there has been opposition—bitter opposition to every effort on the part of the workers to secure a reduction in their work period, limiting by law or agreement the wage earner's workday, whether it was the establishment of the 10-hour day a hundred years ago or the 8-hour day 50 years ago.

Those same arguments have persisted throughout all these years and, without modification or improvement, are used today. Never before in the history of our country or, for that matter, of the world, has there been greater need for the reduction of the work "An act to provide for rural electrification, and for other purposes", requests a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and appoints Mr. SMITH, Mr. WHEELER, and Mr. Norris to be the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate insists upon its amendments to the bill (H. R. 11968) entitled "An act relating to the authority of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to make rehabilitation loans for the repair of damages caused by floods or other catastrophes, and for other destroy poverty and to win security all must do their share and lend their cooperation. The milling industry here in our own city, Kellogg industries at Battle Creek, Mich., and the elevator-construction industry, are but three instances where the 6-hour day increased factory output, lowered unit costs of production, and in general increased the efficiency, the health, and the contentment of the worker. The tremendous increase in man-power productivity, the constantly diminishing labor cost in plant overhead, the tremendous losses in wealth production suffered by the Nation in periods of depression, the destructive moral effect of enforced indelence upon our wage earners, the danger to the permanency of indolence upon our wage earners, the danger to the permanency of our existing institutions makes necessary the universal reduction in the workday and the workweek.

in the workday and the workweek.

Years ago man invented labor-making machines; today the inventive genius of our Nation invents the labor-saving machine. The teletype, the electric eye, the mechanical robot, remote control, and the cotton picker destroy labor employment at a rate never dreamed of in generations which have passed. Today America's productivity has attained the productivity of a normal year, and yet, primarily as a result of the machine, employment figures lag way to the rear. Over 5,000,000 of those who have lost their jobs as a result of the depression have been absorbed by industry. However, there are still 5,000,000 more to be absorbed, plus the millions who have become of working age since 1929. The American people could enjoy more leisure, higher consuming power, and increased production if the working day was shortened. This would compel industry to pay more rather than less for the undersupply of labor. It would give business the market it needs. Contentment and happiness would supplant idleness and fear, and the wheels of American industry would spin with a speed never before attained. never before attained.

America is no longer a nation with acres of undiscovered virgin soil. Its national resources have been impaired, her forests stand devastated by the exploiter's hand, her foreign markets have been diminished by the machine productivity of other lands. Therefore, the solution of the problem of unemployment is a domestic one, one that we must solve here in our own land. We must revise our economic system. Every American who is now without a job must be looked upon as a potential consumer of American business. Working, he contributes to the common welfare; unemployed he becomes the common problem of business. Governemployed, he becomes the common problem of business, Government, and society.

America is ready and at the threshold of the greatest economic era in all the history of mankind. We have at hand the materials for a real new era. We have an industrial organization purged for the moment of the financial folly that leads to the crash. It has the tools, the skill, the experience, and only requires a free social conscience. All that is necessary is a common meeting of the minds of labor, of business, and of government.

meeting of the minds of labor, of business, and of government.

America has never failed in all of the crises of the past. America will not fail in this crisis. It cannot fail because the security of the common man, the future well-being of the youth of our land, the permanent protection of our American institutions from suffering, poverty, and grief as a result of insecurity are all dependent upon the banishment of unemployment from our land. The constant and steady improvement in business, the tremendous increase in corporate profits, the growing strength of the American labor movement, the acknowledgment on the part of the vast majority of our people of the need of a new economic era based on social justice, the realization on the part of the officials of our Government that there is no other way out except by giving to the workers in industry a shorter workday and a shorter workweek is the solution of the national problem of unemployment.

LEAVE TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that I may address the House for 10 minutes at the close of the remarks of the gentleman from New York [Mr. Boylan] and the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Shannon].

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. RANKIN. Reserving the right to object, I would like to ask the gentleman from Pennsylvania on what subject he desires to speak?

Mr. RICH. The principal subject will be waste of money, and especially the Jefferson memorial proposed to be erected at St. Louis, Mo., and the waste of money by the President of the United States.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mrs. NORTON. Reserving the right to object-and I do not intend to object—this is going to be a busy day, and I shall be forced to object to any further requests for time until the District bills are disposed of.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? There was no objection.

FOREIGN OBLIGATIONS TO THE UNITED STATES

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? There was no objection.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, recently there has been a revival in Europe of the sacredness of treaties and contracts. Criticism has been directed against Germany because she has failed to observe the agreement reached in the Locarno Treaty. With the European governments in the mood to appreciate the solemnity of contracts, I believe it an opportune moment for the United States Government to remind nations with whom we have debt agreements that those are just as sacred and just as binding as Locarno or any other agreement.

If one agreement can be repudiated at will, then the same principle must be applicable to every agreement, and the result is all agreements become documents upon which there can be no real dependence.

The soundness of this argument was confirmed lately in the English Parliament by Lloyd George, who propounded the

What is the difference between the violation by Germany of a treaty and that which you (England) are doing, in violating your agreement as against America?

The response was quite illuminating and plainly indicated the intention of British repudiation unless there is positive action by the American Government. The Roosevelt administration in the last 3 years has made only a feeble gesture. As a result there has naturally grown up among the debtor nations a belief that the United States was reconciled to repudiation and did not really care to collect the debts.

The need to dispel this belief is urgent. The American people are being taxed heavily and the outlook over the next few years is for increased taxes.

Our burdens can be traced for the most part to the World War. It is only fair that money we advanced in good faith, much of it to rebuild Europe, and about which there is a definite agreement and understanding, should be repaid.

These debtor nations find it easy to secure huge sums to add to their naval and military armaments. They find money available for the new war, which is claimed to be around the corner. In the case of England, it is stated they now have a balanced budget.

In view of these facts, I believe the United States should insist upon the meeting of treaty obligations, and if the Roosevelt administration will not take the initiative Congress can do so by the passage of the resolution which I have introduced.

This resolution is a simple reiteration of American rights and a declaration of our belief in the sanctity of international agreements. It is as follows:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That it is the sense of the Congress of the United States of America that the funded war debts of foreign nations to the United America that the funded war debts of foreign nations to the United States Government should be paid unequivocally in accordance with the terms of the respective agreements entered into by the debtor nations with the United States Government; and that to this end demand for such payments should be made and insisted upon through diplomatic channels in the interest of good faith among nations and in the name of the peace-loving people of the United States, who bear the burden of such unpaid obligations.

THE OUTLOOK OF FLOOD-RELIEF LEGISLATION

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. Mr. Speaker, the most important problem facing the Pittsburgh district is still flood relief and flood protection.

The emergency nature of this problem is now over. The paramount need is for sound and sure methods of reconstruction and rehabilitation. This is no time for delay. This is the time for plain, outspoken, and vigorous pronounce-

During the flood and for a few days after the water receded, everyone in the flood areas and in other parts of the United States was in accord that immediate action was necessary to save the victims of the floods and to work out plans for the future prevention of such disasters. The immediate task of relief is being completed in a most admirable way and in an efficient manner.

MERCHANTS NEED FINANCIAL AID

The next question which must be settled is the question of financial aid to the small independent merchants whose businesses are located in the flooded areas, whose merchandise has been destroyed, whose equipment has been badly damaged, and whose assets have been wiped out in many cases.

Machinery to extend financial aid to small merchants must now be set up. Otherwise they will have to retire from business. Their business will be absorbed by the large corporations and their employees will be made jobless.

TALKING ABOUT AID IS NOT ENOUGH

The chamber of commerce, the business and banking leaders of the communities, have all publicly stated again and again that the small merchant is entitled to such aid as is necessary to restore him to the position which he occupied before the flood. With this position I am in complete accord, as I stated in a radio broadcast at Pittsburgh on March 29, 1936, over station WJAS. I also said that I would fight for such assistance in Washington, but I deemed it vital that the local banks should likewise render such financial aid to these deserving merchants as was necessary and proper.

MUST SPEAK THE TRUTH

I maintain that we are not doing the small merchant a service by hiding from him the facts, but that we are hindering and delaying his recovery by holding out false hopes. We owe it to these merchants and we owe it to the community whom they have served to state frankly and openly what the real facts are and what these merchants may expect, so that they may be guided in their action and may take intelligent action for their own salvation.

In order to paint a correct picture we must divide the small merchants into two classes: Those who can give security for loans which may be made to them, and those who have lost their all and are therefore unable to give any security.

LOCAL BANKS DEMAND SECURITY

It appeared to me that a merchant who had dealt for many years with a local bank, who had carried on an honest business in this community, and who had always met his obligations, was entitled to consideration from his banker. So remembering the fact that the local bankers have publicly declared that these small businessman were entitled to financial aid, I went to some of the banks and inquired whether they were willing to make the necessary loans to their merchant customers. These local bankers told me frankly and without hesitation that if the merchant could put up security-sufficient and adequate security-they would lend him the necessary money. But the local bankers added that if these merchants could not put up security they felt they were not justified to lend the money which belonged to their stockholders or to the depositors, even though they sympathized with the plight of the merchant. In other words, the local bankers admitted the need for aiding the small merchants who had lost their assets, but they declared that it was not sound business practice for them to extend

With this knowledge, but still determined to do my part to obtain aid for the stricken small businessman, I went back to Washington.

H. R. 11968 FAILS TO RENDER AID

On April 1, 1936, H. R. 11968, the bill to amend and liberalize the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for the express purpose of aiding property owners and merchants in the flood areas came before the House of Representatives for debate and action. It was widely acclaimed as bringing the necessary aid to the stricken merchants and property owners who were the victims of floods. I am sorry to say that such is not the case. The debate on H. R. 11968 and my own speeches on it will be found in the Congressional Record of April 1, 1936.

R. F. C. WILL NOT AID DISTRESSED MERCHANTS WHO CANNOT GIVE COLLATERAL SECURITY

As a matter of fact anyone who will read the bill and who will examine and analyze its provisions will see that the bill will extend aid only to those property owners and merchants who are able to put up adequate security, but that it will be of no help whatsoever to those merchants who have lost their all and thus cannot put up security.

During the debate on this bill I took the floor three times for the purpose of showing by an examination of the bill itself that it would not be of any aid to the merchant who had no security to offer, and in fact that it would harm him by creating hopes which could not be fulfilled.

"WAIVER OF SECURITY" AMENDMENT OFFERED

I hammered away at this point until it was practically admitted. I presented an amendment to the bill which provided for character loans to merchants in the flood areas by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. The amendment appears on page 4733 of the Congressional Record of April 1, 1936. It reads as follows:

Provided, however, That in cases where the applicant enjoys a good credit standing and where his past business record shows that the applicant has met his obligations promptly, and that his business ethics are such that he may reasonably be expected to repay such loans, the furnishing of collateral for such part of said loan as applies to personal property may be waived.

This was simple language. It provided that the honest businessman who was solvent before the flood, and who paid his bills in the past and maintained an honorable credit standing, should receive financial assistance from this governmental agency without being required to furnish adequate bank-loan security which he does not have due to the flood damage. Without this amendment the bill passed by the House of Representatives was meaningless and worthless. After prolonged debate, in which many Members of Congress expressed their sympathies for merchants ruined by the flood, my amendment for character loans to honest merchants was defeated.

FEAR GENERAL PRECEDENT

My colleagues in the House who defeated the amendment for character loans by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation took the position that to extend loans of Government funds to private merchants without sufficient security to guarantee the repayment was undesirable and would create a dangerous precedent. They argued that if that is done in the case of a flood, the same aid must be extended to farmers and merchants who suffer by drought, tornado, earthquake, or other natural disasters. They argued that they were willing to appropriate whatever money is necessary for relief so that no one should starve or go without shelter in the flooded areas, but they felt that they are not justified to lend money to those merchants who lost everything they had in the flooded areas.

I am anxious that these facts be brought to the attention of the merchants concerned. I feel that it is vital that they should know what help they may expect. I feel it is important that these merchants should know exactly what will be done for them so that they could shape their future plans accordingly.

MERCHANTS MAY NOT RECEIVE ASSISTANCE

Therefore I want to make it plain, beyond the peradventure of a doubt, that the fight for character loans for the merchants by the Federal Government has been lost, and that it is not only unlikely but most improbable that such character loans will ever be made. In fact we might say it is certain that they will not be extended. With this knowledge, let us now examine the question whether aid may be expected from other sources, governmental, or a combination of both.

MUST UTILIZE EXISTING AGENCY

It is impossible to set up the machinery for a new agency. One of the requirements in this emergency is speed. It would take almost 2 years to organize properly to grant loans to merchants unless we make use of an existing agency. I believe that the best solution lies in taking advantage of the existing facilities, administrative staff, and experience of the Federal Housing Administration by amending title I, which insures banks and financial institution against losses sustained in making loans to borrowers for repairs and equipment of homes and business properties. Since the primary need is to help those businessmen who have maintained a favorable credit standing during their past business career, it appears that the banking institution with whom the merchant has been doing business, is in the best position to determine his financial responsibility.

H. R. 11132 AMENDS FEDERAL HOUSING ACT FOR BENEFIT OF FLOOD

I have therefore introduced a bill, H. R. 12132, which amends the Federal Housing Act by permitting the Federal Housing Administration to insure banks and other financial institutions against losses on loans that they may make to merchants whose stocks and equipment were damaged by the flood. It is my proposal that the loans to small merchants be granted to them by their own banks, and as an incentive to the banks to be more liberal with merchant flood victims, the Government will guarantee these loans to the banks up to 20 percent of the total of all the flood loans they may make. In this manner the really deserving and honest merchant will receive liberal credits from his own bank and at the same time not endanger the financial stability of the bank by the granting of unwise loans.

LIBERAL LENDING POLICY MUST BE ADOPTED

However, it is important that the borrowers be assured that the financial institutions whose loans will be insured by the Government will adopt a liberal and humane attitude toward these distressed merchants. I have, therefore specifically provided that the rate of interest shall not exceed 6 percent per annum and that due credit be given for partial payments.

Further provision is made for these loans to mature in about 5 years and that loans for a lesser period be renewed. No loans are to be made for new businesses; they will be limited to finance the replacement of goods and equipment actually damaged or destroyed in the flood.

GOVERNMENT AND LOCAL BANKS TO COOPERATE

In this connection the Government will be doing its part to assist the small merchant. It puts this problem squarely to the banks. Will the local banks cooperate by assuming a liberal attitude toward their merchant depositors or will they, too, insist on adequate and unreasonable margins of security? In the past, recovery was retarded by the ultraconservative policies of some banks. They had refused to extend credit to deserving and solvent businesses. If they maintain the same policies, the merchants of the flood-swept areas will receive no assistance at all. Here is a splendid opportunity for the banks in this district to retrieve lost ground by regaining public confidence. To the extent that the local banks are willing to assume their share of reconstruction and rehabilitation in the Pittsburgh district will be determined the degree of recovery that is to be made by the hard-hit business firms in the Pittsburgh district.

I hope that H. R. 12132, the bill which I just discussed, will be passed by the Congress. If it does, the merchants in the Pittsburgh district and in the other flooded areas may expect substantial assistance by coordinated efforts of the Government and the local financial institutions.

FLOOD-CONTROL BILL TO PASS

And now we come to the prevention of future floods. should like to emphasize that the omnibus flood-control bill has already passed the House and is now in the Senate Committee on Commerce. We must remind those individuals and organizations who have been urging the passage of this bill that the Members of Congress from this district are all in favor of the construction of flood-control projects.

RIVER WALLS NECESSARY FOR FLOOD PREVENTION

As I explained before, the proposed dams and reservoirs in the headwaters of the Monongahela and Allegheny Rivers would reduce the Pittsburgh flood stage by only 71/2 feet. This is wholly inadequate in view of our experience with a 46-foot flood stage. I have pointed out before the necessity of flood walls as a needed additional precaution against a recurrence of a flood disaster.

I am sorry that this report on the progress of flood-control I am sorry that this report on the progress of flood-control In the 12 Republican years ending March 4, 1933, more than legislation is not more optimistic, but it is the truth. As 10,000 banks had falled in the United States. In 1 year alone matters stand today in Washington, the chances for the construction of flood-control projects are not certain, and the assistance which it appears will be given flood-stricken business is meager. While this picture is gloomy, the only ray of hope lies in creating sufficient public sentiment for these measures, so that the Members of the House and Senate, who are not from flood-stricken areas, will realize the vital needs of the Pittsburgh district and of other districts damaged by the flood and join with us in passing these necessary bills.

RECORD OF THE ROOSEVELT ADMINISTRATION

Mr. UTTERBACK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record by printing a speech made by my colleague the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. BIERMANN], delivered as temporary chairman at the Democratic State convention of the State of Iowa on April

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. UTTERBACK. Mr. Speaker, under the leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I include the following speech made by my colleague the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. BIERMANN], delivered as temporary chairman of the Democratic State convention of the State of Iowa, April 3, 1936:

Mr. Chairman, I thank you and the other members of the Democratic State central committee for the honor you have conferred upon me. It is a great pleasure to look out onto this splendid audience and to see in the eyes of thoughtful, patriotic men and women pride in the accomplishments of the past 3 years, zeal for this campaign, and confidence in the future of our Republic under the leadership of Franklin D. Roosevelt and a Democratic administration.

The past 3 years have been packed with big events. The program to deal with the wreck and ruin that had overwhelmed this country has been stupendous. It is the simplest kind of justice that the Democratic Party should be judged on that record. We should not be allowed to escape from that record if we would. And we would not if we could. Let us insist that this campaign be fought on that record. Let us not be turned aside. In the words of Abraham Lincoln, "Let us not be slandered from our duty by false accusations against us."

Before we discuss the record I pay my highest tribute of respect.

before we discuss the record, I pay my highest tribute of respect and admiration to those hundreds of thousands of independent voters and Republicans who made the victories of 1932 and 1934 possible. Without them those victories would have been defeats, To sever political ties years old, sometimes generations old, required the noblest kind of patriotism and the finest kind of moral courage. I am reminded of the words of Edmund Burke. They are as true now as they were 150 years ago: "When parties change their principles patriots change their parties." All honor to these men and women who arrayed themselves under the Democratic banner to rescue our country from economic ruin and possible revolution.

and women who arrayed themselves under the Democratic banner to rescue our country from economic ruin and possible revolution. I earnestly hope that this record which they have made possible has been so pleasing to them that they will abide with us. We have welcomed them to our ranks and to our councils. With their continued aid the great program for economic and social justice can be carried forward to triumphant conclusion.

The humanitarian purposes that have inspired much of the Roosevelt activities have made special appeal to the hearts and minds of the women of America. They have seen and have applauded the purpose to rescue the unfortunate, to provide wholesome surroundings for children and young people, and altogether to make America a better place in which to live and in which to rear families. We ask the womanhood of America to continue its support in order that humanitarian progress may not be arrested by those who contend that the improvement of American home surroundings is not a proper subject for Federal legislation. surroundings is not a proper subject for Federal legislation.

surroundings is not a proper subject for Federal legislation.

And I cannot help but compliment another group that has contributed greatly to the victories—the Young Democratic Clubs. They have directed the attention of young people to their duty to take a thoughtful interest and a patriotic part in politics. The young Democrats have done valiant service for the great program we call the New Deal. The courage, the directness, and the frankness of the New Deal appeal to young people, unfettered by years of political habit. The young Democrats have come into political activity as the supporters of great ideals. I pray them that they continue during their lives to be devoted to high ideals of politics and of government. In a short time the destiny ideals of politics and of government. In a short time the destiny of the Democratic Party will be in their charge. May they keep it loyal and true to great principles of government. May they keep it free from domination by selfish groups on the one hand and by mobs led by clever demagogues on the other.

And now for the record, on which this election should turn. In considering that record we ask the public to have in mind three questions: (1) What was the situation that confronted this administration March 4, 1933; (2) what have we done to meet that situation; and (3) what will our critics undo if they return to power?

2.294 closed their doors. Our banking system had collapsed and had carried with it the life savings of millions of Americans, many of whom are today in want through no fault of their own. The banking collapse had wrecked thousands of business men. Commercial credit had dried up and confidence in banks had ceased to exist. Financial anarchy prevalled.

The first official act of the Roosevelt administration was to close all the banks in the country until they could reopen with good assurance that they would stay open. The activities of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation were promptly expanded, and from March 1933 to February 1936 the R. F. C. assisted banks with loans of $6,531,956,374. The Emergency Banking Act of 1933 and the Banking Act of 1935 put the banking system of the United States onto the soundest basis in its history. That fact is attested by the banks' repayment already of $2,965,621,228 of the loans advanced to them since March 1933.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation was organized. It

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation was organized. It was the first effort ever made by our Government to protect the savings of the American people. Its success is shown in an increase of $6,000,000,000 in the bank deposits of our country and in the now universal confidence in our banks.

These acts are monuments to the sound business policies of this administration. Their value to bankers, to depositors, and to the business people of our country cannot be measured.

We challenge our critics to name one of our banking laws which they would repeal. We challenge comparison of these 3 years of Democratic rule with the last 12 years of Republican rule as they have affected the banking situation in America.

INVESTMENTS

For many years the fraudulent sale of stocks and bonds had gone on unrestrained by the Republican administrations. No Iowa community escaped the ravages of these grafters who bilked our citizens of their savings. Few Iowa banks escaped the purchase of worthless stocks and bonds, whose purchase was ofttimes encouraged or even demanded by the State banking department or the national banking department under Republican administration. The Roosevelt administration gave the country the Securities Act of 1933 and the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, which have put an end to these exploitations and have curbed fraudulent manipulations of the stock exchanges. Have these antistealing laws hurt honest business? Let the record answer. In the first 9 months of 1935 more than twice as many dollars of new securities were issued as during the entire year 1932. The Roosevelt administration is the friend of honest business. It is the enemy of fraudulent business and purposes to continue to be.

Which of these antigraft acts would our critics repeal? For many years the fraudulent sale of stocks and bonds had gone

COMMERCIAL FAILURES

There appears to be a Nation-wide propaganda to scare business. The scare cannot be founded on facts. I say to you that there is not one kind of legitimate business in this Republic that has not been improved by the acts of this Democratic administration. The record shows it beyond cavil. In 1932 there were 31,822 commercial following in the United States. In 1935, there were 2018, 12,185. feilures in the United States. In 1935 there were only 12,185. Every daily newspaper tells of increased earnings and of bigger and better business. I ask any businessman in Iowa if he would exchange 1936 business conditions for those of 1932.

FOREIGN TRADE

Every sound thinker knows that America can never have the fullest employment of labor, the greatest business activity, nor the fullest measure of farm prosperity until our foreign trade has been restored. That trade was wrecked by the narrow, restrictive policies of preceding administrations and by the utter stupidity of that criminal folly, the Hawley-Smoot tariff of 1930. In 1929 our foreign trade was $9,500,000,000. In 1932 it was only $3,100,000,000. Thomas Lamont, President Hoover's Secretary of Commerce, said that the loss of that $6,400,000,000 of foreign business caused the unemployment of more than 3,000,000 American workers. Those 3,000,000 unemployed, with their families, became poor customers for Iowa ham, bacon, pork chops, beefsteak, and butter. Their decreased consumption contributed substantially to cause the surpluses that wrecked the prices of Iowa farm products. Every sound thinker knows that America can never have the pluses that wrecked the prices of Iowa farm products.

The rebuilding of foreign trade is a slow and laborious process, but it is going on successfully. In 1935 it was $1,180,633,142 more than it was in the last year of the Hoover administration. Would our critics destroy that increased business and throw out of work those engaged in it?

A few years ago foreign countries used to buy from us, in pork and lard, the equivalent of 17,000,000 hogs annually. In 1932 their purchases had been reduced to the equivalent of 3,000,000 hogs. The Roosevelt administration purposes to restore as much of that business as possible. Trade agreements have been made with a number of countries that will eventually greatly expand the foreign consumption of American farm products. The agreement with Switzerland is typical, both of the situation that confronted us and of the remedy applied. Switzerland used to buy 90 percent of her Switzerland is typical, both of the situation that comminded us and of the remedy applied. Switzerland used to buy 90 percent of her lard from the United States. Exasperated by the Hawley-Smoot tariff, Switzerland had ceased to buy a single pound of American lard. Under the recent agreement she agrees to buy again 90 percent of her lard from us.

The American people want peace. They abhor the barbarity of war and the stupidity of attempting to settle international difficulties with wholesale slaughter. This administration wants peace. It has announced the policy of the "good neighbor", and it is practicing that policy. It has taken effective measures to link together the peace-loving peoples of the North and South American Continents. The Congress has passed neutrality laws to keep us out of entanglement in future conflicts. The State Department has achieved great success among great difficulties in its efforts to improve our relations with many countries. It is pressing for economic stability as the surest basis for peace. But let us not deceive ourselves. The question of our entrance into another war, if one comes, is going to be decided by the American people themselves. Let us dedicate America to peace. Let us have peace at home, and let us contribute to peace abroad. And let us determine now that if war comes in Europe we shall stay out of it, even though the price we shall have to pay may be the utmost hard though the price we shall have to pay may be the utmost hard times and the most costly dislocation of our economic system.

HOME LOANS

Through all the efforts of this administration may be seen as a principal purpose the desire to help the mass of our citizens, the average man and woman.

Loans to home owners are an example. Hundreds of thousands of American home owners, thrown out of work by the hard times of the Republican administrations, or reduced in circumstances by investment in fraudulent stocks and bonds were about the investment in fraudulent stocks and bonds, were about to lose their homes when this administration came into power. The Home Owners' Loan Corporation was created to help them. In the 30 months since its creation it has made loans to more than a million borrowers, most of whom otherwise would have lost their million borrowers, most of whom otherwise would have lost their homes by foreclosure. Among these million borrowers foreclosure has been taken against less than one-third of 1 percent. Not only did the home owners themselves benefit by this program but the State, county, and municipal governments have benefited to the extent of more than $225,000,000 in delinquent taxes, which were paid in these transactions. Iowa home owners have more than 19,000 of these loans, amounting to more than $37,000,000.

The Federal Housing Act has supplemented the H. O. L. C. and has created business and employment in every county in Iowa.

has created business and employment in every county in Iowa. It was passed in the summer of 1934. Its benefits are indicated by the fact that building permits for residences in the last 3 months of 1935 increased 250 percent over the last 3 months of What fault do our critics find with that program? Was it wrong to save the homes of a million American families?

SOCIAL SECURITY

We have enacted railroad-pension legislation that heretofore couldn't even get a hearing in Congress. No other administration in all history has dealt with the problems of labor with as much sympathy as has been given to them the past 3 years. We have insisted that, so far as the national laws can affect the situation, labor must have good working conditions researched because and labor must have good working conditions, reasonable hours, and labor must have good working conditions, reasonable hours, and fair pay.

In 1935 we passed the Social Security Act. Under it the Federal Government gives aid to the dependent aged, the blind, dependent children, maternal and child welfare, public-welfare service, and vocational rehabilitation. Under it a system of unemployment insurance is set up, providing for contributions by employer and employee to lay something aside against the rainy day of unemployment and old age.

Some say we have not gone far enough. To them we answer that no other government in all the world has ever attempted so much at one time.

Others say that this is socialism or communism. To them we answer, "If this be socialism or communism, so is the Sermon on the Mount, for the principles involved are identical."

RELIEF

The problem of more than 14,000,000 unemployed confronted this administration 3 years ago. To combat it, Nation-wide agencies had to be set up in a hurry. They had no experience to guide them. They entered a new and unexplored field of Federal activity. Errors in policy and mistakes in spending were inevitable. Improved business conditions the past 3 years have given employment to at least 5,000,000 persons, but there are still millions of persons unemployed. Probably the unemployed will be with us for years to come. One modern invention after another makes it possible for a few people to do the work that formerly required many persons. Today Government agencies are supplying work for 3,800,000 persons. Local and State relief are caring for 1,500,000. Each succeeding year of the Roosevelt administration the problem has been dealt with more efficiently and more economically, and the appropriation for next year's relief will be the lowest in 4 years.

AID TO YOUTH

One of the tragedies of the depression was the unemployed young One of the tragedies of the depression was the unemployed young people. Reaching working ages, there was nothing for them to do, and adverse circumstances compelled them to languish in idleness. We established the C. C. C. camps, which have furnished wholesome employment to hundreds of thousands of young men and war veterans, who have contributed $25 each per month to the support of their dependents. Such a program had never been dreamed of by any administration before this one.

We have extended aid to needy and deserving young people who desire to continue their education. More than 103,000 such students have been given aid at one time.

NO SCANDAL IN WASHINGTON

There has been no scandal or suspicion of scandal in Washington in these crowded years. They have criticized the Secretary of the Interior, Mr. Ickes, for his administration of the P. W. A., but his bitterest enemies have admitted his honesty. They have denounced

Harry Hopkins, but they have never accused him of stealing. Not so long ago another administration had a Secretary of the Interior, Albert Fall, who was sent to the penitentiary for attempting to steal the Nation's birthright. There has been no Fall or Forbes or Daugherty or Jesse Smith or Gaston Means in the Roosevelt administration. There have been mistakes, but they have been honest

Am I at all inaccurate when I say that the Republican Party has never done anything effective for the good of Iowa agriculture? It has crucified agriculture on the cross of the high so-called protective tariff. When the administration of President Harding took over the Government from a Democratic administration agriculture over the Government from a Democratic administration agriculture was at the peak of its prosperity. During the succeeding 12 years of the Republican administrations it was reduced step by step to the lowest depths of adversity. In those 12 years three tariff laws were passed, each one higher than its predecessor. Each higher tariff law was followed quickly with lower farm prices; and each higher tariff was followed in some cases by higher prices on the things the farmer had to buy. Each tariff caused retaliation by foreign countries, which contracted and finally almost destroyed the foreign market in which the farmers of America disposed of their surplus products. Finally, after the most monstrous of all tariffs, the Hawley-Smoot tariff, the farmers' surplus stayed at home and the result was 2-cent hogs and 3-cent corn.

History will record that no other administration ever acted so earnestly, so effectively, in the farmers' behalf as has this very Roosevelt administration.

On March 4, 1933, two and a half million American farms were

On March 4, 1933, two and a half million American farms were mortgaged. Five hundred thousand of them were in imminent danger of foreclosure. The Federal land bank, set up by the last Democratic administration, had ceased to function. In 1932, when it was most needed, it loaned only $27,000,000 in the entire United twas most needed, it loaned only $27,000,000 in the entire United States.

What did we do about that situation? We promptly expanded the activities of the Federal land banks. Their rates of 5 percent and 6 percent were lowered to 4½ percent, 4½ percent, and for this current year to 3½ percent. There is no similar type of loan made by any other government land bank in all the world at so low a rate of interest. In 1932, the last Hoover year, at interest rates then prevailing and at prices then prevailing, it took 2,174 bushels of corn or seventy 220-pound hogs to pay the interest on a $10,000 Federal land-bank loan. In 1935, at interest rates then prevailing and at prices then prevailing, it took 425 bushels of corn or nineteen 220-pound hogs to do the same thing.

There were outstanding in Iowa on March 7, 1936, 51,507 Government loans, and they total $257,443,500. That is an average for each Iowa county of more than 500 loans and more than two and one-quarter million dollars. Of this tremendous sum, four-fifths was advanced since the Roosevelt administration came into power. I ask you from your own experience, since the dark days of 1932, how many Iowa farmers would have been dispossessed of their homes if the Roosevelt administration had not come into power? If the Federal land banks had loaned only $27,000,000 in 1933 and only $27,000,000 in 1934, how many thousands of Iowa farmers would have been foreclosed?

Not only hes this administration made real-estate loans at the would have been foreclosed?

Not only has this administration made real-estate loans at the lowest rate in the world but it provided money at low rates for seed and feed and for the ordinary production processes on the farm. It has provided money for farm cooperatives at low rates.

CORN LOANS

Not so many years ago, when corn reached a very low figure, the Republican Secretary of Agriculture offered as his cure for the situation that Iowa farmers burn their corn for fuel. In the fall of 1932 thousands of bushels of Iowa corn were sold for 7 and 8 or 1932 thousands of bushels of lowa corn were sold for 7 and 8 cents a bushel. This Democratic administration had not been in power long until it was lending farmers 45 cents a bushel on their corn, sealed in their own cribs and kept on their own farms.

Permit me to recall an instance. In 1933, when corn was selling at 20 cents a bushel, a Cerro Gordo County farmer, with bills to pay and supplies for his family to buy, had 1,600 bushels of corn in his crib. If he had sold it at 20 cents a bushel he would have received $320 and he would have bed only $320 with which corn in his crib. If he had sold it at 20 cents a bushel he would have received $320, and he would have had only $320 with which to pay the merchant and the doctor and the dentist and to buy from the businessmen of his community. But the Government loaned him 45 cents a bushel on his corn, in his own crib, on his own farm. Then he had $720 with which to pay his obligation and to trade with his merchants. When he came to sell his corn, he received 70 cents a bushel, or $1,120. This one Iowa farmer on one transaction with the Possevelt administration had made $200. received to cents a bushel, or $1,120. This one lows farmer on one transaction with the Roosevelt administration had made $800. And not only had he profited but the business and professional men of his community had profited. Multiply that instance by thousands and you have a picture of the benefit this administration's corn loans conferred upon Iowa farmers and upon Iowa business and professional people.

In 1933 the corn farmers of this country borrowed $120,664,190.24 at 45 cents a bushel. Every cent of that money has been repaid. In 1934 they borrowed $4,323,884.68 at 55 cents a bushel. Every cent of that has been repaid. Never in American history has there been another administration that has done that sort of there been another administration that has done that sort of practical thing for Iowa farmers.

The Roosevelt administration was confronted with two agricultural problems: First, to provide credit in a hurry at low rates of interest. That was done efficiently and successfully. The second problem was to raise the prices of farm commodities. That was the job on which the Hoover Farm Board had failed so miserably and had squandered a half billion dollars.

No action by individual farmers, no action by individual States could hope to deal with the problem of overproduction of farm products. Only the National Government could provide the necessary national plan for united action. That was done in the Agricultural Adjustment Act. You know of its success, but let me remind you of some of the official figures. On March 15, 1933, the average price received by Iowa farmers for corn was 13 cents a bushel; for hogs, $3.20 a hundredweight; for butter, 17 cents a pound; for eggs, 8½ cents a dozen. On December 15, 1935, they received 46 cents for corn, $8.80 for hogs, 33 cents for butter, and 26 cents for eggs.

The A. A. A. proposed to do for the farmers what any factory would have done for itself in the face of a declining market; it restricted the production to fit the demand. But not only did the administration give the farmers a plan for business-like curtailment of production, but by putting people to work and improving business it expanded home consumption. The result has been that in less than 3 years the American farmers have been advanced from the depths of depression a long way on their road back to the prosperity which they deserve.

Up until December 31, 1935, Iowa farmers had received in benefit payments the stupendous sum of $93,292,030.60. That was fit payments the stupendous sum of $93,292,030.60. That was spending Government money in Iowa, for Iowans, where Iowans could see it.

The Supreme Court invalidated the A. A. A. Congress promptly appropriated money to finish the payments still due on the 1935 contracts. More than $22,000,000 will yet be paid to Iowa farmers out of that appropriation.

But the benefit payments made to reward farmers who reduced out of that appropriation.

But the benefit payments made to reward farmers who reduced their production and thereby made the A. A. A. program possible—those were, by far, the smaller part of the farmers' gain. Their principal gain was the increase in the prices of the products they sold. In the last year of the Wilson administration the total gross income of American farmers was $13,600,000,000. In the last year of the Hoover administration it had fallen to $5,300,000,000. That of the Hoover administration it had fallen to $5,300,000,000. That difference of $8,300,000,000 meant the ruin of hundreds of thousands of American farmers, the foreclosure of tens of thousands of American farms, while the Hoover administration did not one effective thing to avert the catastrophe or to rescue its victims. That difference of $8,000,000,000 in the farmers' income ruined thousands of businessmen in cities and towns such as we have in Iowa, whose prosperity rises and falls precisely with that of farmers.

By 1935 the gross income of American farmers, which had sunk to $5,300,000,000 under Hoover, had risen to $8,110,000,000 under Franklin D. Roosevelt. The farmer has money again. The merchant and the lawyer, the doctor and the dentist, who had sunk into the mire with the farmers, they, too, have money and the best business in many years. Is this administration dangerous to business? Let the record of business the past 3 years in any town in Iowa answer that question.

SOIL CONSERVATION ACT

Your Congress has devised a successor to the A. A., A., the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act. In that program farm land will be taken out of production of crops and put into production of fertility. In administering that program it is hoped and believed that ruinous farm surpluses will be avoided. Its enact-believed that ruinous farm surpluses will be avoided. Its enactment again demonstrates that this administration has the welfare of agriculture as its principal concern.

In 1932 I stated scores of times that not one farmer in the Fourth Icwa District would make a single dollar that year, figuring his investment and overhead. That statement has never been called into question to this day, so far as I know. Today farmers are making money in every county in Iowa. Iowa business and professional men are making money, because the Roosevelt policies have made it possible for their farmer customers to bring cash into the cities and towns of this State. At last Iowa farmers have a place in the sun and they are going to keep it, so long as this administration is in power. And we have confidence, so far as Iowa is concerned, that the farmers are going to see to it that the Roosevelt administration continues in power. Roosevelt administration continues in power.

THE PUBLIC DEBT

They say that we have spent too much money. One reason why that appeals to us Iowans is that we were not used to seeing the Federal Government spend money in Iowa. We have been content with reading about expenditures on the Atlantic seaboard. In the past 3 years, for the first time, Iowans have seen the Federal Government spend money in Iowa for the good of Iowans the Federal Government spend money in lowa for the good of Iowans.

The World War increased our debt $24,000,000,000. Did anyone say it was costing too much to kill people in 1917 and 1918? Did anyone say, "We must stop killing people because it is too expensive"? No; the universal cry was that we should continue in the killing business, regardless of cost, until we had killed enough to win the victory.

During the past 3 years we have been engaged in a great war on a hundred economic fronts. We have been engaged in a great war not only to rescue 130,000,000 people from the depths of depression, but we have been engaged in a gigantic struggle to pression, but we have been engaged in a gigantic struggle to destroy the causes of these disasters, lest they again bring us economic wreck and ruin at some future date. In this great peacetime struggle we have increased the public debt not twenty-four billion but nine billion.

The Hoover administration increased the public debt five and one-half billion. In those disastrous 4 years, while the debt was increasing five and one-half billion, the wealth of the Nation decreased one hundred and fourteen billion—and more than twenty billion of it was in the value of American farms. The Hoover administration increased the public debt five and one-half billion, and in 1932 the annual income of the American people was fifty-one billion less than it was the year Mr. Hoover took office.

We have increased the public debt nine billion, but the wealth of the Nation has increased $50,000,000,000 since Roosevelt took office.

In 1935 the income of the American people was fifteen billion dol-lars more than it was the last year of the Hoover administration.

Judged by the results, which expenditure of public money was good business—that by the Hoover administration or that by the Roosevelt administration?

PRESERVING THE REPUBLIC

The Liberty League and the Du Ponts and others of their turn of mind charge that this Democratic administration has conspired to change our form of government. To get a rational view of that charge, let us look a little at American history. Thomas Jefferson, the founder of the Democratic Party, wrote the Declaration of Independence, which is the cornerstone of the philosophy upon Midependence, which is the cornerstone of the philosophy upon which our form of government was built. Another Democrat, James Madison, wrote the Constitution of the United States, about which the Liberty Leaguers are so concerned now, though 3 short years ago some of them declared it should be put into cold storage. Another Democrat, James Monroe, promulgated the Monroe Doctrine, which has preserved our form of government inviolate on the transfer of the contract of the state of th the two American continents for more than a hundred years. A little more history: Every foot of ground that has been added to the Thirteen Original States between the Atlantic Ocean and the Pacific and between Canada and Mexico was added by some Democratic administration and put under our form of government. cratic administration and put under our form of government. Our form of government in danger from a Democratic administration? Who gave us our form of government? Who preserved it from selfish interests and from demagogues? Call the roll of the Democratic architects and defenders of our form of government—Jefferson, Madison, Monroe, Andrew Jackson, Samuel J. Tilden, Grover Cleveland, Woodrow Wilson, and Franklin D. Roosevelt. If in some evil day some political party attempts to change our form of government or to undermine our Republic's greatness, it will be some party that has had far less to its credit in founding and in preserving this Government and far less in making this Nation great than has the historic party of the plain people, the great Democratic Party. cratic Party.

On March 4, 1933, the faith of the American people in our form of government had been severely tried. Some had lost faith. Some men, who now invoke the Constitution, declared that America some men, who how invoke the Constitution, declared that America needed a dictator. The Roosevelt administration has restored the American people's faith in our form of government. It has silenced the cry for a dictator. It has proved to our Nation and to the world that a republic can survive an economic cataclysm, "and that government of the people, by the people, and for the people shall not perish from the earth."

IN THE SPIRIT OF FAIR PLAY

Mr. RABAUT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD on a bill introduced by me last Thursday.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. RABAUT. Mr. Speaker, in the spirit of fair play I introduced H. R. 12243, a bill to correct a discrimination against certain cities and counties which borrowed for relief purposes from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation under title I of the Emergency Relief and Construction Act of 1932. This bill is designed to release such cities and counties from the obligation to repay these loans, which loans were made for the same purposes that similar loans were made to States, and which latter loans have been canceled, in excess of the sum of two hundred and eighty millions. The city of Detroit is vitally interested, and from the conference of mayors I am assured that other political subdivisions of government, which will be affected by the passage of this bill, are also most keenly interested. As I said in the beginning, the bill is introduced solely in the spirit of fair play.

STATEMENT OF FACTS REGARDING R. F. C. LOANS TO CITIES AND COUNTIES UNDER THE EMERGENCY RELIEF AND CONSTRUCTION ACT OF 1932

The Emergency Relief and Construction Act of 1932-Public, No. 302, Seventy-second Congress, approved July 21, 1932-authorized the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, first, to make $300,000,000 available for loans to States and cities for the relief of destitution; and second, to make loans or contracts up to $1,500,000,000 to finance self-liquidating public-works projects in States and municipalities.

This act represented the first participation, on the part of the Federal Government, in the relief and unemployment picture—first, by making loans to States, counties, and cities for direct relief purposes, and second, by providing the funds, on a loan basis, to stimulate employment through a publicworks program.

Two alternative procedures for obtaining relief loans were provided for in the act itself. On the one hand, a State might secure a Federal advance by having the Governor make an application in which he showed the need for relief funds and the State's lack of resources. These loans were to be repaid out of future road grants to the State.

According to section 1 (b) of the act, repayment would be accomplished in such cases-

By making annual deductions beginning with the fiscal year 1935 from regular apportionments made from future Federal authorizations in aid of the States and Territories for the construction of highways and rural post roads, of an amount equal to onefifth of the share which such State or Territory would be entitled to receive under such apportionment, * * or an amount equal to one-fifth of the amounts so paid to the Governor of such State or Territory pursuant to this section, whichever is the lesser, until the sum of such deductions equals the total amounts paid under this section and all accrued interest thereon.

On the other hand, loans might be made direct to cities and counties, through the Governor, if secured by evidences of indebtedness on the part of the political subdivisions. Repayment in such cases would be subject to interest at the rate of 3 percent per year, and according to such terms as the Corporation and the municipality or county might agree

Any portion of the amount approved by the Corporation for payment to the Governor of a State or Territory shall, at his request, and with the approval of the Corporation, be paid to any municipality or political subdivision of such State or Territory if (1) the Governor makes as to such municipality or political subdivision a like certificate as provided in subsection (c) as to the State or Territory, and (2) such municipality or political subdivision enters into an agreement with the Corporation for the repayment to the Corporation of the amount so paid, with interest at the rate of 3 percent per annum, at such times, and upon such other terms and conditions, as may be agreed upon between the Corporation and such municipality or political subdivision. The amount paid to any municipality or political subdivision under this subsection shall not be included in any amounts reimbursable to the Corporation under subsection (b) of this section. (Subsection (e), sec. 1, title I, Public, No. 302, 72d Cong.) 72d Cong.)

The sums lent to cities and counties were to be a direct obligation of the cities and counties and not payable by deductions from State highway grants as were the loans to States, although both loans were for the same purpose: namely, relief.

When the new administration took office on March 4, 1933. almost every State in the Union had been an applicant for relief loans for itself or for its counties or cities, and the $300,000,000 fund was practically exhausted. By the "close of business' as provided under title I, which took place May 29, 1933, 42 States and 2 Territories-Hawaii and Puerto Rico-had been recipients of relief loans from the Corporation. Approximately $3,500,000 had been lent to cities in the States of Michigan, North Dakota, and Ohio and sixteen millions to counties in the States of Illinois, New York, North Dakota, Ohio, and Washington, making a total of nearly twenty millions advanced to local governments. By the middle of October 1935, the R. F. C. had recovered $538,000 on these loans to municipalities, chiefly through the sale of city obligations to private buyers.

Now, the important aspect of these relief loans from the R. F. C. $300,000,000 fund is that in effect the loans made to the States have been canceled, while the loans made to the cities and counties remain binding obligations upon these local governments which were forced to borrow to meet relief needs. Section 14 of Public, No. 393, Seventy-third Congress, wiped out advances to the States and converted such advances into straight grants. This section provided that-

No deductions shall hereafter be made on account of prior advances and/or loans to the States for the construction of roads under the requirements of the Federal Highway Act or on account of amounts paid under the provisions of title I of the Emergency Relief and Construction Act of 1932 for furnishing relief and work relief to needy and distressed people.

This means that the Government has canceled probably two hundred and eighty millions advanced to the States but is requiring three and one-half millions advanced to the cities to be repaid, as well as the sixteen millions advanced to the counties. It is realized that nineteen and one-half millions is not a tremendous sum, but to the particular cities and counties concerned the sums involved are important when these communities are continuing to face a tremendous relief burden

No reason has yet been advanced for the above discrimination in favor of the States. Why States should be permitted to have their loans canceled while the borrowing cities and counties must repay the loans made seems on the face of it a policy so unjust as to warrant immediate congressional action.

The question is, On what basis does the Federal Government convert $280,000,000 of loans to States into outright grants and yet at the same time hold 32 local political subdivisions of these same States to the obligation to repay approximately nineteen and one-half millions?

The cities and counties are not desirous of evading any responsibility to the Federal Government, but they do object to being discriminated against. They must be treated on the same basis as the State governments.

R. F. C. loans to cities and counties for relief made under authority of the Emergency Relief and Construction Act of 1932 (sec. 1, subsec. (e), of title I), which obligations this bill seeks to cancel

CITIES
Michigan: Detroit	The second second
Flint	296, 000
Muskegon Heights	20,000
Ohio:
Alliance
Canton
Cuyahoga Falls
Cleveland
Dayton
Niles
Warren
North Dakota: Minot	10,000
COUNTIES
Illinois: Cook	410 050 000
	$12, 252, 000
Ohio:	The same of the sa
Cuyahoga
Lorain
Mahoning
Montgomery
Stark	destruction of the latter of t
Summit
Trumbull	177, 500
Washington:
Grays Harbor	105, 000
Kings	675,000
Pierce	190,000
Snohomish	105,000
New York:
Nassau	200,000
North Dakota:
Bowman	10,000
Burke
Burleigh
Divide	8, 100
Mercer
Mountrail	4,000
Ward
Williams	40,000
	13, 100

Under title I of the Emergency Relief and Construction Act of 1932, the following States borrowed funds from the R. F. C. for relief purposes:

Alabama	$4, 211, 688
Arizona
Arkansas	4, 833, 967
California
Colorado
Florida	3, 886, 512
Georgia
Idaho
Illinois
Indiana
Iowa
Kansas
Kentucky
Louisiana
Maine
Maryland	176, 380
Michigan
Minnesota
Mississippi
Missouri
Montana
Nevada

New Hampshire	*1,366,603
New Jersey	2,009,291
New Mexico
New York
North Carolina
North Dakota
Ohio
Oklahoma
Oregon
Pennsylvania	34, 929, 875
Rhode Island	1, 123, 590
South Carolina.
South Dakota
Tennessee
Texas	그의 장마리 이 하는 맛을 때 모든 이 보고 있다고 말았다.
Utah
Virginia
Washington
West Virginia
Wisconsin

Under the law these loans were to be repaid out of future Federal highway grants to the State. However, under section 14 of Public, No. 393, Seventy-third Congress, the above loans have been wiped out and converted into straight grants. The total thus canceled amounts to approximately two hundred and eighty millions.

In view of the above facts, the cities and counties acting in the emergency to furnish relief and work relief to the needy and distressed should be entitled to the same consideration as has been accorded to the States.

AMENDING THE FEDERAL RESERVE ACT

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I present a privileged report providing for the consideration of Senate Joint Resolution 230.

The resolution is as follows:

House Resolution 485 (Rept. No. 2395)

Resolved, That upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of Senate Joint Resolution 230, a Senate joint resolution amending paragraph (4) of subsection (n) of section 12B of the Federal Reserve Act, as amended. That after general debate, which shall be confined to the joint resolution and continue not to exceed 1 hour, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Banking and Currency, the joint resolution shall be read for amendment under the 5-minute rule. At the conclusion of the reading of the joint resolution for amendment the Committee shall rise and report the same to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted, and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the joint resolution and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit, with or without instructions.

The resolution was referred to the House Calendar and ordered printed.

LET'S EXAMINE RECORD OF ROOSEVELT AND CONGRESS—SUMMARY OF NEW DEAL PROGRESS

Mr. COLDEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD on the record of President Roosevelt and Congress.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. COLDEN. Mr. Speaker, it is a privilege to participate in the humanitarian and progressive program of President Roosevelt. This history-making epoch has been stirring and inspiring. I submit a brief review of part of the achievements of the New Deal.

RELIEF FOR MEN, HOMES, AND BUSINESS

- 1. The Roosevelt administration has provided food for the hungry, milk for babes, and work for nearly 4,000,000 unemployed.
- 2. Congress has appropriated $3,300,000,000 and $4,880,-000,000 for relief and recovery, and has under consideration a further appropriation of $1,500,000,000. Roosevelt has allocated California $275,646,884 for relief, $2 for one contributed by our State. California ranks third in appropriations received for relief.
- 3. The Emergency Banking Act rescued the banks of this country from bankruptcy. Roosevelt inherited a deficit of $5,438,458,311 from the Hoover administration. The unhappy and forgetful Herbert potted his chickens around the corner before they hatched.

- 4. Banks were reorganized and financially strengthened. Railroad, insurance, investment, building and loan companies, and industries were saved from ruin.
- 5. The Home Owners Loan Corporation saved approximately a million homes from foreclosure. The Government loans amounted to around $3,000,000,000, and 500,000 farms were saved by loans amounting to $2,000,000,000.
- 6. The C. C. C.—Civilian Conservation Corps—rehabilitated a half million young men who were tramping the streets and highways. From their pay of $30 per month, $25 per month was assigned to a mother, father, or other dependents.
- 7. The National Youth Movement has kept 289,000 young men and women in our high schools, colleges, and universities.

RECOVERY AND RECONSTRUCTION

- 8. The P. W. A.—Public Works Administration—has afforded employment for millions and aided in the construction of highways, bridges, courthouses, schoolhouses, sewers, storm drains, parks, playgrounds, municipal utilities, and public improvements of every kind and character.
- 9. Government agencies financed the power line from Boulder Dam to Los Angeles; the metropolitan aqueduct from the Colorado River; the All-American Canal in the Imperial Valley; the San Francisco Bay bridges, the Central Valley project, highways, and other projects.
- 10. Examples of recovery are found on every hand. Bank deposits are the highest in the history of this country. Automobile production has increased 189 percent.

LABOR AND THE WORKER

- 11. The N. R. A.—the National Recovery Act—which has been nullified by the Supreme Court, was the most helpful labor legislation ever enacted in this country. It increased wages and reduced hours in many industries, particularly in the cotton mills and coal mines where wages were wretched. The N. R. A. abolished child labor. Since the Supreme Court decision the employment of children of the ages of 14 and 15 increased 55 percent in 7 months, as compared with the entire year 1934 under the N. R. A. The N. R. A. legalized collective bargaining and recognized organized labor.
- 12. The National Labor Relations Board also recognizes the right of labor to organize and to bargain collectively. It provides machinery for settling disputes to protect the worker, the employer, and the public from disastrous strikes.
- 13. Congress has enacted a law establishing employment agencies throughout the Nation to help the unemployed and to protect them from racketeering employment bureaus.
- 14. The Guffey bill protects coal miners in hours and wages.
- 15. Roosevelt and Congress provided the present Railway Arbitration Act.
- 16. A retirement and pension system for railway workers to take the place of a previous law declared unconstitutional.
- 17. The United States entered the International Labor Organization at Geneva, Switzerland, an organization for the purpose of increasing wages, reducing hours, the introduction of safety measures, the protection of mothers and children throughout the world.

OLD-AGE PENSIONS AND SOCIAL SECURITY

- 18. Under the leadership of President Roosevelt Congress passed a social-security bill. The Federal Government will match the old-age pension of the States, dollar for dollar, up to $15 a month at the age limit of 65 years and also provides for the needy blind. It is estimated that California will benefit a million dollars monthly by complying with the Social Security Act. It will help many old folks.
- 19. The Social Security Act aids mothers' pensions and contributes one-third of the total expenditures up to $18 a month for one child and to $12 a month for each additional child in the home. It aids widows and orphans.
- 20. The Social Security Act provides an appropriation of $3,800,000 a year to cooperating States for the Children's Bureau for mother-child health projects, treatment for crippled children, and vocational teaching for the handicapped.

- 21. The Social Security Act provides an appropriation of $8,000,000 per year to the States for public health.
- 22. The Social Security Act sets up a workers' annuity plan under Federal control. To illustrate: A young man of 35, beginning in 1937, after 30 years of service, at 65, will receive a monthly pension of $42.50 if his average monthly wage is $100. Under this plan he will have contributed $900 during his 30 years of employment, but if he lives out a normal life, he will receive $5,100 in benefits.
- 23. The Social Security Act provides for unemployment insurance. It is estimated that it will pay the worker half his usual wages up to $15 per week for a period of from 15 to 16 weeks each year.

ROOSEVELT AIDS THE PARMER

- 24. The A. A. A. declared unconstitutional, increased the farmers' income $3,000,000,000, but big boys, including Hoover's son, got too much.
- 25. A new agricultural bill has been enacted by Congress, providing for soil conservation and royalties by which the farmer who complies will receive limited compensation.
- 26. Federal land banks assist farmers in refinancing, extending the term of the loan over a period of years at a lower interest than heretofore; also cooperative banks to extend credit to farmer cooperatives to assist them in marketing and buying. Other aids provide the farmer with seed for planting and crop credits.

HOUSING AND HOMESTEADS

- 27. In addition to the H. O. L. C., the F. H. A.—the Federal Housing Administration—has aided in the modernization of homes.
- 28. Subsistence homesteads, garden homes, are sold on easy terms at a low rate of interest to workers who have only part-time employment. Live and help live.
- The Resettlement Administration aids farmers living on worn-out lands to obtain areas that are productive of a decent livelihood.
- 30. Reforestation and national parks, prevention of erosion, control of floods, development of navigation, reclamation, irrigation, and drainage are all important features of conservation and national planning.

MONEY AND BANKING

- 31. This administration has abrogated gold contracts and denies the unfair privilege of the money lender who gives a check on a bank to demand the payment of interest and principal in gold coin.
- 32. The gold content of the dollar has been reduced to 59 cents to help restore the purchasing price of the dollar to the 1926 level. This enables the borrower to pay in dollars with the same purchasing value that he received. The appreciation of the gold dollar has been disastrous to millions of borrowers. Gold fluctuations upset business.
- 33. All money—gold, silver, greenbacks, Treasury and bank notes—is now a full legal tender in payment of all debts, both public and private. This is one of the important steps in financial legislation in our history.
- 34. The dollar of today is approaching a managed dollar basis in order to give the buyer and seller, worker and employer, borrower and lender, an honest dollar of uniform purchasing value.
- 35. Guaranty of deposits has restored confidence in banks. There were 11,118 bank failures under Harding, Coolidge, and Hoover and only 36 since with insured deposits. William J. Bryan was jeered for advocating this beneficial program.
- 36. The Government control of the Federal Reserve banks has been strengthened. The Reserve Bank of New York no longer dominates the other 11 Reserve centers, and the financial capital of the United States has been removed from Wall Street back to Washington. Applaud this.
- 37. Federal credit unions have been authorized and permits the organization of lending cooperatives and frees borrowers from the clutches of the loan shark. It is good.
 - 38. The Export-Import Bank promotes foreign trade.
- 39. The price and use of silver has been augmented and stabilized by the requirement that the Treasury reserve shall be 25 percent silver and 75 percent gold.

40. The national debt has been refunded at lower interest, saving the taxpayers millions of dollars per year.

STOCK EXCHANGES AND UTILITIES

41. Stock exchanges have been placed under regulation to curb "the shearing of the lamb", a favorite Wall Street sport.

42. The Wheeler-Rayburn law to curb utility racketeers. Millions were spent to defeat this measure.

43. The T. V. A .- the Tennessee Valley Authority-is a Government agency to operate the Muscle Shoals Dam and power plant. Rates have been reduced one-half and in some instances to one-third to consumers. Senator Norris fought

44. The T. V. A. has been authorized to build other dams, improve navigation, control floods, produce light and power, manufacture fertilizer, reforestation, and prevent erosion. It is the first attempt on a large scale to carry out national planning. It is building a new South.

45. The Electric Home and Farm Authority enables the consumers to purchase refrigerators, washing machines, and other electrical appliances at reduced prices on an installment plan, and is of benefit to the consumer, worker, merchant, and manufacturer. 46. The R. E. A. recently passed to aid farmers in the construction of transmission lines in order to enjoy light and 47. The F. C. C .- the Federal Communications Commission—has been given supervision and control over telegraphs. telephones, and radio in order to protect the public from many long-standing abuses.

VETERANS AND NATIONAL DEFENSE

48. Congress has provided for the payment of the adjustedservice certificates, the "bonus", a debt to the veterans of the World War. The President vetoed but Congress repassed this measure.

49. Pensions of the Spanish War veterans were restored to approximately $45,000,000 per year; the veterans of the Philippine Insurrection were voted travel pay by the House.

50. The reception of the "bonus army" under the humanitarian policy of President Roosevelt stands in marked contrast to the ruthless and disgraceful treatment accorded to veterans by the previous administration.

51. "The good neighbor policy" of President Roosevelt has established good feeling in North and South America and is recognized as a sound and friendly policy among nations.

52. The neutrality law contributes to the peace of the world and is a strong factor in keeping us out of war.

53. Congress is giving consideration to measures that will eliminate profit in war. This is a desirable step.

54. National defense has been improved. The efficiency of the Army and the Navy has been increased, and the Pacific coast has been given consideration.

WOMANHOOD HONORED

55. Following the example of the Wilson administration in aiding women to vote, the recognition of womanhood has been one of the outstanding policies of the New Deal. For the first time a woman occupies a position in the Cabinet-Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor-Ruth Bryan Owen, the first American woman Minister to a foreign country; Nellie Tayloe Ross, the first woman Director of the Mint; Josephine Roche, Assistant Secretary, Treasury Department; Miss Florence E. Allen, judge of United States Circuit Court of Appeals, Ohio.

56. The Interstate Commerce Commission has ordered a substantial reduction in railway fares that will increase public convenience and the income of the railways.

57. Repeal of the eighteenth amendment and increased revenues.

58. The record of the "G-men" in the capture of notorious criminals-Dillinger, Capone, Baby-face Nelson, Hauptmann, and many others.

59. The increase of income and inheritance taxes in the upper brackets; the capture of taxes from the Morgans, Mellons, Mitchells, Raskobs, Du Ponts, and other fat dodgers.

60. Congress has under consideration a tax plan to reach immense surpluses of giant corporations. Hear 'em yelp.

61. Canceled the air-mail contracts that were made in collusion and saved millions to the Government.

62. A reciprocal-tariff law which has increased foreign trade and widened the markets for California products.

63. One of the commendable achievements of this administration is the enemies it has made—the American Liberty League, the agencies of predatory wealth and reaction, the subsidized press, the rugged racketeers who pluck and pilfer from the pockets of the poor. The only escape from greed, ruin, and revolution is on with the New Deal; on with social and economic justice; on with Roosevelt. In the words of Admiral Farragut, "Full speed ahead! Damn the torpedoes!"

COMMITTEE ON MILITARY AFFAIRS-PERMISSION TO SIT DURING SESSIONS OF HOUSE

Mr. McSWAIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Military Affairs may be permitted to sit during the sessions of the House tomorrow, Tuesday, and the following day, Wednesday.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

THE LATE JAMES M. BECK

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, one of the books in my library that I value highly is May It Please the Court, by Hon. James M. Beck. Inside of it, written with a pen, is "To my friend and colleague, Hon. Thomas L. Blanton, with the best of wishes of James M. Beck. February 10, 1931."

Mr. Speaker, some of the greatest speeches ever made from this floor on the Constitution, on Abraham Lincoln, on George Washington, on Thomas Jefferson, and on Shakespeare were made by the Honorable James M. Beck, who passed away yesterday. I ask unanimous consent that those speeches may be printed together as a House document. It would be one of the finest and most valuable documents that we could place in the hands of the school children of the United States.

The SPEAKER. Has the gentleman taken that up with the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. LAMBETH], the chairman of the Committee on Printing?

Mr. BLANTON. I did in a previous Congress, and it was agreeable to him. I have not taken it up with the present chairman of the Committee on Printing.

The SPEAKER. The Chair suggests that the gentleman take that up with the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr.

Mr. BLANTON. I shall, and then present my unanimous request later. I withdraw it for the present.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 15 seconds.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, yesterday the Nation lost one of its most brilliant sons and the Constitution its best friend when James M. Beck died.

THE CONSTITUTION AND THE SUPREME COURT

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks and to include therein a radio address I delivered over the Yankee network on Friday last.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, under the leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I include the following address which I delivered over the radio on April 9:

The greater part of our Constitution is about 147 years old. It is not necessary to tell you of the events and circumstances under which it was framed. We all know that it resulted from a lack of individual freedom and from oppression. Our forefathers of colonial America found that the old regulations and restrictions had followed them to their new land and that they did not enjoy even the freedom guaranteed to English subjects by the Magna Carta and the English Bill and Petition of Rights. Then fol-lowed the protest against "taxation without representation", with the resultant break from the ties of England.

To safeguard their freedom and their rights they framed the Federal Constitution, and into it went all of the lessons learned through years of oppression and domination. They knew through bitter experience the disastrous consequences resulting from conbitter experience the disastrous consequences resulting from concentration of power. They saw that the old order must be reversed—that the people are the masters, the Government and its officers their servants. In simple, understandable language it cleared the American air of intolerance and discrimination.

This document was framed by the master minds of their generation, who had full knowledge of the political needs of that era and of the remedies required. They were men of the deepest learning and experience.

During this period of 147 years since the Constitution was drawn the Government and the people of the United States experienced tremendous and far-reaching economic and social changes, and the Constitution through it all was the basic foundation upon which this Government depended.

Its existence has survived four major wars and the greatest industrial and social changes in the history of the world. The Nation has grown from 13 States to 48 States; from the towers of Manhattan to the Golden Gate, and from the Great Lakes to the Gulf; from a few million to a huge country of 125 000 000 people. Gulf; from a few million to a huge country of 125,000,000 people. Yes, from the "horse and buggy" and mud roads to thousands of miles of concrete highways, high-speed automobiles, and railroads miles of concrete highways, high-speed automobiles, and railroads with steam and electric trains; from message by carrier to the telegraph and telephone; from the wooden horse plow and cradle to the mechanical powered multiple plow and huge combine; from clipper ships on the sea to clipper ships over the sea, and around-the-world flights; from the wooden age to the iron age, to the steel age, to the electrical age, this great Nation has passed. And during all of this progress the Constitution has been steadily applicable and adequate as the basic law of the land. It has even encountered, and weathered severe depressions on previous encountered and weathered severe depressions on previous occasions.

Wisely and with remarkable foresight, the framers of the Con-Wisely and with remarkable foresight, the framers of the Constitution provided for a method for changing it. But in prescribing that method they again protected the people. Neither the President, Congress, nor the Supreme Court can make such a change. Such responsibility is reserved for the people, and the people alone. In that fact lies our security, our independence, and our freedom from oppressing regulation. The American people have shown from the beginning that they believe the Constitution is the very background of their stability as a Nation. That they are very chary of changing it is proved by the fact that it takes such a long time to adopt an amendment. That is the only way our charter of rights should be changed. That is the will of the people.

Our forefathers were suspicious of government. That was why they were so careful to be sure that the Government must never be permitted to become a menace to the honest citizen conducting an Article III of the Constitution provides that the judicial power of the United States shall be vested in one Supreme Court and in such inferior courts as the Congress may from time to time ordain and establish. According to some noted commentators on the Constitution, the function of the Supreme Court is to determine the rights and duties of parties in accord with the Federal Constitution rights and duties of parties in accord with the Federal Constitution. The Court deals with cases, not with general questions of constitutional interpretation. It determines which of two opposing parties has the better right in accord with the law. It does not nullify acts of Congress (as some people think), but rather just refuses to enforce any act which would operate to deprive one of the parties to the suit of rights given to him by the Constitution. The Court only deals with acts of Congress when they are involved in a law suit between parties and over which it has jurisdiction. The Court has no power to determine for Congress, the President, the Attorney General, or anyone the validity or invalidity of such an act.

During the last few years we have heard much criticism of the

During the last few years we have heard much criticism of the Constitution and the Supreme Court. It has been asserted that the Constitution is a worn-out instrument adapted to early American conditions, and that it should be reconstructed, rewritten, or abolished entirely. Suggestions have been made that the Supreme Court be increased in number, that its power be taken away and placed in the hands of the legislative branch.

While all of us view these assaults on our traditional form of government with alarm, still we realize that they come from those with selfish interests and not from the great mass of people who are protected by the Constitution. New England would stand to lose much by any such change—more so than any other section of the country. New England paid more in processing taxes and would be obliged to do so again in the event of such a change.

obliged to do so again in the event of such a change.

The American farmer is truly loyal to his Government and to his country. He will not tolerate such assertions regarding the Constitution and the Supreme Court, let alone make them. The same can be said of industry. The workers of agriculture and industry built this great land of freedom and liberty. They will not countenance the abolition of the greatest charter in the history of government. They realize that every attempt against the Constitution has been made with one purpose in view—to obtain more authority over the people and to leave the people with less authority over their own affairs.

These cries for a change of form of government come from certain groups and classes of citizens who are literally clamoring at the door of the Public Treasury, demanding public moneys through tain groups and classes of citizens who are literally clamoring at the door of the Public Treasury, demanding public moneys through special privilege, at the expense of the public at large. When their schemes are frustrated by the safeguards of the Constitution their attention is turned to an attack upon those safeguards. It is no new thing; the Constitution has been criticized and assailed throughout the entire existence of our Republic.

It is especially encouraging to note the wholehearted manner in which the women of America have protested against such at-

Through their organizations, both political and nonpolitical, they have gone on record as being strenuously opposed to any move to break down our traditional and proved form of govern-move to break down our traditional and proved form of government. It is most reassuring.

The worker in the mill and the laborer on the farm have come to realize, through education by way of the press and the radio, that any program which has as its object the regimentation or regulation of output of either crops or manufactures, is against their own best interests. They know that such regimentation means a scarcity of work; someone must be laid off to control output. When the Supreme Court by its decisions protects their interests, they know and realize that their form of government has again been proved the fairest and most just for all in every walk of life.

We have only to turn our eyes to the other nations of the world and compare our opportunities and privileges with theirs. It is easier to own a motor car in the United States than it is to own a bicycle anywhere else in the world. None of us would change places with a German under Hitler, an Italian under Mussolini, or a Russian bowing to the will of a Stalin. Other countries look with amazement upon certain Americans who are willing to scrap a system of government that has been the envy of all nations and the model for many. Doubtless there are nations that would be only too glad to see this country descend to their level, making our laws imitate theirs and our standards of living on a lower plane with theirs. We of America should be—and the majority of us are—content to be bound by the safeguards of a written document, one that has been tested and proved, and that has served to bring freedom, progress, and happiness as has no other document in the history of the world.

THE WAGNER-ELLENBOGEN LOW-COST HOUSING BILL HAS RECEIVED THE ENDORSEMENT OF THE SCRIPPS-HOWARD NEWSPAPERS

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD on the Wagner-Ellenbogen housing bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. Mr. Speaker, I am sure that it will be of interest to the Members of Congress to know that to the many pledges of support and aid which have come forward since the introduction of the Wagner-Ellenbogen lowrent housing bill several weeks ago has now been added the endorsement of the Scripps-Howard chain of newspapers.

In an editorial which appeared in the Pittsburgh Press on April 11, 1936, and in other Scripps-Howard papers, the Wagner-Ellenbogen bill is recognized as a "rallying point" for all those who recognize that an effective housing program is a vital part of any national system of social progress.

Stating that the proposed legislation is "more statesmanlike than any slum-abatement plan so far broached", the editorial points out that "it corrects five mistakes that have marred former rehousing efforts." Analyzing the bill's specific provisions, the editorial further commends the rectification of these mistakes. It calls attention to the fact that-

First, it fathers all Federal housing activities under one head—the United States Housing Authority, a board of five, with the Interior Secretary as ex-officio member. Today housing functions are scattered through several agencies in Washington.

Next, it recognizes rehousing as not only an emergency, makework project, but as a long-term construction job. It is a 4-year program.

Program.

Next, it decentralizes building activities. Federal loans and grants are to be made to local housing authorities, except for certain demonstration projects conducted by the Government "where local instrumentalities are inadequate." It is absurd to expect Uncle Sam to act as a landlord and rent collector.

expect Uncle Sam to act as a landlord and rent collector.

Next, it confines Government aid to a field that private capital has relinquished—truly low-cost housing. Previous efforts under the Federal Housing Administration, limited-dividend corporations, and P. W. A. have resulted in costs that put good housing beyond reach of the low-bracket incomes. The best result in recent housing provides homes renting monthly for $9.50 a room. Even at $7.50 a room a normal family of five would have to pay $315 a year in rent. Considering that 12,000,000 families had incomes of less than $1,000 a year in 1929, this is far too much.

Finally, the Wagner-Ellenbogen bill's financing plans are less grandiose than those hitherto broached. For 1937 self-liquidating loans to local housing authorities would be limited to one hunloans to local housing authorities would be limited to one hundred millions and for the 3 next years to one hundred and fifty millions. Grants are limited to fifty-one million in 1937, seventyfive million the next, and one hundred million for the next 2

It is truly gratifying to the sponsors of this bill, and to its numerous supporters, that its positive merits have been so quickly recognized and commended. I believe that everyone who becomes acquainted with the provisions of the Wagner-Ellenbogen bill, and with the housing conditions in this country, which make its enactment a prime necessity. will unite in giving their wholehearted support to it.

LOANS TO REHABILITATE FLOOD DAMAGE

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Mr. Speaker, I submit a conference report upon the bill (H. R. 11968) relating to the authority of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to make rehabilitation loans for the repair of damages caused by floods, or other catastrophes, for printing under the rule.

RICHARD YATES

Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute to make an announcement.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Speaker, it is with sincere and deep regret that I announce to the House the death of one of its very distinguished former Members. I learned this morning that Richard Yates, a former Governor of Illinois and a Member of this House for 14 years, passed to the Great Beyond on Saturday night last. Ex-Governor Yates, who served here so long and ably, when he left this body, moved near Royal Oak, Mich., my home city. I knew him for a great many years and came to love, honor, and respect him. The country has lost an outstanding citizen and the State of Illinois a great servant.

LEAVE TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on Wednesday next, after the reading of the Journal and the disposition of matters on the Speaker's desk and the special order, the Resident Commissioner from the Philippines may have permission to address the House for 10

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?
Mr. RANKIN. I have no objection to this gentleman's speaking, but we Members from the storm-ridden and flooddevastated territory are very much interested in the bill now in conference, because it is our hope to get loans with which to rehabilitate the damages to homes and public buildings caused by floods and storms.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, I suggest to the gentleman that the conference report takes preference over anything

Mr. RANKIN. Then the gentleman assures me that this will not interfere with the consideration of the conference report?

Mr. O'CONNOR. A conference report is privileged.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

CALL OF THE HOUSE

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that there is no quorum present.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania makes the point of order that there is no quorum present. Evidently there is no quorum present.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House.

The motion was agreed to.

The Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

[Roll No. 60]

Adair	Darrow	Gavagan	Kocialkowski
Allen	Dear	Gifford	Lambertson
Andrews, N. Y.	Dietrich	Greenwood	Lanham
Barden	Dingell	Gregory	Lehlbach
Beam	Disney	Haines	Lucas
Berlin	Dorsey	Hancock, N. C.	McAndrews
Bolton	Driscoll	Harlan	McFarlane
Brennan	Duffy, N. Y.	Hartley	McGehee
Brooks	Dunn, Miss.	Healey	McGrath
Buckbee	Dunn, Pa.	Hess	McGroarty
Bulwinkle	Eaton	Higgins, Conn.	McKeough
Burch	Eckert	Higgins, Mass.	McLaughlin
Caldwell	Faddis	Hobbs	McMillan
Cary	Fenerty	Hoeppel	May
Cavicchia	Ferguson	Hook	Meeks
Claiborne	Fernandez	Jenckes, Ind.	Mitchell, Ill.
Clark, N. C.	Fiesinger	Jenkins, Ohio	Monaghan
Collins	Fish	Johnson, Okla.	Montague
Connery	Flannagan	Kee	Moritz
Crosby	Frey	Kelly	Nichols
Crowe	Gasque	Kerr	O'Brien
Culkin	Gassaway	Kniffin	Oliver

Palmisano	Sadowski
Perkins	Sanders, La.
Quinn	Sandlin
Reed, Ill.	Schaefer
Richards	Schuetz
Romiue	Scrugham
Russell	Smith, W. Va
	The second second second second second

	Steagall
	Sumners, Tex
9	Sweeney
	Taber
	Thom
	Thomas
	Thurston
	Tinkham

Tobey Underwood Wadsworth Weaver Wigglesworth Williams Withrow

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. O'CONNOR). Three hundred and ten Members have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

Mr. COOPER of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I move to dispense with further proceedings under the call.

The motion was agreed to.

ELLIS DUKE-VETO MESSAGE (H. DOC. NO. 447)

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States, which was read by the Clerk:

To the House of Representatives:

I return herewith, without my approval, H. R. 4086, "An act for the relief of Ellis Duke, also known as Elias Duke."

This act provides "that the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Ellis Duke, also known as Elias Duke, of the District of Columbia, the owner of the truck hereinafter referred to, the sum of $1,000 to compensate said Ellis Duke, also known as Elias Duke, for the loss of one Dodge truck, serial no. A918785, which said Dodge truck was illegally seized and confiscated by agents of the United States Government on the 16th day of April 1928, and which said Dodge truck was appropriated by the United States and has never been returned to said Ellis Duke, also known as Elias Duke", etc.

The above truck, containing a quantity of illicit beer, was seized in the possession of three men on a business street in Washington, D. C., by Federal prohibition agents, who also arrested the men. These men and Ellis Duke (Elias Duke) were charged under section 26, title II, of the National Prohibition Act with illegal transportation of intoxicating liquor. The truck was released under said section to Ellis Duke, the owner, upon his giving bond to return the truck to the seizing officers on the day of trial to abide the judgment of the court. Two of the men found in possession of the truck were convicted and Duke and the remaining defendant were acquitted. Petition was filed by Duke for the recovery of the truck and was denied by the court. The Secretary of the Treasury filed an application in accordance with the act of March 3, 1925 (43 Stat. 1116), that the truck be delivered to the Treasury Department for use in enforcement of the National Prohibition Act. The court granted said applica-tion and entered an order that the truck be delivered to the Treasury Department. Duke's motion for a rehearing of the court's refusal to return the truck to him was denied after the matter had been argued by his attorneys and the attorneys for the Government. The truck was used by the Treasury Department until July 1, 1930, when it was transferred to the Department of Justice in conformity to the "Prohibition Reorganization Act." It also appears that Duke filed a petition for writ of error in the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, which was denied. The facts show that this truck was legally seized and duly turned over to the Government in compliance with the statutes in force at the time; moreover, that the rights of the claimant were fully presented to the court and adjudicated adversely to his contentions.

The mere fact that Ellis Duke was found not guilty of violating section 26 of the National Prohibition Act did not give him the right to recover the truck in which the illicit liquor was being transported. Said section provides that upon conviction of the person found in charge of the offending automobile or vehicle, the court, unless good cause to the contrary is shown by the owner, shall order its sale, etc. The act of March 3, 1925, supra, provided for its being delivered to the Treasury, upon application of the Secretary, instead of being sold. Two of the persons found in charge of this truck were actually convicted and sentenced. The claimant having failed to show good cause to the contrary, the court disposed of the truck by ordering it delivered to the Treasury Department, as authorized by the statute.

The record of this case shows that the claimant's rights have been fully and finally adjudicated in accordance with law by a court of competent jurisdiction. There have been numerous court forfeitures of property used in violation of the National Prohibition Act. Compensating a particular claimant for his loss would appear to be discriminatory. It is likewise obvious that reimbursement for all such forfeitures would be impracticable and unwarranted.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, April 13, 1936.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The objections of the President will be entered at large upon the Journal and ordered printed.

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. Mr. Speaker, I move that the bill and message be referred to the Committee on Claims. The motion was agreed to.

ACQUISITION OF LAND NEAR WALTER REED GENERAL HOSPITAL RESERVATION—VETO MESSAGE (H. DOC. NO. 448)

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States, which was read by the Clerk:

To the House of Representatives:

I return herewith, without my approval, H. R. 3629, a bill authorizing the acquisition of some 22 acres of land lying immediately south of the Walter Reed General Hospital Reservation, D. C., and authorizing an appropriation of $204.162 therefor.

I have caused this matter to be looked into, and it appears that the purchase of the land in question is advocated for the reasons that it will provide for a possible need for expansion of Army hospital facilities in the event of war, and in the meantime will provide space for the erection of quarters for medical officers attached to the present hospital, resulting in a material annual saving in expenditures.

As to the first of these reasons, it appears from a report by the Acting Secretary of War of April 11, 1935 (printed in H. Rept. No. 2133 and S. Rept. No. 1710), that there now exist certain open areas in the present reservation available for possible wartime ward expansion. In view of this, the fact that other hospital facilities of the War Department, those of the Veterans' Administration, and other governmental agencies will be available for use in case of war, the possibility of providing such additional temporary facilities as may be necessary, and the impracticability and inadvisability of attempting to acquire in time of peace all the additional land which may be required for wartime purposes, I do not feel that the acquisition of the land in question can be justified on the ground of its usefulness in time of war.

As to the other reason, namely, the use of part of the land for the erection thereon of officers' quarters at a material saving in expenditures for commutation, it appears that, of the 105 officers attached to the Walter Reed General Hospital. quarters are now available thereat for about 21. That space can be made available on the existing reservation for installing housing for some twenty-odd additional officers is evidenced by the fact that some 2 years ago the War Department requested, but was not granted, an allotment of emergency funds for that purpose. Convincing proof that the remaining officers should reside upon the reservation to insure the efficient functioning of the hospital has not been supplied. Certainly the theory that all medical personnel connected with the hospital should reside in the immediate vicinity thereof does not obtain with respect to our large civil hospitals. If the land in question is acquired, the War Department proposes at a later date to request funds for the construction thereon of quarters for 50 officers. This would cost approximately $830,000 and, accounting for interest on the total investment in land and buildings and the cost of heat, light, water, repairs, and upkeep, produces comparatively little, if any, saving as compared with the cost of commutation.

For the foregoing reasons I do not feel justified in giving my approval to this bill.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, April 13, 1936.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The objections of the President will be entered at large on the Journal, and the bill and message printed as a House document.

Mr. McSWAIN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the message, together with the bill to which it refers, be referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

The motion was agreed to.

MICHAEL P. LUCAS-VETO MESSAGE (H. DOC. NO. 446)

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States, which was read by the Clerk:

To the House of Representatives:

I return herewith, without my approval, H. R. 2469, entitled "An act for the relief of Michael P. Lucas."

The bill directs that in the administration of any laws conferring rights, privileges, and benefits upon honorably discharged soldiers, Michael P. Lucas, who was a member of Company D, Seventeenth Regiment United States Infantry, shall be held and considered to have been honorably discharged as a member of that organization on the 7th day of December 1918: Provided, That no bounty, back pay, pension, or allowance shall be held to have accrued prior to the passage of this act.

In view of the circumstances connected with this case, as disclosed by the official records of the War Department, I do not feel justified in giving my approval to this measure.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, April 13, 1936.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The objection of the President will be entered at large upon the Journal and the bill and message will be printed as a House document.

Mr. McSWAIN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the message of the President, together with the bill to which it relates, be referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

The motion was agreed to.

CONVENTION FOR THE PROTECTION OF LITERARY AND ARTISTIC WORK

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States, which was read by the Clerk, and, together with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs:

To the Congress of the United States:

I commend to the favorable consideration of the Congress the enclosed report from the Secretary of State with an accompanying memorandum, to the end that legislation may be enacted authorizing an appropriation of the sum of $6,500, or so much thereof as may be necessary for the expense of participation by the United States in the conference at Brussells in 1936 for the purpose of revising the convention for the protection of literary and artistic works, concluded at Rome, September 9, 1886, and revised at Rome on June 2, 1928.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, April 13, 1936.

THOMAS JEFFERSON

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the first special order, the gentleman from New York [Mr. Boylan] is recognized for 15 minutes. [Applause.]

Mr. BOYLAN. Mr. Speaker, today is the one hundred and ninety-third anniversary of the birth of Thomas Jefferson. Thomas Jefferson was the foremost apostle of liberty—human liberty—the world has ever known. Other men, including many who were associated with him in creating this great Republic, were more interested in the forms of freedom, in liberty as an abstract idea, than in universal emancipation. Some sought to trammel liberty and keep it within narrow bounds. Many of the founders proposed a system of government which should be little short of a republican monarchy.

But Jefferson had an infinite faith in the people. In days of distrust of the populace, agitation, and revolution, and at a time when democracy was but a name, he stood firm for a government in which the power would be resident not in the men of intellect, of financial influence, or social standing, but in the artificers of the cities, the woodsmen of the frontier, the laborers on the farms and plantations, the seamen along the Atlantic coast. He was the plain people's only champion at a time when they were inarticulate.

Jefferson's birthday this year should be a day upon which we rededicate ourselves to the many great causes and the single great principle—human liberty—for which he fought over a period of 40 years. It may seem trite to recall his services to liberty, his struggling for the doctrine of universal emancipation, but it was not so in his day.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, a point of order. Has the time come when an oration on Thomas Jefferson by a distinguished orator is of no interest to the people? I make the point of order that there is no quorum present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will count. [After counting.] Evidently there is no quorum present.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House. The motion was agreed to.

The Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

[Roll No. 61]

Jenckes, Ind. Jenkins, Ohio Johnson, Okla. O'Brien Driscoll Oliver Palmisano Allen Duffy, N. Y. Andrew, Mas Duncan Dunn, Miss. Andrews, N. Y. Kee Perkins Quinn Reed, Ill. Richards Barden Dunn, Pa. Kelly Kocialkowski Beam Eaton Eckert Faddis Lanham Lehlbach Berlin Binderup Romjue Fenerty Ferguson Fernandez Bolton Lemke Russ ell Lesinski Lewis, Md. Brennan Sabath Sanders, La. Brooks Brown, Mich. Fiesinger Lucas Schaefer Buckbee Buckley, N. Y. Bulwinkle Fish McAndrews Schneider, Wis. Flannagan McFarlane Schuetz McGehee McGrath McGroarty Snell Stack Frey Fulmer Burch Burdick Gasque Gassaway Gavagan Starnes Cartwright Cary McKeoug Steagall McLaughlin Sumners, Tex. Casey Cavicchia Gifford McLeod Thom McMillan Gray, Ind. Gregory Haines Hancock, N. C. Claiborne Maloney Tinkham May Meeks Mitchell, Ill. Clark, N. C. Tobey Underwood Collins Crosby Harlan Wadsworth Hartley Healey Higgins, Conn. Wearin Weaver Crowe Culkin Monaghan Montague Darrow Dietrich Montet Wigglesworth Higgins, Mass. Moritz Withrow Disney Hobbs Nelson

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Three hundred and seven

Nichols

Members are present, a quorum.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, I move to dispense with further proceedings under the call.

The motion was agreed to.

Hoeppel

Dorsey

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the special order the gentleman from New York [Mr. Boylan] is recognized for

Mr. BOYLAN. Mr. Speaker, I may say, for the benefit of those Members who were not present, that I am saying a few words on Thomas Jefferson, this being the one hundred and ninety-third anniversary of his birth. I had proceeded only a short time when a point of no quorum was made.

His enemies, at home and abroad, sneered at his demands for the fullest form of freedom. They pointed to the excesses of the French Revolution and shuddered at the resulting wars, which drenched Europe with blood from the north to the Red Sea.

"This", they retorted, "is what liberty would give us in America."

But Jefferson never faltered; his vision was keener than theirs, his trust greater, his understanding deeper. Jefferson labored to such avail that he created not only a nation but a party.

It was only a few years afterward that Jefferson became President of a Nation and a party which, largely through his own efforts, were builded on the doctrine that all men are equal in the eyes of nature and the law; that life, liberty, and happiness are inalienable rights; that the function of government is to safeguard and guarantee those rights; and that all authority and inspiration of government are drawn from the consent of the governed.

At the present time, when violent attacks are being made against democracy, not only here but throughout the world, and when the democratic idea is challenged in many countries, it is good to consider, even for a brief moment, the inspiring life and works of the first Democrat of our country, Thomas Jefferson. [Applause.]

It is admitted by the leading students of American history that Thomas Jefferson is one of the great Presidents of our country. He was more than a great President; he was a great man, whose influence is an active force in our own day and will be for generations to come.

Let us ask ourselves why this is so-why Jefferson's name is one to conjure with. Let us analyze his character and review his accomplishments. Let us see what he has done in his own day that is of such vital importance in ours.

First. Jefferson wrote the Declaration of Independence. Except for a few minor verbal changes suggested by Adams and Franklin, this epoch-making document was entirely the result of his own brain and hand and reflected his own personal views. We need not dwell upon the importance of the Declaration to our country. But consider how much light it throws upon Jefferson's mind and character.

ALL MEN ARE CREATED EQUAL

These words were first used in a great political document by Jefferson. It was not a new idea of philosophy, but it was a new idea in practical politics, and had not Jefferson written the Declaration, these ringing words, it is quite likely, would have been missing therefrom.

What is more, Jefferson meant these words as writtennot simply as a fine sentiment to be expressed on an important occasion.

Jefferson was a firm believer in the common people. He trusted them and considered their instincts wholesome and right. On this principle he fought Hamilton-who distrusted the people-doggedly, never yielding an inch. Jefferson could never yield on this principle, for it was the foundation of his political faith. He was sure of his ground. He knew that democracy was safe in the hands of the Americans, because he knew his countrymen.

Consider what this country would be today if Jefferson and those who thought like him had not existed in the Revolutionary period and Hamilton and his supporters had had their way.

We who enjoy religious freedom might fall into the erroneous belief that such freedom came to us as a matter of course. Religious freedom, like political freedom, had to be fought for and fostered. No great advance in civilization or human freedom has ever been accomplished without strife-oftentimes bitter strife. It is well to remember that Jefferson is the author of the Virginia statute separating church and state and guaranteeing religious freedom. In due time this important idea was made part of our Constitution. No one can possibly estimate the amount of good this provision has done and how much it has contributed to our happiness.

Jefferson went further. He fought for the establishment of free public schools, and in due time became the father of the University of Virginia. He knew very well that ignorance and political and religious freedom do not well go together. He knew that the common people required education in order to preserve the liberties that they had won. No one knew better than he that education is the best weapon against tyranny and bigotry, and that an enlightened people cannot be enslaved.

It will always be remembered that nothing gave him so much happiness as the founding of the University of Virginia. He himself was a learned man in the best sense. He had an unquenchable curiosity about all things that concerned human beings. Knowledge to him was something to be treasured both for its own and for the use that human beings could make of it. For he was a great humanitarian.

Jefferson's opposition to slavery was well known. He was responsible for the Virginia law prohibiting the importation of slaves. In the original draft of the Declaration of Independence one of the important charges he made against George III and his Parliament was that they were responsible for slavery in America—the inhuman traffic in human beings. This was omitted in the final draft out of deference to Adams and Franklin. There was not much he could do about slavery in his own day. What he could, he did.

Jefferson did much to widen the borders of our country. The Louisiana Purchase, for which he was responsible, increased the national territory about 140 percent, and 13 States, in whole or in part, were carved out of it.

It will be remembered that he was the moving spirit behind the Lewis and Clark Expedition, which opened the West to the United States and made it possible for our country to grow as it did.

Jefferson never coveted or courted public office. His personal modesty followed him through life. In a sense he had no ambition whatever except the ambition to spread his democratic principles and do as much good as possible for his country and his countrymen.

He served as Ambassador to France, and later as Secretary of State, in a critical period of our country. He accomplished wonders in international relations. The despatches he sent home are among the great state papers in our possession. His influence as a diplomat is lasting. He won respect for the young Republic abroad.

We can get some estimate of Jefferson as a diplomat from the following words taken from a communication of his to the American Commissioners at Madrid. Jefferson wrote:

We love and we value peace; we know its blessings from experience; we abhor the follies of war and are not untried in its distresses and calamities. Unmeddling with the affairs of other nations, we have hoped that our distance and our disposition would have left us free in the example and indulgence of peace with all the world. * * * We confide in our strength without boasting of it; we respect that of others without fearing it.

[Applause.]

The sentiment behind these words is so modern that had they been written yesterday we would not be astonished.

Jefferson served his country as President for 8 years, years marked by many important achievements. He did not want the Presidency, but his personal desires did not deter him from accepting the office when he realized that he was needed, nor from serving his country well. As President he showed the country that its affairs could be administered properly without catering to wealth and the special interests; he demonstrated to the world that a democracy could function successfully; and that freedom of speech and the press does not endanger the existence of a government. He followed Washington in not accepting a third term, thus helping to establish an important American custom.

Jefferson would not permit the country, while he was President, to embroil itself in any war. Above all, he taught the American people to trust in common sense and in reason.

In all his dealings with his fellow men he was frank and unassuming. He was a loyal friend and a magnanimous opponent. His lifelong fight was against false principles, never against persons. He was a great theorist, but a theorist who kept his feet on the ground. He was the most practical of idealists.

Volumes could be written on Jefferson, the scholar, the civil engineer, the lawyer, the agriculturist, the architect, the inventor, the author, the philosopher, the statesman, the diplomat, the President, the Nation builder.

But if Jefferson himself could choose the subject of one biography of himself, it is certain that the title of the book would be "Jefferson the Democrat", the word "democrat", of course, used in its widest connection.

Jefferson's general attainments were high. His knowledge tion: The gentleman mentioned Jefferson's service as amof men was noteworthy and he was peculiarly fortunate in bassador to France. When on that occasion he was met at having such disciples as Madison and Monroe. Jefferson preferred never to speak of his achievements, and when he was obliged to mention his own work he did so with the utmost modesty. He was, indeed, a great man who took everything, good and evil alike, in his stride.

A roll call of Jefferson's accomplishments and the broad principles he fought for sounds very much like the life work of a dozen statesmen.

"Jeffersonian democracy" is not a mere political catchword. It is a glowing ideal that should animate us regardless of party today, even in the face of triumphs by those who have abandoned his principles, who still manifest distrust in the people's right and ability to govern their own affairs. As against the theory that people were created for the Government, which is at the root of many of our evils today, he proclaimed the principle that the Government was established for the people. Liberty, to him, was not a privilege; it was a right; and government a mere responsibility delegated by the people. The first and only consideration was how much government was necessary to achieve human happiness and freedom—freedom in government, freedom in education, freedom in worship. [Applause.]

It is time to reexamine our Government in the light of these flashes of inspiration enjoyed by our great leader. It is time for us to make a pilgrimage, if only in fancy, to the grave of Thomas Jefferson, and draw renewed faith in the people from the following epitaph, which he wrote himself:

Here was buried Thomas Jefferson, author of the Declaration of American Independence, of the statute of Virginia for religious freedom, and father of the University of Virginia.

[Applause.]

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BOYLAN. I yield.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. I want to commend the gentleman from New York for the very able speech he has made, but I wish to make this observation, that in the city of Washington there are statues of a great many of our distinguished Americans, but as far as I now recall, there is no statue, except the one in the Capitol, of Thomas Jefferson.

Mr. BOYLAN. In reply to the gentleman, I wish to say that at the last session I offered a resolution to appoint a commission to erect a memorial to the memory of Thomas Jefferson in the city of Washington. This commission has functioned, and we now have pending on the Consent Calendar, which I hope will be taken up on next Wednesday, a resolution authorizing us to go ahead with the erection of a statue to the memory of Thomas Jefferson.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. I congratulate the gentleman. [Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. BOYLAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 5 additional minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. BOYLAN. I yield.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. It would be more fitting and more in keeping with Democratic theories and observance to follow the principles laid down and advocated by Thomas Jefferson rather than to build statues of him, and I think he would feel more complimented by such a course. [Applause.]

Mr. BOYLAN. If the gentleman had any sense of propriety at all, he would not have interjected that remark. There are times and places for all things.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. I sincerely believed what I said whether the gentleman believes it or not.

Mr. BOYLAN. Mr. Speaker, I do not yield further to the gentleman.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. BOYLAN. I yield.

Mr. RANDOLPH. I have been intensely interested in the splendid address the gentleman from New York has given us. With the gentleman's permission I would make this observation: The gentleman mentioned Jefferson's service as ambassador to France. When on that occasion he was met at the dock by Talleyrand, the French wit and diplomat, Talleyrand said to him, "Monsieur Jefferson, you come to take the place of Franklin." Jefferson replied, "Oh, no; not to take his place; no man can do that. I come only to succeed him." I should like to add that Jefferson's humbleness of heart made him the great man the gentleman from New York has portrayed.

Mr. BOYLAN. I thank the gentleman for his contribution. Mr. COLDEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BOYLAN. I yield.

Mr. COLDEN. What does the gentleman think of the idea of making Jefferson's birthday a national holiday?

Mr. BOYLAN. I think it an excellent idea. Critics harp about extraneous matters when we speak of honoring a great American. There is no politics in my speaking today of Jefferson; it is simply paying to him some of the credit and honor he should have had in the many years that have elapsed since his death. Because heretofore his fellow countrymen have been negligent and unappreciative of what Jefferson did for this country is no reason why we today as Members of the American Congress should follow in that pathway. Let us blaze a new trail and honor the statesman who has gone.

A certain philosophy exists today that pays no honor and gives no credit to great men and things of the past. The philosophy of many today is, "What will I get out of it; what does it give to me; what do I care about men who have fashioned a Constitution for this country the fruits of which we today are enjoying, but which we do not appreciate even in part?" [Applause.]

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BOYLAN. I yield.

Mr. BLANTON. I appeal to the gentleman from Washington to be generous enough to take out of our friend's speech the heckling interpolation.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. If the gentleman from New York will yield, Mr. Speaker, I had the gentleman from Texas in mind when I was speaking of Jefferson and his principles and ideals.

Mr. BLANTON. That is so absurd it is ridiculous.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? [Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. BOYLAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for one-half minute additional.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. BOYLAN. Mr. Speaker, I yielded to the gentleman from Washington expecting he would ask a question in consonance with the remarks I was making.

Mr. ZIONCHECK rose.

Mr. BOYLAN. Mr. Speaker, I do not yield.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. I have risen merely to submit a unanimous-consent request when the gentleman's time has expired.

Mr. BOYLAN. And the gentleman's words, the gentleman's conduct, and the gentleman's action will speak for themselves. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

Mr. BOYLAN. Mr. Speaker, I object.

RURAL ELECTRIFICATION

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (S. 3483) to provide for rural electrification, and for other purposes, with House amendments, insist on the House amendments, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

The Clerk reported the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

Mr. BLANTON. Reserving the right to object, what changes are to be adjusted between the House and the Senate on this bill?

Mr. RAYBURN. It was a Senate bill. The House has made changes in the Senate bill.

Mr. BLANTON. It has never been to conference at all? This is the first conference?

Mr. RAYBURN. That is correct.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and, without objection, appoints the following conferees: Messrs, Rayburn, Huddleston, and Mapes.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the special order, the Chair recognizes the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Shannon] for 20 minutes.

CALL OF THE HOUSE

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order there is not a quorum present.

The SPEAKER. Evidently there is not a quorum present. Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House. A call of the House was ordered.

The Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

[Roll No. 62]

Adair	Duffey, Ohio	Hoeppel	O'Brien
Allen	Duffy, N. Y.	Jenckes, Ind.	O'Day
Andrew, Mass.	Dunn, Miss.	Jenkins, Ohio	Oliver
Andrews, N. Y.	Dunn, Pa.	Johnson, Okla.	O'Malley
Barden	Eagle	Kee	Palmisano
Beam	Eaton	Keller	Perkins
Berlin	Eckert	Kelly	Peyser
Bland	Evans	Kennedy, N. Y.	Quinn
Bloom	Faddis	Kerr	Reed, Ill.
Bolton	Fenerty	Kocialkowski	Richards
Brennan	Ferguson	Lanham	Robertson
Brooks	Fernandez	Lea, Calif.	Romjue
Brown, Mich.	Fiesinger	Lehlbach	Russell
Buckbee	Fish	Lemke	Sabath
Buckley, N. Y.	Flannagan	Lesinski	Sanders, La.
Bulwinkle	Ford, Calif.	Lewis, Md.	Schaefer
Burch .	Frey	Lucas	Schuetz
Burdick	Gasque	McAndrews	Smith, W. Va.
Cannon, Wis.	Gassaway	McClellan	Snell
Cartwright	Gavagan	McFarlane	Somers, N. Y.
Cary	Gearhart	McGehee	Starnes
Cavicchia	Gifford	McGrath	Steagall
Cellar	Gray, Ind.	McKeough	Sumners, Tex.
Claiborne	Gray, Pa.	McLaughlin	Taylor, Colo.
Clark, Idaho	Greenway	McLean	Thom
Clark, N. C.	Greenwood	McMillan	Thomas
Connery	Gregory	McReynolds	Thomason
Corning	Haines	McSwain	Tinkham
Crosby	Hamlin	Maloney	Tobey
Crowe	Hancock, N. C.	Mansfield	Tonry
Culkin	Harlan	Marshall	Treadway
Cummings	Hart	May	Underwood
Darrow	Harter	Meeks	Vinson, Ky.
Dear	Hartley	Mitchell, Ill.	Wadsworth
Delaney	Healey	Monaghan	Warren
Dickstein	Hennings	Montague	Wearin
Dies	Hess	Montet	Weaver
Dietrich	Higgins, Conn.	Moran	Wigglesworth
Disney	Higgins, Mass.	Moritz	Wilson, La.
Dorsey	Hill, Knute	Murdock	Withrow
Driscoll	Hobbs	Nichols	Woodrum

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Two hundred and sixty-five Members have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

On motion of Mr. BANKHEAD, further proceedings under the call were dispensed with.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, before the gentleman from Missouri proceeds, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 2 minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, under the rules of the House, this is the day set aside for the consideration of District of Columbia business. The District of Columbia Committee has very important functions to perform with reference to the affairs of the people of the District. They have brought up a bill here for consideration which they regard as of very great importance to the people of the District of Columbia. Whether you expect to support the bill or whether you expect to oppose it, the committee, it seems to me, is entitled to have the bill considered on its merits, and the Members of the House should be afforded an opportunity to vote on it one way or the other. Of course, I cannot control, and it is not my function to undertake to control, the activities of any Member, but I do appeal particularly to those on my side of the aisle, in view of the dilatory tactics that are being pursued, to stay here in order to constitute a quorum, because no time is saved by the Members going to their offices. These constantly recurring roll calls will only require you to walk back over here. Just about the time you get to your office you will have to come back again.

Mr. Speaker, I think this is a reasonable request, and I appeal to the Members of the House to observe it if possible.

[Applause]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the special order, the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Shannon] is recognized for 30 minutes.

Mr. SHANNON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks in the Record, and to include therein a poem that was rendered in the Congress that voted on the Louisiana Purchase.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

Mr. SHANNON. Mr. Speaker, I feel that I cannot let this one hundred and ninety-third anniversary of the birth of Thomas Jefferson pass without again calling to mind, as I have been privileged to do many times in the past, the great services that this supreme American performed for his country and the broad and enlightened vision with which he viewed its future destiny when its first great opportunity for expansion was offered for his consideration and judgment as the head of the Nation.

QUESTIONABLE TRIBUTES TO JEFFERSON

We are hearing a great deal in these days from the former beneficiaries of special privilege about Thomas Jefferson. You would think to hear some of the speeches that are being made by the orators of the storm troops that Jefferson and not Hamilton was the founder of what they are pleased to call the American system. They seem to have suddenly discovered virtues in the man of Monticello that they never suspected before. Of course, no one would think for a moment that the motives of these revivalists of Jeffersonian doctrines are not genuine. And yet at this moment I can recall a period not so far distant when the name of Thomas Jefferson was anathema to the high priests of the opposition party and when their elephants would trumpet scorn and derision when his name was mentioned.

From the days of William McKinley, the tariff builder, to those of Calvin Coolidge, the silent man of small economies, Thomas Jefferson was a forgotten man. They called him a Socialist and a Revolutionist; they even tried to deny that his was the brain and his the hand that framed the immortal Declaration of Independence; they discouraged mention of him in the schools of the land by an insidious propaganda, and I am credibly informed that by an official order his very statue was once removed from the Capitol Grounds here in Washington. But now the shoe is on the other foot and we are being constantly reminded how far we have departed from the simple faith of Jefferson and the pure democracy that he advocated.

The enemies of this administration have suddenly discovered what a great man he was. But let me take this occasion to say that these gentlemen who seek to link the name of Jefferson with their interpretations of the slogans of their villifying campaign—liberty, constitutionalism, and what they are pleased to call the American system—know little of Jefferson or the history that he made. There is more dust being blown into the eyes of the American people today than comes from the dust storms of the western prairies. We all have heard that the devil can quote Scripture for his own purposes, and the praise of Jefferson by those seeking to discredit the present administration is a gift horse whose teeth will bear looking into.

I yield to no man in my reverence for the memory of Thomas Jefferson and my faith in the doctrines he espoused. I raised my voice, when his portrait was rarely to be found in a public school and when his doctrines were subtly denounced as subversive of American ideals, to reestablish his memory among the youth of our country. I was laughed at by the opposition for my pains. And yet today, in my own

State, we have a Jefferson holiday, a monument to him on the university grounds, and his portrait is found displayed in the halls of learning. I am sorry that I can lay no claim to the late conversion of the Liberty Leaguers and others, and I am afraid that when I remind them of a few things about Jefferson that they seem to have forgotten their sudden faith may evaporate.

JEFFERSON AND THE CONSTITUTION

It may come as a great shock to the present advocates of constitutionalism to be told that, strict constructionist of the Constitution though he was, Jefferson was the first President to challenge its limitations in what he considered the greatest opportunity for expansion, the greatest national emergency, if you will, that ever confronted the Nation. He challenged it upon the ground of public welfare, the welfare of the Nation, and when the test came in the Louisiana Purchase, he rushed the passage of a resolution ratifying that great treaty through the Congress in spite of the lack of constitutional power. It was, as another Democratic President said, "a condition and not a theory" that confronted him, and he acted upon it with a broadness of vision, a courage, and a spirit of true statesmanship that was equal to the emergency.

Not only did Jefferson ignore the lack of express power in the Constitution to enable him to acquire the Louisiana Territory, but he shut his eyes to a more sacred doctrine enunciated in his own Declaration of Independence, that "governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed." Within the territories to be acquired were some 38,000 free people, the citizens of a foreign power. They were absorbed in the deal without their consent; they passed from one government to another without a voice of choice.

Why did Jefferson do such violence to his well-known principles in this particular case? It was a supreme necessity. It was a stupendous opportunity to lay the foundations of the future glory of the Nation, a great emergency that called for the operation of one of the cornerstones of the preamble, the public-welfare clause, and Jefferson, in the teeth of Hamiltonian opposition and in spite of the warning voices of the Federal judiciary, held the public welfare, or, what is the same thing, the welfare of the Nation, to be a consideration more potent and binding than any generality of the Constitution or any high-sounding phrase of the Declaration of Independence.

He cast his prophetic vision across the waters of the Mississippi to the Pacific Ocean, and he saw in the far rolling prairies of the West not only a domain from which was to be carved the great States of the Union that now occupy it, but, agriculturist as he was, he saw there the bread basket of the expanded Nation of the future, the great granary from which a Nation extending from the Atlantic to the Pacific was to be fed. He visioned all this from the borders of the 17 States then in existence, when the opponents of the purchase saw there only a vast wilderness. Stickler as he became for strict construction when the great constitutional document was fashioned to his heart's desire, when he found therein no express authority to acquire foreign lands by purchase he took shelter under the welfare clause; and where is there a statesman, or a citizen, in the land today, in high or in low place, who will challenge the judgment that bequeathed such an empire to the United States of America?

THE LOUISIANA PURCHASE A PRECEDENT

But that is not all that Jefferson's unconstitutional action did for the Nation. The Louisiana Purchase became a precedent. It leaped over the strict interpretation of the constitutional powers, and in so doing it created a new power, a new authority, for future purchases and acquisitions in the South and in the West and in far Alaska. Above every statesman of his day, Jefferson has the right to be known as America's greatest expansionist, the prophet of the Nation's future, and the first of the Presidents to realize the meaning of the ninth amendment to the Constitution which he was instrumental in having adopted among the overlooked Bill of Rights, to wit, the amendment which says:

The enumeration in the Constitution of certain rights shall not be construed to deny or disparage others retained by the people.

These reserved rights, Jefferson, in his great territorial deal, found sufficiently shielded in the preamble which declared as a primary principle that the Constitution was enacted "to promote the general welfare"; at least, whether he specially found authority in that clause or not, he stretched the written provisions of the Constitution to cover what he deemed a national emergency, a supreme necessity in the expansion and development of the young Republic whose destinies he held paramount to every other consideration. And this was long before the Supreme Court made use of Chief Justice Marshall's discovery that the Constitution had "implied powers" which became the bulwark and the shield of trusts, monopolies, and the exploitation of privileged interests. What a contrast with the motives of Jefferson, whose liberal interpretation of the great document opened the way for the establishment of the great States of the West, for the fur traders, for the development of the rich mineral and agricultural regions between the Mississippi and the Rockies, and for the millions of home lands that came to be opened and developed with the great tides of western immigration.

Let us on this occasion turn back and read again this footnote to our history which has been more or less forgotten in its origins. When England recognized the independence of the United States as "free, sovereign, and independent States", those Thirteen Original States occupied a territory extending from the Great Lakes to about 50 miles north of the Gulf of Mexico and from the Atlantic Ocean to the east banks of the Mississippi. Florida was under the dominion of Spain, and for a time Louisiana, vaguely defined, was also under Spanish dominion. Controlling New Orleans at the mouth of the Mississippi, Spain was a menace to the navigation of the river to the Gulf. By treaty Spain was induced to give us certain rights of deposit and transshipment from the port of New Orleans, and all was quiet for a while along the Mississippi.

But along about the year 1800, in the shifting tides of European wars, Napoleon, then French Consul, came into possession of the Louisiana Territory by reason of a treaty with Spain. For a time Napoleon had grandiose schemes for building another New France beyond the Mississippi. But a sudden war with England changed his notions and Jefferson, then President, sent ambassadors to deal with him, at first merely for the control of the New Orleans territory. The negotiations dragged along until Jefferson sent James Monroe across the water to speed them up. From the very beginning of the negotiations, Jefferson foresaw that Louisiana in the hands of the French would be a far greater menace to American interests than in the hands of the more placable Spanish Government.

Writing to Livingston, our then Minister to France, Jefferson said:

The cession of Louisiana by Spain to France works most sorely on the United States. It completely reverses all the political relations of the United States and will form a new epoch in our political course. * * Spain might have retained it quietly for years. Not so France. The impetuosity of her temper, the energy and restlessness of her character, placed in a point of eternal friction with us and our character * * * render it impossible that France and the United States can long continue friends when they meet in so irritable a position.

Mr. BLANTON. Will the gentleman yield?
Mr. SHANNON. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.
Mr. BLANTON. My colleague once before made a very splendid speech on Jefferson. I understand that a great authority on Jefferson here in the United States said that it was one of the best speeches on Jefferson that he had ever read. Is that the fact?

Mr. SHANNON. That was Mr. Beck? Mr. BLANTON. Yes. The gentleman is making such a splendid speech now, Mr. Speaker, that I think we ought to have a quorum present, and I make a point of no quorum.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. UTTERBACK). The Chair will count. [After counting.] Evidently there is not a quorum present.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House. A call of the House was refused.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was rejected.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Shannon] will proceed.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that the House cannot proceed without a quorum.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the

A call of the House was refused.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that the House cannot proceed without a quorum being

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The point of order is sustained.

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House. A call of the House was ordered.

The Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

[Roll No. 63]

Adair	Dies	Higgins, Conn.	Moritz
Allen	Dietrich	Higgins, Mass.	Murdock
Andresen	Dirksen	Hill, Knute	Nichols
Andrew, Mass.	Disney	Hobbs	O'Brien
Andrews, N. Y.	Dorsey	Hoeppel	Oliver
Barden	Driscoll	Hope	Palmisano
Beam	Duffey, Ohio	Jenckes, Ind.	Perkins
Berlin	Duffy, N. Y.	Jenkins, Ohio	Quinn
Bland	Dunn, Miss.	Johnson, Okla.	Reed, Ill.
Bolton	Dunn, Pa.	Kee	Richards
Brennan	Eagle	Keller	Robinson, Utah
Brooks	Eaton	Kelly	Romiue
Brown, Mich.	Eckert	Kerr	Russell
Buckbee	Faddis	Kocialkowski	Sabath
Buckley, N. Y.	Fenerty	Lanham	Sanders, La.
Bulwinkle	Ferguson	Lea, Calif.	Schaefer
Burch	Fernandez	Lehlbach	Schuetz
Burdick	Fiesinger	Lemke	Schulte
Caldwell	Fish	Lesinski	Scrugham
Cannon, Wis.	Fitzpatrick	Lewis, Md.	Sears
Cary	Flannagan	Lucas	Secrest
Cavicchia	Ford, Calif.	McAndrews	Snell
Chapman	Frey	McFarlane	Starnes
Claiborne	Gambrill	McGehee	Steagall
Clark, Idaho	Gasque	McGrath	Sumners, Tex.
Clark, N. C.	Gassaway	McGroarty	Thom
Coffee	Gavagan	McKeough	Thomas
Collins	Gifford	McLaughlin	Tinkham
Connery	Gray, Pa.	McLean	Tobey
Cooper, Ohio	Greenway	McMillan	Treadway
Crosby	Gregory	Maloney	Underwood
Crowe	Haines	May	Wadsworth
Crowther	Hamlin	Meeks	Weaver
Culkin	Hancock, N. C.	Mitchell Ill.	Wigglesworth
Cummings	Harlan	Monaghan	Wilcox
Darrow	Hartley	Montague	Wilson, La.
Dear	Healey	Montet	Withrow
DeRouen	Hess	Moran	Zimmerman

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. O'CONNOR). Two hundred and seventy-six Members have answered to their names; a quorum is present.

On motion of Mr. BANKHEAD, further proceedings under the call were dispensed with.

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 15 minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Shannon] has 18 minutes remaining. Does the gentleman yield for that purpose?

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman from Missouri yield to me?

Mr. SHANNON. I yielded to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Blanton] and I guess I can yield to the gentlewoman from New Jersey.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentlewoman from New Jersey [Mrs. Norton] asks unanimous consent to address the House for 15 minutes. Is there objection?

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I object. The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Shannon] is recognized for 18 minutes.

Mr. SHANNON. Mr. Speaker, at the very outset of the negotiations, he saw that an imperial France and a peaceloving and proud nation like the United States could not long endure as national neighbors.

Napoleon himself cut the knot. Hard-pressed by his impending war with Great Britain, and fearful, too, that Great Britain might wrest the American territory from his control, he suddenly determined to sell the whole Louisiana Territory to the United States, foreseeing that that young Republic could better deal with British aggressions than distant France. He named his price, some $15,000,000—a staggering sum of money considered in the monetary values of that day, a stupendous figure of debt for the young States to assume through their National Government. But it was an empire that was offered, covering some 800,000 square miles of territory, fitted to sustain millions in the future, and Jefferson clearly visioned that future, as subsequent events proved. He accepted, through his ambassadors, Napoleon's offer.

OPPOSITION OF FEDERALISTS TO LOUISIANA PURCHASE

The treaty was signed, and then came the problem of ratification. The Federalists turned their oratorical guns loose upon him. They charged him with trying to aid the French and not the United States. They said he was buying a wilderness peopled with savages and wild beasts-"taking a wild dash into infinite space"-as one of their orators phrased it. They said the deal was unconstitutional and every Federalistic effort was put forth to prevent its consummation. If the American system was to be interpreted by the Federalists and the Hamiltonians of that day, where would our great West be today?

Jefferson fully realized the difficulties that confronted him. He searched the Constitution and found no express warrant there for the purchase of lands from foreign powers, still less for acquiring jurisdiction over a foreign people "without the consent of the governed." He thought for a time of having the deal ratified by an amendment to the Constitution, but word came from abroad that there was a chance that Napoleon, in case of victory, might change his mind. The constitutional amendment would take time, argument, possible frustration of the great treaty. So he made up his mind that the treaty must be ratified in spite of fancied constitutional prohibitions, in spite, even, of his cherished doctrines established in the Declaration of Independence.

Upon the question of national welfare he took his stand. Writing to Senator Breckenridge on August 12, 1803, he said:

This treaty must, of course, be laid before both Houses, because both have important functions to exercise respecting it. They, I presume, will see their duty to their country in ratifying and paying for it, so as to secure a good which would otherwise probably never again be in their power. But I suppose they must then appeal to the Nation for an additional article to the Constitution approving and confirming an act which the Nation had not prepreviously authorized.

Conscientiously, Jefferson, a strict constructionist, felt that some constitutional warrant must be found for the purchase. But the vicious fight made upon the deal by the Federalists changed his mind. The guns of the opposition were leveled at the measure, challenging its constitutionality, deriding its necessity, and smothering his arguments in a torrent of oratorical abuse. Then Jefferson took the bull by the horns. There was danger that the coveted territory would slip from the grasp of the Nation. Finding some warrant in the general provisions of the constitutional preamble, laying aside academical casuistry, he determined to carry the measure through at all hazards, consoling his political conscience with the thought that the welfare of the Nation and of its people would justify the action.

SUB SILENTIO PROCEDURE

But he realized that he would have to guide the measure past the guns of the opposition as silently as was possible. On August 18, 1803, he wrote another letter to Senator Breckenridge, in which he said:

I wrote you on the 12th instant on the subject of Louisiana and the constitutional provision which might be necessary for it. A letter I received yesterday shows that nothing must be said on that subject which may give a pretext for retraction, but that we should do sub silentio what shall be found necessary.

Jefferson was a good Latin scholar. I am not. But I do not need much Latin to know what sub silentio means. Jefferson, threatened with a retraction of the treaty, saw that it must be slipped through the Federalist lines with the least noise possible—sub silentio was to be the watchword. And sub silentio the great treaty went through the congressional narrows, and Louisiana Territory became the property of the United States, the richest acquisition ever obtained by any modern nation.

The vote on the ratification of the Louisiana Purchase Treaty in the Senate October 20, 1803, was-yeas 24, nays 6, not voting 3. Among those who did not vote was John Quincy Adams. He was for it, but would not vote for its being put through in this way. There was one vacancy in the Senate at that time. The vote in the House October 25, 1803. was-yeas 90, nays 24. The roll-call vote in both Houses

RECORD OF THE YEAS AND NAYS IN THE SENATE ON THE RATIFICATION OF THE LOUISIANA PURCHASE TREATY, OCTOBER 20, 1803

Yeas (24): Anderson, Joseph (Tenn.), Democrat; Bailey, Theodore (N. Y.), Democrat; Baldwin, Abraham (Ga.), Federalist; Bradley, Stephen Row (Vt.), Democrat; Breekenridge, John (Ky.), Democrat; Brown, John (Ky.); Butler, Pierce (S. C.), Democrat; Clinton, De Witt (N. Y.), Democrat; Cocke, William (Tenn.); Condit, John (N. J.), Democrat; Dayton, Johnathan (N. Y.), Democrat; Ellery, Christopher (R. I.), Democrat; Franklin, Jesse (N. C.), Democrat; Jackson, James (Ga.), Democrat; Logan, George (Pa.), Democrat; Maclay, Samuel (Pa.); Nicholas, Wilson Cary (Va.), Democrat; Potter, Samuel John (R. I.), Democrat; Stone, David (N. C.), Democrat; Taylor, John (Va.), Democrat; Worthington, Thomas (Ohio), Democrat; Wright, Robert (Md.), Democrat.

Nays (6): Hillhouse, James (Conn.), Federalist; Olcott, Simson (N. H.), Federalist; Pickering, Timothy (Mass.), Federalist; Plumer, William (N. H.), Federalist; Wells, William Hill (Del.); White, Samuel (Del.), Federalist. Yeas (24): Anderson, Joseph (Tenn.), Democrat; Bailey, Theo-

Not voting (3): Adams, John Quincy (Mass.), Federalist; Sumter, Thomas (S. C.), Democrat; Giles, William Branch (Va.), Democrat.

RECORD OF THE YEA-AND-NAY VOTE IN THE HOUSE ON A RESOLUTION THAT THE TREATY BETWEEN FRANCE AND THE UNITED STATES, OF APRIL 30, 1803, PROVIDING FOR THE LOUISIANA PURCHASE, BE CARRIED INTO EFFECT OCTOBER 25, 1803

APRIL 30, 1803, PROVIDING FOR THE LOUISIANA PURCHASE, BE CARRIED INTO EFFECT OCTOBER 25, 1803

Yeas (90): Alston, Willis (N. C.), War Democrat; Alexander, Nathaniel (N. C.); Anderson, Isaac (Pa.), Jefferson Democrat; Archer, John (Md.), Democrat; Bard, David (Pa.); Bedinger, George Michael (Ky.); Bishop, Phanuel (Mass.); Blackledge, William (N. C.), Democrat; Boyle, John (Ky.), Democrat; Brown, Robert (Tenn.), Democrat; Butler, William (S. C.), Anti-Federalist; Campbell, George W. (Tenn.), Democrat; Casey, Levi (S. C.); Chittenden, Martin (Vt.); Claggett, Clifton (N. H.); Claiborne, Thomas (Va.), Democrat; Clay, Joseph (Pa.); Clay, Matthew (Va.), Democrat; Clopton, John (Va.), Democrat; Conrad, Frederick (Pa.); Crowningshield, Jacob (Mass.), Democrat; Cutts, Richard (Mass.), Democrat; Dawson, John (Va.), Democrat; Dickson, William (Tenn.); Earle, John (S. C.); Early, Peter (Ga.); Elliott, James (Vt.), Federalist; Eppes, John W. (Va.), Democrat; Eustis, William (Mass.), Democrat; Findley, William (Pa.), Democrat; Fowler, John (Ky.); Goodwyn, Peterson (Va.), Democrat; Gray, Edwin (Va.); Gregg, Andrew (Pa.); Hampton, Wade (S. C.), Democrat; Hanna, John A. (Pa.), Anti-Federalist; Hasbrouck, Josiah (N. Y.); Heister, Joseph (Pa.), Federalist; Hoge, William (Pa.), Federalist; Holmes, David (Va.); Hunt, Samuel (N. H.); Jackson, John G. (Va.), Democrat; Jones, Walter (Va.), Democrat; Kennedy, William (N. C.), Federalist; Knight, Nehemiah (R. I.), Anti-Federalist; Leib, Michael (Pa.), Democrat; Lucas, John B. C. (Pa.), Democrat; Lyon, Matthew (Vt.), Anti-Federalist; McCord, Andrew (N. Y.); McCreery, William (Md.); Meriwether, David (Ga.), Democrat; Mitchill, Samuel L. (N. Y.), Democrat; Newon, Jeremiah (Ohio), Democrat; New, Anthony (Va.), Democrat; Newton, Thomas, Jr. (Va.), Democrat; Palmer, Joseph H. (Md.), Democrat; Olin, Gideon (Vt.), Democrat; Palmer, Thomas (S. C.); Morrow, Jeremiah (Ohio), Democrat; New, Anthony (Va.), Democrat; Newton, Thomas, Jr. (Va.), Democrat; Nicholson, Joseph H. (Md.), Democrat; Olin, Gideon (Vt.), Democrat; Palmer, Beriah (N. Y.); Patterson, John (N. Y.); Purviance, Samuel D. (N. C.), Jefferson Democrat; Randolph, John (Va.), Democrat; (States' Right); Randolph, Thomas M. (Va.), Democrat; Rea, John (Pa.), Democrat; Rhea, John (Tenn.), Democrat; Richards, Jacob (Pa.), Democrat; Rodney, Caesar A. (Del.), Democrat; Rodney, Caesar A. (Del.), Democrat; Rodney, Caesar A. (Del.), Democrat; Sanford, Thomas (Ky.), Democrat; Santon, Thomas (N. Y.), Democrat; Sanford, Thomas (Ky.), Democrat; Seaver, Ebenezer (Mass.), Democrat; Smith, John (Pa.), Democrat; Smith, John (Va.); Stanford, Richard (N. C.), Democrat; Stanton, Joseph (R. I.), Democrat; Stewart, John (Pa.), Democrat; Thomas, David (N. Y.), Democrat; Thompson, Philip R. (Va.), Democrat; Trigg, John (Va.); Van Cortlandt, Philip (N. Y.), Democrat; Varnum, Joseph B. (Mass.); Verplanck, Daniel C. (N. Y.), Federalist; Walton, Matthew (Ky.), Democrat; Whitehill, John (Pa.); Williams, Marmaduke (N. C.), Democrat; Winn, Richard (S. C.), Democrat; Winston, Joseph (N. C.), Democrat; Wynns, Thomas (N. C.), Federalist. (N. C.), Federalist.

(N. C.), Federalist.

Nays (24): Chamberlin, William (Vt.), Federalist; Cutler, Manasseh (Mass.), Federalist; Dana, Samuel W. (Conn.), Federalist; Davenport, John (Conn.), Federalist; Dwight, Thomas (Mass.), Federalist; Goddard, Calvin (Conn.), Federalist; Griffin, Thomas (Va.); Griswold, Gaylord (N. Y.), Federalist; Hastings, Seth (Mass.), Federalist; Hough, David (N. H.); Lewis, Joseph, Jr. (Va.), Federalist; Lewis, Thomas (Va.); Livingston, Henry W. (N. Y.); Mitchell, Nahum (Mass.), Federalist; Plater, Thomas (Md.); Sands, Joshua (N. Y.); Smith, John Cotton (Conn.), Federalist; Stedman, William (Mass.), Federalist; Stephenson, James (Va.), Federalist; Taggart, Samuel (Mass.), Federalist; Tenney, Samuel (N. H.); Thatcher, Samuel (Mass.), Democrat; Wadsworth, Peleg (Mass.); Williams, Lemuel (Mass.).

The treaty proper was ratified on October 25, 1803, and acts were passed on November 3, 1803, authorizing the issue of bonds in order to pay France. The constitutional question was never raised again. Whether constitutional or unconstitutional, the territory was ours, by the greater laws of national necessity, by the higher warrants of the general welfare of the Nation and its people.

OTHER TERRITORIAL ACQUISITIONS

But that was not all. The purchase of Louisiana Territory established a precedent which became amalgamated in our constitutional law and interpretation. Jefferson had found a way, sub silentio, to enact a treaty for our national benefit. Later we used that way as a precedent for paying Spain $5,000,000 for Florida, after Andrew Jackson, in his own rough way, had taught the Spaniards of Florida to respect the American flag. We used the same precedent when we paid Mexico $15,000,000 for Texas and adjacent territories after the Mexican War, and later we paid her, by the same precedent, 10 more millions for the Gadsden Purchase, which gave us the States of Arizona and New Mexico.

Nor was that all that sprang to the benefit of the general welfare from Jefferson's Louisiana treaty. Confident of the value of his great purchase, Jefferson in 1804 sent Lewis and Clark to explore the Northwest Territory, then known as the Oregon country. By reason of the Louisiana Purchase, they traveled then mostly through lands controlled by the United States, but they also pushed their discoveries into the Oregon territory, extending to the Pacific Ocean, so that when the time came to dispute our claims to that territory with the British, the discoveries and claims established by Jefferson's voyageurs gave us primal rights in the Oregon country, and we obtained them by treaty. So, directly springing from Jefferson's unconstitutional act in purchasing Louisiana, the Nation's boundaries at last extended from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from the Great Lakes to the Gulf.

JEFFERSON AND THE BILL OF RIGHTS

Perhaps I should close this brief excursion into Jeffersonian history here, but I am tempted to add another footnote while on the constitutional subject. I have said that Jefferson was a strict constructionist of the Constitution when it became fashioned to his heart's desire. But his heart was not wholly in it as it emanated from the Constitutional Convention and was ratified in 1789. He had praised its makers, but he was not wholly satisfied with their product. He found that there were certain rights, dear to the vision of a great American, that, as the document stood, were clearly unconstitutional. He found nothing there to insure freedom of speech, religious liberty, the right of petition by the people, the right to bear arms, the exclusion of soldiers from peaceful domiciles in times of peace, the protection of life and property by due processes of law, trial by jury in civil actions, and a few other things, including the limitation of judicial power, which, in his gospel, came under the heading of natural human rights. As the Constitution stood when ratified, all these rights were unconstitutional. It took 2 years to make them part of the Constitution. It was Jefferson's influence that formulated these human rights into the first 10 amendments to the Constitution and incorporated them there as the Bill of Rights. The Constitution makers had just overlooked them. But Jefferson and his followers made them constitutional; and yet our friends of the opposition in these days, in glorifying this great fundamental charter-which, let me say, I reverence as much as any of them; much more, perhaps, than some of its interpreters—are very fond of explaining to the common people how solicitous the Constitution makers were for their interests by citing the provisions of the Bill of Rights as evidence.

Fortunately for the Jefferson administration, there was no ultrarich editor, operating a large chain of publications, nor was there a Liberty League in existence at that time, and the Supreme Court of that period had not shown a disposition to take over powers it was never intended that it should have.

Had these conditions of today been in existence then, a test case would undoubtedly have been filed by these protectors of special interests, and perhaps Jefferson would have been thwarted in his project to annex the Louisiana Territory to the United States.

JEFFERSON AND THE JUDICIARY

Jefferson was a great statesman. Whereas a politician sees only the conditions of the present, Jefferson, the statesman, foresaw the events of the future. His remarkable foresight was well illustrated in his vision of the Supreme Court. He made many utterances on the Federal judiciary, but one will suffice on this occasion. In 1820, writing to Mr. Jarvis, he

You seem to consider the judges as the ultimate arbiters of all constitutional questions; a very dangerous doctrine, indeed, and one that would place us under the despotism of an oligarchy. Our judges are as honest as other men are, and no more so. They with others the same passions for party, for power, and the privilege of their corps.

JEFFERSONIAN LOGIC APPLICABLE TODAY

Jefferson found warrant for his so-called unconstitutional purchase of the Louisiana Territory in the greater laws of national necessity and general welfare.

Is there not a parallel between the supreme necessity which induced Jefferson to ignore the lack of express power in the Constitution when he acquired the Louisiana Territory and the supreme necessity which impelled our President of today to ignore possible constitutional limitations when he set about to alleviate human sufferings?

Just as Jefferson realized that the time which would be consumed in securing a constitutional amendment to ratify the Louisiana Purchase would possibly frustrate the great treaty, so did our present Chief Executive realize that such delay would frustrate all attempts to solve the great problems confronting him. He know that delay would mean untold sufferings, despair, widespread destitution, and even national bankruptcy.

The relief offered by him extended to all who were in distress due to the inherited depression. And the bankers, many of whom are now raising their voices to deride the policies of this administration, were among the recipients of his relief. This country was in a most precarious financial condition in March 1933, when the President took over the helm of state. On bended knees the bankers begged to be saved. Within 5 days after his inauguration every bank was closed, by his order, and there was immediately set into motion the machinery from which there emerged a financial stability which has restored public confidence in the banking institutions of this country.

Constitutional or unconstitutional, Jefferson acquired the Louisiana Territory. Historians agree that he was right when he did so. And I feel sure that future historians will say of our President of today that, constitutional or unconstitutional, he was right when he took steps to relieve human sufferings.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SHANNON. I yield. Mr. WOLCOTT. The gentleman has stated, I believe, that the Constitutional Convention overlooked the Bill of Rights.

Mr. SHANNON. Yes. Mr. WOLCOTT. I do not want to disparage Jefferson's activity with respect to getting the Bill of Rights adopted as a part of the Constitution; but if I recall my history of the convention correctly, the Bill of Rights was considered a very controversial subject in all its elements, and it was decided by the Constitutional Convention to recommend the adoption of the Constitution without the Bill of Rights and allow the States, after they had become States, to ratify the Bill of Rights separately from the principal Consti-

Mr. SHANNON. Mr. Jefferson was Minister to France at the time the Constitution was framed. He wrote many letters protesting against the failure to incorporate therein a declaration of rights. In a letter to William Rutledge he

I am glad to hear that our new Constitution is pretty sure of being accepted by States enough to secure the good it contains and to meet such opposition in some others as to give us hopes it will be accommodated to them by the amendment of its most glaring faults, particularly the want of a declaration of rights.

Mr. COLDEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SHANNON. Yes.

Mr. COLDEN. I want to say to the gentleman from Missouri that I have introduced a bill to make Jefferson's birthday a national holiday. What is the gentleman's attitude toward that bill?

Mr. SHANNON. I think that should be done.

Mr. CHRISTIANSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman from Missouri yield?

Mr. SHANNON. I yield.

Mr. CHRISTIANSON. The Members on both sides of the aisle have listened with a great deal of interest to the remarks made by the gentleman from Missouri on the life and work and influence of Thomas Jefferson. Jefferson is one of the few great historic characters who is universally acclaimed by all Americans, regardless of political affiliations; and in this connection I recall that about 2 years ago the Honorable James M. Beck, who was then a Member of this House, representing a Pennsylvania district, delivered a eulogy upon Thomas Jefferson that I consider one of the finest ever pronounced, and my purpose in rising is to ask unanimous consent that this eulogy be extended in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

There was no objection.

Mr. SHANNON. I think that is most fitting. Mr. Beck's speech is a very beautiful tribute to Thomas Jefferson, and it has a proper place in the RECORD on this Jefferson day.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for just one observation?

Mr. SHANNON. Yes. Mr. BLANTON. I want to say to my friend the gentleman from California [Mr. COLDEN] and others who may think like he does that they should read one of the most instructive speeches ever delivered here on the subject of creating new national holidays, made by James R. Mann, of Illinois, against making Lincoln's birthday a national holiday. This speech gives some very fine pointers. Jim Mann said we had enough national holidays and that Lincoln himself would not want anything of the kind.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The SPEAKER. Under the previous order of the House. the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Rich] is recognized for 10 minutes.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker and Members of the House of Representatives, on this one hundred and ninety-third anniversary of Thomas Jefferson, one of the greatest Americans that has ever lived, a man who was a great States' rights Democrat, a man who was the author of the Declaration of Independence, one of the greatest documents ever written, nothing would be more fitting today, after we have heard these two great speeches eulogizing Thomas Jefferson from our colleague from New York [Mr. Boylan] and our colleague from Missouri [Mr. Shannon], than for the membership of this House, both Democrats and Republicans, to think of the great things that Thomas Jefferson said and did during his lifetime and emulate those things. Nothing, I say, would be better for this country of ours, especially at this particular time. [Applause.]

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Pennsylvania is making a money-saving speech, and I make the point that no quorum is present.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I trust that the gentleman from Texas will not make the point of no quorum. I am sure the gentleman from Pennsylvania is satisfied to make his speech to the large number of Members now on the floor.

Mr. RICH. The majority leader knows that I am satisfied with the number of Members on the floor.

Mr. BLANTON. The gentleman from Pennsylvania does not speak often, and we ought to have a quorum here to hear him

The SPEAKER. Evidently there is no quorum present. Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House

A call of the House was ordered.

The Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

[Roll No. 641

Adair	Disney	Hoeppel	O'Brien
Allen	Dorsey	Hook	Oliver
Andresen	Doutrich	Hope	O'Neal
Andrew, Mass.	Driscoll	Jenckes, Ind.	Palmisano
Andrews, N. Y	Duffey, Ohio	Jenkins, Ohio	Perkins
Beam	Duffy,N.Y.	Johnson, Okla.	Peterson, Fla.
Berlin	Dunn, Miss.	Kee	Pierce
Binderup	Dunn, Pa.	Keller	Quinn
Bolton	Eagle	Kelly	Reed, Ill.
Brennan	Eaton	Kerr	Richards
Brooks	Eckert	Kocialkowski	Romjue
Brown, Mich.	Faddis	Lanham	Russell
Buckbee	Fenerty	Larrabee	Sabath
Buckley, N. Y.	Ferguson	Lea, Calif.	Sanders, La.
Bulwinkle	Fernandez	Lehlbach	Sandlin
Burch	Fiesinger	Lemke	Schaefer
Burdick	Flannagan	Lesinski	Schneider
Cannon, Wis.	Ford, Calif.	Lewis, Md.	Schuetz
Cary	Frey	Lucas	Smith, Va.
Claiborne	Gambrill	Lundeen	Snell
Clark, Idaho	Gasque	McAndrews	Starnes
Clark, N. C.	Gassaway	McFarlane	Steagall
Coffee	Gavagan	McGehee	Sumners, Tex.
Collins	Gifford	McGrath	Thom
Connery	Gray, Ind.	McKeough	Thomas
Cooper, Ohio	Greenway	McLaughlin	Thurston
Crosby	Gregory	McMillan	Tinkham
Crowe	Haines	Maloney	Tobey
Crowther	Hancock, N. C.	May	Underwood
Culkin	Harlan	Meeks	Wadsworth
Darrow	Hartley	Mitchell,Ill.	Weaver
Dear	Healey	Monaghan	Wigglesworth
DeRouen	Hess	Montague	Wilson, La.
Dickstein	Higgins, Conn.	Montet	Withrow
Dies	Higgins, Mass.	Moran	ALTONOMO COMPANION
Dietrich	Hill, Knute	Moritz
Dingell	Hobbs	Murdock

The SPEAKER. Two hundred and eighty-four Members are present, a quorum.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, I move to dispense with further proceedings under the call.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. RICH. Members of the House of Representatives, when our colleague, Mr. Boylan, spoke a few moments ago he said that the only monument we had to Thomas Jefferson stood in the hallway outside the House of Representatives, and that at no place could a more fitting monument be erected to this great man, Thomas Jefferson, than in the city of Washington.

I believe if the House of Representatives wanted to erect a fitting statue to Thomas Jefferson in Washington, D. C., both Republicans and Democrats alike would vote any sum of money for a monument to that great man here in the city of Washington.

The trouble is that the Members of the House of Representatives have almost forgotten the teachings of Thomas Jefferson. Take the platform where you promised economy of government, balancing the Budget, sound money, elimination of Government in business, and where you lamented the excessive use of money in political activities, and where the last paragraph of the Democratic platform reads, as follows:

In conclusion, to accomplish these purposes and to recover economic liberty, we pledge the nominees of this convention the best efforts of a great party whose founder announced the doctrine which guides us now in the hour of our country's need: Equal rights to all, special privileges to none.

They meant Thomas Jefferson, but let me tell you now that the Democratic Party has forsaken Thomas Jefferson, and only I as a Republican stand up here to laud those things, besides my colleague from New York [Mr. BOYLAN], and my colleague from Missouri [Mr. Shannon]. I say to you Democrats, follow Thomas Jefferson from now on.

They are talking about building a monument in the city of St. Louis to that great man, Thomas Jefferson, and there has been allocated in an Executive order of December 21, 1935, $6,750,000 toward this project. They expect to spend $30,000,000 to build the monument to Thomas Jefferson in St. Louis. Let me show you the monument they have already constructed in the city of St. Louis, which is a great monument on 1,200 acres of land, a monument which stands out as a memorial to any great man. Why should they waste the money now to build a second monument, to the tune of $30,000,000 in St. Louis, when we need the money to buy food and clothing to help those in need? The second memorial to Thomas Jefferson is not a necessity in St. Louis. That proposed monument will cost as high as $325,000 an acre for the property they expect to condemn. on 37 city blocks, wrecking 446 buildings, embracing 290 firms doing an annual business of $60,000,000 who will have to find other quarters. One hundred and thirty-four firms, according to the Chamber of Commerce of St. Louis, have an investment of $12,610,000 and pay $12,000,-000 in wages and salaries to the workers in St. Louis. Why destroy all this property? Why should we build a second monument in St. Louis, when we have none to amount to anything in the city of Washington? It is a disgraceful proposal not authorized by Congress. Remember this when the one and one-half billion relief bill comes on the floor soon.

The waste of money going on under the W. P. A. program is scandalous. In this morning's paper Gen. Hugh S. Johnson characterizes the program of the W. P. A. as cruel and stupid.

SYSTEM HUMILIATES BENEFICIARIES; TASKS NEEDLESS, EXPENSIVE

PROGRAM OF W. P. A. CRUEL AND STUPID, HUGH JOHNSON SAYS-SYSTEM HUMILIATES BENEFICIARIES; TASKS NEEDLESSLY EXPENSIVE

Washington, April 10.—The work-relief program was termed "as cruel as it is stupid" today in the final report made by Hugh S. Johnson, as New York City W. P. A. administrator, to Harry L.

Johnson, as New York City W. T. It describes the Morkins, and the Hopkins. The document, made public today by Hopkins, sharply criticized what Johnson termed interference in getting the work-relief program started there.

"By actual count", Johnson told Hopkins, "90 percent of my letters asking various authorities and rulings were unanswered, and I was consistently unable to reach you on the telephone, unless I almost literally turned in a riot call."

But that is not all. Let me read to you what the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Blanton], who is right here on the floor now, says about the W. P. A. He writes under date of April 8 to the Dallas News as follows:

DALLAS NEWS:

Since in your editorial of March 30 you mentioned my name in every paragraph, please be fair enough to publish this reply.

every paragraph, please be fair enough to publish this reply. If you had been correct in your assumption, based on Mr. Drought's assertion, that the W. P. A. administration in Texas is wholly uncontrolled by politics, the situation would be ideal, and no Congressman would complain. But you were mistaken. He did not tell you the facts.

Harry P. Drought himself is a political appointee, and a patronage selection. Every official under Drought is a political appointee. Every salaried job-holder under Drought is a political appointee. Some are good. But some are bad. There are bad ones who are inefficient, extravagant, wasteful, unworthy, and undeserving. Texas Congressmen are in no way responsible for their selection, yet are criticized and held responsible for their misdeeds. For no other reason did Texas Congressmen complain.

Drought treated Texas Congressmen unfairly and allowed politicians unknown to the people, and who are in no way responsible Drought treated Texas Congressmen unially and anowed politicians unknown to the people, and who are in no way responsible to the constituents of Congressmen, to select and have appointed those who have been inefficient and unworthy. Texas Congressmen want Harry Drought and his patronage-politicians to assume full responsibility for the misdeeds of their own appointees.

Thomas L. Blanton.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

Mr. BLANTON. And, Mr. Speaker, that is exactly the gospel truth.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I do not yield to anyone.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will please not interrupt without permission of the Member occupying the floor, as it is strictly against the rules.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, we should stop these needless We should have Congress authorize the exexpenditures. penditures of public funds, not the President, not Mr. Ickes, not Mr. Hopkins, not Mr. Tugwell, but Congress should authorize the projects to be erected to a great man like Thomas Jefferson. Let us have more followers in the Democratic Party of Jefferson and not so many Roosevelt.

Wallace, Ickes, Tugwell followers. Where is the Democratic Party of Jefferson? They who are in Washington masquerading under the name certainly are not adhering to the policies and principles of Jeffersonian teachings. Democrats follow the Sage of Monticello.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania has expired.

RESIGNATION OF A MEMBER

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following communication, which was read:

NEW LEXINGTON. OHIO. April 6, 1936.

Hon. Joseph W. Byens, Speaker of the House of Representatives,

Washington, D. C.

My Dear Mr. Speaker: Because of my appointment as United States district judge for the southern district of Ohio, I have the States district judge for the southern district of Ohio, I have the honor to inform you that this day my resignation as a Representative in the Congress of the United States from the Eleventh District of Ohio has been transmitted to the Governor of Ohio, effective at midnight Friday, April 10, 1936.

May I extend my sincere thanks and heartfelt appreciation to you and my colleagues in Congress for their courtesies and friendship during my 14 years of service.

My work and associations have been very pleasant, and I wish for you and my worthy colleagues continued success.

Sincerely,

MELL G. UNDERWOOD.

RENT COMMISSION FOR DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 11563) declaring an emergency in the housing condition in the District of Columbia, creating a rent commission for the District of Columbia, prescribing powers and duties of the commission, and for other purposes.

The question was taken.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I demand a division.

The House divided; and there were-ayes 148, noes 3.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote because there is no quorum present, and I make the point of order that there is no quorum present.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will count. [After counting.] Two hundred and twenty-three Members present, a quorum. So the motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 11563, with Mr. UMSTEAD in the

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, may I inquire as to the status of the time?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois has 40 minutes remaining and the gentlewoman from New Jersey has 22 minutes remaining.

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 10 minutes. Mr. Chairman, it is plainly evident that the filibustering tactics indulged in during the past two District days and again today are aimed as an attack on your chairman rather than the bill under consideration. In view of that being the fact I think the House should know the extent of intimidation your chairman has been subjected to, and in order to bring this clearly before the House I shall read for your consideration a letter received by me on the morning of the last District day from the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Blanton] and my reply to that letter. The letter is dated March 20, 1936, and is as follows:

> CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES, House of Representatives, Washington, D. C., March 20, 1936.

Mrs. Mary T. Norton, Chairman, District of Columbia Committee,

House Office Building, Washington, D. C. My Dear Mrs. Norton: I am rather surprised to see in this morning's Washington Post under headlines Mrs. Norton Asks Lump Sum of $5,700,000, and She Rebukes Blanton, and She Says House Will Recede, a baseless, unjustified attack upon me, wherein about me you are quoted with having made the following ridiculous statement: ridiculous statement:

"Mrs. Norton related how she had sought unsuccessfully to discover his soft spot. 'I have been told he has a soft spot; and if you will find out what it is for me, I will work on it.'"

The only soft spot about me that you could ever work on is the gentlemanly instinct that has been born and bred into my very bone and fiber for generations, to be courteous always to a lady; and, being controlled by that instinct, I have patiently and silently allowed you on many occasions, wholly without you having any ground therefor, to vent your spite and personal spleen against me by making vicious attacks upon me from the floor and in the press. You did so simply because under my oath of office duty had forced me to oppose some very unsound and ridiculous bills you had reported and were trying to pass. And on several occasions the House, after debate, struck out their enacting clause.

I have reached the point now with your continued spiteful and

I have reached the point now, with your continued spiteful and unjustified attacks, where "forbearance ceases to be a virtue." Simply because you happen to be woman gives you no right whatever to attack a man. You have only the same rights that all of your other colleagues enjoy. And I want you to distinctly understand, clearly and unmistakably, that from now on I intend to answer in kind every attack you make on me.

You that "country take it" You made your fight and lost. You

You just "can't take it." You make on me.

You just "can't take it." You made your fight and lost. You tried to place upon the already overburdened shoulders of the tax-payers of the States the additional burden of having to contribute $5,700,000 toward paying the local expenses of the people of Washington, who are the best treated and least taxed of any people living in any other city in the whole world. You lost your fight. The Members wouldn't back you. You had only a corporal guard supporting you. When you forced a rising vote, only a handful of Members voted with you to make your constituents pay this $5,700,000 in Washington. It made you mad. And then on Friday, March 6, being mad from the day before, when you forced a roll-call vote on the passage of the bill in the House, and you appealed to Members to vote with you, and "worked on their soft spots", as you always do, you could not get but 25 Members to vote with you against the bill, which by a vote of 290 Members for it, passed the 83-page bill without a single amendment. The Members of the House did that, because they did not think like you think.

Your constituents in New Jersey pay three times as much taxes as do the people of Washington, and do not have one-third of the benefits. When the people of Washington have their property assessed at about one-half of its actual value, and then pay only $1.50 on the $100 taxes on it and have their intangible property taxed at only one-half of 1 percent, with your constituents and mine paying several times as much, you want our constituents to contribute $5,700,000.

When Washington people have all of their fine personal libraries.

contribute $5,700,000.

When Washington people have all of their fine personal libraries, some worth $100,000, exempt from taxation; when they have all of their wearing apparel, which includes all their personal effects, whether worth $100 or $100,000, exempt from taxation; when they pay only 2 cents per gallon tax on gasoline, while all other people in other cities pay twice that much; when they pay only $1 registration and for license tags on their automobiles, whether Fords or $12,000 Rolls-Royces, with people in New Jersey and Texas paying 10 times that much; when they have no monthly charge for sewer service, like other people elsewhere pay; when they have all their trees in front of and around their property furnished free, planted free, protected with lumber pens free, sprayed free, pruned free, and replaced free, while people elsewhere have to pay for same; when they are charged nothing for repairing and replacing sidewalks and paved streets in front of their property, like people elsewhere have to pay for; when they their property, like people elsewhere have to pay for; when they get their water furnished for $6.60 per year for an average family, you think the citizens of the States ought to contribute $5,700,000

When the people of Washington pay no income tax; when they pay no inheritance tax; when they pay no estate tax; when they pay no gift tax; when they pay no sales tax, like people in some other cities have to pay; and when during the last 20 years the Government has spent here over $240,000,000 cash in permanent improvements, which benefits every person in Washington, and when the Government has a pay roll here with 110,000 employees receiving salaries each month, spending their money here, which is a bonanza for Washington, you feel sorry for them, and want our constituents in New Jersey and Texas to contribute $5,700,000. Your constitutents in New Jersey are just like mine in Texas. They are willing to pay their own taxes, but they don't want to pay the taxes of Washington people. I know that they don't approve of your action. When the people of Washington pay no income tax; when they approve of your action.

Since you have seen fit to attack me at a public function simply because I faithfully performed my duty under my oath and was trying to protect your constituents as well as my own from injus-tice, I am willing to meet you on this issue in your district before your people in your primary campaign and see whether your Democrats will back you in your efforts to unduly tax them. I am going to take it upon myself to let your Democrats know the facts about this issue.

I have been trying to think of one constructive thing you have accomplished for the people of New Jersey since you have been in Congress, and I am not able to do it.

I can think of many bills that you have reported that had their enacting clause stricken out.

I can think of many attempts you have made to backbite and ry to injure me in my district, but you did not succeed in doing it.

I can think of many attacks you have made in public on colleagues, but I can't think of anything of any importance that you have ever accomplished since you have been in Congress.

But I haven't gone to public functions and made the above statements about you. I haven't tried to injure you as you have tried to injure me.

I have been decent and courteous to you at all times, and have patiently allowed you to spitefully and maliciously abuse me. I am getting tired of it. As said above, forbearance ceases to be a virtue. I am going to take it no longer. I am going to answer in kind. Every time you attack me I am going to respond in kind. Very sincerely yours,

THOMAS L. BLANTON.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentlewoman from New Jersey has expired.

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 10 additional minutes.

This is my reply:

MARCH 24, 1936.

Hon. Thomas L. Blanton,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MR. BLANTON: I have your letter of March 20, and admit that upon first reading it achieved its purpose. I was angry beyond words. But upon second reading it produced only amusement that you could be irritated to such a point that you would address such a letter to a colleague; more especially since the cause of your temper is merely a reference to the possibility of your having a "soft spot", a sympathetic tenderness, if you please, for someone or some place. You vigorously deny having any such. I frankly admit having many—for crippled children, for tuberculosis victims, for overcrowded hospital wards, for overworked nurses, for juvenile offenders, for first offenders thrown into crowded jails indiscriminately with hardened criminals, and so on down a long list. Nor am I ashamed of them.

Some things I must suggest in reply. You refer to the $5.700.000 list. Nor am I ashamed of them.

Some things I must suggest in reply. You refer to the $5,700,000 Federal allowance to the District of Columbia as being my fight, my effort, my budget, my burden on the taxpayers. It was not. That figure was the President's figure. He sent the budget of $5,700,000 to Congress. It was his judgment, his wish, his effort. My feeble attempt was merely to support the President's budget. You were tearing it down. And you not only tore it down, but now you say that anyone who agrees with the President's budget is making a "baseless, unjustified attack" on you. I just cannot reconcile your attitude and your letter with your speech in the House on February 18 of this year. You will recall that you had then described to the House your devotion to the President's budget and your public defense of it against the attack of certain citizens. So far as I am concerned, in regard to the $5,700,000, I stood and stand now with the suggestion of the President and his Budget Director. Budget Director.

Budget Director.

As to the imposition of taxes on our respective constituents, let me remind you that in reducing the District of Columbia budget by $3,000,000 you saved your constituents and mine about two pennies apiece. That is all that is involved so far as they are concerned. You have voted for many bills that cost your constituents much more money than that; bills that appropriated many millions and even billions. I don't believe that you are wise to raise too great an issue about the tax bills you have opposed as against those you have supported.

as against those you have supported.

And, while we are talking about the District of Columbia budget, let me say that the most amazing thing to me at least about your treatment of that bill was your selection of items to cut. You increased the appropriation for the Zoo and decreased the amounts increased the appropriation for the Zoo and decreased the amounts for tuberculosis dispensaries and for hygiene and sanitation in the public schools. You increased the allowance for the National Training schools, Federal reform institutions for juveniles from all over the United States, and decreased the allowance for Emergency Hospital. You increased the Soldiers and Sailors Home and decreased the Children's Tuberculosis Sanitarium. You increased the expense allowance for the improvement and care of parks and decreased the salaries for the police. You increased the allowance for the militia and for the collection of refuse, but decreased those for prevention of contagious diseases, for bacteriological laboratories, and for child-hygiene service. tories, and for child-hygiene service.

As to constructive measures which I have introduced or reported, I would be glad to match my list with yours. I do not seem to recall many constructive "Blanton acts", although you have been in Congress must longer than I have. As a starter I mention, on my account, the old-age pension, the blind pension, the parole law, the Firearms Act, the alley dwelling clearance, the Liquor Control Act, the education of veterance or phases the leave to the Children's control and the control act. the Firearms Act, the alley dwelling clearance, the Liquor Control Act, the education of veterans' orphans, the loan to the Children's Hospital, the Auto Responsibility Act, the equal distribution of property to women, smoke control, the removal of dangerous and insanitary buildings. What are some of yours, Mr. Blanton? Then as to my success in piloting my bills through the House, I admit a great debt of gratitude to my colleagues, but a hurried examination of the records indicates that of a total of 153 bills reported by me as chairman of the District of Columbia Committee in the Seventy-second, Seventy-third, and Seventy-fourth Congresses, only 3 were defeated by a vote of the House. I think that is a pretty fair record. How does it compare with yours?

3 were defeated by a vote of the House. I think that is a pretty fair record. How does it compare with yours?

You mention a lot of things you can think of. Well, the only thing I can think of about you is that you have caused a lot of embarrassment to your constituents, as well as to the membership of the House. You have cost thousands of dollars to the taxpayers of the country for hundreds of pages in the Congressional Recorn without a single constructive achievement. I can think of many Representatives from your State who are a credit to the State, but those in power.

I can think of you only with sorrow that you should use the many girts God has given you to crush the less fortunate—to ridicule those in power.

So far as my district is concerned, don't worry about it. Come to it at any time and I shall be there to welcome you. So will my constituents. They would like to get a look at the man who several times defeated my bill to pay $90,000 owed by the Government to Jersey City for water supplied during the war. You will find, if you come to my district, that my constituents have not only a very high regard for their Representatives but that they also have a very good sense of humor as well.

As to your "courteous and decent" treatment of me, I prefer to let my colleagues in Congress appraise your treatment of me during the past 5 years.

Very truly yours,

Very truly yours,

(Mrs.) MARY T. NORTON.

[Applause.]

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the remainder of my time, and I yield 7 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Dob-BINS]. I regret that I have taken 3 minutes of the time I expected to yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Dobbins].

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Dob-

BINS] is recognized for 17 minutes.

Mr. DOBBINS. Mr. Chairman, I would like, if possible, in the interest of what seems to me proper legislative practice, to bring the attention of the Committee back to the legislation under consideration. I do not care to enter into a popularity contest between two Members or more than two Members of the House, but I feel this House has a very serious duty to perform in connection with this bill, which I know must have created serious misgivings in the minds of many of us.

The first question that arises in the mind of any lawyer when he looks at this bill and considers its provisions is the question as to its constitutionality.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DOBBINS. I yield. Mr. DIRKSEN. Before the gentleman proceeds further, I wish to remind the Members that he has made a rather painstaking study of this rent bill and of the features of the former rent bill, and I hope he will be given respectful

Mr. DOBBINS. I thank my colleague. When the consideration of this bill began in the Committee of the Whole 5 weeks ago the gentleman from Pennsylvania, the author of the bill, while explaining its provisions made this statement with reference to the question of its constitutionality, designed to foreclose any further argument upon that phase of the subject:

Mr. Ellenbogen. First, about the constitutionality of this bill: Those who say this bill is not constitutional are absolutely wrong, and they know it. The Supreme Court of the United States, in the case of Block v. Hirsh (256 U. S. 135), has declared a statute in the very same language, under the very same circumstances,

Later on, my colleague, the gentleman from Illinois, took the floor in opposition to the bill, and he yielded to me for an inquiry as to the extent, if any, that this bill might be identical with any law declared constitutional by the Supreme Court. He replied that as he understood it there was only a general similarity.

A little further on in his remarks the gentleman from Pennsylvania said:

In October 1919 this House passed, and the Senate concurred, and the President signed a bill which is practically identical.

The law discussed in the case cited by the gentleman from Pennsylvania in support of his bill is not set out in the committee's report or in the hearings before the District Committee, so far as I can ascertain. I obtained a copy of it from the Library of Congress and compared it paragraph by paragraph with the Ellenbogen bill, H. R. 11563. The Ellenbogen bill has some 25 or 26 sections. Two-thirds of the sections are not even substantially identical with the most nearly corresponding sections of the bill passed upon by the Supreme Court. The remaining third are, I should say, either actually or substantially identical. Some of the sections of the bill passed upon by the Supreme Court are absolutely in conflict with the pending bill. For instance, in lence to the ownership and improvement of property.

section 106 of the old bill and in section 6 of this bill there appears an introductory clause providing for instituting an inquiry before the rent commission as to fairness of rents by complaint filed by the owner or tenant.

Then in the former law this significant qualification ap-

Except where the tenant is in possession under a lease or other contract the term specified in which has not expired.

In the pending bill there appears the following:

Such complaints may be made and filed-notwithstanding the existence of a lease or other contract between the tenant and the owner, or between the owner and any guest.

In other words, under this bill you may at your pleasure select a house or an apartment that appeals to you, rent it from the landlord, pay to him the rent that he asks, or agree to pay him, and sign your solemn promise to pay him, and the very next day you can go before the members of the Rent Commission and repudiate that promise of yours. Not only may the tenant do this but the landlord may do it. It would be just as sensible for me to go into a clothing store and purchase a suit of clothes, pay the price asked for it, and, notwithstanding a dozen others may have been clamoring for the same suit, the next day go before some bureaucratic functionary and ask that the price I honestly and fairly agreed to pay for the suit be reduced according to my new notion of what I ought to have paid for it.

Another contradictory provision between this bill and the one passed upon by the Supreme Court is in the definition of the term "rental property." The law which was in part passed upon by the Supreme Court did not include a hotel or apartment in that definition. In the present bill "the term 'rental property' means any hotel, apartment, or rooming house", and so forth. This is in section 2 of the pending

And so you can go through this bill and find all sorts of variations and contrary provisions as compared with the 1919 act. I would judge that the present bill is approximately twice as long as the 1919 law that was passed upon in the case of Block against Hirsh.

Does this justify the statement made to those of us who were troubled over the question whether or not this bill may be constitutional? Is this "a statute in the very same language under the very same circumstances"? Of course it is not, and of course such a statement cannot be justified. We should not give our approval to any bill that comes before us with that sort of representation as to its terms, which will not and cannot be verified in any substantial way.

This bill contains another provision—and it was admitted before-and it is the only distinction that was admitted. By this provision the bill exempts property yet to be constructed and limits its provisions to property now in existence. It provides that property built tomorrow, day after tomorrow, or next week shall not come within the terms of this bill.

Now, whether or not that has any bearing upon the question of the constitutionality of the measure, it does certainly have some bearing upon the wisdom of the measure, because if that means anything it means that this bill is admitted to be a burden upon the ownership of property as well as a burden upon the construction of property; therefore it picks out, and picks upon, the owners who have heretofore constructed homes, hotels, rooming houses, or apartments for the housing of the people of the District of Columbia and applies the law to them because they have already done their part to meet our heavy demand for housing, and hence cannot escape its provisions. But recognizing, as we must, that anybody who may hereafter contemplate the construction of property for rental would never voluntarily submit to an autocratic and arbitrary dictation of the kind here proposed, the bill provides that property constructed after this time shall not come within the provisions of this measure. That is a clear admission, it seems to me, that the bill contains an unjustly onerous provision with refer-

It is said, by way of argument, that the New York law is the basis for this bill. The New York law is not before us. The New York law was before the Supreme Court in another case briefly reported in the same volume as that containing the opinion on the District of Columbia rent bill of 1919. but the provisions and the terms of the New York law are not discussed.

It is also said in debate on this bill at the last hearing that the law which was declared constitutional was not a wartime measure. The Supreme Court predicated its approval of that bill upon the basis that it was designed to meet an emergency growing out of the World War, and pointed to wartime legislation in other countries designed to meet the same end. They may contend, for it has been so contended privately with me, that numerous amendments came in which may have changed the scope of the 1919 act as it was being considered in the Supreme Court from its form as it appears in the statute books of that time. But remember that the facts upon which this case was decided happened within 2 months after the District of Columbia rent bill became a law. The case immediately started on its way to the courts.

The constitutionality of that entire law was not upheld in the case of Block against Hirsch. The only question that was upheld was the right of a tenant to hold over after his lease expired where the owner of the property had deliberately refrained from giving certain notices which the law provided should be given. It was not an upholding of the validity of the entire law, because that law contained, as this one does, a provision that if any section of that law should be held invalid such holding should not affect the validity of the remainder of the act. This is the so-called separability clause, which appears also in this bill.

That law differed commendably from this bill in that it did not contain any provision reserving to the Congress the right to amend the law in the future, a very novel provision, it seems to me, in any law, since no Congress can in any way impinge upon the inherent and constitutional right of itself or succeeding Congresses to enact new or amendatory laws.

Mr. Chairman, it seems to me that any time we spend in the passage of this law is time wasted, because this bill is headed as squarely as can be toward a decision of the Supreme Court holding that we have not the right under the provisions of the Constitution of the United States to deprive a citizen of his property without due process of law. Precedent is the only thing that might surprise us into some contrary conclusion, but that precedent does not exist.

Although we were told in debate that the old rent law, after which this bill purports to be modeled, was not a wartime measure, the present bill attempts to declare itself to be a wartime measure, through a preamble reciting that it is necessitated by emergencies growing out of the war against the depression. Of course, in one sense, we are always engaged in a war against some condition or other that ought not to exist, and I want to assure anyone who may believe that wars against depressions will ever cease that he is deluding himself very sadly.

Mr. WEARIN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DOBBINS. I am glad to yield to the gentleman from

Mr. WEARIN. In view of the fact that many of our people hold positions in this city who have their permanent residences in our respective districts, and they are being gouged out of a considerable portion of their salaries, by reason of high rents, it seems to me something should be done, if this law is not constitutional. It might be possible for us to set up a board of tax review on the part of Congress which would adjust rents to the taxable valuation that is turned in by these landlords who are charging excessive rentals.

Mr. DOBBINS. I may say to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Wearin] that I can see no objection, if unfair tax valuations prevail in the District of Columbia, to providing a procedure to make it certain that fair valuations are enforced upon property owners. But so far as our people being gouged is concerned, I cannot see how we can blame the unfortunate property owners in the District of Columbia for observing the ordinary law of supply and demand in the matter of rental charges, so long as the Government continues bringing into the District of Columbia great numbers of public employees. It is within the power of the Government to put those employees anywhere it pleases. They may decentralize operations here. It is within the power of the Government, if it recognizes some responsibility of its own in connection with this matter, to build additional quarters within which to house its employees, as it did during the World War. May I express my individual belief, however, that this matter of exorbitant rents is very much overemphasized. Naturally we all look for the best there is and we expect to get the very best there is at the average prices as we know them back home, and to which perhaps distance may lend some enchantment. We have people coming here from home, and we like to have them see us in elegant quarters. That is probably a natural desire on our part, but we and not someone else should pay the price for our own vanity. We should not expect the unfortunate property owners who must submit, without suffrage or representation, to our legislative whims, to rent houses to us for less than their actual worth, and this worth is unavoidably and inevitably controlled by the law of supply and demand.

Mr. WEARIN. Will the gentleman yield further?
Mr. DOBBINS. I yield again to the gentleman from Iowa.
Mr. WEARIN. The gentleman has very graciously yielded to me, and I think we are more or less in harmony. For example, I have a number of specific cases in which rentals in this city are as much as 20 percent of the value of the property as it has been turned in for taxation purposes. Certainly that is an excessive charge on the part of the landlord.

Mr. DOBBINS. I may say that I am sure if the gentleman will look into each such case he will find that the fault lies in there being an unreasonably low taxable valuation rather than in there being an inordinate return upon the actual valuation of the property.

I certainly know of no real property in the District of Columbia upon which the annual rent is anything like 20 percent of its actual value.

Mr. WEARIN. I have a specific case in mind.

Mr. DOBBINS. That, I infer, is a question of return on the taxable value; and I suspect that on such a basis similar examples might be found in the gentleman's district as well as in my own. I know it is true in some instances in my district.

Mr. MILLARD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DOBBINS. I yield. Mr. MILLARD. If the people of the District of Columbia are overassessed, they have a remedy in the courts by way of a writ of certiorari.

Mr. DOBBINS. They unquestionably do. And we have public officials here whose duty it is to see that property is not underassessed. The duty lies upon them rather than upon the property owner to make good such inequities.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman vield?

Mr. DOBBINS. I yield.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. I believe the gentleman will concur with me that we could not pass a constitutional bill which would fix the rent at a definite percentage of the assessed valuation, because of many other factors involved, like light, heat, janitor service, and many other things of that sort.

Mr. DOBBINS. I think that may be true; but, in my opinion, we could come much nearer passing a constitutional bill by basing it upon the factor of tax valuation rather than by deliberately going up to a property owner and taking his property without his consent and then having a commission or bureau come in and fix the amount that should be paid; and especially is this true where you have gone to that man and signed your name to a lease and have solemnly and fairly, without fraud or duress of any kind, agreed to pay a certain rental, and the next day under a law like this you go before a commission and contend that you are paying an unfair rent and ask to have the rent revised.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 20 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Blanton].

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, when I was a young lad in our family home in Houston, Tex., my father, who was a Virginian by birth, said to me one day, "Son, I want to tell you what my father told me and what his father told him, that while a woman has no more moral right to attack a man than a man has to attack a woman, all through life remember that when a woman attacks you, take it—do not attack back."

I have lived up to that admonition all my life. I do not attack a woman. When they attack I take it. But a man does have the right to defend himself against attacks, made either by man or woman.

I have taken the lead in fights on such bills as this, because it might be that some other colleagues whose duty it is, just as much as it is mine, to take the lead, might be hurt in their districts if they led such fights. I have a district where I will not be hurt, a district where the people understand me, where I was their circuit judge on the bench for 8 years, where they know what I stand for and have confidence in me; and I am prepared to take the resultant slams that some little two-bit newspaper reporters hit me with under the belt in these Washington papers every day when I fight their bills. I am prepared to take it and it does not hurt me. It might hurt some of you good colleagues in a close district where some demagogue was your opponent and the vote is very close on party lines. This is the reason I take the lead lots of times against such bad bills, when you, in your hearts, are just as much against the bills as I am.

Now, because I have led the fight against this unsound bill the statement was made here on the floor by the one handling this bill that "Blanton is controlled by real-estate men." That was wholly untrue. I do not know a real-estate man in Washington to speak to—not one—and the one who made that statement, just about that time, had their picture appearing in the Washington Post with the real-estate president at a banquet presided over by the president of the real-estate men of Washington, Mr. Saul.

Oh, she has said that I oppose this bill because I was a landlord here in Washington and owned property for rent. That is too ridiculous to deny. Here are the facts about that. When the first rent-control bill came up during the war to create just such a rent commission as this bill proposes to create—the rents were outrageously high then, just as they are now-I was renting a house here. I just jumped in and fought for that bill. My rent was too high, and I thought that the bill would lower rents. I did not know at that time that it would raise rents and that eventually it would be declared unconstitutional, because we were in war and I fought for it just as zealously as our friend from Pennsylvania [Mr. Ellenbogen] is now fighting for this bill. We passed the bill, and shortly after it went into effect my rent was increased $20 a month. It was already so high I could hardly pay it, and this continued all during the life of that rent commission, and its life was extended and extended. Practically all rents were raised. I had to pay this extra rent until I got tired of it and I bought a house. After I bought the house I spent a lot of money improving it. At one time I was paying $150 a month rent for it unfurnished, with no furnishings of any kind in the vacant house that belonged to the owner.

I had the house painted. I had the big sleeping porch upstairs closed in with glass. I had the garage improved. I had the roof covered with tar. And while it was a comfortable place to live it was too far from my work, and to keep from having to drive through the snow at night when I was working until 12 o'clock in my office, I rented it partly furnished to a good woman for only $75 per month, when it would have brought much more than that; and during all these years since I have been living at the Methodist Building, paying to them for a small apartment on the fifth floor much more rent than was paid me for the house.

Now, was not it ridiculous to speak of me as a landlord? I wish that I did own some rental property in Washington, but I do not.

Then the Washington Post, in a very derogatory way, quoted the one who has charge of this bill as saying that she thought I must have a soft spot, and if someone would help her find it she would work on it.

I admit that I got incensed over that public attack at a banquet and its publication in a newspaper. Would not you?

I have worked hard for the people of the United States during the 20 years I have been here. Do you know, honestly and truthfully, outside of a bare living for my family and general expenses, I have spent all of my income for 20 years for the public good and in the public service in an attempt to help make the United States a better place for poor people to live in. Every bit of my income for 20 years, above a living, has been spent in the interest of the public welfare.

And yet I have to take these digs by some of these little two-bit reporters in their Washington newspapers every day because I did my duty here.

THIS IS A BAD BILL

Is this a good bill? Is it constitutional? Has it got wise provisions. If it is not good, and is not constitutional, and has not wise provisions, we ought not to pass it. Should we pass a bad bill just because we are friendly to the chairman of the committee? No.

Let me read to you lawyers a provision in this bill. Let me read it to my Irish friend from New York, who has got more good common sense in the back of his head than almost any other man whom I have ever seen from New York. [Laughter and applause.]

Let me read this provision:

Sec. 24. The right to alter, amend, or repeal any provision of this act is hereby reserved to the Congress.

Now, you lawyers, is not that a wonderful provision? When we pass this law we, the Congress, are reserving the right for some Congress hereafter to alter, amend, or repeal its provisions. That power already is given to this Congress and every subsequent Congress by the Constitution of the United States, and you do not have to pass a law for it.

Why, it would be just as futile and ridiculous to attach this provision reading just the reverse of that. Suppose it read that "hereafter no Congress should have the right to alter, amend, or repeal any of the provisions of this act." That would have been just as wise. Why, it would not be worth the paper that it was written on, for no subsequent Congress would pay any attention to it.

Mr. SADOWSKI. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. BLANTON. Yes.

Mr. SADOWSKI. I think the gentleman from Texas made a statement that he did not intend to make when he said that he had tried to protect certain Members of the House from having the heat turned on them on certain bills, and that that is why he has been filibustering against some of these bills.

Mr. BLANTON. I did not say that. I said I led the fight on some measures.

Mr. SADOWSKI. That the gentleman tried to protect other Members.

Mr. BLANTON. I said that I had taken the lead and made a fight because somebody had to and I could do it with less loss to myself than any other man in the House.

I cannot yield further.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas declines to yield.

Mr. BLANTON. Let me read you something else in this bill. I ask my money-saving friend from Pennsylvania [Mr. Rich] to listen to this:

Each commissioner shall receive a salary of $5,000 a year, payable semimonthly.

A little old tacky rent commission here with commissioners to draw $5,000 a year each. That seems small to some people, but, after all, $5,000 is a pretty good salary. I quote further:

The commission shall appoint a secretary, who shall receive a salary of $3,000 a year.

Secretary for a rent commission to receive $3,000 a year. Do gentlemen know that there is one Governor of a State who gets only $3,500 a year?

And an attorney who shall receive a salary of $3,500 a year, payable in like manner.

And here is another provision:

It (the commission) may appoint and remove such other officers, examiners, engineers, appraisers, attorneys, employees, and agents, and make such expenditures for rent, printing, telegrams, telephones, law books, books of reference, periodicals, furniture, stationery, office equipment, and other supplies and expenses as may be necessary to the administration of this act.

Who is to determine what is "necessary"? This "two-bit" rent commission will have an army of employees down there as sure as you are sitting in those seats, and many will be drawing six and eight and ten thousand dollars a year before it is over, and you then cannot stop them. Oh, it has been said that Congress will control that through the Committee on Appropriations. Your Committee on Appropriations is nothing in the world but a servant of this House. It is under the orders of the House. It can do only what this House authorizes it to do, and under the provisions of law and under common decency, when legislatively the Congress creates a commission and authorizes it to employ people and to incur expenses, and there is no limitation placed upon it by Congress, that commission can make any kind of contract with employees it wants to and in my experience in watching public affairs many years, every time the commission makes a contract, where you have given them the authority, I do not care what it costs, the Congress is going to make that contract of the Government good.

That is the reason this bill ought not to pass even if it were constitutional. My friend, the splendid constitutional lawyer, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Dobbins] made a fine speech a moment ago showing you absolutely that this bill is unconstitutional. What is the use of passing a bill when we lawyers know it is unconstitutional, which sets up a commission that will spend a lot of money, and instead of lowering rents will increase them and which will then finally go to the Supreme Court at great expense in preparing records and hiring attorneys, and then having the Supreme Court knock it out? That is a futile thing, a foolish thing. I am not going to be a party to it, and as long as I am a Member of this House, when a bill like this is brought in, I do not care who brings it in, I do not care who is its author. I do not care who is the committee chairman, I am going to oppose it with all the vigor in my being in order to stop it.

Because my friend from New York [Mr. Taber] and I took the lead on last District day in trying to stop this bill, the one in charge of it said on the floor by way of lecture and by way of castigation, if you please, because we had some roll calls, that they cost a tremendous sum of money. We, who are posted here, know that such roll calls do not cost a cent. These roll calls today do not cost a single cent. Everyone connected with them is on an annual salary. The Members who answer are on an annual salary, and they get the same pay whether they answer the roll call or are playing golf or attending to office business or are at the departments downtown or are at the Bowie races or at the ball game tomorrow.

Mr. BEITER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLANTON. No; I regret I have not the time. They get the same salary, the Chairman gets the same salary, the employees of the House get the same salary, and, while drawing our salaries, we better be doing something that is worth while than something that is futile. It is futile to pass this bill, it is expensive to pass this bill, it will cost a lot of money, it will be turned down eventually by the Supreme Court because it is unconstitutional.

Why should we not have a few roll calls to try to stop a bill like that rather than sit here and spend our time passing this expensive worthless bill? That is self-evident on its face. After that ridiculous statement about roll calls costing money came out in the Record and went down to Texas and up to New Jersey I got a letter from a man in New Jersey, who wrote me one of the most congratulatory letters I have ever received in my life. He did not know me, but he called me "Tom." Said, "Tom, if what you did in stopping that bill did cost money, do it again, and we will pay for it." He said, "I think you rendered the country one of the most valuable day's services you ever rendered when you and Mr. Taber stopped that bill."

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLANTON. I am sorry. I cannot.

I can take all these little flings when I know I am right. When I know I am doing my duty under my oath I do not care what people say, as long as I know that the constituents down home do not have to come up here and watch me. They have confidence in me. Because I voted for Sam Ray-BURN's death sentence against unlawful public utilities, the unlawful kind of public utilities have financed one opponent against me down in my district, and I am told he has been campaigning for some time. Because I made the first speech on this floor against the Townsend plan, the Townsendites' national leaders have financed an opponent, who, I am told, has been campaigning against me for some time. Last week, over my district, the newspapers reported that the Townsendites had sent one of their special men from Washington, a Mr. Adams, whom I have never seen or heard of, and he was making speeches over my district, organizing Townsend

Mr. MOTT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. BLANTON. No. I am sorry.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Texas has expired.

Mr. BLANTON. I thank you kindly. [Applause.]

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from California [Mr. Scott].

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I intend to vote for this bill, if and when it comes to a final vote. I want to take exception to one remark made by the gentleman who just preceded me, where he claimed credit for fighting the battles of a lot of Members who, in their districts, figured their contest would be so close that they did not dare to take an active position in this particular battle. I, for one, resented the remark, because at no time since I have been here have I been compromised in the judgment exercised in a vote by feeling that somebody at home would oppose it.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from California has expired.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentlewoman from New Jersey [Mrs. Norron].

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, objection has been raised that the bill violates the "due process" clause of the Constitution. If the commission is set up, it should have all the power and authority necessary to carry out its functions and duties. It provides that any person who believes himself injured by a ruling of the commission may seek aid in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia or any district court of the United States. Therefore there is no violation of such clause. Such procedure follows that which has been set up and judicially recognized as being constitutional in various Government agencies. For example, the Department of Agriculture, in connection with the pure-food laws, the cattle-dipping law, and so forth. It is purely an administrative set-up.

Then the rights and privileges of tenants are entitled to just as much consideration as are the rights and privileges of, say, corporations. The purpose of the judicial system is to insure that all persons, regardless of their financial position in life, shall be accorded just and equitable treatment under the law.

This bill does not give the commissioners power to break leases. Although the commission may find that the rent is too high, it is for the court to finally determine whether a lease may be broken.

The reply of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Ellenbogen] regarding the amount of money to be spent by the commission should be satisfactory. The maximum is limited in the bill to $50,000, and its appropriations must have the approval of the proper committee of Congress. The subcommittee on appropriations for the District of Columbia surely would not allow any such expenditure as the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Blanton] alleges. The proponents of this bill only desire to have the rent payers protected. It is not expected that the commission will act as a "pork barrel" in paying salaries and doing nothing else.

The able gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN] admits that rental conditions here are bad by his statement that the only way to cure the rental situation is by decentralization. Decentralization is a slow process, but, should it take place to a considerable extent, and a rent commission no longer be needed, those who are now opposing it may then have the pleasure of terminating it.

Finally, Mr. Chairman, this bill, unlike most District bills, does affect every single Member of Congress. The members of the District Committee must necessarily do a great amount of work which does not mean anything to the United States as a whole, but in this instance we are presenting a bill for the benefit of our friends and yours, and probably there is no Member of Congress who does not have constituents paying rent that they are unable to pay. We believe this bill is in their interest, and especially so in the case of people receiving salaries of $1,260, $1,440, $1,680, and all of the other low brackets, as the rents are now entirely out of proportion to their income.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentlewoman yield?

Mrs. NORTON. I yield. Mr. WHITE. I would like to know if the expenses and salaries of this commission are to come out of the funds of the District of Columbia?

Mrs. NORTON. Yes, indeed.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks, and to include therein a few of the hundreds of letters received by me, some very pathetic. Also letters from the International Association of Machinists, Lodge No. 174, with a membership of 4,300, the Washington Central Labor Union, the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, accompanying a petition signed by 11,500 residents of the District, nearly all of whom are Government employees.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

The letters referred to are as follows:

COLUMBIA LODGE, NO. 174, INTERNATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF MACHINISTS, Washington, D. C., March 26, 1936.

Washington, D. C., March 26, 1936.

The Honorable Mary T. Norton,

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

Dear Madam: Columbia Lodge, No. 174, International Association of Machinists, with a membership of 4,300 working in various Government departments in the District of Columbia, unanimously endorse the enclosed resolution at its last regular meeting, and instructed me to send you a copy.

Yours very truly,

T. J. LYNCH, Recording Secretary.

RESOLUTION NO. 1-RENT CONTROL

Whereas landlords have taken advantage of the housing shortage in Washington and have increased rents to an unfair, exorbitant, and confiscatory level; and

Whereas such exploitation by landlords lowers the standard of living of workers, leaving less of their wages for food, clothing, medical care, and other necessities of life: Therefore be it

medical care, and other necessities of life: Therefore be it

Resolved, That this organization endorses and urges the immediate passage of H. R. 11563, introduced in the Seventy-fourth session of the United States Congress by Hon. Henry Ellenbogen, Pennsylvania, providing for a rent commission to determine fair rentals after conducting public hearings; and be it further

Resolved, That this organization favors three amendments to H. R. 11563:

1 Labor and tapant recommends.

1. Labor and tenant groups shall be represented on the commission.

2. In no case shall rents be higher than on January 1, 1934.
3. The effective term of this legislation shall be indefinite, to be terminated by the President of the United States, with the advice and consent of the Senate, at the end of the existing emergency. And be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be sent to Congressman Ellenbookn, the District Committee of the United States Senate, the District Committee of the United States House of Representatives, and to the Washington Central Labor Union committee on rents and low-cost housing.

COLUMBIA LODGE, No. 174. N. P. WEATHERSBY, President. T. J. LYNCH, Secretary. RESOLUTION NO. 2-HOUSING REGULATION

Whereas a large percentage of the rented dwellings in Washington are in very bad condition and lack necessary facilities for health, whereas existing laws and their enforcement are inadequate to compel landlords to improve conditions and provide the abovementioned facilities: Be it

Resolved, therefore, That this organization urges Congress to establish a housing commission which shall be responsible for the enforcement of building inspection and condemnation, sanitation, health and fire protection recording to the it fourther. health and fire protection regulations; and be it further Resolved, That this commission shall—

1. Be composed of suitable representatives of Government, organized labor, and tenant groups;

2. Make available to Congress and the public detailed data on housing conditions and needs in the District, educating the public as to its rights and duties;

3. Recommend to Congress the enactment of laws and regula-tions compatible with modern standards of living; and 4. Settle landlord and tenant disputes arising from violations of housing laws and regulations.

And be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be sent to the District Committee of the United States Senate, the District Committee of the United States House of Representatives, and to the Washington Central Labor Union committee on rents and low-cost housing.

COLUMBIA LODGE, No. 174, N. P. WEATHERSBY, President. T. J. LYNCH, Secretary.

MARCH 24, 1936.

RESOLUTION NO. 3-LOW-RENTAL HOUSING CONSTRUCTION

Whereas, it is generally recognized that the dwellings available to the majority of workers in the District of Columbia are substandard, obsolete, and grossly inadequate; and

Whereas, despite the acute housing shortage, the great majority of building workers are still unemployed due to inability of private enterprise to supply new or modern dwellings at rents within the means of the average worker; and Whereas, an active, unified, and informed demand on the part of workers and tenants, led by organized labor in the District of Columbia, is the only force that can initiate and promote a permanent public housing policy for the District of Columbia: Be it therefore

Resolved, That this organization urges Congress to create a District of Columbia housing authority, which shall be responsible for the construction of sufficient low-rental housing to meet the present shortage and to replace existing unfit habitations; and be it further

Resolved, That the policy of the authority shall be to initiate a

Resolved, That the policy of the authority shall be to initiate a comprehensive long-term program of public construction to include not only housing, but also educational, recreational, and other community facilities; and be it further

Resolved, That the housing program of the authority shall be based on the following fundamental principles:

1. That the financing, construction, ownership, and management shall be carried out by the authority on a completely public basis, and that the funds shall be provided from the Federal Treasury; and

2. That it shall be mandatory upon the authority to provide sufficient dwelling units to meet the need, in addition to the replacement of those demolished, within 10 years after the enactment of this legislation; and

3. That all labor employed in the planning, administration, construction, and maintenance shall be paid prevailing union and/or civil-service rates, and shall work under union conditions; and

4. That rents shall be based only on the cost of maintenance plus a charge to cover the cost of municipal services, but in no case shall rents be more than $6 per month per room; and

5. That organized labor and tenant groups shall be adequately represented on the authority, and that each of the housing projects shall be administered by a civil-service manager in cooperation with a committee of the tenants; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be sent to the District Committees of the United States Senate, the House of Representatives, and the rent and low-cost housing committee of the tives, and the rent and low-cost housing committee of the Washington Central Labor Union.

COLUMBIA LODGE, No. 174, N. P. WEATHERSEY, President. T. J. LYNCH, Secretary.

MARCH 24, 1936.

WASHINGTON CENTRAL LABOR UNION, COMMITTEE ON RENTS AND LOW COST HOUSING,
March 22, 1936.

MARY T. NORTON,

Chairman, House District Committee,
United States Congress, Washington, D. C.

Dear Mrs. Norton: Attached hereto are many copies of a petition signed by 10,000 residents of Washington endorsing H. R.
11563, the District of Columbia Emergency Rent Act. The signatures on this petition, numbering approximately 10,000, were secured by members of our committee and their friends during the last 3 days.

The petition reads as follows:

"We, the undersigned, residents of the District of Columbia, suffering from exorbitant rents and distressing inadequate housing conditions, heartily endorse the District of Columbia Emergency Rent Act, bill H. R. 11563, which provides for a rent commission empowered to establish fair rents."

We believe that the large number of signatures secured by our committee clearly shows the strong sentiment of Washington citizens that the constant rise of rents must stop.

We are also enclosing a description of some of the rent com-plaints submitted to our grievance committee by residents, and a résumé of the results of a questionnaire circulated recently by our committee in collaboration with the Resettlement Administration.

We sincerely hope that this material will be of value to you in your presentation of argument in behalf of the Ellenbogen rent-control bill on the floor of the House tomorrow.

Yours truly,

HENRY RHINE. Executive Secretary.

UNITED BROTHERHOOD OF CARPENTERS, AND JOINERS OF AMERICA,
Washington, D. C., February 11, 1936.
District Committee of the House of Representatives,

House Office Building, Washington, D. C.
GENTLEMEN: This is to certify that Carpenters' Local Union,
No. 1590, of Washington, D. C., has endorsed the enclosed resolutions sponsored by the rent and low-cost-housing committee of the Washington Central Labor Union.

Respectfully yours,

JOSEPH G. VIEAU, Recording Secretary.

RESOLUTION NO. 1-RENT CONTROL

Whereas landlords have taken advantage of the housing shortage in Washington and have increased rents to an unfair, exorbitant, and confiscatory level; and

Whereas such exploitation by landlords lowers the standard of living of workers, leaving less of their wages for food, clothing, medical care, and other necessities of life: Be it

Resolved, therefore, That this organization endorses and urges the immediate passage of H. R. 3809, introduced in the seventy-fourth session of the United States Congress by Hon. Henry El-LENBOGEN, Pennsylvania, providing for a rent commission to de-termine fair rentals after conducting public hearings; and be it

Resolved, That this organization favors three amendments to H. R. 3809:

1. Labor and tenant groups shall be represented on the Com mission.

2. In no case shall rents be higher than on January 1, 1934.

3. The effective term of this legislation shall be indefinite, to be terminated by the President of the United States, with the advice and consent of the Senate, at the end of the existing emergency.

And be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be sent to Congressman Ellenbogen, the District Committee of the United States Senate, the District Committee of the United States House of Representatives, and to the Washington Central Labor Union committee on rents and low-cost housing.

CARPENTERS' LOCAL UNION No. 1590. J. R. Cox, President.

JOSEPH G. VIEAU, Secretary.

FEBRUARY 11, 1936.

RESOLUTION NO. 2-HOUSING REGULATION

RESOLUTION NO. 2—HOUSING REGULATION

Whereas a large percentage of the rented dwellings in Washington are in very bad condition and lack necessary facilities for health, sanitation, and safety; and

Whereas existing laws and their enforcement are inadequate to compel landlords to improve conditions and provide the abovementioned facilities: Be it therefore

Resolved, That this organization urges Congress to establish a housing commission which shall be responsible for the enforcement of building inspection and condemnation, sanitation, health, and fire-protection regulations; and be it further

Resolved, That this commission shall—

1. Be composed of suitable representatives of Government, organized labor, and tenant groups;

2. Make available to Congress and the public detailed data on housing conditions and needs in the District, educating the public as to its rights and duties;

3. Recommend to Congress the enactment of laws and regula-

3. Recommend to Congress the enactment of laws and regula-tions compatible with modern standards of living; and 4. Settle landlord and tenant disputes arising from violations of housing laws and regulations.

And be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be sent to the District Committee of the United States Senate, the District Committee of the United States House of Representatives, and to the Washington Central Labor Union committee on rents and low-cost housing.

Carpenters' Local Union, No. 1590,
J. R. Cox, President.

JOSEPH G. VIEAU, Secretary.

FEBRUARY 11, 1936.

RESOLUTION NO. 3-LOW-RENTAL HOUSING CONSTRUCTION

vate enterprise to supply new or modern dwellings at rents within the means of the average worker; and Whereas an active, unified, and informed demand on the part of workers and tenants, led by organized labor in the District of Columbia, is the only force than can initiate and promote a per-manent public housing policy for the District of Columbia: Be it therefore

Resolved, That this organization urges Congress to create a District of Columbia housing authority which shall be responsible for the construction of sufficient low-rent housing to meet the present shortage and to replace existing unfit habitations; and be it further

Resolved, That the policy of the authority shall be to initiate a comprehensive long-term program of public construction to include not only housing, but also educational, recreational, and other community facilities, and be it further Resolved, That the housing program of the authority shall be based on the following fundamental principles:

That the financing, construction, ownership, and management shall be carried out by the authority on a completely public basis, and that the funds shall be provided from the Federal

Treasury, and
2. That it shall be mandatory upon the authority to provide sufficient dwelling units to meet the need, in addition to the resulting units to meet the need, in addition to the resulting to the sufficient dwelling units to meet the need, in addition to the resulting to the need to placement of those demolished, within 10 years after the enactment of this legislation, and

3. That all labor employed in the planning, administration, construction, and maintenance shall be paid prevailing union and/or civil-service rates, and shall work under union conditions, and

4. That rents shall be based only on the cost of maintenance plus a charge to cover the cost of municipal services, but in no case shall rents be more than $6 per month per room, and

5. That organized labor and tenant groups shall be adequately represented on the authority, and that each of the housing projects shall be administered by a civil-service manager in cooperation with a committee of the tenants.

And be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be sent to the District

Committees of the United States Senate, the House of Representatives, and the rent and low-cost housing committee of the Washington Central Labor Union.

CARPENTER'S LOCAL UNION, No. 1590, J. R. Cox, President, JOSEPH G. VIEAU, Secretary.

FEBRUARY 11, 1936.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, BUREAU OF INTERNAL REVENUE Washington.

Hon. MARY T. NORTON,

Hon. Mary T. Norton,

House of Representatives.

My Dear Mrs. Norton: I do hope that you can put through some kind of rent-control legislation before Congress adjourns. All of Washington business people, both commercial and professional, graft off the Government clerks, but the rental people are the worst of the worst. At least, the others realize that they depend upon us for their living and are courteous to us.

I live in an apartment at the corner of Thirteenth and I Streets NW., a west apartment, and have been trying for the past 2 months to have my awnings put up. We received a notice in May that they were going to paint the building on the outside, which means around the window casings. I have been in the apartment for the past 7 years, and this is the first time any outside painting has been done. Since they let it go that long, it does seem that they could put it off until fall. However, no consideration is given the tenants. n the tenants.

After the sun has been pouring in that west apartment all afternoon, no matter how tired I am after work, I cannot go home.

I have to go to the movies or some other place to keep cool. It is not possible to raise the blinds or open the windows until about 7 o'clock. I have a gas refrigerator, and the tremendous heat causes it to consume twice as much gas, and the more gas consumed, the more heat from the refrigerator. No matter how I feel I cannot stay home a day, and on Sundays I have to leave the apartment right after noon, when the sun starts shining in.
In addition to this, my furniture covers and draperies are fading the apartment right after noon, when the sun starts shining in. In addition to this, my furniture covers and draperies are fading so that they are not fit to look at. I have told the resident manager all of this, also have talked to the realty company, Weaver Bros., but to no avail. They either make promises that are never kept or are too bored to talk to me. They have the "take it or leave it" attitude. They know that it is not possible to find a vacant apartment, especially one which I can afford to keep.

I hear reports on all sides of me about the attitude the realty people are taking since it is so easy for them to rent. One of the ladies in my office and her sister also a Government worker occu-ladies in my office and her sister, also a Government worker, occupied an apartment on Rhode Island Avenue NW., four-floor apartment building. They had lived there 2½ years, and since it had not been newly renovated when they moved in, this spring they asked to have it done over. The resident manager refused, and a few days later, the 1st of May, the janitor handed them a notice to vacate by the 1st of June, stating that the apartment had been rented to another party. They are well-bred, quiet ladies and had never been in arrears in their rent. There was no excuse offered, but they were advised that they could have a fourth-floor apartment, the top floor. One of the other tenants told these sisters that the resident manager had a son and his wife on the fourth floor and they wanted a cooler apartment for the summer. This ladies in my office and her sister, also a Government worker, occu-Whereas it is generally recognized that the dwellings available to the majority of workers in the District of Columbia are substandard, obsolete, and grossly inadequate; and

Whereas, despite the acute housing shortage, the great majority of building workers are still unemployed due to inability of pritenant also advised them that they were no sooner out of the apartment than it was entirely renovated and the son and his wife moved from the fourth floor to the vacated apartment. One of these ladies called the owner of the apartment at the Shoreham Hotel and was advised by his secretary that they stood back of the resident manager in everything. She would not even listen to her story. They tramped all over town for days, using their annual leave, which is so scarce now, before they could find a place to live. Finally found an apartment in the northeast section.

You have always been a friend to the Government clerks, and I do hope that you will lend your efforts to this cause, as we all feel that just as soon as Congress adjourns rents will go sky high, and there is nothing to prevent them from renting right over our heads to higher bidders.

The real estate people of Washington are a flock of pirates, and we will be at their mercy when they are no longer afraid of having a rent-control bill. We need a rent law with real teeth in it here.

Thanking you in anticipation, I am, Very truly yours,

(Miss) Jessie M. Murphy, 1228 Eye Street NW., Apartment 910.

FEBRUARY 3, 1936.

Mrs. Mary Norton, M. C.
My Dear Mrs. Norton: It has come to my attention that you are interesting yourself in the exorbitant rents which are now being charged by landlords in Washington, D. C.

being charged by landlords in Washington, D. C.

I moved into a three-room first-floor apartment at no. 18 Ninth Street NE. 3 years ago (June 1933), paying $50 per month. In October of that year my rent was raised to $55. This past October, 1935, the rent was advanced to $60, which, by an argument with the owner, he finally compromised on $57.50. The first of this month I was informed that my rent would be raised $5 more, making a total of $62.50. There has not been one cent's repairs or improvements spent on that apartment since I moved there in June 1933, still the rent soars higher and higher. I spent all Saturday afternoon and yesterday (Sunday) looking for a suitable and decent place, but the prices were shocking. I found a three-room apartment in the 300 block of Second Street NE. for $72.50 and a four-room one in the same building for $82.50. I traveled over on South Carolina Avenue SE., found a two-room apartment, and a four-room one in the same building for $82.50. I traveled over on South Carolina Avenue SE., found a two-room apartment, no electric refrigeration—only heat—rent, $60.

This rental situation has gotten to the point that we Government people are forced into filthy, dirty places, and made to pay these terrible rents while these property hogs are reaping a harvest from us, and after the rent is paid you have nothing left in case of sickness or other unexpected expenses. It's an outrage to have such a practice continue, and surely there is something some of you people in Congress can do to gurb these unreasonable rents you people in Congress can do to curb these unreasonable rents and make these property owners come down within the means of an average-salaried person.

There has been one investigation after another, and that seems to be as far as it goes. I appeal to you in the name of every Government employee in this District of Columbia, For God's sake do something and put a stop to this highway robbery.

Hoping that this may meet with your approval, I am,

Very respectfully,

MARIE F. MONK (1208—Navy Department).

1815 S STREET, NW., Washington, D. C., February 6, 1936.

Re: Rental increase, 1815 S Street, NW.

Mrs. Mary T. Norton, Chairman, House District Committee,

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

My Dear Mrs. Norron: The undersigned is a tenant in the above apartment house of which F. M. Pratt Co., Inc., is agent. Attached hereto is copy of a letter received January 31, 1936, similar copies of which have been given the other tenants in said

A telephone call was made to the office, since no plausible reason was given for raising the rent, asking just why this step was being taken. I was advised is an unbusiness-like manner by an being taken. I was advised is an unbusiness-like manner by an official, who was said to be Mr. Pratt, "We just want more money." If there is anything you can do in this matter, or any advice that you can give, I will be grateful to you. I feel that the rent, which I am paying for a one-room apartment, is unreasonable; then to receive a notice to the effect that it is being increased seems to be taking an unfair advantage of the tenants.

Your advice, if deemed advisable, will be kept confidential, and any assistance appreciated. Very truly yours,

GLADYS E. AUGUSTIN.

F. M. Pratt Co., Inc., Washington, D. C., January 30, 1936. Re: Rental adjustment, apartment no. 304, 1815 S Street NW.

Miss Gladys Augustin, Apartment No. 304, 1815 S Street NW.,

Washington, D. C.

Dear Miss Augustin: Please be advised that we have been requested by the owner of the above-captioned premises to advise you that the monthly rental on these premises will be adjusted to $32.50 per month, beginning with the rent due March 1, 1936, for the month ending March 31, 1936.

In view of the present conditions and considering the location and desirability of this property, we feel that this adjustment is very feel. very fair.

You are therefore requested to execute the enclosed monthly rental agreement and return same to this office at your earliest convenience.
Yours very truly,

F. M. PRATT Co., INC., By F. M. PRATT, President.

DECEMBER 10, 1935.

Hon. MARY NORTON,

Member of Congress, House of Representatives,

Washington, D. C. DEAR MRS. NORTON: In reading over the Washington papers,

Dear Mrs. Norton: In reading over the Washington papers, I note that you are interesting yourself in the rent problems in the District, and felt that my case might interest you, as I feel that it is a particularly glaring example of exhorbitant rent.

My husband was appointed to a position with the Securities and Exchange Commission about 3 months ago and I came down for a few days with the intention of renting a furnished apartment. I tramped from one end of Washington, and outlying districts, to the other without finding a single apartment at a reasonable rental, or, in fact, at any rental. I found exactly two vacancies, one of which was refused to me because of my young son. Finally in desperation I took the one I now have—two rooms, a small kitchen, and bath, and the rental is $116 per month, and we were compelled to sign a year's lease in the bargain, which, in my opinion, is nothing more than gouging. Gas and electricity is included in the rent.

The apartment is in a court; we never see the sun, finding it necessary to have the lights turned on all day long. In fact, we can't even see the street from our rooms because of a long roof over the lobby just below our windows. The furniture is old and of the very cheapest quality. No linens, dishes, or silver are supplied.

supplied.

supplied.

But the worst of all is the fact that I firmly believe that living here is positively unhealthy, as the baby, who never had a cold in all his 4½ years of life, has been constantly suffering with a cold since we live here, and I have no doubt that it is due to the stuffy, poorly lighted, and badly ventilated apartment.

Since the rental we are paying is well over a third of my husband's monthly salary, and isn't worth anything like that price, you can readily understand how welcome the news of your interest in the rent situation was, and I felt that if I wrote to you you might possibly have a solution to our problem. Anything you can do will certainly be greatly appreciated by me.

Very truly yours,

Marie E. Sprague.

MARIE E. SPRAGUE, Apt. 213, 1025 Connecticut Avenue, Washington, D. C.

1830 K STREET NW., APARTMENT 607, Washington, D. C., November 8, 1935.

Hon. MARY T. NORTON,

Hon. Mary T. Norton,

House Office Building, Washington, D. C.

My Dear Mrs. Norton: As you are chairman of the District of Columbia Committee of the House of Representatives, I am taking the liberty to address this letter to you.

I know you are very much interested in the welfare of the residents of the District and that you worked so hard last year to get some legislation enacted by Congress to protect tenants from the high rents which have been imposed upon them by the real-estate people and property owners of Washington. We were all so sorry that in the closing days of Congress pressure was brought to bear by the real-estate board to prevent such legislation from becoming law.

I have personally—with many hundreds of others—been one of the victims this past summer, and am writing this to urge you and others interested to again present this matter at the opening and others interested to again present this matter at the opening of the next Congress.

I live at the above address and have for the past 15 months. I am alone, have a very small one-room, bath, and pullman kitchen—by this I mean it is only large enough to stand in and without any window—for which I paid $35.50 per month, which was all it was worth. Last June the building was sold, and since that time it has been in the hands of new agents as well—McKeever & Co., of this city. The 1st of October we were notified that beginning November 1st rents would be advanced 20 percent. This I consider an exorbitant rent for that type apartment—a monthly ginning November 1st rents would be advanced 20 percent. This I consider an exorbitant rent for that type apartment—a monthly rental of $42.50. We not only were notified of a raise in rent, but all tenants either forced into signing a yearly lease or asked to move out. In many cases the agents have been very disagreeable about it. Last night only one lady tenant who had not signed her lease, but who had paid the advanced rent and said nothing, was notified by the office that unless she signed her lease by Saturday, November 9 they would consider that she intended to move and they would rent her apartment to someone else.

I, for one, spent nearly every moment I could during the month of October trying to locate elsewhere. The whole thing seems hopeless, though—practically as bad as during the time of the World War—as there are no vacancies any place. Practically every building in the downtown section has increased its rent anywhere from $5 to $10 on one-room apartment, and on up, according to the size of the unit. Some, of course, have been less, but, on the whole, they average about the same. It seems to be a well-organized "racket", as when one building increases rents, all others seem to follow very soon.

I can certainly see no reason for this and truly hope that you will use all your influence to have legislation passed to protect those of us who are living on small salaries, and who are at the mercy of greedy landlords of Washington. All rents in Washington seem to be based on the Government workers' salary, and, as soon as their salary cuts were restored, the rents started going up. Unfortunately, though, all residents of Washington are not Government workers, and many have had no restoration of salary cuts. I, for one, am not a Government worker and have not had a full restoration of the very large salary cut of several years ago. It does not seem fair, do you think, to have to pay one-third of your salary for a roof over your head?

I trust that an opportunity may be given the tenants of Washington to come before the committee and present their problems when Congress convenes.

Anything you can do in regard to this matter will certainly be Anything you can do in regard to this matter will certainly be very much appreciated, as has what you have tried to do in the

Respectfully yours,

(Miss) DORETTA TAYLOR.

J. A. McKeever Co., Washington, D. C., October 1, 1935.

Miss Peggy Shaw, 1830 K Street NW., apartment 304, City.

Dear Madam: Beginning on the 1st of November it will be necessary to make a slight upward revision in the rentals of the Willsonia and your rent beginning on that date will be the amount specified in the enclosed lease. Kindly sign the lease and return it either to the resident manager or to this office. Very truly yours,

J. A. McKeever Co., By H. N. Harvey.

FEBRUARY 10, 1936.

Mrs. MARY NORTON,

Chairman, District Committee, U. S. Capitol,

Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MRS. NORTON: I am enclosing herewith a letter I received from J. A. McKeever Co.

I have been a resident of the Willsonia Apartment since 1930.

For the past several years my rental has been $35 per month. The "slight upward revision" referred to in the enclosed letter was an increase of over 20 percent. My rent was raised from $35 per month to $42.50 per month.

We do not feel that it was at all necessary to increase the rent in this apartment building, and we will appreciate your investigation.

Thanking you, I am Yours respectfully,

PEGGY SHAW.

1830 K STREET NW., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON, D. C., August 13, 1935.

Hon. MARY NORTON,

Hon. Mary Norton,

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

Dear Mrs. Norton: After reading in Monday's Star that you probably would not call up the bill to revive the rent commission, I am enclosing this advertisement from Saturday's Star. This apartment was rented to a friend of mine less than 2 years ago for $45. Last fall the rent was raised to $47.50. Last week the tenant moved out and here is the proof that the rent has been raised to $55. Now, don't you think we need a rent commission? mission?

I rent from this same firm and I am sure they are only waiting for Congress to adjourn before they raise the rent on every apartment.

Working people can no longer find a place to live at a reasonable rent

I hope for the sake of the low-salaried people that Congress will pass this bill and not drive me and others to live in a neighborhood unfit for decent people.

Yours respectfully,

(Mrs.) E. A. WHIPP.

[Evening Star, Aug. 10, 1935]

4403 14th Street, N.W.: Two rooms, kitchen, bath, $55. Electric refrigeration. (This refrigeration is not on the house current.)

H. GRADY GORE & Co., Washington, D. C., May 31, 1935.

Mrs. May D. Knott, Apartment 64, 921 Nineteenth Street NW.

Apartment 64, 921 Nineteenth Street NW.,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR MADAM: This is to advise that I am adjusting the rental schedule for the Cambridge Apartments, and that beginning July 1, 1935, the rental of the apartment which you occupy will be $47.50 per month.

I wish to take this opportunity of expressing to you my appreciation of you as a tenant and trust that we may have the opportunity of continuing to serve you. Very truly yours,

H. GRADY GORE.

921 NINETEENTH STREET NW., APARTMENT No. 1, Washington, D. C., February 3, 1936.

Hon. Mary T. Norton, House of Representatives.

House of Representatives.

Dear Mrs. Norton: As you are making a private investigation of the rent situation here in the District, I am enclosing a copy of a letter received by me as a notification of an increase in my rent, for your information in this connection.

This represents an increase of 20 percent over the original rent for one-room, kitchenette, and bath apartment on the back of the building. The front apartments were increased even more. I had just recovered from rather a severe illness, following an operation at the time, and was unable to do much looking around for a more reasonable place. There were no vacancies in any small apartments at the time, and was unable to do much looking around for a more reasonable place. There were no vacancies in any small apartments near me. As a result I found it necessary to take a bachelor apartment in the same building renting for $40 per month, which had been increased from $30. This consists of one room and bath, with lights, telephone, etc., extra. This is more rent than I can afford to pay, but as you probably know, the city is so overcrowded that it is next to impossible to find anything in a convenient location. This is what the real-estate people are taking advantage of.

I trust that some way may be found to have the rents of Washington reduced, so that the small-salaried people may be able to have living accommodations at reasonable rates.

have living accommodations at reasonable rates.

Very sincerely yours,

(Mrs.) MAY D. KNOTT.

Mrs. D. CHILDS.

1420 HARVARD STREET NW. Washington, D. C., January 22, 1936.

Hon. Mary T. Norton, Chairman, House District Committee,

House Office Building, Washington, D. C.

Dear Madam: I am writing to you to ask you to please help the people who rent apartments.

It is imperative that I move, and for 3 months I have been searching for a three-room, kitchen, and bath apartment. I demand a clean apartment, and it must be in a respectable neigh-mand a clean apartment, and it must be in a respectable neighborhood. I have a boy, and I don't want him to play with any "Tom, Dick, or Harry." I'm not a snob—far from it—but I want my boy to be a good American citizen.

We can't pay $55-$65. I don't think I am unreasonable in expecting to pay $40. Unfurnished, at that.

I certainly am hoping you will really take some drastic steps and demand a change, as we certainly are "betting on you." You are our only hope. If you will help us, there certainly will be many grateful Washingtonians.

Don't forget, "What benefits one benefits all", and the "Hill" people will also get a reduction in their rents.

people will also get a reduction in their rents. Hopeful,

DUDDINGTON APARTMENTS, No. 32. 1754 Lanier Place NW.

Hon. Mary T. Norton,
No. 343, House Office Building.
My Dear Mrs. Norton: You asked for information concerning

My husband gets $29.73 per week. We pay $50 per month rent. That leaves $10 for groceries, which includes the milk, 60 cents a month for the paper. The remainder of the income must provide $2.50 for gas and electricity and church giving, clothes, doctors, and other emergencies, also two $1 passes.

We are five in family, 2 adults and 3 children, ranging from 8 to 14. All three children attend school.

All the economic budgeteers say only one-third of the income should be spent on rent. We spend a little more than half. In the rent we have heat, water, and Frigidaire. The apartment is well kent but old well kept, but old.

We had to take an apartment. We couldn't rent a five-room house anywhere within the District line for less than $75 or $85 per month, and then we would have had to furnish heat, light, and Frigidaire extra.

and Frigidaire extra.

We have three rooms besides the kitchen and bath. Every room has to have bed. We have fairly good-sized rooms. So many houses are not big enough for a family of five, even if the rent were not prohibitive. I think Washington should make provisions for families of five so that rent would be for at least $40 a month. In many of the leading cities of the United States a five-room house with modern conveniences can be had for $25 or $30 a month. I know that for a fact because my husband worked on these relief schedules—several cities showed modern houses, five rooms. $25 a month.

rooms, $25 a month.

A five-room house last year could be had for $50 and some sixroom houses were available last year at $55, but houses that rented $50 last year have been boosted to $60 and $75.

I think the rents should be made to go down. The landlords should be compelled to lower rents. People here in Washington think, oh, well, they are working for the Government and they must have some place to live so we will ask whatever we want and they'll have to pay it.
Yours sincerely, hoping you may find some satisfactory solution,

Mrs. I. D. Johnston, 1754 Lanier Place.

MY DEAR MRS. NORTON: I do wish you would see the rents to be lowered in this city real soon as I am living in the Northwest and have no convenience for my money—the rent I am paying. I have three rooms, no private bath, no sink for cooking in my rooms. I have to get all the cooking water in the bathroom, which you know is not sanitary, not healthful, and have to pay $15 a room, unfurnished. You know that is a ridiculous price for unfurnished rooms. Five or eight dollars for one unfurnished room should be more than enough to charge poor people, and I know some that have two rooms have to pay the same $15 for one unfurnished room, please, and I tell you from Fourth and D Streets NW. to H. Street NW., the same on Third Street NW. are charging the same money and no convenience at all. Please, dear madam, see that we get more convenience and less rent to pay. From Third and D Street NW. to Third and H Street NW. are large rooming houses and they make the poor people pay are large rooming houses and they make the poor people pay whatever they like or have no rooms. They claim they have high taxes to pay. Why two or three rooms at $15 a room would pay all the taxes and gas, light, and electric lights, and then they have money left over—plenty of it—and they usually have the best floor themselves—first floor. Please see that our unfurnished rooms will cost—I say about $5 or $8 for a room unfurnished.

Yours respectfully,

1401 Fairmont Street NW.,

Washington, D. C., January 19, 1936.

Dear Mrs. Norton: I am glad to learn from newspaper reports that you plan to take some action to improve the rental situation in the District. I am writing to you especially to bring to your attention the situation existing relative to the smaller apartments. The smaller apartments are in much greater demand than the larger ones, and property owners knowing that these apartments can be readily rented if vacated make no effort whatever to keep them in a livable condition. There is such a scarcity of small apartments that they refuse to make any repairs whatever without raising the rent five or ten dollars. They say they can get at least $10 more for it if you move out. I know from others and from looking around that when an apartment is vacated that the rents are put up so high that the people of average salary cannot pay them. The high rents paid in dilapidated old buildings is appalling. They take advantage of the tenant because they know they cannot find another. This is the situation that confronts me in an apartment I rent from the Bliss properties, 1401 Fairmont Street, and practically all tenants of small apartments. They are a little less independent with the larger ones, as they are hard to rent. Those are the figures from which they base their percent of raising rents. I feel that a rent commission is the only thing that will remedy a situation like this.

Very truly yours,

Hallye C. Bear.

Very truly yours,

1460 IRVING STREET NW., APARTMENT 508, January 17, 1936.

DEAR CHAIRMAN NORTON: I am interested in your program on rentals.

I wish to state I live in a small apartment at the above address

I wish to state I live in a small apartment at the above address and pay $37.50. Rents are entirely too much in the District.

It seems they are taking advantage of the crowded city.

There is no service here and the place is not kept up, having filthy steps and elevator.

Any time I shall be glad to have mine inspected.

I went to the west coast and realized when I returned how they take advantage here.

Thanking you for your interest, Respectfully,

(Miss) BLANCHE RIDGEWAY.

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 14, 1936.

Hon. MARY T. NORTON,

Hon. Mary T. Norton,

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

Dear Mrs. Norton: I read with interest of your plan to investigate high rents in the District.

Something ought to be done to curb Washington landlords. I pay $45 per month, not including gas and electricity, for a one-room, kitchenette apartment on the first floor. An adjoining building cuts out all light, and it is necessary to use electric lights constantly. A reasonable rental for this apartment would be $30 a month. The rental agent is Jesse H. Hedges.

Accept our thanks for your intercession.

Sincerely.

EULA C. WHITE.

Sincerely,

EULA C. WHITE, 1750 Sixteenth Street NW.

THE WHITE HOUSE, Washington, January 14, 1936.

Washington, January 14, 1936.

Hon. Mary T. Norton,

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

My Dear Mrs. Norton: May I add my voice to the increasing number of protesting citizens whose apartment rents have always been reasonably high in proportion to the standard Government salary, but which during the past 6 months have been increased?

My one-exposure, one-room, very small kitchen, bath, and balcony, up to October 1, rented for $42.50, and now stands at $47.50. For this amount the new owners appear unwilling to make even the slightest improvement, and, of course, will not consider redecoration

Some action surely should be taken to prevent the necessity of those people who wish a clean, convenient, and high-type apartment finding it necessary to pay over one-third of their incomes

Very sincerely yours,

CLAIRE W. SIMS. 1830 K Street NW., Apartment 602.

1601 ARGONNE PLACE NW. Washington, D. C., January 13, 1936.

Hon. Madam Mary T. Norton,

Chairman, House District Committee,

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

Dear Mrs. Norton: As the local newspapers have recently carried articles covering your interest in the rental situation existing in this offer. I wish to approx you with the following facts in conin this city, I wish to supply you with the following facts in connection with my own experience:

About 2 years ago I approached the proprietor of the Chalfonte Apartment House Co., located at 1601 Argonne Place NW., and advised that the apartment I occupied was very objectionable on account of noise—being situated directly over the boiler room—and I felt the rent was excessive and would be compelled to move unless I let the rent was excessive and would be compelled to move unless a reduction was made in the rent. As an outcome of that conference a new rental basis was agreed upon as fair for the apartment I occupy. This arrangement continued in effect until I received notice the latter part of last August—the notice being timed with the adjournment of Congress—that beginning October 1 a new schedule of rents would go into effect; in my case amounting to an increase of 27 percent schedule of rents would go into effect; in my case amounting to an increase of 27 percent.

Naturally I protested this excessive increase, advising the proprietors that we had agreed upon a fair rental and quote the following from a letter I wrote them at that time:

"What is the necessity existing at this time of forcing esablished tenants of the Chalfonte to seek other living quarters or else submit to increase of 27 percent?"

To briefly state the case, I continued my occupancy of the apartment under the impression that relief would be afforded the oppressed tenants at the next session of Congress.

pressed tenants at the next session of Congress.

I may state, in my opinion, many complaints of injustice would be brought to the attention of the proper authorities if the rentors of Washington were not afraid of being blacklisted or other reprisals taken by landlords.

The above facts are submitted with the hope that they may be of assistance in bringing about a condition which will be equitable to both the lessor and lessee. Sincerely yours,

J. I. LEE.

HOTEL ANNAPOLIS, Washington, D. C., March 26, 1936.

Hon. Mary T. Norton.

Chairman of the District Committee,

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

Dear Mrs. Norton: The impudence of Representatives Blanton and Taber is inconceivable.

I am a Government employee, and, like thousands of others, a victim of the greed of the landlords of this city.

During the last 3 years I have been renting a room at the

During the last 3 years I have been renting a room at the Hotel Annapolis, paying $45 a month. Last January a crowd of racketeers from New York (ex-managers of the Manger Hotel in New York) took possession of the Annapolis Hotel, and a month after all rents were increased from 25 to 50 percent. My room rent was increased from $45 to $65. Accommodations in Washington today are exploited by racketeers with kid gloves, taking advantage of the large number of Government employees residing in the city and the great influx of transients to the Capital during the spring season.

during the spring season.

Your fight on behalf of the people of the District deserves the admiration, praise, and support of every honest and decent citizen.

Respectfully yours,

3430 CONNECTICUT AVENUE,
Washington, D. C., March 26, 1936.

Dear Mrs. Norton: This letter is what I received the day after the Ellenbogen bill failed because of Mr. Blanton, Monday, the 16th.

I wish you could see what the realtors are gouging the people from the States for $60; a hole in the wall and no upkeep and minimum taxes the world over.

I surely hope something can be done to make them be sensible and not too greedy. It is even said Congress is in the real-estate business now. I think a committee ought to visit some of these apartments and get first-hand information.

Hoping for passage of the Ellenbogen bill, I am, Sincerely,

Sincerely,

Hugh J. McLaughlin.
P. S.—There are many others who think it is futile to fight back.

DIXIE REALTY Co., INC., NORTHEAST CORNER VERMONT AVENUE AT L STREET NW., Washington, D. C., March 23, 1936.

Mr. Hugh J. McLaughlin,

Mr. Hugh J. McLaughlin,

3430 Connecticut Avenue NW., No. 21, Washington, D. C.

My Dear Mr. McLaughlin: We are directed to inform you by the owners of the building that the rental on the apartment you occupy $52.50, shall be returned to the 1928 normal rate of $60 per month, effective April 15, 1936.

We are, therefore, enclosing lease for 1 year at a rental of $60 per month beginning April 15. Will you kindly sign both copies in the space provided and return them to us?

I will greatly appreciate it if you will take care of this matter within the next day or two.

Very truly yours.

Very truly yours,

FRANCIS C. SLEIGLE, President.

LXXX-345

1812 K. STREET NW., Washington, D. C., Apartment 610, March 25, 1936.

Mrs. MARY T. NORTON,

Mrs. Mary T. Norton,

House of Representatives.

My Dear Mrs. Norton: May I commend you upon the valient fight you have put forth for the rent-control bill in spite of determined opposition from Mr. Blanton. It is encouraging to know that someone down on the hill is interested in the welfare of the Government clerks. I have been in Washington for over 18 years, and each year I have been hopeful that Congress would do someand each year I have been hopeful that Congress would do something about the exorbitant rentals here, but so far nothing really has been done about it. Take the apartment which I occupy in the Pentilly Apartment at 1812 K Street, B. F. Saul Co. agents. When I took the apartment, which is a two-room, kitchen, and bath apartment, the rent was $62.50 per month, exclusive of electricity and gas. On January 1, 1936, the rent was increased $10.50 per month, making the monthly rental $73, exclusive of electricity and gas. In addition, there is a charge of $1 per month for telephone service and 5 cents for each call. I have looked everywhere for a more reasonable place to like but so far have been unsue. for a more reasonable place to live, but so far have been unsuccessful.

I am asking my Congressman—Mr. Griswold, of Indiana—to support this legislation when it comes up in the House for final disposition, and I am greatly in hopes that relief may be had at this time.

Regardless of the outcome, Mrs. Norron, I wish personally to thank you for the time and effort you have put into this legislation. Very sincerely,

HELEN L. MOORE.

FEDERATION OF ARCHITECTS. ENGINEERS CHEMISTS, AND TECHNICIANS, Women's Auxiliary, Washington, D. C., March 26, 1936.

Hon. MARY T. NORTON,

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

Dear Madam: The Women's Auxiliary of the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists, and Technicians wholeheartedly endorses your active support of the rent bill for the District, H. R. 11563. We sincerely hope that your good work will bring favorable results.

We are vitally interested in housing and will do everything in our power to secure widespread support for this bill.

The need for a rent-control commission is so great in the District that its residents are backing you in your efforts to secure its

Respectfully yours,

Corresponding Secretary.

Mrs. NORTON. I yield back the balance of my time. Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Ellenbogen], such time as he may

THE RENT-CONTROL BILL IS PAIR AND NECESSARY

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. Mr. Chairman. I believe that in comparing the present bill with the previous rent-control bill for the District of Columbia, passed by the Congress, the amendments to the rent-control bill of 1919 have not been considered. If these amendments are considered it will be found that the bill now before the Committee of the Whole House is substantially similar to the rent-control bill of 1919, as amended, and to the rent-control bill for the State of New York, as amended. Most of the provisions of the bill now before the House have been taken either from the District of Columbia control bill of 1919, from the amendments thereto, or from the New York rent-control bill, as amended.

BOTH LANDLORDS AND TENANTS ARE PROTECTED

It is entirely incorrect to speak about taking the property away from the landlord. Under the bill, the rental must be so fixed that the landlord is allowed a fair and reasonable return upon the present value of the property. Surely no fair landlord wants more than a fair return upon a fair value of the property involved. On the other hand, the tenant will be protected against unfair and excessive rents.

The total expenditures of the commission are limited to $50,000 under the bill, and the life of the commission is limited to 3 years under the terms of the bill.

This bill is just and fair. It is necessary. It should be passed.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. Nichols].

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Chairman, this has been quite an interesting bill. As it has progressed through the House there have been many sidelights injected into it. I intend, of course, to have nothing to say about that one way or the other. It is my opinion, however, that if this bill is Beck, who died yesterday.

enacted into law it will be one law passed affecting the District of Columbia that could have an effect upon every constituent of yours who becomes resident in this District. If there are any Members of the House who feel they are not paying rent enough in the District of Columbia, then, of course, they should oppose the passage of this legislation. If there are any Members of the House who have secured employment for some of their constituents at salaries ranging from $1,000 to $2,000 and who feel these folks are not paying enough rent, then, of course, they should vote against this bill. But if you think your own rent is out of line with the rental you pay in your home city, then you should give this bill a chance and an opportunity to operate. If you think those clerks of the Government are paying rents exorbitant and out of proportion to the benefit received from the housing given them under the contract then, of course, I think you should support this legislation.

Is it constitutional? This has become a very close question on any law that is passed. I frankly state to you I do not know whether it is constitutional or not, but I think if I were to say it was constitutional my opinion on the matter would be just about as safe and sound as the opinion of any other lawyer or Member of this body. If the only reason you have for voting against this bill is doubt of its constitutionality then you are skating on a thin division, although I frankly say to you I do not know whether it is constitutional or not. If there is anything in this bill which will make it possible for country boys like me to come to Washington and live in an apartment, in a house, without paying five or six times as much for the same accommodations as they would pay in their home towns, they come within this bill. So support it and let us pass it and put it on the books, and leave the test of constitutionality with the courts which are so ready to assume it.

I can visualize the situation of clerks and stenographers. I have a couple in my office. I cannot pay them salaries enough to permit them to live in the way they have been accustomed to live at home because they cannot find a place cheap enough to live in.

The landlords, of course, say, "We have just got to charge these exorbitant rates because our overhead is so high on these buildings and our original investment is so high." I do not know about that, but I know that building conditions in Washington surely could not have been any worse than they were in any other great city of the United States. I know they have longer waiting lists for apartments in Washington than any other city with which I am acquainted.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, I move that the Committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. UMSTEAD, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill H. R. 11563, declaring an emergency in the housing condition in the District of Columbia, creating a rent commission for the District of Columbia, prescribing powers and duties of the commission, and for other purposes, had come to no resolution thereon.

THE MEMORY OF JEFFERSON

Mr. CHRISTIANSON. Mr. Speaker, under unanimous consent granted to extend my remarks in the Record, I include an address delivered at the Jefferson Day dinner of the Sons of the Revolution by Hon. James M. Beck, president of the Washington chapter of the society, in Washington, on April 12, 1928:

Mr. Speaker, on both sides of the House, we have listened with great interest to the remarks of the gentleman from Missouri on the life, work, and influence of Thomas Jefferson.

There are a few outstanding historic characters that are acclaimed by all Americans, regardless of partisan affiliation.

One of the finest of all tributes to Jefferson was pronounced a few years ago by our late colleague, James M. I include Mr. Beck's eulogy in the RECORD, as follows:

ADDRESS OF HON. JAMES M. BECK

My fellow members, we are met on the eve of a great anniversary. Tomorrow will be the one hundred and eighty-fifth anniversary of the birth of Thomas Jefferson. It would be strange, indeed, if the Sons of the Revolution failed to note the natal day of the author of the Declaration of Independence. Such a commemoration is a debt not only to the dead but to the unborn.

of the author of the Declaration of Independence. Such a commemoration is a debt not only to the dead but to the unborn.

Thomas Jefferson was the most successful politician that the American Commonwealth has yet given to the world. I used the word "politician" in its original and nobler sense, for, as the late Thomas B. Reed once aptly said, "A statesman is only a dead politician." For a quarter of a century he dominated the politics of this country as no other man has before or since. His extraordinary career is the more remarkable, for apparently his equipment for leadership was slight. His personality had none of the leonine majesty of the greatest of Virginians, who impressed men as the aged Lear did the intrepid Kent, in having that which men obeyed, "authority." His was not the handsome presence and magnetic personality of his great rival, Alexander Hamilton, that "Admirable Crichton" of our history. Nor did he have the analytical mind of John Marshall. He was not an orator like Henry or Adams. A shy, diffident man, he hated the "morbid rage of debate", rarely spoke in public, and when he did his voice quickly became husky and inarticulate. He was by temperament and choice a philosopher and philanthropist and was most happy when "far from the madding crowd." He loved his garden more than the councils of the mighty, and yet, paradoxical as it may seem, he was the most aggressive and militant leader of a political party that our history has known. that our history has known.

A successful political career was furthermore the more improbable in his case, as Jefferson was born idealist. This can be seen if we contrast what the Declaration of Independence would have been if Franklin, Hamilton, or Marshall, instead of Jefferson, had been its draftsman. Franklin would have restricted it to a utilitarian discussion of the advantage to foreign nations of assisting in the creation of a new government and weakening the power of the British Empire. He would also have enlivened his discussion of practical politics with a touch of humor which would have increased the galety of nations. Hamilton or Marshall would have restricted the declaration to an analytical statement of the conrestricted the declaration to an analytical statement of the constitutional principle involved in taxing the Colonies without the consent of the legal legislators.

Jefferson, however, sounds in the very opening sentence a key Jenerson, however, sounds in the very opening sentence a keynote of such lofty moral purpose that the literature of state documents of that time can be searched without a fitting parallel.

In an age when might made right and international morality barely existed, he broadly asserted that a nation which resorts to force must justify itself upon moral grounds at the bar of the nations, for "a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation."

Mork the word "requires". This assumes that there is a law of Mark the word "requires." This assumes that there is a law of right and wrong, which, standing higher than laws, precedents and conventions, regulates the relations of nations as well as individuals. It avows its belief in a great human conscience which, rising above the interests of nations and races, would approve the right and condemn the wrong.

prove the right and condemn the wrong.

The concluding portion of the declaration further recognizes that even above the conscience of mankind was the Ruler of Nations, by its solemn appeal "to the Supreme Judge of the World for the rectitude of our intentions." The enthusiasm of the idealist is further indicated in the sweeping statement that it is a self-evident truth that "all men are born equal", although no truth is less self-evident and, except in a restricted and purely political sense, it was not a reality then and is not now. In this respect Jefferson was again a great human paradox, for this inspired idealist was one of the most practical statesmen of his or any time. any time.

any time.

Idealists are generally supposed to be out of place in practical politics. Shakespeare's wonderful character study of Brutus illustrates this by suggesting that if Cassius, the practical politician, had headed the progressive movement in ancient Rome, instead of the noble idealist, Brutus, there might have been a different result. The contrast between the two characters is finely pointed in the quarrel scene, when Brutus speaks of the assassination of the foremest man of all that time as in the nature of a holy sacrifice, while Cassius says—like every practical politician in a crisis—

"At such a time as this it is not meet That every nice offense should bear his comment."

Did Shakespeare intend to satirize the occasional unconscious inconsistency of some sincere idealists in this same scene when he makes Brutus quarrel with Cassius for the latter's failure to give Brutus money to pay his legions, while criticizing the methods by which Cassius obtained the tainted money?

by which Cassius obtained the tainted money?

Jefferson's ruling passion and dominant characteristic was that of the student. No one of his time, with the exception of Franklin, ever gave so much of a life to intellectual pursuits. From early boyhood until his latest hours he remained the unwearying and zealous student of the great subjects which challenge the attention of the human intellect. A valued correspondent of four great colleges, the successor of Franklin as president of the American Philosophical Society, he crowned his most useful life by founding the University of Virginia, upon lines so broad and catholic as to anticipate many of the most valued improvements in education. Art, music, literature, history, politics, science, agriculture, philosophy, religion, all engaged his thoughts, and of these, the great library, which in the days of his poverty he was compelled to sell to the Government, is a demonstration. In those days men did not buy books as decorative furniture, but each book was bought to read and study.

It required 16 wagons to transport his 10,000 books to Washington, and it was found that they were written in many languages and comprised in their sweep nearly every department of intellectual activity. When he planned the great university, his idea of the curriculum was botany, chemistry, zoology, anatomy, surgery, medicine, natural philosophy, agriculture, mathematics, astronomy, biography, politics, commerce, history, ethics, the law, the industrial and the fine arts, and in all of these his versatile mind took an intelligent interest. Few men in recorded history have been more versatile. In this respect he is only surpassed in his century by Franklin, and he belongs to the class of universal genius of which Franklin and Leonardo da Vinci were the greatest illustrations. Here was a man who could supervise a farm, study nature like a scientist make useful inventions draw the plans for a which Franklin and Leonardo da Vinci were the greatest illustrations. Here was a man who could supervise a farm, study nature like a scientist, make useful inventions, draw the plans for a mansion or a public building with the detail of a practical architect, play a Mozart minuet on the violin, ride after the hounds, write a brief, or manage an intricate law case, draft State papers of exceptional importance, and conduct correspondence with distinguished men in half a dozen languages upon questions of history, law, ethics, politics, science, literature, and the fine arts. To him the ancient classics were "a sublime luxury", and he thanked God that He had given him in his early education this great source of delight. One of his recreations was the reading of Homer in its melodious original. His linguistic studies included Latin, Greek, French, Spanish, Italian, and Gaelic. With his allabsorbing love of study, his unflagging intellectual activity, and his natural preference for a scholar's seclusion, he would have been in more peaceful times a philosopher or scientist or a president of a college or university.

The general tendency is to associate the subjective literary fac-

The general tendency is to associate the subjective literary faculty with a certain atrophy of the will and a clouding of the judgment. Excessive mental activity does tend to destroy the judgment. Excessive mental activity does tend to destroy the equilibrium which should prevail between the subjective and the objective faculties of the mind. In this respect Jefferson's extraordinary career seems to contradict the common experience of life and leads us to repeat our inquiry, What was the secret of his unequalled success? How did he, the intellectual recluse, become, in the apt language of one of his contemporaries, "the most delightful destroyer of dust and cobwebs that his time has ever known?"

If find that secret primarily in his sturdy optimism—in the fact that he believed in the work which he attempted to do, in his own ability to do it, in its significance in the predestined advancement of humanity, and in the ability and disposition of his fellow men to follow a true leader. Even these qualities would have availed but little had not his work of establishing democracy synchronized with the spirit of the times. He was the most successful leader of the masses, because he understood their higher inspirations and best voiced their then inarticulate voice.

Democracy is still a prophecy, and of its many prophets few surpass Jefferson in real achievement. This is far from saying that he brought about the democratic era with which the nineteenth century began. To that mighty development many illustrious men and uncounted millions of unknown men had contributed in the long centuries before the emancipation of the masses. The first American Democrat was Franklin, but, in that darkest hour before the dawn, Jefferson played the role of Chantecler—his clarion call to wider freedom, while not causing the reddening skies, yet proclaimed the morn. In this is his transcendent merit.

From his earliest manhood Jefferson best voiced the spirit of his time by proclaiming eternal warfare against every tyranny over the mind of men Only 9 days before his death he again.

his time by proclaiming eternal warfare against every tyranny over the mind of man. Only 9 days before his death he again showed his unconquerable faith in the triumph of the cause, to which he had dedicated his life, when he wrote for the fiftieth anniversary of the great Declaration, upon which he was destined to die:

"All eyes are opened or opening to the rights of man. Then general spread of the light of science has already laid open to every view the palpable truth that the masses of mankind have not been born with saddles on their backs nor a favored few booted and born with saddles on their backs nor a favored few booted and spurred ready to ride them legitimately by the grace of God."

Jefferson truly had the "oversoul", of which Emerson wrote, "the personality that neither flatters nor falls, and which never appeals from itself but believes in itself." It consisted in that faith which can "remove mountains" and "overcome the world", for he powerfully aided in removing mountains of old customs and habits of thought and overcame a world, in which the common man had had but too little opportunity. The world has no use for the half-hearted men. Its prizes are for those who throw their whole soul into their work, and with the devouring fire of determination and energy consume the obstacles which lie in their path. Such was the spirit of Thomas Jefferson. He met responsibility halfway. He rejoiced as a strong man to run his course.

To succeed in life, moreover, we must not only have faith in ourselves and in our work but in our fellow men. Democracy has proved a great leveler, and if a man has a public work to do he had better not commence with the premise that he is of a superior caste. Jefferson believed passionately in the people.

While he did not regard them as infallible and never assumed that the oil of anointing had fallen from the head of the monarch and conferred infallibility upon the multitudinous tongue of the people, yet, with a passionate ferver which was with him as a religion, he believed that the common sense of the majority could be better trusted than the interested views of a property-holding be better trusted than the interested views of a property-holding class. Speaking to his neighbors of Albemarle on returning from France in 1790, he said:

"The will of the majority, the natural law of every society, is the only sure guardian of the rights of man. Perhaps even this may sometimes err, but its errors are honest, solitary, and short lived."

In his first inaugural he said:

"If there be any among us who would wish to dissolve this Union or change its republican form, let them stand undisturbed as monuments of the sanity with which error of opinion may be tolerated where reason is left free to combat it."

as monuments of the sanity with which error of opinion may be tolerated where reason is left free to combat it."

I have already quoted the optimistic prediction which he made 9 days before his death, to be read on the fiftieth anniversary of the great Declaration, when, with trembling hand but with a buoyant and eternally youthful heart, he wrote: "All eyes are opened or opening to the rights of man."

Viewed in the colder light of a later age, his countless critics have charged him with having been excessively suspicious of his opponents' motives, but it must never be forgotten that, throughout the whole of his long public career, his political opponents continuously impunged Jefferson's motives and denounced him as a demagogue, a Jacobin, an atheist, and an anarchist. For many years he accepted with heroic composure a greater storm of abuse than was possibly ever visited upon any public man in our history, and if, in his later years, his pent-up spirit found bitter and at times unjust expression in his later writings, something must be allowed to a proud spirit who had for so many years accepted insult without reply. If the furious tempest of his times occasionally drove him from his true course, let it be remembered that only one of his contemporaries—the great-souled Washington—always remained true to the North Star. ton-always remained true to the North Star.

The greatest inconsistency charged against Jefferson was his aquisition of "Louisiana"—meaning thereby the whole trans-Mississippi region—in supposed violation of his own construction of the Constitution, but this may be due to a misconception of his position and it is possible that if his critics, comprising in this respect most historians, had been as good constitutional lawyers as was Jefferson, they would recognize that Jefferson, in this greatest achievement of his whole career, was more consistent than his critics have supposed.

The problem of acquiring new territory was a new one, and in solving the problem of Louisiana, Jefferson was treading an unbeaten path. He appreciated the enormous importance of the opportunity. He wrote to Monroe: "On the event of this mission depends the future destinies of this Republic."

And again he wrote to Livingston:

"We are satisfied nothing else will secure us against a war at no distant period."

His opponents opposed the acquisition as in violation of the Constitution, and certain passages in Jefferson's letters apparently indicate that he believed that it would be better for the country to avail itself of an unrivaled opportunity to complete our continental domain even if its constitutionality was doubtful, especially as he felt complete confidence in a subsequent ratification of the acquisition by the American people.

It is, however, inaccurate to say—as nearly all historians have said—that Jefferson had reached the definite conclusion that it was unconstitutional to acquire Louisiana without a constitutional amendment. In his letter to Gallatin, written in January 1803, he thus aptly states his real conviction:

"You are right in my opinion as to Mr. Lincoln's proposition. opponents opposed the acquisition as in violation of the 1803, he thus aptly states his real conviction:

"You are right in my opinion as to Mr. Lincoln's proposition. There is no constitutional difficulty as to the acquisition of territory and whether, when acquired, it may be taken into the Union by the Constitution as it now stands will become a question of expediency. I think it will be safer not to permit the enlargement of the Union but by amendment of the Constitution."

In other words, Jefferson believed that it was constitutional to acquire Louisiana as territory, but that it was of doubtful constitutionality to incorporate it into the Federal compact without an amendment, and this distinction between "acquisition" and "incorporation" was the very distinction which the Supreme Court subsequently recognized in the insular cases.

Jefferson was more sagacious than his critics; and today this constitutional distinction is familiar to us under which we hold the Philippines and Puerto Rico as colonial dependencies without admitting them into the Federal Union considered as a constitutional compact.

tional compact.

Without suggesting that Mr. Jefferson was never guilty of inconsistencies—for a successful political career is only too apt to involve at times a compromise of conviction—yet the judicious historian will recognize that Jefferson was as consistently loyal to his lofty political ideals as any public man of our history, with the single exception of Washington.

Freely recognizing his failings and arrors that were for our single exception of Washington.

Freely recognizing his failings and errors, they were far outweighed by his transcendent merits. His idealistic abstractions have turned the world upside down. If it be true, and I think it is, that they have done a great deal of harm, yet it is also true that they have done even greater good. They gave the common man hope and inspiration. The level of the human race was apman hope and inspiration. T

As one of his most engaging biographers, Parton has well said: "He defended the honor of the human intellect when its natural foes throughout Christendom conspired to revile, degrade, and crush it. He enjoyed his existence and made it a benefaction to his kind."

RECIPROCAL-TRADE AGREEMENTS

Mr. BEITER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. BEITER. Mr. Speaker, it is not my intention today to spend much time in discussing the pros and cons of the reciprocal-trade agreements. Both sides of the question have been hashed and rehashed pretty thoroughly during the past few months. And before that, so long as the United States has been engaged in foreign trade, the arguments for and against the protective tariff have gone on uninter-

As usual, when the argument waxes hot, we find ourselves arguing extremes rather than a legitimate middle ground. In contradiction to some of the more heated opponents of the new tariff amendments let me state, then, that the reciprocal-trade agreements do not, nor ever will, constitute free trade.

There may have been a time when it would have been possible or feasible for the United States to wall herself around with a forbidding protective tariff and to exist for and within herself. But American industry and American production have expanded too fast in the past 20 years to make such a course anything but economic suicide today.

I have noticed a tendency on the part of opponents of the new trade agreements to decry as too impractical and intangible for argument the mooted benefits in international amity and good will. Progress, as represented by the airplane, fast steamship service, and high-speed trains, has made international good will an economic necessity. We are not, as some of our shouting patriots would have us believe, a miniature Mars looking down in glorious independence on the pitiful struggles of interesting but remote neighbors.

In the amendment to the tariff act passed in 1934 it was stated that the amendments were asked for the purpose of expanding foreign markets for the products of the United States. Certainly none of us are so nationalistic as to deny the need for foreign outlets for American goods, nor so selfish or idealistic-depending on the viewpoint-as to believe that foreign markets will be thrown open to us without the granting of certain concessions for return trade.

In adjusting these concessions it has been the purpose of the Government to prevent, insofar as possible, the dumping on the American market of the products of cheap foreign labor. Since foreign wage scales generally are far below our own, no tariff will be completely successful on that score unless it closes our markets to all foreign goods-an impossible condition.

I might point out at this time that those who are crying loudest over this threat to American wage scales and the American standard of living are the very same people who called N. R. A. efforts to fix a minimum living wage communism and interference with the rights of industry. seem to have some difficulty in making up their minds on the subject of the Government's obligations to protect its citizens. It would seem to boil down to the premise that Government interference is legitimate when it protects capital but is revolution when it protects labor.

Generally speaking, then, the objectives of the reciprocaltrade agreements are all in favor of American industry. The question is whether or not they have obtained their ob-

It is my contention that there are as yet no accurate facts and figures on which to judge.

I should like, however, to point out a few of the more obvious fallacies in the arguments of those who are trying to prove that the agreements have failed of their purpose, and to take up some of the points which they have so carefully overlooked.

Those who hope to produce national panic by shouting from the housetops a jumble of incomplete and hastily computed figures to prove that that balance of trade has been upset are guilty of the same tactics as the labor agitator who builds one case of abuse into an emotional crisis that sweeps the good and bad before it in a torrent of mob hysteria.

Even if the figures were complete, the quotation of statistics in whole or in part does not present a complete picture. There are too many inconstant factors in the world economic situation to make any one year a standard of comparison for the next.

One does not hear our stout defenders of American industry calling attention to the fact that on the strength of the 1930 Tariff Act, which was highly protective, American exports to foreign countries were reduced by 30 percent in 1931 and by another 30 percent in 1932. We suspect that that is another disturbing fact that is to remain discreetly buried under the all-embracing blanket argument of the

Do not think that I am underestimating the effect of the depression on those figures. I mention them as a proof of my point, that unless all the contributing factors are considered statistics may lie more damagingly than deliberate distortion of the truth.

As an example, I should like to question one of the arguments advanced by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. TREADWAY] in his speech on March 4 decrying the disastrous results of the reciprocal-trade agreements.

With grave alarm he pointed out that during 1935 American imports of merchandise increased by 24 percent, whereas exports increased by only 7 percent. He blames this discrepancy on reciprocal trade.

At the same time, it is interesting to note, he failed to bring to light the fact that American exports to Canada increased by only 7 percent over 1934 while imports increased by 25 percent. The figures are almost identical, yet there was at that time no reciprocal treaty with Canada in operation.

Had Mr. TREADWAY wished to present a more complete picture he might have mentioned the fact that during the same year there was a drop of 25 percent in exports to Germany and that that drop was accompanied by a rise of approximately 9 percent in imports from the same country. Since Germany has not benefited by the agreements, she can scarcely be condemned on the strength of that discrepancy.

It has been further pointed out that the Cuban treaty resulted in a tremendous increase in imports with which the exports did not keep step. Under the same treaty imports to the United States from Cuba decreased by $7,000,000 during the month of November 1935 from the November 1934 level, and exports to Cuba increased by a million and a quarter in the same month. If statistics do not lie, I challenge Mr. TREADWAY to fit that into his picture.

It is not to be expected or hoped that reciprocal-trade agreements will react favorably on all industries. But American business is made up of interdependent units and what benefits one will, in the long run, benefit all. Naturally the grasping individualists find it difficult to subordinate their major interests to the common good, but it is time that we began to realize that protection for the few is an expensive proposition for a country of this size.

In my own district the Canadian treaty is the primary concern. Those of us who live near the border have reason to be grateful for the long years of peace and friendship which have marked the relations between the United States and Canada. We owe much of our past prosperity to the absolute security that is ours in our dealings with our neighbors across the line. Anything that tends to perpetuate that security will of necessity increase and safeguard prosperity.

A considerable percentage of the constituency of western New York is made up of fruit and dairy farmers over whose woes so many editorial tears have been shed.

For the benefit of the former I should like to point out that during January of 1936 the export of fruit to Canada increased 50 percent over the same period for 1935. The fruit farmers seem to be in no immediate danger.

The threat to the dairy farmers is almost equally nebulous. A survey of the fluctuations in prices of dairy products during the past 15 years shows that these prices react far more quickly to the condition of business in the country generally than to any alterations in trade schedules or duty rates. The dairy farmers will be among the first to react to the general improvement in conditions that will follow on an expansion of industrial markets.

And already the industrial market is expanding. During January 1936 Canadian purchases of machinery from the United States increased 70 percent over similar purchases in January 1935.

In conclusion I should like to quote briefly from an editorial which appeared in the Buffalo Evening News, a Republican newspaper, relative to the reciprocal-trade agreement with Canada:

If one argues that an increased foreign trade is an aid to recovery, one must commend the treaty negotiated by Secretary Cordell Hull. The volume of trade between the two countries is still small as compared with that which enriched both nations in still small as compared with that which enriched both nations in the years immediately following 1920. A good start, however, has been made in the direction of closer trade relations which will benefit both parties. Although specific elements may find their interests temporarily harmed, the betterment of both populations in general should reconcile them to their condition. If the masses of Canadians and Americans can sell more goods to each other, they inevitably will buy more from their own industrial and agricultural producers. agricultural producers.

THE COST OF WAR AND ITS PREVENTION

Mr. CASEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by inserting an address of my colleague the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. CONNERY!

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

Mr. CASEY. Mr. Speaker, under the leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I include the following address delivered over the radio by Hon. WILLIAM P. CONNERY, Jr., on April

Friends of the radio audience, last Monday we celebrated here in Washington and elsewhere in the United States what we now know as Army Day.

This is the day annually dedicated to those who are serving in the Army of the United States and those who are attached to the Reserve forces.

While we all pray for peace to all, and while we hope and trust that those who are serving in the armed forces of our rust that those who are serving in the armed forces of our Nation will not be called upon to engage in battle it is worth while being prepared, and well prepared, to defend our shores. As I, in company with other Members of the Congress, reviewed the Army parade from the steps of the National Capitol my mind subconsciously recalled the day, some 19 years ago, when I, as a member of the One Hundred and First Infantry of the Twenty-sixth Yankee Division, the National Guard of Massachusetts, proudly paraded the streets of Framingham on my way to the trenches in France.

We Americans—was the pride of America—marched proudly to make the world safe for democracy.

We Americans—yes, the pride of America—marched proudly to the boats waiting to take us to a foreign shore to engage in battles from which many thousands never returned.

As a result of an insidious campaign of propaganda we had been successfully enticed or cajoled into a war on a foreign soil. We went not as an aggressor seeking the acquisition of or to acquire new territory. We went not because we sought or envied the wealth of the people of any other nation. We were led into or induced to participate in the World War because our country had been led to believe that, through our participating, we would make the world safe for democracy.

I need not emphasize that while those Americans who served in the trenches of France, those who manned our ships which made the trenches of France, those who manned our ships which made possible the safe landing of our boys in France, or those who gave up their lives during the World War, may have protected the wealth of the international bankers of France, of England, and some in our own country, that in so doing I regret to say we unknowingly saddled upon the people of America a debt that even our children's children will still be paying long after the last of those who participated in the World War have passed on.

When we entered into the World War our national debt was less than $3,000,000,000,000, or a per-capita debt of less than $30 for each resident of our country.

When the armistice was signed we had accumulated a total national debt of more than $25,000,000,000, or a per-capita debt of something like $250 for every man, woman, and child living within our country.

This monetary loss can be made up, but how can we ever make up for the loss of the lives of the 126,000 American boys who were killed or who died as a result of injuries, or how can we ever repay those 240,000 other Americans who at the time of the armistice were listed as having been injured as a result of the war, many thousands of whom have since passed on, due wholly to the injuries than had received. they had received.

The total cost of our entry into the World War is as yet unknown. Even though the armistice was signed some 18 years ago, we are still paying for losses incurred, and it is my opinion we will be paying for years yet to come.

Conservatively it is estimated by Treasury officials that our entry into the World War will have cost in money alone a total of some $50,000,000,000, or the equivalent of some $400 for every one of the 25,000,000,000 of our people.

On behalf of the thousands of my comrades who willingly sacrificed their lives, and the thousands of those still in hospitals, suffering in mind and body, tortured as a result of injuries received in battle or sickness acquired on the battlefields of Europe, I want to assure my listeners that the one thought of every American who served his country and carried the Stars and Stripes into the World War is to insure the American people against participating in another war.

another war.

Some may assume that it is easy to eliminate war. Some will tell you that if the profit is taken out of war we will have no war.

Perhaps they are right. But let me ask any person after careful consideration to point to any nation which has engaged in a major war, or the people of any such countries, other than possibly a few, where the nations, or the people of such nations, were financially or morally better off when the war had been concluded and the peace pact signed.

Statistics show that every country engaging in a major war, such Statistics show that every country engaging in a major war, such as the recent World War, suffers a loss that is irreparable, both in loss of property value as well as in loss of the lives of their people. Will anyone contend that even the international bankers actually will anyone contend that even the international bankers actually profit when their own country engages in a major war? Even though their investments or worldly possessions may have been enlarged, the loss of their loved ones, their sons and daughters, their nephews and nieces, those they loved who were taken from them on the battlefield or in the hospitals, is a loss that no amount of gold will ever offset.

of gold will ever offset.

While the profits the international bankers may secure out of a major war may be such that their worldly possessions are temporarily increased, in reality their wealth is decreased in that their share of the Nation's increased debt imposed upon their children share of the Nation's increased debt imposed upon their children will in most cases offset such temporary gain.

War is never profitable, yet statistics show that we, the people of liberty-loving, peace-loving America have engaged in wars on foreign soil four times since we gained our freedom in 1776.

Our people were forced to make the sacrifices every war demands and exacts simply because other nations, or those governing other nations, believed that they were better prepared for battle than were we Nations are very rarely different, collectively, than the average individuals who comprise or make up such nations. Those individuals who are physically fit, those boys who make a practice of daily spending a half hour or so in the gymnasium, are rarely attacked, even by the local bullies. Why? Simply because the local bully even by the local bullies. Why? Simply because the local bully and the others know that such boys are physically fit and well able not only to defend themselves but, in addition, most likely will damage the appearance of the aggressors before the battle is over. Such boys as those who are physically fit are seldom found to be the aggressors. They are not called upon to fight because they are prepared to fight and to win.

The people of America do not envy the land, the riches, or the possessions of any other people. We have lived in almost perfect harmony with our neighbors to the north and to the south of us with only an imaginary boundary line between us.

The people of America are better insured against war than the people of any other nation I know of. Our forefathers apparently foresaw dangers far ahead of their times.

The people of America are insured against war on foreign soil in that no officer of our Government can declare war except by action that no officer of our Government can declare war except by action of the Congress of the United States. Let me repeat this unusually happy position in which our people find themselves insofar as our being dragged into a war on foreign soil.

No official of our Government can order or direct our Army or our Navy to participate in any war without a vote of the Congress of the United States. Congress, being the duly elected representatives of all of our people, will hesitate well in the future before authorizing such a declaration, to my mind, except to protect our land and our people against an invading army or navy.

Our greatest danger is that through some entangling alliances—so-called peace pacts—or through our entry into the League of Nations we will be engulfed into a sea of turmoil among or with other foreign nations and from which there is but one honorable other foreign nations and from which there is but one honorable escape, and that, I regret to say, is war. Against such a possibility we can protect our people only through Congress refusing to engage in any entangling alliances with other nations.

We can further insure ourselves against being dragged into or cajoled into war by eliminating the present profits of war.

Implements of war should be manufactured by the Government in its own arsenals and in its own shipyards.

It may, and it can, be contended that those of inventive genius, who, through years of sacrifice and study, develop implements or accessories of value to our national defense, should have a market in our own country for the work of their brain or their hands. They should have. They should have.

We can easily authorize the establishment or the creation of a governmental agency, which agency would be empowered to pur-chase the exclusive right to use such implements as were found of value. The creators of such implements should be, and would be, adequately rewarded.

Further, I believe that our people should acquire and impoundnow, if necessary—ample stores of those metals and supplies for which at the present time we must look to other nations in case

In other words, we should, insofar as is possible, eliminate any possible profit to those who would cause or would seek to drag us into a war with any foreign nation, except to defend our country in case of invasion.

When we eliminate the profit that some assume there is in our country engaging in a war with a foreign nation we will have made a real step toward eliminating the possibility of our country again being dragged into or cajoled into any war. General Sherman well said, "War is hell."

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include therein an editorial.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I object to the editorial.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. I hope the gentleman will not object. It is an editorial on the Wagner-Ellenbogen housing bill

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, the policy has been adopted of keeping editorials out of the Record; consequently, I must object to the editorial.

AFTER 19 YEARS

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks in the RECORD and to insert a speech delivered by the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. KOPPLEMANN] over the radio on April 2.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

There was no objection.

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Speaker, under the leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I include the following radio address by Hon. HERMAN P. KOPPLEMANN, Member of Congress from the First District of Connecticut, over Station WOL, Washington, April 2, 1936:

We're at it again.

Nineteen years ago today Woodrow Wilson called the Congress of the United States into extraordinary session. The Nation trembled with fear and with excitement. The hot breath of war was sweeping across the United States. President Wilson outlined the events that had led to the special session of Congress and called upon his people to wage war.

Quickly the Congress hastened to carry out what seemed to be the wishes of the people. The war resolution was drafted, pre-sented to the Senate. Senator after Senator made fervent, patri-on April 4, 1917, the Senate voted for war. All next day the House of Representatives debated the resolution. Speech after speech swept across the floor, united in a clamor for conflict. In the early hours of April 6 the resolution came to a vote. The outcome was as swift and as sure as it had been in the Senate. outcome was as swift and as sure as it had been in the Senate. America was in the World War.

Our munitions makers couldn't restrain their jubilation; our military and naval enthusiasts whoopeed with joy; young men, boys in colleges, sons, husbands, brothers, threw back their shoulders and strutted about in eager anticipation of the days soon to come when they would be wearing uniforms. Mothers, wives, sisters, sweethearts, fired with patriotic fervor, proudly urged their sisters, sweethearts, fired with patriotic fervor, proudly urged their men to join up. Others sobbed with fear because the persons they loved most were going to battle, perhaps never to return.

Only a small cry was raised for peace. Six Senators and fifty Congressmen spoke for peace in those war-filled days. Fifty-five men and one woman faced political suicide to argue against the course for which their President had pleaded. Vilified, scorned, burned in effigy by their constituents, branded as traitors, they found no praise for what they had done. They had expected none

A few private citizens also asked why we had to go to war, why we had to participate in that carnage. For what did we have to sacrifice our youth? But their cries were quickly drowned. Pacifists were taboo in those days. And so the war to end wars was fought.

Men full of life and ambition left home never to return. Others left and returned without their minds, without their sight, without arms, legs, lungs. But the war to end wars had been fought.

Peace treaties were signed, disarmament promises were made. For a few years it seemed that the war had been well fought, that its purposes had been accomplished.

And then came the dawn. Depression overtook the world. Foreign nations consistently began defaulting on their war debts. But they found funds to rebuild their armies and navies and air forces. They seemed to find plausible excuses for rearming. Peace treaties, disarmament agreements stood in their way, so they broke their promises and renounced their treaties

The mad race for war preparation went on over there.

And the germ found its way into these United States. Beginning with 1924 the sum of money set aside for the Army and Navy began to climb appallingly until today we have just passed the largest peacetime appropriation bill for the War Department and are facing the largest peacetime appropriation bill for the Navy are facing the largest peacetime appropriation bill for the Navy Department.

Wise Benjamin Franklin said that "wars are not paid for in wartime; the bill comes later." How well we know that.

More than 60 cents of every tax dollar paid by you, the citizens of this country, into the Federal Treasury goes for the payment of past and future wars. We are developing a formidable air force. We have appropriated funds for supporting compulsory military training in our colleges, for increasing the student force at Annapolis and West Point, for a larger Navy, stronger arsenals within the boundaries of this Nation, more bombers, a larger standing Army more officers.

the boundaries of this Nation, more pointers, a larger standing Army, more officers.

But these are only the first expenditures. What of the pensions, disability compensations, bonuses; the cost of maintaining the Veterans' Administration, the veterans' hospitals and homes? Whatever meager benefits the veterans gain from such expenditures are their rightful due. You drove them into war. They were incapacitated in your service. Pensions for their widows and families are only just. Pensions for veterans of the Spanish and Civil Wars—why not?

Civil Wars—why not?

The veterans of the World War demanded and obtained a bonus. Supposed to be paid in 1945, they presented such arguments that Congress voted it to them immediately, 9 years before it was due. Why not? Today they live; tomorrow they die.

These pensions and bonuses are just a part of war expenditures. If we are going to fight we must be willing to stand all the cost of such forthing. But why fight?

of such fighting. But, why fight?

Today we are definitely preparing for war. No other reason can be ascribed to the activity in our Army and Navy Departments. But arms, ammunitions, poisonous gases, battleships, and air bombers mean nothing unless we have the men to command them. The day is probably not far off when we are going to send a call to all the able-bodied young men, whether they wish it or to enter the ranks.

These young men expect such a call. But they are taking a lesson from the experience of veterans of past wars. They want some assurance that fighting will be made worth their while. War will jeopardize their future. They have seen it happen with older brothers, fathers, uncles, friends.

Today, while we are still at peace, they want to have all they can get out of life. They know of the fight veterans had to wage before Congress granted their pensions and bonuses.

They have banded themselves into a new veterans' organization, known as the Veterans of Future Wars. They realize the power

They have banded themselves into a new veterans' organization, known as the Veterans of Future Wars. They realize the power of organization. Started a few weeks ago, it has spread into every section of the country. These young men are facing the inevitable. For some reason, difficult to understand, we are preparing for war. There is nothing they can do about it. They are patriotic. If the call comes, they are prepared to meet it. But they aren't going to have any haggling about a paltry few billions for their bonuses and pensions after the months of service are over. No sir, they are demanding payment in advance, right now.

right now.

They have issued a manifesto claiming, and I quote, "Whereas it is inevitable that this country will be engaged in war, and whereas it is by all accounts likely that every man of military age will have a part in this war", they demand that the Government pay a bonus of $1,000 to every male citizen between the ages of 18 and 36, due June 1, 1965, payable immediately. They claim and I quote, "It is but common right that this bonus be paid now, for many will be killed in the next war, and hence they, the most deserving, will not otherwise get the full benefit of their country's gratitude."

They have provided for the women of America, too, and demand pensions of $50 a month for future wives, and free pilgrimages to Europe for future mothers to view the future battlefields. The demand of other organized blocs on our Treasury are peanuts compared to this one.

The demand of other organized blocs on our Treasury are peanuts compared to this one.

Daily new posts of the Veterans of Future Wars are forming. I learned yesterday that a post has been formed in Trinity College, located in my home town of Hartford, Conn.

They demand that we go the whole way, and pay for manpower in advance, just as we are paying in advance for materials in preparation of war. If you think their argument is ridiculous, you should listen to the talk I am compelled to hear every time a bill is before the Congress urging appropriations for larger armies, greater navies, more bombers, etc.

On the other hand, when the engineers of the Army work out plans for flood control that mean the saving of lives and homes and property, a most laudable work, then you should listen to the weighty arguments of those who would protect the Treasury in the interests of the taxpayer, and watch the appropriation bills for rivers and harbors slashed right and left.

They cry of extravagance because we clothe and feed the unem-

They cry of extravagance because we clothe and feed the unemployed, because we save homes, farms, and businesses. But no word of criticism except from a few weak voices is heard in protest to vast expenditures to fight an enemy no one knows.

If the people were organized into a bloc, demanding their right of peace, as other blocs have demanded their rights, your Congress would think twice before it approved these billions for war programs too extensive for our own needs.

What has America to fear? The nations of the world need our friendship as much as we need theirs. Except for a brief outburst, quickly ended, we have had no trouble in North America. In South America we want nothing. They want nothing from us. Are we preparing to enter a European war? And if so, why?

They talk of an enemy which will come to our western shores from Asia and invade our country. The nearest nation to our western shores is more than 5,000 miles away.

We're talking peace and acting war. We're crying for economy, and spending huge sums of money increasing our Army and Navy uselessly. We glory about American traditions, and the first trauselessly. We glory about American traditions, and the first tradition of civilization, peace, is being flaunted with a derision which is barbaric.

And all the time unrest and discontent are seeping into the veins of this land of ours, making madmen and rebels of our people, who want nothing more than a chance to work peacefully and live peacefully with their neighbors.

Truly we are emphasizing the wrong American traditions. We're at it again, preparing for war. Why not prepare for peace?

INFORMATION CONCERNING FEDERAL RIGHTS OF VETERANS

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks, and include therein three letters, one from Mr. Thomas Kirby, national legislative chairman of the Disabled American Veterans; one from Mr. John Thomas Taylor, director national legislative committee of the American Legion; and one from Mr. Millard W. Rice, legislative representative of the Veterans' of Foreign Wars of the United States.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, under the leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I include the following letters:

Disabled American Veterans of the World War, Washington, April 9, 1936.

The Honorable Wright Patman,

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

My Dear Mr. Patman: We are deeply appreciative of your letter of thanks for the assistance we were glad in giving in the preparation of the booklet on Information Concerning Federal Rights of

So necessarily involved is the vast problem of the care of former service men that it is extremely difficult for anyone to keep informed on all these matters. However, the 62-page booklet just issued as a reprint of your remarks in the Congressional Record is so comprehensive and accurate that it should be invaluable to veterans and those advising veterans.

We have been pleased to distribute this pamphlet to our rehabilitation officers everywhere, as well as to other D. A. V. officials who are helping the wartime disabled in the establishment of their claims.

Cordially yours,

THOMAS KIRBY, National Legislative Chairman.

VETERANS OF FOREIGN WARS OF THE UNITED STATES, Washington, D. C., April 9, 1936.

Hon. WRIGHT PATMAN, M. C.,

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

My Dear Congressman Parman: Your recent letter expressing appreciation for our contribution of material and suggestions for your excellent compilation of the rights, privileges, and benefits available to veterans and their dependents under various Federal available to veterans and their dependents under various Federal and State laws was indeed gratifying.

So highly valuable do we consider this resumé that we immediately ordered 5,000 copies in pamphlet form for distribution to our 3,500 local posts and service officers. This pamphlet fills a long-felt need and will prove of inestimable value to thousands of veterans and their dependents

The V. F. W. is deeply grateful to you for your splendid service to veterans.

Very respectfully yours,

MILLARD W. RICE, Legal Representative.

THE AMERICAN LEGION, National Legislative Committee, Washington, D. C., April 10, 1936.

Washington, D. C., April 10, 1936.

Hon. Wright Patman,
House Office Building, Washington, D. C.
My Dear Wright: This is to acknowledge receipt of your letter of April 9, expressing to us your appreciation for the cooperation in the preparation of the pamphlet containing information dealing with veterans' benefits.

I assure you that it has been a real pleasure for us to join with you in this matter, and I take this opportunity to congratulate you upon the splendid results of your efforts. This pamphlet contains just the information that the veterans throughout the country are anxious to have. It will be of great help also to the service officers in the thousands of posts of the American Legion. They, too, will appreciate it, and I am ordering a quantity to send out to them.

Again I thank you for the splendid job you have done and assure you that this pamphlet is just what veterans' organizations have required in simple and condensed form for a long time.

JOHN THOMAS TAYLOR,
Director, National Legislative Committee.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. MASSINGALE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on Tuesday next, after the reading of the Journal and the disposition of business on the Speaker's table, I may address the House for 20 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

Mr. RANSLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 2 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

THE LATE JAMES M. BECK

Mr. RANSLEY. Mr. Speaker, it is with deep regret I announce the death of the Honorable James M. Beck, formerly a Member of Congress from the State of Pennsylvania, and an outstanding authority on the Constitution. He was honored by legal societies throughout the world and was an Honorary Bencher of Grays Inn, England. Writer, orator, lawyer, Solicitor General of the United States, in spite of his great record he was a modest and retiring man.

Mr. Speaker, the Honorable James M. Beck will be mourned by his many friends.

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks by publishing in the RECORD a historical account of the life of James M. Beck, as recorded in one of today's Philadelphia morning papers.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

The matter referred to follows:

JAMES M. BECK IS DEAD AT 75; NOTED LAWYER-LEADING CONSTITU-TIONAL AUTHORITY WAS HARDING'S SOLICITOR GENERAL; SERVED IN CONGRESS—BORN IN PHILADELPHIA; HAD LAW CAREER; FOUGHT FOR REPEAL; STRICKEN BY HEART ATTACK AT HOME IN CAPITAL By Paul J. McGahan

Washington, April 12.—James M. Beck, one of the Nation's outstanding authorities on constitutional law and a sharp-spoken critic of the New Deal, died at his home here today.

The former United States Solicitor General and Member of Congress from Philadelphia was 75 years old.

He died of a heart attack, which came on suddenly as he moved, apparently well, about the house he had long occupied at 1624 Twenty-first Street NW. Stricken at 3:30 p. m., he died an hour

At his side were his wife, Mrs. Lilla Mitchell Beck, and his daughter, Mrs. Beatrice Beck Tuck, with whom he had not long before had Easter dinner. His son, James M. Beck, Jr., who lives in London, was informed immediately of his father's death.

MANY EXPRESS REGRET

The news came as a shock to his many friends and colleagues in Washington officialdom, and evoked expression of regret even in quarters where he had been considered a foe.

It was while he served as Republican Solicitor General, appointed by President Harding in 1921, that he gained his national reputation as an expert on the Constitution of the United States.

His active political career ended when he retired voluntarily from the House of Representatives as a Member from Philadelphia, on January 3, 1935.

DOCTOR'S REPORT

Dr. Walter A. Bloedorn, the attending physician, issued the following statement this afternoon:

"Mr. Beck died suddenly today at 4:30 o'clock of coronary thrombosis at his residence. He had appeared well at luncheon and was dressed and walking about at 3:30 when the attack came and he died within a short time."

To say that James M. Beck was a mere student of the Constitution of the United States would not only be injustice but grevious understatement.

He worshiped it as a living and evolving organism, defended it as the greatest single manuscript of government the mind of man had ever produced, and years before his death had earned the distinction of being one of the foremost constitutional lawyers in the United States.

Mr. Beck not only knew every syllable of the Constitution, but he knew the spirit and the minds of the men who created it. He knew the background of bitter history out of which it had sprung, the old English common law which had entered into its making, the racial characteristics of the members of the constitu-making, the racial characteristics of the members of the constitutional assembly which finally presented it to the people. It was this complete knowledge of and enthusiastic sympathy with the times and the men which saw its promulgation that made any reference to it from his mouth or pen a vital utterance; and this zeal and fervor which carried him to such notable victories during his term as Solicitor General of the United States under Presidents Warren G. Harding and Calvin Coolidge.

His uncontested knowledge of the constitutional law of the country gave him an attentive audience whenever, in the latter country gave him an attentive audience whenever, in the latter years of his life, he rose to address the lower house of Congress, and made him a powerful advocate for prohibition reform, which he argued solely on its constitutional merits.

NATIVE SON OF PHILADELPHIA

James Montgomery Beck was born in Philadelphia on July 9, 1861, the son of James Nathan Beck and Margaretta C. Darling Beck. He received his early education in the public schools of the city, and was graduated from Moravian College in 1880. Four years later he was admitted to the Philadelphia bar, his law partner being the late William F. Harrity, and 2 years thereafter married Miss Lilla Mitchell, daughter of James Mitchell, of Philadelphia delphia.

His public life began 2 years prior to his marriage, in 1888, when he was named as Assistant United States Attorney for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, a capacity in which he served until 1892. Four years later he was appointed United States Attorney in Philadelphia, leaving that office in 1900 to become Assistant United Endowed with a brilliant mind, a memory which for years was to be a marvel to all who heard him, a genuine enthusiasm for the law, and a scholarship which won him innumerable honors, his progress in his profession was not only immediate but con-

ADMITTED TO NEW YORK BAR

Mr. Beck served as assistant to the Attorney General in Washington for 3 years, through the tenure of President McKinley and his successor, Theodore Roosevelt, and at the end of that time was admitted to the New York bar, becoming a member of the law firm of Shearman & Sterling, in New York City.

He remained with that firm until 1917, when he became senior partner in the newly established firm of Beck, Crawford & Harris. He finally retired from active practice of his profession in 1927 to enter Congress.

enter Congress.

In 1920 Warren G. Harding looked about him for a man of the ability and learning to assume the tremendous duties of the office of Solicitor General, and his choice of Mr. Beck was widely applauded, both in this country and abroad, where his talents also were highly regarded.

TRIBUTE FROM COOLIDGE

He served in that office until he voluntarily resigned in 1925, at

He served in that office until he voluntarily resigned in 1925, at which time President Coolidge paid warm tribute to his administration of his duties in the following words:

"In accepting your resignation, I wish to make particular acknowledgment of the faithfulness and distinguished ability with which you have discharged the duties of your high position. Your record, as Solicitor General, will stand as one of the most notable proofs that the Government is so many times fortunate in being able to enlist the most eminent of talents and highest fidelity, not because of the compensation, but because of the fine sentiments. able to emist the most eminent of talents and highest fidelity, not because of the compensation, but because of the fine sentiments of patriotism which animate those who thus do honor to the public service. At a great sacrifice to yourself in everything save only reputation you have given your splendid energy and excellent capacity to the furtherance of the national interests. Contemplating your record of achievement, I have to express the hope that it may be alike an inspiration and a model to many others."

HANDLED MANY CASES

During Mr. Beck's regime as Solicitor General the work of the Nation's law officer reached a record in volume. The legal debris left by the World War piled up like a log jam damming a mountain freshet, yet largely through his own personal effort Mr. Beck cleared it away.

He had charge of more than 800 cases before the Supreme Court; in other words, he was counsel for the Government of the United States in approximately one-fourth of all of the cases heard by the Supreme Court during the period of his service. In that time he personally and successfully argued more than 100.

Mr. Beck's appearances before the Supreme Court extended over a period of four decades, as he made his first presentation of argument in 1896. Among the cases which he argued are a number which have gone down as classics in the legal history of the Nation, and which are not alone monuments of legal precedent but are mileposts in course in political science.

ARGUED FAMOUS CASES

It was he who argued the famous case of Neely v. Henkle (180 U. S. c109), in which the constitutional power of the Government to govern Cuba after the treaty of Paris was involved. This case was regarded as the forerunner of the famous insular cases, which involved the power of the United States to govern permanently colonial dependencies free from the limitation of the "uniformity clause" of the Constitution.

In the famous Danbury Hatters case he successfully argued the application of the Sherman antitrust law to a Nation-wide boycott on a manufacturers' product.

Perhaps the greatest of the cases which he tried before the Supreme Court was the lottery case, in which it was held that the constitutional power to regulate commerce included the power to prohibit commerce for Federal purposes.

Mr. Beck successfully sustained the constitutionality of the Stockyards Act and of the nineteenth amendment to the Constitution, and also argued the famous Portland Postmaster case, wherein the Supreme Court finally settled the century-old controversy as to the President's power of removal. He also took a prominent part in the litigation involving the diversion of water from the Great Lakes, in which the supremacy of the Federal Government was sustained.

Following his retirement from the office of Soliston General In Following his retirement from the office of Solicitor General in 1925 Mr. Beck resumed the private practice of the law in New York and Washington, but 2 years later, in 1927, turned his back finally on the profession which he had followed with such brilliance to enter Congress.

ENTERS CONGRESS

In the previous year, in a public address in Philadelphia, he expressed a desire to spend his remaining years in the public service; and the opportunity to enter the lower House of Congress came with the retirement of Congressman James M. Hazlett, then representing the First Congressional District.

Mr. Beck's desire to run for Congress was encouraged by William S. Vare, titular leader of the Philadelphia Republican organization, who then was engaged in his ultimately futile battle to secure his seat in the United States Senate, following the three-cornered fight between himself, Gifford Pinchot, and George Wharton Pepper the previous fall.

previous fall.

The same year that Mr. Vare was elected to the Senate and then compelled to "stand aside", a seat also had been denied Frank L. Smith, of Illinois. The constitutional principle involved intrigued Mr. Beck's legal mind, and he wrote a book, The Vanishing Rights of the States, in which he denied the constitutional right of the Senate by a majority vote to exclude from its membership a person unquestionably elected by a sovereign State because of some alleged irregularity in the primary election.

The argument which Mr. Beck used elicited widespread comment, and it was only natural that because of it he should be an active participant in the fight to secure Mr. Vare's induction into the Senate.

FOUGHT FOR EIGHTEENTH AMENDMENT REPEAL

Immediately upon his election Mr. Beck took an active part in the effort to secure the repeal of the eighteenth amendment, which, he insisted, had no right in the Constitution, and the modification of the Volstead Act. He was active in the organization of the so-called "wet bloc" in the House, and for several years not only was chairman of the Republican group but the acknowledged spokesman for antiprohibitionists in the House.

man for antiprohibitionists in the House.

He took a leading part in the debates on the question of repeal, and his address on February 7, 1930, coming as it did less than 3 weeks after the final presentation of the moot report of the Wickersham Commission, attracted Nation-wide attention. It was his discussion of the convention system of ratification of the prohibition-repeal amendment late in the Seventy-second Congress which did much to clarify the legal aspects of that infinitely complex and puzzling problem.

HITS CONGRESS; QUITS

Mr. Beck, in September 1934, announced in a bitterly worded statement that he intended to relinquish his seat in Congress because that body had become "merely a rubber stamp for the Executive." He kept his word and withdrew at the end of the ensuing term of Congress.

"Our form of government can only be saved by the restoration of the Republican Party to power", he said at the time. "I am retiring from Congress because it has largely ceased to be a deliberative body. To be a one-hundredth part of a rubber stamp no longer appeals to me. I believe I can help more effectually in the Federal courts, where I have practiced for more than 50 years, than in a Congress where the minority is gagged and reduced to impotence. I hope with my pen and voice to serve the Republican Party as effectively as in the ranks of Congress."

Following his retirement from Congress he turned his attention

Following his retirement from Congress he turned his attention, as a constitutional authority, to the New Deal, which he criticized vigorously as "encroaching on individual rights." He described President Roosevelt as a "dictator" and the entire New Deal as a "return to feudalism."

WINS S. B. C. CASE

Before the United States Supreme Court in December 1935 he branded the T. V. A. as unconstitutional, socialistic, and inspired by the New Deal "malevolence" against utilities. The T. V. A., he by the New Deal "malevolence" against utilities. The T. V. A., he said, tended to vold States' rights.

Another case in which he appeared as counsel was won in the high tribunal last week when the Court upheld the refusal of J. Edward Jones, New York oil-stock dealer, to file information with the Securities Commission under requirements of the Securities Act of 1933.

In an address in Washington early this year he predicted the Roosevelt administration will be known to the future as "the ghast-liest wreckage of our form of government in history." He was a critic of the New Deal's tax on inheritances.

URGES COALITION

In February of this year, during a speech in Atlantic City, he advocated a coalition of Republicans and conservative Democrats as the way to "restore public credit by reducing taxation and expenditures."

At the very outset of his congressional career Mr. Beck himself was challenged as to his right to hold a seat, due entirely to the question as to whether or not he maintained a legal residence in Philadelphia. The House voted to seat him after brief debate, after satisfactory evidence had been presented as to his residence at 1414 Spruce Street in this city.

FAMED AS JURIDICAL AUTHOR

Mr. Beck's reputation, both as counselor and orator, was inter-

Mr. Beck's reputation, both as counselor and orator, was international, and equally so as an author on juridical subjects.

His compilation of an analysis of the various diplomatic papers of the nations which became embroiled in the World War, compiled as a juridical argument to determine the moral responsibility for precipitating the conflict, was accorded almost the dignity of a state paper. His book, The Evidence in the Case, not only was widely read in this country but was interpreted and printed abroad. In 1916 he traveled through England and France, making a notable series of addresses in the two allied countries, in which he freely expressed the sympathy of the American people for the allied cause.

WON SCHOLARLY HONORS ABROAD

His scholarly attainments were given generous recognition abroad. Previously made a master of the bench of Gray's Inn, one of the historic Inns of Court in London, where he delivered a series of five addresses under the auspices of the University of London in 1922–23, he was paid the unprecedented compliment of being called to the English bar in 1922. The call was entirely voluntary and made without the time-honored obligation of being "screened" or of participating in the requisite number of dinners at the Inns of Court.

Court.

His now famous volume, The Constitution of the United States, was an outgrowth of the addresses delivered in London. The foreword of the American edition was written by Calvin Coolidge; that of the British edition by the Earl of Balfour; the French, by Dr. Larnaude, dean of the faculty of law of the University of Paris; and the German, by the Chief Justice of the German Republic.

An evidence of the esteem in which he was held abroad is the fact that he was awarded the rank of officer in the French Legion of Honor, that of commander of the Belgian Order of the Crown, of the Polish Order of Polonia Restituta.

MARVEL FOR MEMORY IN ORATORY

Mr. Beck's reputation as an orator was perhaps as wide as recognition of his legal talents. He was always in demand as an after-dinner speaker in this city, and his feats in memory became classic, particularly among newspapermen, who had the opportunity to appreciate them.

appreciate them.

They often would receive copies of Mr. Beck's speech in advance of its delivery, and would have the amazing experience of following his address, page after page, for 20 minutes or a half hour, without detecting him in the omission of a single word or phrase. Shakespeare was one of his favorite authors, and his speeches were interspersed with quotations from the great Elizabethan dramatist, and he was likewise fond of choosing some conversation or character from the bard to Illuminate portions of his addresses. With a rich voice that might well have graced the stage, a quick wit, and a magnificent command of the English language, he could endow the most abstruse constitutional subject with vitality and glamor.

glamor.

His ability found exceptional recognition in Congress. ington's Birthday, 1929, the House, instead of following its tradition of listening to the reading of Washington's Farewell Address, voted an invitation to Mr. Beck to deliver an address on the First President. He chose Washington and the Constitution, and at the conclusion of the presentation the entire membership of the House rose in the Philadelphian's honor.

STANCHLY LOYAL PHILADELPHIAN

Although his duties in the middle years of his life found him more frequently domiciled in New York, Washington, and abroad than they did in this city, Mr. Beck remained a stanchly loyal Philadelphian and a distinguished publicist of her tradition. During the celebration of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence through the medium of the 1926 Sesquicentennial International Exposition, he served as chairman of the national advisory committee appointed by President Coolidge.

he served as chairman of the hational advisory committee appointed by President Coolidge.

His attainments were freely recognized by institutions of higher learning in this country. He received the honorary degree of doctor of laws from both Moravian and Muhlenberg Colleges in 1902 and from the University of Pennsylvania in 1910, from McGill and Lafayette in 1917; doctor of literature from Franklin and Marshall in 1918 and from Loyola in 1931.

PROLIFIC CONTRIBUTOR TO MAGAZINES

He was a prolific contributor to magazines and periodicals and numerous of his speeches were reprinted in pamphlet form. His formal writings included The Evidence in the Case, 1914; War and Humanity, 1916; The Reckoning, 1918; The Passing of the New Freedom, 1920; The Constitution of the United States, 1922; The Vanishing Rights of the States, 1926; and May It Please the Court,

He was a fellow of the American Philosophical Society, the American Geographical Society, and the Royal Historical Society of London; a member of the Pennsylvania Society of Sons of the Revolution, and a corresponding member of the Societe de Gens de Lettres, of France.

His son, James M. Beck, Jr., has resided in London for many years. His wife is the former Lady Tennyson, sister of Lord Glencannon. A daughter is the former wife of S. Pinckney Tuck, a member of the American Foreign Service.

Mr. Beck was a member of the Metropolitan Club and the Chevy Chase Country Club of Washington, the Art and Legal Clubs of Philadelphia, and of the Shakespeare Society of Philadelphia, reputed to be the oldest organization of its kind in the world, and a member of the Union League Club of New York

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. LARRABEE, for 1 week, on account of important

To Mr. STARNES (at the request of Mr. Hill of Alabama), indefinitely, on account of important business.

To Mr. Wigglesworth (at the request of Mr. Martin of Massachusetts), indefinitely.

To Mr. Wallgren (at the request of Mr. Smith of Washington), indefinitely, on account of illness.

To Mr. May (at the request of Mr. Spence), for today, on account of unavoidable absence.

To Mr. McFarlane, for 1 week, on account of death in family

To Mr. Lanham (at the request of Mr. Johnson of Texas), for 2 days, on account of important business.

To Mr. Crowe, for today, on account of official business.

SENATE JOINT RESOLUTION REFERRED

A joint resolution of the Senate of the following title was taken from the Speaker's table and, under the rule, referred as follows:

S. J. Res. 233. Joint resolution providing for the participation of the United States in the Great Lakes Exposition to be held in the State of Ohio during the year 1936, and authorizing the President to invite the Dominion of Canada to participate therein, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

BILL AND JOINT RESOLUTION PRESENTED TO THE PRESIDENT

Mr. PARSONS, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that that committee did, on April 11, 1936, present to the President, for his approval, a bill and a joint resolution of the House of the following titles:

H. R. 11849. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to create a Library of Congress Trust Fund Board, and for other purposes", approved March 3, 1935; and

H. J. Res. 526. Joint resolution to authorize the Librarian of Congress to accept the property devised and bequeathed to the United States of America by the last will and testament of Joseph Pennell, deceased.

ADJOURNMENT

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 4 o'clock and 52 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until tomorrow, Tuesday, April 14, 1936, at 12 o'clock noon.

COMMITTEE HEARING

COMMITTEE ON THE PUBLIC LANDS

There will be a meeting of the Committee on the Public Lands on Tuesday, April 14, 1936, at 10:30 o'clock a. m., in room 328, House Office Building, to consider further H. R. 10357, and other bills.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

772. A letter from the past commander in chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, transmitting pursuant to Public Resolution No. 126, Seventy-first Congress, approved March 2, 1931, the journal of the proceedings of the Sixtyninth National Encampment, held at Grand Rapids, Mich.

September 8-14, 1935 (H. Doc. No. 347); to the Committee on Military Affairs and ordered to be printed, with illustrations.

773. A letter from the Acting Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a draft of a proposed joint resolution to amend the Settlement of War Claims Act of 1928 for the purpose of extending for 2 additional years the time within which American nationals who have obtained awards from the Mixed Claims Commission, United States and Germany, or the Tri-Partite Claims Commission, Austria and Hungary, and the Hungarian nationals who have obtained awards from the War Claims Arbiter, may make application to the Treasury for the payment of such awards; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

774. A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting for the consideration of Congress a supplemental estimate of appropriation for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, to remain available until expended. for the War Department, for construction of runways, grading, and drainage at the Army Air Corps base at Langley Field, Va. (H. Doc. No. 444); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

775. A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting for the consideration of Congress, deficiency and supplemental estimates of appropriations for the Department of the Interior, for the fiscal year 1937 and prior years amounting to $2,344,701.80, together with drafts of proposed provisions pertaining to existing appropriations (H. Doc. No. 445); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII,

Mr. O'CONNOR: Committee on Rules. House Resolution 485. Resolution providing for the consideration of Senate Joint Resolution 230; without amendment (Rept. No. 2395). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma: Committee on Indian Affairs. H. R. 7764. A bill to relieve restricted Indians whose lands have been taxed or have been lost by failure to pay taxes, and for other purposes; with amendment (Rept. No. 2398). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. WERNER: Committee on Indian Affairs. H. R. 9156. A bill to define the exterior boundary of the Ute Indian Reservation in the State of Utah, and for other purposes; with amendment (Rept. No. 2399). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. DEMPSEY: Committee on Insular Affairs. 12119. A bill to amend sections 13 and 19 of the act of March 2, 1917, entitled "An act to provide a civil government for Porto Rico, and for other purposes"; without amendment (Rept. No. 2400). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. ENGLEBRIGHT: Committee on the Public Lands. H. R. 12033. A bill authorizing and directing the Secretary of the Interior to sell to the city of Los Angeles, Calif., certain public lands in California; and granting rights-of-way over public lands and reserve lands to the city of Los Angeles in Mono County in the State of California; with amendment (Rept. No. 2401). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. PETERSON of Florida: Committee on the Public Lands. H. R. 10641. A bill providing for the protection and conservation of equities, easements, or rights accruing to the Government because of lands granted for the purpose of aiding in the building or establishment of railroads; with amendment (Rept. No. 2402). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. BLAND: Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries. S. 3789. An act authorizing the Secretary of Commerce to convey the Charleston Army Base Terminal to the city of Charleston, S. C.; with amendment (Rept. No. 2403). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII,

Mr. ROGERS of New Hampshire: Committee on Military Affairs. H. R. 5503. A bill authorizing the President to order Maj. E. P. Duval before a retiring board for a hearing of his case, and upon the findings of such board determine whether or not he be placed on the retired list with the rank and pay held by him at the time of his resignation; without amendment (Rept. No. 2397). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. KNUTE HILL: A bill (H. R. 12253) to amend acts fixing the rate of payment of irrigation construction costs on the Wapato Indian irrigation project, Yakima, Wash., and for other purposes; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. MAAS: A bill (H. R. 12254) providing for naval and Marine Corps aviators who have qualified prior to April 1, 1917, and since disqualified for active duty to be advanced one grade on the retired list; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. RANKIN: A bill (H. R. 12255) to amend section 601 of the World War Adjusted Compensation Act; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. SMITH of Washington: A bill (H. R. 12256) to provide for the construction of a post-office building at Pe Ell, Wash.; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. SUMNERS of Texas: A bill (H. R. 12257) to extend the jurisdiction of the United States Court for China to offenses committed on the high seas; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. GREEN: A bill (H. R. 12258) for the improvement and protection of the beaches along the shores of the United States; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. DALY: A bill (H. R. 12259) authorizing the appointment of an additional circuit court judge for the third circuit; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. HEALEY: A bill (H. R. 12260) prescribing a condition precedent to the award of certain contracts by Federal agencies; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. RANDOLPH: A bill (H. R. 12261) to aid and promote scientific research of a basic character upon which the inception and development of new industries or the expansion of established industries is dependent, to encourage increased effort on the part of individuals toward the further advancement of scientific knowledge and discovery, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma (by departmental request): A bill (H. R. 12262) to reserve certain public domain in Montana as an addition to the Rocky Boy Indian Reservation; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. ELLENBOGEN: A bill (H. R. 12263) to further amend the National Housing Act, to provide relief for merchants who suffered losses by flood, earthquake, conflagration, tornado, cyclone, hurricane, or other catastrophe occurring in the year 1936, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. REED of New York: A bill (H. R. 12264) for a Coast Guard station at or near Dunkirk, N. Y.; to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. DARDEN: A bill (H. R. 12265) to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to proceed with the construction of certain public works, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. SCOTT: Resolution (H. Res. 486) to appoint a select committee to investigate elevator accidents and fatalities, which have occurred in the District of Columbia; to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. O'CONNELL: Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 566) providing for the contribution by the United States to the expense of the tercentenary celebration by the State of Rhode Island; to the Committee on the Library.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 1 of rule XXII. private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. BLAND: A bill (H. R. 12266) for the relief of Carrie M. Clements, widow, and Margie P. Clements, James D. Clements, and Elieza V. Ball, children of Dr. David Oscar Clements, deceased; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. BELL: A bill (H. R. 12267) for the relief of Francis M. Heinzelmann; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. CROWTHER: A bill (H. R. 12268) for the relief of Maj. Lyman S. Frasier; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. DARDEN: A bill (H. R. 12269) directing the Court of Claims to reopen the case of William G. Maupin, Jr., and others against the United States, docket no. 34681, and to correct the errors therein, if any, by an additional judgment against the United States; to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 12270) directing the Court of Claims to reopen certain cases and to correct the errors therein, if any, by additional judgments against the United States; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. HANCOCK of New York: A bill (H. R. 12271) granting an increase of pension to Frances Eggleston; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HAMLIN: A bill (H. R. 12272) for the relief of Frank Wheelock Plummer Breed; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. HEALEY: A bill (H. R. 12273) for the relief of Thomas Edward Connors; to the Committee on War Claims. Also, a bill (H. R. 12274) for the relief of John McAnneny; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. McANDREWS: A bill (H. R. 12275) granting a pension to George McCauley; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. MEAD: A bill (H. R. 12276) for the relief of John Bernard Stroh; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. PETTENGILL: A bill (H. R. 12277) granting a pension to Anna Mendel; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. RYAN: A bill (H. R. 12278) for the relief of Jacob N. Lahr and others; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. THOMPSON: A bill (H. R. 12279) granting a pension to Bertha J. Runck; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. WILCOX: A bill (H. R. 12280) to amend Private Act No. 210, approved August 13, 1935, by substituting as payee therein the Clark Dredging Co., in lieu of the Bowers Southern Dredging Co.; to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 12281) for the relief of Harry Kukofsky; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

10711. By Mr. PFEIFER: Petition of the Central Trades and Labor Council of Greater New York and vicinity, concerning the Pearson bill (H. R. 9258); to the Committee on the Civil Service.

10712. Also, petition of the International Association of Machinists, New York City, concerning the Wheeler-Crosser bills (S. 4174 and H. R. 11609); to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

10713. By Mr. HESS: Memorial of the House of Representatives of the Ninety-first General Assembly of Ohio, memorializing Congress to assume the local assessments of the Muskingum watershed conservancy district; to the Committee on Flood Control.

10714. By Mr. KENNEY: Petition of the New Jersey branch of the International Order of the King's Daughters and Sons, Inc. (approximately 1,600 members), endorsing the Pettengill and Neely bill (compulsory block booking and blind selling of motion pictures); to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

10715. Also, resolution of the Polish Peoples' Home in Passiac, N. J., favoring the enactment of the Ellenbogen national textile act, unanimously adopted at a mass meeting of textile workers, March 15, 1936; to the Committee on Labor.

10716. By Mr. LAMNECK: Petition of Mrs. Clyde J. Wells, president, and Mrs. S. D. Bradner, secretary, Northern Junior Circle, the Child Conservation League, of Ohio, urging early hearings on motion-picture bills now before Congress; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

10717. By Mr. MEAD: Petition of the Assembly of the State of New York, that the Congress of the United States be, and it hereby is, respectfully memorialized to appropriate annually to the use of the State of New York the sum of $2,500,000 for the maintenance and operating expenses of the New York State canal system; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

10718. Also, petition of the Chamber of Commerce, Hamburg, N. Y., opposing the Wheeler-Crosser bills (S. 4174 and H. R. 11609) affecting railroads, express companies, and certain other common carriers; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

SENATE

TUESDAY, APRIL 14, 1936

(Legislative day of Monday, Feb. 24, 1936)

IMPEACHMENT OF HALSTED L. RITTER

The Senate, sitting for the trial of the articles of impeachment against Halsted L. Ritter, judge of the United States District Court for the Southern District of Florida, met at 12 o'clock meridian.

The managers on the part of the House, Hon. HATTON W. SUMNERS, of Texas; Hon. RANDOLPH PERKINS, of New Jersey; and Hon. Sam Hobbs, of Alabama, accompanied by the clerk of the Committee on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives, Elmore Whitehurst, and by Thomas M. Mulherin, special agent, Federal Bureau of Investigation, Department of Justice, appeared in the seats provided for them.

The respondent, Halsted L. Ritter, with his counsel, Frank P. Walsh, Esq., and Carl T. Hoffman, Esq., and R. O. Cullen, Esq., of Miami, Fla., associated with Mr. Hoffman, appeared in the seats assigned them.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Sergeant at Arms by proclamation will open the proceedings of the Senate sitting for the trial of the articles of impeachment.

The Sergeant at Arms made the usual proclamation.

On request of Mr. ASHURST, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of the Senate, sitting for the trial of the articles of impeachment, for Monday, April 13, 1936, was dispensed with, and the Journal was approved.

LIST OF ADDITIONAL WITNESSES SUBPENAED

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate a communication from the Sergeant at Arms, which will be printed in the RECORD.

> SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES, OFFICE OF THE SERGEANT AT ARMS, Washington, D. C., April 14, 1936.

Hon. JOHN N. GARNER,

Vice President, and President of the Senate,

My Dear Mr. Vice President of the Senate,
Washington, D. C.

My Dear Mr. Vice President: There are attached hereto a list of additional witnesses for the Government submitted to me by the managers on the part of the House of Representatives, and a list of additional witnesses for the respondent submitted to me by his counsel, all of said witnesses to be subpensed for the trial of Halsted L. Ritter, United States district judge for the southern district of Florida.

There are also attached beauty

There are also attached hereto original subpenas served on the witnesses desired by both parties, said subpenas being duly served as shown by my report on the back thereof, and return made according to law. cording to law

CHESLEY W. JURNEY. Sergeant at Arms.

ADDITIONAL LIST OF WITNESSES SUBPENAED FOR THE RESPONDENT Mrs. Eleanor I. Balsley, 1535 Leland Avenue, Chicago, Ill.; Louis P. Elsner, 72 Wall Street, New York, N. Y.; James M. Owens, Jr., tax assessor, West Palm Beach, Fla.

ADDITIONAL LIST OF WITNESSES SUBPENAED FOR THE UNITED STATES Carl Tegder, Orlando, Fla.

Mr. ROBINSON. I suggest the absence of a quorum. The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Clark	Keyes	Radcliffe
Ashurst	Connally	King	Reynolds
Austin	Coolidge	La Follette	Robinson
Bachman	Copeland	Logan	Russell
Bailey	Couzens	Lonergan	Schwellenbach
Barbour	Davis	Long	Sheppard
Barkley	Donahey	McAdoo	Shipstead
Benson	Duffy	McGill	Smith
Bilbo	Fletcher	McKellar	Steiwer
Black	Frazier	McNary	Thomas, Okla.
Bone	George	Maloney	Thomas, Utah
Borah	Gerry	Metcalf	Townsend
Brown	Gibson	Minton	Truman
Bulkley	Glass	Moore	Tydings
Bulow	Guffey	Murphy	Vandenberg
Burke	Hale	Murray	Van Nuvs
Byrd	Harrison	Norris	Wagner
Byrnes	Hastings	Nye	Walsh
Capper	Hatch	O'Mahoney	Wheeler
Caraway	Hayden	Overton	White
Carey	Holt	Pittman
Chavez	Johnson	Pope

Mr. ROBINSON. I announce that the Senator from Alabama [Mr. Bankhead], the Senator from Colorado [Mr. Cos-TIGAN], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCarran], and the Senator from Florida [Mr. TRAMMELL] are absent because of illness, and that the junior Senator from Illinois [Mr. Die-TERICH], the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. Gore], the senior Senator from Illinois [Mr. Lewis], and the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. NEELY] are unavoidably detained from the Senate.

Mr. AUSTIN. I announce that the Senator from Iowa [Mr. Dickinson] is necessarily absent.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Eighty-six Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

(At this point, as in legislative session, on request of Mr. ASHURST, the special order set for Wednesday, Apr. 15, was postponed to Wednesday, Apr. 29. Mr. Ashurst's request appears elsewhere in today's Record under the appropriate heading.)

(At this point, on request of Mr. Robinson and by unanimous consent, the Senate, sitting for the trial of the articles of impeachment, suspended its session in order that the Senate might receive a message from the President of the United States by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries. The message having been received, and noted elsewhere in the RECORD of today's legislative proceedings, on motion of Mr. ROBINSON, the Senate resumed its session sitting for the trial of the articles of impeachment.)

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Do the counsel for the respondent desire to proceed with the argument?

Mr. WALSH (of counsel). Yes, Mr. President.

ARGUMENT IN BEHALF OF RESPONDENT BY FRANK P. WALSH, ESQ. (CONT.)

Mr. WALSH (of counsel). May it please the Court, as I concluded the remarks I was making yesterday evening I was at the point of adverting to the circumstances surrounding the making of the final decree in the Whitehall case.

Before I do that, however, I wish to call attention to one fact, one circumstance I think is overwhelming in this record, which shows that the conduct of Judge Ritter-and I think I can rest the whole case on that point—was absolutely right and was so considered by everybody connected with the litigation, including everyone who had any objection to the procedure followed in that case. Remember this was a class case. It was brought for the benefit, not of one bondholder, but of all. Once it was started, no matter who objected, it could not be stopped. There was an intervener. I do not care how the intervener got in, if the judge saw him simply as an intervener, he was powerless to stop the suit, and on that proposition there is no countervailing evidence in this case.

There is a statute that fully protects each litigant, namely, title 28, section 25, of the Judicial Code, and I say that the remedy provided by the Congress of the United States in this matter is the most effective remedy that one can find in any court in the Union. It provides that if, in the judgment of any of the parties, the court is biased or prejudiced against or in favor of any party to the suit, that party has a right to file an affidavit.

It does not require, as in an ordinary case, a supporting affidavit; it requires nothing else but the certificate of the lawyer that the action is in good faith; and, again, when that is filed, it does not require any hearing, but the act of the Congress of the United States is mandatory. It says that the judge shall go no further in that case; in other words, that he shall stop in his tracks, and that the senior judge of the circuit court of appeals for that circuit shall designate another judge to hear that case.

Now, I say Mr. Lautmann, an eminent lawyer, and all of the other lawyers who appeared, including Mr. Holland himself, of course, knew that, and if it was even suspected that there was anything wrong with this man, they had their remedy then and there.

But when we come to consider the matter after all of these years, such things as that are overlooked. I call your attention to it, and I have only to say that I would stand upon that alone for the basis of my belief, that his judgment was honest and fair, and that he was acting in a judicial capacity in everything he did.

The final decree was presented to the court, initialed by Mr. McPherson, of the firm of Shutts & Bowen. There was nothing in the final decree that was not concurred in by every party to the case, and it represented an agreed settlement on every point. So far as the fee itself is concerned, let me remind you that the managers have had no witness here to testify as to the reasonableness of the fee except Judge Davis.

He swore that, judging from the different allowances that had been made in such cases by State courts in Florida, he believed a reasonable fee would be $50,000 to the attorney for the plaintiff, to the attorney for the mover, to the attorney who carried the matter through to final decree. That is the lowest figure named by any witness before the court, and it exceeds the amount Rankin actually received.

I am not going to accept what my friend Mr. Manager Hobbs said, that these men gathered around like a crowd of vultures to loot the assets and revenues of Whitehall. I do not believe that about Shutts & Bowen. I do not believe it about the Loftin firm. I do not believe it about Lautmann, and God knows I cannot believe it about this honorable man who stood before you and withstood the fire of 62 questions from this floor and manfully and bravely told his story. I take his word alone, but we have in this record supporting evidence in every detail and upon every point.

These gentlemen all came into court and all agreed upon the decree. Mr. McPherson, of the Shutts firm, went to Chicago, and when he took up the matter in Chicago he said that after wiring back to his firm and getting data from them and finding out what had been paid in other cases, he urged $50,000 to $60,000 as a reasonable sum for his fee—because he filed an answer and other papers in the case leading up to the decree.

Who will say in the face of all the evidence and in the face of the law that Shutts & Bowen were vultures and that they had no right to go in there? When it came before the court it was a settled case so far as Judge Ritter was concerned. Judge Akerman said—and common sense would tell one so—that Judge Ritter saw before him the very flower of the Florida bar agreeing, writing their names down there in agreement.

This matter has been referred to as "lawyers splitting fees." That has an ugly connotation. It was no "splitting of fees." It was a division of fees among those who would have had a right to have a judgment separately and to have been heard separately. Mr. McPherson has told you it was the proper thing for the judge to order the whole fee paid to the mover in the case, to the attorney for the plaintiff, and that they should put in the record the division that was made so that for all time to come it would be known.

I am going to drop that matter so far as further argument this morning is concerned. In passing let me say that I am grateful to the Court for the courtesy and toleration which was extended to me in permitting me to suspend temporarily when I did last evening.

We now come to the real vital thing in the case; we come to all there was in the case when I went into it. Mr. Manager Hobbs said he comes into this hearing with a high sense of justice and duty. I give him full credit for doing that. He said that he is acting in this case as an officer of the United States Government and that he is representing 120,000,000 people whose great interest he has at heart. That gives me not only the opportunity, but the duty, to say why I am here.

You heard from the record that we went down to Florida to make an investigation of this case. I represent this respondent, but I represent him by free choice, a choice made after I went to Florida. I am an official of the Government, in a sense, and assuredly I am one of the 120,000,000 people spoken of by my learned friend. I have other duties to perform and I have other urges to go into this or not to go into it just as it pleases me. I am a member of the bar of this country. I am a member of the bar of the Supreme Court of the United States, and have been for more than a generation. I have practiced at the bar of the United States courts for 49 years.

I went into the case with the feeling that I not only represented the respondent in the investigation, but I represented the bar as well. I went in also with the feeling, in addition to that, that I was coming before a court of the most august character that is known to our law. I was coming before a court composed of lawyers to a very great extent. Therefore I went into the matter with great care.

I am prepared to stand here and say that the investigation was made and the results of the investigation, as testified to by one of the witnesses, were brought here under my direction. I asked that there be no random or scattered testimony as to what the real situation was when Judge Ritter retired from the private practice and went upon the bench.

What did Judge Ritter do? Did he sell his business? Did he have a business to sell, or did he sell his sacred honor? I say the result of that investigation, as I shall endeavor to present it to you now, shows that this man had something to sell, that it was his business which he was leaving, and that he comes before this body with his ermine unsullied and with his soul clean.

When this investigation began down there, Judge Ritter gave his account of it and gave it clearly. There has not been anything read from the record, where he was examined and cross-examined, which conflicts in the slightest manner with his statements of what took place there. The House managers began getting statements from witnesses who were put on the stand here. They began getting them from Rankin. What was the net result? He said he got in one account from a client that came into the office, $3,950 in cash; from other clients he collected $2,287. That is, amounts collected as attorney fees since the dissolution of the partnership, $3,950; collected fees by A. L. Rankin from cases pending when Judge Ritter retired and not reserved, $2,287.50; amount collected and pending additional fees, $6,750. So we have from him, gathered together, $12,987 that he collected since that time if he secured the balance of those fees.

Mr. Rankin was asked on the witness stand whether or not he made these statements at the time of the House committee hearings. When I asked the question whether or not he told the investigator for the Government that that was not all the fees but was all that he could remember at that time, Rankin could not recall the facts of his conversation. I had to call Mr. Mulherin, the investigator, as you will remember, to prove what Rankin said at that time. The fact is certified to by the investigator for the Government that it was true that Rankin was not able to remember it all.

So we ask, first, did Judge Ritter have a business there? If he did, is it reasonable to believe that he made a contract for the disposition of that business, valuable business, and that those payments were payments on that contract, or are we to believe without any testimony, on mere suspicion and conjecture, that he was accepting a bribe; that he was taking money for the performance of his official duties? I say that under all the evidence and under all the facts, everything points to the truth of his sworn testimony upon the witness stand.

What did he have to sell? When Rankin was asked about it at the committee hearing in Florida—and you heard the opening statement made by the distinguished managers on the part of the House—he mentioned only a few cases and the impression was given, mistakenly, that their business did not amount to anything. For the first time since this matter was raised you saw where Judge Ritter and I brought from the files and presented here a record of the cases made by Rankin at the time the investigation was had down in Florida. You remember the list on yellow paper, 42 cases.

We went down there; and Judge Ritter himself, with Mr. Rankin, with an accountant, and with Mr. Salisbury, took those records, none of which are complete. You saw the dockets offered in evidence, thick dockets, containing the names of cases that went before and cases that came afterward. They analyzed them from comparison and from memory, and there were 54 cases turned over there. Judge Ritter says that, reasonably pursued and well handled, they would have produced about $20,000.

At this point Mr. Salisbury comes into the case. Mr. Salisbury was a natural witness. He was brought into the case because he went into that office at the very time of dissolution and made an honest attempt to take care of the business, just as the judge had done before he went out of that office. Mr. Salisbury went in there, and he tells you that every one of those cases was there. He tells you that at the beginning he worked on them nights as well as days. He says that in court he represented practically all of the parties in those cases. He says, furthermore, that he did a great deal of the correspondence, the looking up of law, and other matters. So we have it from him that those cases were there, that they were honest cases, that they were productive cases; and if you add together all the statements that have been made about them, checked and rechecked, you will come to the conclusion that those cases were not only worth as a matter of business $20,000, but that Rankin came very near getting that amount out of them. One of them, on a contingent fee, called for the payment of $3,000 if they lostthat is mentioned in the report, and it undoubtedly has been checked by the other side-$3,000 if they lost and $6,000 if they won. It was a contingent-fee case; and the case was finally won 2 or 3 months ago. If you gather together all of these items as they go along, you will find that the recollection and the testimony of the judge at the very beginning of the House investigation checks up with the facts.

I said when I started, and I repeat, that the only suspicious thing about the transaction in respect to the debt incurred in the purchase of the business was that the money was paid in cash. Rankin did that. When the contract was made it was made for a laudable purpose. The judge could not, during his entire tenure of office, until the last case was tried, reasonably be expected to keep track of the business of the firm. The judge had a good position; he was going on the bench. Rankin did not have half a dozen cases of his own in the office-only two or three cases. The cases were virtually all Judge Ritter's cases. Judge Ritter knew Rankin was a man advanced in years. Two years before he had begun life over again. He had not fared well. He had children going through college; and I am going to make that brief by saying that we have introduced into the RECORD a statement given to the investigators for the House managers which showed the expenditure of every dollar that was received by Mr. Rankin out of those fees, and it tells the story which has been told here briefly upon the witness stand. He was paying the mortgage on his home, paying notes upon which he was an endorser, recovering his insurance policies by the payment of his loans. The entire matter is set out there in the record.

Judge Ritter had that in mind, going on the bench, he was not pressing Rankin for payment, and many months elapsed. There is nothing surprising about it when you consider the careless sort of a man Rankin was and how slow he was in his payments. But it was not a matter that Judge Ritter thought he should press Rankin for; and Judge Ritter swears, and I believe him, that there was nothing in the whole transaction which indicated that the fee that was collected had anything to do with the partial payment. I say that if the fee was collected as the testimony shows, and paid upon the same day, it is an evidence of the innocence of the transaction.

If it was a subterranean thing, if it was something that was to be hidden and kept away from the public, if this respondent had sold himself for a miserable $5,000 or $2,500. would Rankin have walked in there as he did? The banks were in a bad condition. What did Rankin do? He went to the bank with the representative of Shutts & Bowen; and instead of paying them merely the amount he owed them out of the first fee, he paid them something like $2,500 over and above that. He had a large check. He was getting the money out of the bank. He went to the judge and made him a partial payment upon his debt. You can see the other debts he paid, and whether or not they were pressing, if you care to look at them. Rankin gave the money to the judge in cash. The judge asked Rankin why he did not give him a check, and Rankin said because if the bank cleared a check for the amount the bank people might talk about it; and at that time, no doubt, having in mind the payment of the fee on that very day, he concluded that he would not do it.

The judge took the money. Had he been a scoundrel, how many ways would there not have been of getting the money? If he had been selling himself, his honor, his judicial character, his opinions, and everything else he had sworn to hold sacred, do you believe he would have just taken the money and later put $2,000 of it in the bank, on the following Monday? He said he kept $500 out; and that everybody in Miami was doing it at that time. They had to keep something on hand. He said he put $500 in the strong box in his office, in his chambers, and there it remained, and the little accumulations that his wife had from her pin money went in that box; and finally, several months afterward, he put the money in the bank. To say that was not an honest transaction is not true; to say that means, of course, to disregard all the positive and direct evidence in the case.

The other payments came to be made, and they were made in three installments. Would you say that this man had sold himself to Rankin on the installment plan—$2,000, $2,500, $200, and $300?

Finally the whole amount of the debt is paid. I have here this little receipt, dated January 28, 1932, placed in the Record as evidence. And I desire now to call your attention, as reasoning persons, to the meaning of it. Judge Ritter said he told Rankin that he would give him a receipt. Rankin said it would not be necessary; the judge could give him a receipt when the whole amount was paid, when he paid the balance of the debt; so it was paid in installments, and on January 28, 1932, the judge gives Rankin a receipt for $300 in full payment of the debt. That is either true or it is a fabrication. That is either true or it is manufactured. This is an intelligent man. This is a man said to have every qualification; and he stands here and demonstrates his qualifications in going over the entire Whitehall case and every other charge against him.

Do you believe that if these men were fabricating something after this investigation commenced that there would not have been a receipt here covering this entire matter, covering the payment of the whole $5,000? If this defense were fabricated, when they heard of the investigation, they could have dated one little receipt back to cover all the payments made from 1929 to 1932.

If this defense were fabricated, would they not have had a receipt for the whole thing? Why, they could have had a detailed inventory of what was sold and a written contract covering the dissolution. I say that receipt stamps the transaction itself as being exactly what Judge Ritter says it was. He swears to it; Rankin swears to it; and we produce the very property that was sold. So, is it credible to believe that Judge Ritter was selling himself and his honor; or is it more natural to believe, this showing being made of what those cases were, and all about them, that he was selling his business, just as he swore he was doing?

I say that testimony alone is credible. It comports with the ordinary affairs of life; and I say, when your powers of analysis come to be applied to the matter, the idea that Judge Ritter was taking a bribe or acting in a corrupt manner is absolutely incredible.

So much for that. Now, let us see what Mr. Salisbury says about it. Mr. Salisbury remained in that office for about 2 years or more. He saw the results. He knew the business. He was telling the truth when he testified here. That is the deduction I draw and will ever draw from his testimony. He naturally would know about this transaction. He had gone into the office and he had a percentage on the business that was to come in. The judge was his benefactor; Salisbury was the companion and the friend of the judge's own son. Salisbury came in there, and Rankin did not pay him from time to time as he earned the 15 percent; so Salisbury-he is a young man, only 10 years at the bar now-went to see Judge Ritter, the most natural thing in the world, and complained about Rankin. The judge told Salisbury that he believed in Rankin's honesty, but that he was very slow; and told Salisbury upon that occasion, "He has not yet paid me for the interest in the business which I sold him at the time of the dissolution."

Again, as time went on, Rankin did not pay Salisbury, and the young man said he was dunning Rankin for the money. He says he went to Rankin and tried to get Rankin to pay him, and that Rankin told him he could not pay him; he had paid the mortgage on his house, he had paid this, that, and the other, and he had paid the $5,000 to Judge Ritter, the consideration for which he purchased that business.

Mr. Salisbury was asked whether he was not a good friend of Judge Ritter. He was. He was the judge's appointee as special master. Gentlemen, that young man either told the truth or he falsified. There are no two ways about that. He testified in detail and he testified positively, and I stand before this honorable Court this morning and say that that young man cannot be accused of perjury. He bears the stamp of honesty upon his features and in his every characteristic. He has been at the bar 10 years, and in that time he has been selected by the people of two great, populous counties in the State of Florida to occupy the position of State's attorney.

I shall now touch a little on the minor matters. We will take the Mulford case. The judge wrote a letter to Mulford. He was enthusiastic. The case had been won. He received a report, and he saw the report from Judge Chillingworth that it was decided in all respects in his favor. He had conducted that case all the way through. Mr. Mulford was there. He looked to me as though he was an honest man, and he comes in and tells the whole story. He was satisfied with it. The case had been won and won by Judge Ritter's conduct of it in the State court. Originally the fee agreed upon was $4,000, but a new element came into it out of which they might have lost the entire property, and it was carried to success in the lower court.

Now I wish to answer, as I speed along, the insinuation, which was an unworthy one, that that fee and those expenses were not divided with Judge Ritter's partner, Mr. Rankin. There is no such evidence in this case. You heard the testimony here of Judge Chillingworth, and if there was any doubt—we have his report here—that when that was finally settled, the total fee, $8,000, was allowed by the court.

Of course, the $2,000 which Mr. Mulford paid would be reimbursed out of that fund; he would have that much less to pay. But the $2,000 that was still owed to Rankin was paid out of that. He collected it, and following that there was an appeal, and Rankin did every single thing in defending against that appeal.

Now let us consider the letter in this matter. I will say that it is pretty hard, when one has been in a case over a period of several years, to disconnect himself. He wrote that letter, but the testimony is—if you believe Mr. Mulford, if you believe Mr. Brodek, his attorney, if you believe Judge Ritter, and if you believe Rankin—that Judge Ritter did not do a thing further in the case.

I claim that all he is charged with in this respect is that he practiced law. Do you believe that it would be a proper finding against this man, who attended to an entire case, to hold that he should walk away and not confer with that man? It was not in his court, it was not in the Federal court, and he owed Mulford a duty, and he owed Mr. Brodek a duty.

They say he practiced law because there was a letter written saying that a compromise was offered. Is that practicing law? Did they not have a right to ask him, though sitting on that bench, whether he thought that was a proper settlement or not? But how did that turn out? Unless you believe that these men perjured themselves on the witness stand, it turned out this way, that when that was submitted by letter to the attorney he said that Rankin was unnecessarily alarmed, that he believed it would surely be decided in their favor in the court of appeals. Therefore, it was not necessary for Judge Ritter to pass on it; and Judge Ritter did not pass on it.

Unless you wish to say that a man who goes on the bench and has attended to the business of another man successfully for a long time could not advise with counsel and could not advise with his former client, then you have to acquit Judge Ritter of anything wrong in that respect.

Let us consider now the Francis matter. Francis was Judge Ritter's bosom friend. The gift he received from him, the present he received from him, was like one received from a brother. I say here and now that if you put a bad interpretation on such a matter, you will have to reject many things that have been done with equal innocence by other men upon the bench. One of the most upright and beloved men who ever sat on the Supreme Court of the United States received a bequest for life of $10,000 a year. It came from a great foundation which might be put under fire any day. It was national in its character, and he was an honest man. Of course, Judge Ritter accepted that gift; and had any case arisen in which Mr. Francis was interested, the judge would have stepped aside undoubtedly; but there was no possibility of such a contingency. Mr. Francis never had a case in the Federal court before or after that. The certificate of the clerk of the court is in evidence showing that neither Mr. Mulford nor Mr. Francis ever had a single piece of litigation before the Southern District Court of Florida in which Judge Ritter sits.

Now, as to the charge that in his relations with Mr. Francis, Judge Ritter was practicing law. The first letter written by Judge Ritter to Gedney said, "You will recall that in 1928 you promised to give Mr. Francis a chance to repurchase a certain lot that had gone through bankruptcy." He urged him to do so. The promise was there. This was his friend. Would you call that practicing law? They could not even get Gedney to say that Judge Ritter took any part in it. When he was asked the direct question, all he could say was: "He was there." The judge did want to see that carried out. He wanted to see it carried out in a friendly manner, and he was there for that purpose. Could you say that was practicing law and therefore that he should be found guilty on a specification such as that?

Here was a man who had been in the practice for many years, 30 years in Colorado, and 4 years, I believe, in Florida. Of all the business he had, of all the things he did that needed to be cleaned up and cleared up, there was the Francis case and there was the Mulford case. His whole life prior to that time was found to be clean, not subject to the slightest insinuation. From that time down to the present time, after a most rigid inquiry extending over 3 years, nothing could be found against his honor, nothing could be found against the way in which he carried on his judicial duties on the bench.

When this investigation is made, what do we find? Is this a judge who is arrogant? Is this a judge who is partial to one side or the other, an injunction judge, or an anti-injunction judge? Is this a man who has favorites, and who gives certain cases to them improperly? I say he was not giving a case to any power or influence when he was giving it to the young man who appeared before you, Mr. Salisbury. Whatever recognition the judge gave him was accorded, I believe, for a purpose that would spring from an honest heart and a proper attitude toward a young lawyer at the bar.

His whole life was found to be clean up to the point covered by the charges related to events in 1929. Now they come here in the last minute with this "catch-all" article. If this man is acquitted of the charges that precede it, as I believe the facts developed show that he should be, as his innocence demands, I say it would be an outrageous thing to find him guilty under that seventh article. There is nothing in the seventh article except what grew out of some transactions in 1929, not one that is not clearly and cleanly explained.

I want to say that this ought to be taken into consideration. Whatever charge is brought here, whatever claim is brought here, you heard the judge testify in each of them. He was meticulously fair and candid about it. He could have given his opinion here to this honorable body that he had nothing to do with the very charge that brought him here—the one that has since been withdrawn.

Now I shall address myself to those here who know something about income taxes, because we have received very little light from the other side on this subject. Judge Ritter is charged with willfully evading the payment of income taxes, first, a tax for the year 1929. I have made a few notes about it. What do we find? No evidence was produced, not a particle of evidence, except what is developed from the examination of the judge himself. He himself furnishes to his accusers, or to his investigators, more properly speaking, the facts regarding his income tax for 1929.

He shows you in his testimony that he has accounted for every particle of income he received in 1929. He explains it. He reported the $2,000 check which he received from Brodek. The other check from Mulford, less expenses, was likewise reported. He had the list of the expenses here. Mr. Mulford also swore to it. Since he owed no tax, it was not necessary for him to report it at all. But he nevertheless did report the two-thousand-three-hundred-odd dollars, and showed he owned no tax after his personal exemption was allowed.

The member of the board of managers who addressed you yesterday said that, no matter how small it is, he should be convicted on it; that there was $168 in expenses which the judge could not now recall. I do not belittle it, you understand. If he willfully avoided paying a tax, if the evidence shows that he evaded paying the tax, the tax on the $168 would have been $6.25. I should imagine those expenses were such things as allowances are received for—gasoline taxes, amusement taxes, or something like that.

But it goes far beyond that now. This is a criminal charge. If it had been 10 times $168, he was still within his exemption. If, as I have stated, the amount had been 10 times as great, it still was less than $3,500, which is the personal exemption allowed by law, and he would not be guilty.

Gentlemen, all I can say to you is that if this case were being tried in an ordinary court a demurrer to the evidence would be sustained. The law is that those bringing these charges must prove the receipt of income; they must prove the amount that was paid out against that income; they must prove what his exemptions were; they must prove what his allowances were; they must prove a tax liability. Those matters would all have been looked into, and as we look into them in this case there is no tax liability. When Judge Ritter swears he did not defraud the Government of a dollar, when he says that the $6.25 tax was not due because his exemptions exceeded that sum, the court would direct a verdict in his favor.

In 1930 Judge Ritter had a loss which, added to his taxes and other expenditures, gave him a leeway of $4,600 over and above the income that he could be charged with having received. He testified to this, and you ought to believe that he testified to the truth, for a charge must be supported by something greater, I say, than the mere assertion of counsel, and nothing else has been introduced in this case in support of that charge. If Judge Ritter were found guilty upon that charge, which was filed in this Court on March 30, 1936—after he came here to defend himself against the other charges—that would be a monstrous thing. Those bringing the charge did not, nor could they, make proof that Judge Ritter owed his Government a cent of income taxes or that Judge Ritter did anything improper in the filing of his return. It ought to be the pleasure of this body to acquit him of the charges with respect to income taxes, because the law protects him, because he is innocent of any offense in that regard.

Take this whole case in its entirety, gentlemen. I have tried to argue it on the facts. I have drawn no conclusions which I did not honestly believe came from these facts. My argument is backed up by the belief that you must recognize and accept his innocence as he stood here, a brave and manly man, testifying in opposition to these charges which have been made against him. It will not do to say that he undermined the dignity or the honor of the court. He did nothing in his whole career in Florida, according to the witnesses, which would belittle that dignity or besmirch his honor.

There is another thing I wish to call to your attention. I know and you know that a judge ought to have a good reputation. In this case, however, where a charge is made against his integrity, where a charge of corruption is made against him, he put his reputation in that community in evidence before this body.

Judge Akerman swore voluntarily that he knew this man; he occupied the bench with him; he occupied the same chambers; he changed positions with him when other judges were called in. Judge Akerman testified that Judge Ritter's reputation has always been of the highest, and he holds that opinion still.

Let us take Francis P. Fleming, who stands at the very top of the Florida bar. Knowing this man, knowing him through his entire career, Mr. Fleming swore that Judge Ritter has every attribute of an honest and an upright judge; that he has courage; that he has devotion to duty; and that he has honesty—the greatest attribute of all.

Gentlemen, he is in your hands. You can send him forth from this place for the remaining days of his life to suffer a torture worse than any condemnation within the power of any other court. You can send him out to meet that wife who went out there to Colorado with him and later to Florida, as well as his children, with the brand of shame upon his forehead. The authority to do that thing is in your hands. But I say to you, members of this great Court, that if you do that, in the face of the overwhelming proof of the evidence, you will be sending out of this courtroom the most gravely wronged and completely innocent man who ever had to face trial in a court of justice.

I am profoundly grateful for the consideration which Judge Ritter and all of us have received at the hands of this Court and for the genuine assistance which was given to us by the questions which were propounded individually by the Members of the Court.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The managers on the part of the House will make the closing argument.

CLOSING ARGUMENT OF MR. MANAGER SUMMERS ON BEHALF OF THE MANAGERS ON THE PART OF THE HOUSE

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Mr. President and members of the Court, first I wish to express the great appreciation of the managers on the part of the House for the courtesy and indulgence of the Court during the trial of this matter.

We come now to the consideration of as important a matter as can be dealt with by Members of the Senate who now occupy these places of responsibility as members of a high Court of Impeachment. There is not in the constitutional structure of this country any guardianship of the purity and fitness of the Federal judiciary except that which rests with this august body in the last instance.

With regard to ourselves, with regard to the President, the people have reserved the power of direct control. They have paid to the persons constituting this Court the high compliment of trusting to you the power and giving to you the responsibility of preserving in this country a judiciary which can command the respect and confidence of the American people.

We do not assume the responsibility, Members of this distinguished Court, of proving that the respondent in this case is guilty of a crime as that term is known to criminal jurisprudence. We do assume the responsibility of bringing before you a case, proven facts, the reasonable and probable consequences of which are to cause the people to doubt the integrity of the respondent presiding as a judge among a free people.

We take the position, first, that justice must be done to the respondent. The respondent must be protected against those who would make him afraid. But we take the position also that when a judge on the bench, by his own conduct, does that which makes an ordinary person doubt his integrity, doubt whether his court is a fair place to go, doubt whether he, that ordinary person, will get a square deal there; doubt whether the judge will be influenced by something other than the sworn testimony, that judge must go.

This august body writes the code of judicial ethics. This Court fixes the standard of permissible judicial conduct. It will not be, it cannot be, that someone on the street corner will destroy the confidence of the American people in the courts of this country. That cannot happen if the courts are kept clean. If confidence in the courts of this country is destroyed it is going to be destroyed from within by the judges themselves. I declare to you, standing in my place of responsibility, that that is one thing which neither the House nor the Senate can permit to be tampered with or which they can be easy about.

We are sorry to go into a case like this. It is not a pleasant matter to stand here and ask that an incumbent of the Federal bench be separated from his responsibilities. The Government has been very good to this respondent and to all judges. The United States gives this respondent a position for life, subject to but one condition. He does not have to undertake any campaign. When he grows old he continues to draw his salary. What does the Government ask? It imposes just one condition, and that is that the judge shall behave himself, that his conduct shall be good. Is that too much to ask? Destroy the confidence of the people in those who occupy judicial positions and you destroy the confidence of the people in the courts. That is not something to be dealt with lightly, and no man on the bench has any right by doing questionable things to put in peril the confidence of the people in the courts. That is a high crime.

He takes "the veil"; he cuts himself loose. That is the plan of the Constitution; it is the plan and the philosophy of any government of a free people. He does not have to bother about his income. His office, his place of business, his help, everything the people pay for. He is not appointed to reign over a free people. He is appointed to serve the people, and they say to him, "If you behave, if you will only be good, we will make a contract with you for life, and we will fix that contract in the Constitution." Under such circumstances he does not have any right to be flirting on the outside with anything that will bring into question the integrity of his judicial conduct.

Now, let us look at this case. I do not know anything about what happened in Colorado, but when we see this respondent in this record he is down there in Florida as the secretary of a real-estate concern. After that he forms a copartnership with Mr. Rankin. Two years and three months after that time he occupies a position on the Federal bench, and when the Government put him there, when the people put him there, they said to him, "All we ask of you is to behave yourself." Good behavior! What does that mean? It means obey the law, keep yourself free from questionable conduct, free from embarrassing entanglements, free from acts which justify suspicion; hold in clean hands the scales of justice. That means that he shall not take chances that would tend to cause the people to question the integrity of the court, because where doubt enters confidence departs. Is not that sound? When a judge on the bench, by his own conduct, arouses a substantial doubt as to his judicial integrity he commits the highest crime that a judge can commit under the Constitution. It is not essential to prove guilt. There is nothing in the Constitution and nothing in the philosophy of a free government that holds that a man shall continue to occupy office until it can be established beyond a reasonable doubt that he is not fit for the office. It is the other way. When there is resulting from the judge's conduct a reasonable doubt as to his integrity he has no right to stay longer. He has forfeited his right. It is the high duty of this Court to write the judgment and make effective the terms of that contract.

Let us look a little further. Judge Ritter goes on the bench. The Whitehall case comes on. We look across and see Mr. Rankin, the judge's former partner. Senators saw him on the witness stand. This respondent did not have to take Mr. Rankin as his partner, but he selected him, and he swore on the witness stand: "We expected to spend the rest of our lives practicing law there." But-mark this, Members of the Court—when the respondent was recommending Mr. Rankin for another place on the Federal bench, vacant in Alabama, he said: "We continued with the understanding that Judge Rankin might at any time go back to Alabama. Now you begin to get a picture of the respondent who swore on the witness stand, in the presence of this honorable Court, that when he and Rankin formed the copartnership they expected it to last for life, but in his letters to the Attorney General, written by him, a judge on the bench, with the prestige of his position, to a copartner in governmental responsibility, who had a right to depend upon every word that came from the judge; he said:

I understand the real difficulty in considering his appointment is the fact that he took up his residence in Florida and abandoned his Alabama residence, but I know that he never fully did that and always considered himself a resident of Alabama and voted there.

We, however, produced the witness, Rankin, himself, who testified that since 1926 he has been registered as a voter in the State of Florida. Do you think the judge, having been a partner of the man, did not know that? Birds of the same feather, they say, are disposed to flock together. Rankin's residence was in question. The respondent, when this little library matter was in issue, swore that a lifetime partnership was in contemplation between him and Rankin. That would help out in his claim to a half interest in Rankin's books. When Rankin is trying to get into the judgeship business in Alabama the respondent writes the Attorney General:

We continued with the understanding that Judge Rankin might at any time go back to Alabama.

If that statement is true, the oath is false.

I am not going to attempt to follow all that we charge; I am going to try to follow this respondent. I repeat, it is not a pleasant task. No; I am sorry that the facts are as they are; but we are dealing now with the question of the integrity of this judge. We are dealing with the sanctity of judicial position. Is there a person constituting this Court who will say if a judge himself does not possess integrity that there is anything else upon which a free people can base confidence? Let us follow the respondent into another matter. He wrote a letter with reference to one of the cases out of which grows the law-practicing charge. Now listen to me, Members of the Court: This is a serious hour and I tell you that if the confidence in the judiciary of this country is destroyed, this Government goes down, and I tell you that the confidence in the Federal judiciary cannot be preserved except by men of sterling integrity, and when a man is given his chance and will not measure up to it, he has got to go. It is too bad, but he has got to go. This is not only a trial of this man but it is a trial of the House and of the Senate—the only places in which the people, by the Constitution, have put the power and responsibility to protect their judiciary against destruction. That is what it means and it means nothing less. In the instance when he is charged with practicing law in violation of Federal law, when he is trying to get $2,000-a judge on the bench, now, mark this, Members of the Courthe had gotten every red cent that his client agreed to pay him. After he became a judge, he wrote his client and said, "I am now a judge on the bench"-he said it twice in the same letter-"and I want $2,000 more than you contracted to give me." Think of it! Was that all? No. He said, "I am going to follow this case through to the end." An appeal was in prospect. He said, "We think D'Esterre is going to ask for a supersedeas bond." Here is a picture of the judge, here is a flashlight of him, in action. I never in my life ran into a case such as this. A litigant, an American citizen, had a right to appeal, and what happens? A man on the bench, a judge, trying to get some more money, says, "We hope to get a supersedeas bond fixed so high that D'Esterre cannot appeal." Think of that conduct on the part of a man on the bench! He would deny to a litigant the right of appeal by persuading another judge to fix an amount beyond his ability to provide. Doing it for money! Doing it in violation of a statute! You heard Judge Chillingworth's testimony. You heard that memorandum read. Nobody denied it.

On the 3d of May, Rankin was seeing about the D'Esterre bond, and on the 4th—what year was that?

Mr. Manager HOBBS. That was in 1929.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. Who else was showing up? Ritter. The Members of the Court have read the statute. Congress, in its wisdom, has said, "Judge, here is your $10,000 salary for life; now you stay out; do not be flirting with this outside business."

This Federal judge cites Judge Chillingworth, a case in which it had been held that $25,000 under the circumstances of that case would not be too much. What does he mean by that? He means, "Judge, I want you to fix the bond at $25,000, and we do not think D'Esterre can get it; and if you can do it it will help me to earn my $2,000." What do you think of that?

That was not all, though it is enough. Rankin wrote a letter to New York, and he said, "Judge Ritter is coming there, and so I want you to look over these cases." Rankin got back a letter from the New York correspondent, who said, "I am going to look over your citations against the day Judge Ritter comes." Judge Ritter went up there and saw this person. We did not have any other witness as to what really took place, and so I suppose they just talked about the climate.

Why did he hesitate to talk about the case? Do you think he hesitated? What do you think? Listen to me, Members of the Court! What is his defense—to this charge of practicing law—what is his only possible defense to the charge that he was practicing law? It is that he did not tell the truth in the letter he wrote applying for the $2,000. That is the only defense on earth that he has to that charge. Does that not arouse a reasonable doubt that he was either practicing law while a Federal judge or not telling the truth? It is not a reasonable doubt; it is a certainty. Is that good behavior?

Let us now take the other charge of practicing law. Upon the days when the Book of Deuteronomy was written judges were warned against just that sort of thing. All the wisdom of the ages has warned against that sort of thing—judges taking money. It does not matter what sort of wrapper it comes in. Francis was an old friend. He had been a friend, lo, these many days, but the respondent told you, Francis never gave the respondent a split penny until the respondent came to be a judge in the jurisdiction where Francis had a million dollars invested.

What do you think of that? Is that good behavior? Are you going to underwrite that? What is the use of spending the people's money trying to find out why this sort of thing is being done if, as respondent asks, you are to underwrite with your approval this conduct and thereby send word to the judges of the Nation that the Senate, the only body on earth that can control the judiciary, says this sort of stuff is all right.

Now is the time and this is the place to do the job that shall preserve for our people the standard of judicial conduct at which public confidence in the courts can live. If confidence in the courts shall die, it will not be some agitator vision in his contract with the people.

on the street corner who will destroy it. It will be the House of Representatives and the Senate of the United States. Whenever you let the word go out from this august body. "We are not going to stand for any such conduct", we will not have that sort of thing happening.

Seven thousand five hundred dollars in cold cash handed to the respondent by Mr. Francis, the owner of a million dollars' worth of property in the respondent's jurisdiction. He had been a friend many years, but not a penny of gift or fee up to that time had been made. Nothing to Ritter the lawyer, $7,500 to Ritter the judge.

Then what happened? The respondent did not make any return of that money in his income-tax return. Counsel for the respondent said something about "when you are doing things in devious ways you keep them hidden." He was right about that. There are certain things that God Almighty has fixed in His big economy by which you may be pretty certain whether a transaction is straight or not. There is something else, when honest men pay an honest debt in this country they do not go around toting $2,500 in cold cash to pay it and then slip it to the creditor behind closed doors in the secrecy of his office where no eye can see except their own and God Almighty's. Neither do honest men receive payments that way. They just do not do it that way. It just does not happen!

I want to get away from this legalistic turn of mind. A gentleman, a great lawyer, has talked to you about everything except what is in this case-no; I will not say that. I take it back. He did talk about the case, but some other things as well. If he had had a good case he would have made a great speech. There is something pathetic about this case. I have seen some of you Members on the floor of the Senate who have manifested every interest and have tried to be as useful to the judge as could be done with propriety, and I am glad of it. I have watched the faces of Senators and it has been interesting to note the manifestations of surprise, of disappointment, and of humiliation as this case has unfolded itself. as this judge has come into plain view—this is a remarkable case. The respondent has walked across the pages of this RECORD. You have been able to see his actions and look into his soul.

They have put his reputation in issue. We have not followed into that road. Reputation is not an issue in the presence of positive facts.

Reputation is something a man gets as much by what he does that people do not find out as by what he does that he causes the people to find out. There are some people who have a way of getting on the housetops when they do good deeds, and going down cellar in their offices, behind closed doors, when they do the other kind of deeds. Reputation is often the doorway which leads to the opportunity to do crooked things.

It is the facts in the case to which I call your attention. We are sorry about it. If it were just a question of the respondent we would say, "Yes; go, and God forgive you." But that is not this case. It is not alone the respondent that is involved. The great big matter which challenges you to lift yourselves above party alliances, above friendship, is this: "My country's courts, my sworn duty, my oath I took, my obligation to this generation and to all the ages that are to come." That is the stupendous responsibility of this hour.

You can come here and legislate; you can do this and you can do that. The permanent consequences may not be important. But by your verdict you, in this matter, fix a code of permissible judicial conduct in this country for this judge and all the judges throughout the length and breadth of our land.

Now I come back to the Whitehall case. That is as remarkable a case as I have ever examined in my life. I do not believe there has ever occurred in the judicial history of this country a case which has tested a judge and portrayed a judge—in more details of the requirements which the necessities of the situation put upon a judge, as did the Whitehall case. In every essential detail of the respondent's conduct in that case he violated the "good behavior" provision in his contract with the people.

Counsel for the respondent made a statement a moment ago, probably inadvertently, to the effect that the transactions which brought this case here had been dismissed. Counsel is mistaken about that. The House may have been overdeliberate. I cannot discuss it, because it would not be fair to the respondent, but it makes it necessary for me to submit this brief statement. The managers are here under the commission of the House to present this case to the Senate sitting for the trial of the articles of impeachment as the case had developed at the time the vote was taken. That is all I can say. That is all it is fair to the respondent to say.

With regard to the Whitehall case, having in mind an observation of counsel for the respondent in which he asked, "Is this a tyrannical judge?" I call your attention to one transaction in this case which I do not believe a single American citizen, who has the slightest instinct and notion that an American citizen ought to have, can look upon without it making every drop of blood in his body boil.

You Members of the Court saw Mr. Holland when he appeared before this body. I do not think anybody who looked into his face failed to recognize that he represented as high a type of New England gentleman as can be found in the whole country. He leaned backward when he testified.

Now, look at the scene! We are here in the courtroom. Here comes Mr. Holland. You are familiar with what Rankin did to him and what he tried to do. Holland wired the judge's partner, who, the judge stated, when he was writing the Attorney General, was as fine a common-law lawyer as there is in the country, a man of the highest integrity, and one who would lift the bench. He would take it with him if he lifted it. I am going to read those letters directly.

Here is Holland before the judge. He is a diffident sort of person. He is a gentleman. He had been trying to get Rankin out. He had fired him just outside the courtroom. Now, listen, as a matter of common sense: The respondent said he did not know Rankin was discharged. Most of you are lawyers. Many of you have been judges. If a plaintiff, a party to a suit, rose and wished to address himself to the court, you would know that he had fired his lawyer. Anybody who has sense would know that. Three or four witnesses testified that they understood Holland to state to the judge that he had discharged Rankin; he did not want anything done about the matter; he wanted the case dismissed.

Holland was a stranger in the judge's jurisdiction. Over that court floated the flag of his Nation, and this man had a right to believe that he would be treated as a decent, free-born American citizen should be treated. But what kind of treatment did he get? The judge looked down at him and said, "Who has bought you off? Who paid you?" And they ask you to underwrite that sort of thing and to say to any judge in this country that he may treat any constituent of yours that way in the future! That is what they are asking you to do. Are you going to do it?

There is another matter. I am going to ask you to read the provisions of the trust deed.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the general order to recess at 1:30 o'clock for lunch be vacated, and that the manager on the part of the House may proceed to the conclusion of his argument.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. I cannot cover all this case. When you come to look at this record, I ask you to examine section 7 of the trust deed, because the respondent on the witness stand attempted to read section 7, and he read all of section 7 except the part of section 7 which showed that he did not have any right to entertain a suit in behalf of those interveners suing for all the bondholders, under the circumstances of that case. I will leave the matter to you on that statement.

Let us look at that case a little further. I am just touching a few high points.

All through this case there has been an attempt to appeal to sympathy in behalf of Sweeny and his partner, Bemis. You have heard it stated over and over again that they put $450,000 into that property, but between their $450,000 and that property was a first mortgage of $2,500,000, and a second mortgage, and a third mortgage. Sweeny and Bemis were out the first little wrinkle that came in the boom in Florida. They were gone.

Here are Rankin and his associates. What had happened? They had ridden the range and they had only been able to get three poor little mavericks into the corral, and one of them had Bemis' brand on it. Hill did not own any bonds. Here are these lawyers. There is Rankin, the judge's partner, standing right there, claiming to be bringing a suit in behalf of the first-mortgage bondholders, and all he had a right to represent after they had scoured the country, was two little bondholders; and when Holland, the man who controlled $50,000 worth of bonds, whom Rankin was claiming to represent, appeared in the court in opposition to these people who had two little bonds, the judge said, "Who has bought you off?" Why did he do that? Because that man was about to come between Rankin and his right to collect a fee. I make that statement upon the evidence. That is what made the judge so angry.

I am not going further into the details of that phase of the case. Rankin filed a bill which Metcalf had written; and between the filing of the bill and the final decree there were only incidental papers filed. Look at the record about that. It was not a contested case. It was settled by agreement; and how was it settled? It was settled by the judge on the bench allowing to Rankin $90,000 of the money of the widows and orphans and the old people and the other people who put their money into those bonds.

There is not a bit of use in hollering our heads off about that sort of stuff if you do what they want you to do in this case—underwrite the practice and say, "Mr. Judge, just go and soak them a little more."

This is no plaything. You are not dealing just with a man; you are dealing with a code of judicial conduct. The judge not only allowed Rankin $50,000, but he gave him $40,000 additional of the bondholders' money. All this talk about reflecting upon these great lawyers is what people do when there is no defense—hide behind a respondent's "greatness" and his "probity." When nothing in reason and justice can come to his defense they have to fall back on "reflection on an honest man." That is not what we are talking about; but the plain fact is that the judge on the bench gave Rankin enough money to retain $50,000 for himself, split up $40,000 with everybody else interested, give some more to Richardson, and he had a little left over; and what did he do with it?

Listen to me, Members of the Court: This is no child's play. Rankin got his order from Ritter for $25,000 about 12 o'clock on Christmas Eve. Right after that he went down to the bank and put the money in the bank; and then he went to the respondent and, behind closed doors, gave him $2,500 in cash, hot from the hand of the judge who had just given it to him. Do you say that is all right? They ask you to underwrite that. Under your oaths, gentlemen of the Court, they ask you to say that that is O. K.; that is all right. Are you going to do it?

We have introduced testimony about the alleged sale of this business; but we are not bound by that. We were able to penetrate behind the doors of the judge's office and find a judge taking a part of the money that he had just given to Rankin from a trust fund in his court. What are you going to do about it?

That is not all. Once more that happened. When Rankin got the allowance of $45,000 from the judge, what would any honest judge do when a man came and asked him to take cash the second time? This respondent took it—$2,000 cash which the judge had given Rankin out of the bondholders' money—and yet he is asking the people of the Nation to have confidence in his judicial integrity. Members of the Court, what cannot a judge do if a judge can take money under these circumstances? There is not any doubt about his taking it. There is no argument about that. He got from Rankin the money that he gave to Rankin; and the money he gave to Rankin he took out of the estate that was being administered in his court.

What do you think of that? What are you going to do about it? There is not a bit of use in excusing it in this case and complaining in other cases because it is done. Here is where you are doing the business, right now.

I say that in fundamental morals there is not one bit of difference between a judge on the bench taking money out of an estate and giving it to a lawyer to make good a bad debt owing to him and the judge who just splits it right straight off the top of the roll. Just think about that. Respondent had a debt which he could not get paid. I am talking of respondent's theory. He gave Rankin the money from a trust estate to pay it with. Is there anyone in this courtroom who thinks that Rankin was worth $90,000 or $50,000 to that estate? I should like to ask him to hold up his hand if there is such a one. Of course, I cannot do that. I would be fined for contempt of court.

The estate was not in the custody of the lawyers. Just put that down, too, will you not? This judge had the solemn, sacred responsibility of holding that estate for the people, many of whom, we know by common experience, had their life savings invested there. How much money did he have a right to take out of it? He had a right to take all the money necessary for an economical and efficient administration of the estate and no more. Is that right? Is that sound? Does that comport with common sense and common

Then, when he reached his hand to the elbow into that estate, and handed over $90,000 to his former partner who was not worth five, whose money was he taking and to whom did he give it? He plundered a trust estate and gave the money to a man who gave him back a part of it. Those facts cannot be controverted. What are you going to do about it? Are you going to say it is all right?

I believe I have covered about all I care to speak of in reference to the Whitehall case. I think I have made all the reference that seemed to me to be pertinent with reference to the two cases of practicing law. Of course, we do not know whether that $7,500 came from practicing law or whether it came as a gift, but the judge is hung on one horn of the dilemma, and no counsel, this eminent counsel or any other counsel on this earth, can extricate him. Will you say one is right and the other is wrong? Will you say that both are right? What are you going to say about it? What are you going to do about it?

Now. I wish to make just one or two more observations about this debt business. This is another dilemma on which the respondent unfortunately is hung. All the testimony shows the condition of Mr. Rankin. The judge first ordered him paid $2,500 out of the assets of the business. The judge did not get any of his so-called debt paid out of that.

Then they perpetrated the grossest sort of an imposition on Judge Akerman. I want to read you the letter in the record about that matter. The letter of the respondent to Judge Akerman said, in substance: "I do not want to be embarrassed by allowing this total fee. I want you to fix the total fee, because this man has been my partner."

Of course, Judge Akerman did not read the order. He just wrote in his name. Rankin was bearing a letter from the respondent who, by giving that letter, vouched for the bearer, in effect. It was among fellow judges, and he gave him the order for $12,500 more. Respondent did not get anything out of that on his debt, he says. Members of the Court are familiar with the other aspects of this article. After that Ritter allowed Rankin $75,000 more. Respondent was embarrassed when $15,000 to his former partner was involved, but not embarrassed when $75,000 was involved.

I want to call attention again to one other thing. to page 536 of the record. I asked the respondent this question:

At the time you and he formed your relationship was it not contemplated that the firm would have a greater degree of permanency than it developed to have?

This is the answer:

We expected to spend the rest of our lives practicing law there.

Did you get that? That appears on page 536. Yet in his letter to the Assistant Attorney General under date of April 9 he said this:

I understand the real difficulty in considering his appointment-

Referring to Judge Rankin-is the fact that he took up his residence in Florida and abandoned his Alabama residence.

Here is the judge who swore on this stand in front of this Court that he expected to have a partnership that would last through life, but this is what he is saying when he wrote the letter:

But I know that he never fully did that and he always considered himself a resident of Alabama and voted there—

And is liable to go back any time.

Mr. President, I wonder if I might ask the clerk to read one of these letters?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will read the letter for you.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. I will ask the clerk to read the letter of December 19, 1929.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE'S CHAMBERS, SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF FLORIDA Miami, Fla., December 19, 1929.

Halsted L. Ritter. Judge. Hon. WILLIAM D. MITCHELL

Hon. WILLIAM D. MITCHELL,

Attorney General, Washington, D. C.

Sir: I am advised that Hon. Henry D. Clayton, judge of the United States Court for the Middle District of Alabama, has asked retirement. If this is true, I desire to recommend most strongly for the appointment as his successor of A. L. Rankin, of Andalusia, Ala., whom I have known for a number of years.

Judge Rankin was judge of the Law and Equity Court for Covington County, in that State, for a number of years, and has practiced in the Alabama bar 25 years, being a member of all the courts. He is a man of exceptional ability, thoroughly versed in the law, is of unquestionable integrity, and well known throughout the State of Alabama. He has the judicial temperament in a high degree, and would fill the position with great honor and satisfaction, I feel certain.

Mr. Manager SUMNERS. I do not want to be tedious, but this is very important, because these things go down to the depths of this man's character.

When he wrote this letter he referred to him as "A. L. Rankin, of Andalusia, Ala." Why did he do that? Because the job Rankin was trying to get was in Alabama. Just think of that, and weigh it.

In another letter he said:

I want to say that Judge Rankin is a man of the highest character and integrity. He is one of the ablest common-law lawyers in the South.

That is a statement made by a judge upon his responsibility.

We were partners in the practice of law in West Palm Beach before my appointment on the bench. I know of no man better qualified from the standpoint of experience, ability, and character for the position.

And so forth. Then he writes again in another letter that if he is appointed he will raise the bench to a high place.

I say a man who will not speak the truth above his signed name will not swear it, and a man who will not state the truth, and who does those things which arouse doubt as to his integrity must go from the bench.

I appreciate profoundly the attention which the Members of this honorable Court have given the case.

There ought to be a unanimous judgment in this case, and let it ring out from this Chamber all over the Nation that from now on men who hold positions in the Federal judiciary must be obedient to the high principles which in the nature of things it is essential for a judge to manifest.

A few Federal judges can reflect upon the great body of honorable men who hold these high positions.

There is another thing I was about to forget. Of course, the bondholders in Chicago did not protest the $90,000 fee to Rankin. The attorneys for the bondholders and Mr. Holland were in the respondent's court at the same time. They came to represent 93 percent of the $2,500,000 of the first-mortgage bonds. They heard the respondent advised of the champertous conduct of Richardson, Rankin et al., and they saw the respondent approve. They were virtually kicked out of the court. They wanted the case out of that court and away from Rankin and the respondent just as quickly as they could get it out, and they would have stood not only for that fee of $90,000 but for more; and any of you practicing law would have done the same thing under the circumstances. You remember McPherson said respondent was positive, very positive, about Mr. Holland. Respondent was a great deal stronger with regard to the attorney for the bondholders. Remember the judge asked Holland, "Who bought you off?" Of course, they were glad to get out at almost any price.

Members of the Court, there is a great deal more which ought to be said, but you have the record and my time has about expired. I have a duty to perform and you have yours. Mine is finished.

The House has done all the House can do toward protecting the judiciary of the country. The people have trusted in you. Counsel for the respondent kept emphasizing the fact that this respondent stood and swore, stood and swore, stood and swore. I remember that I saw the Members of this honorable Court lift their hands to God Almighty, and, in that oath which they took, pledge themselves to rise above section and party entanglements and to be true to the people of the Nation in the exercise of this high power. I have no doubt you will do it.

I thank this honorable Court for the courtesy and consideration which have been shown to my colleagues and to me as we have tried to discharge our constitutional duty in this

LEGISLATIVE SESSION

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of legislative business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of legislative business.

TERMS OF DISTRICT COURT, MIDDLE DISTRICT OF PENNSYLVANIA

(During the course of today's proceedings of the Senate sitting for the trial of the articles of impeachment, by unanimous consent, the following legislative business was transacted:)

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, as in legislative session, I ask Senators to look at the first page of the calendar where there is set forth a special order for tomorrow at 1 o'clock. Obviously that order cannot be observed. I therefore ask unanimous consent that the date of Wednesday, April 15, be changed to and set for Wednesday, April 29. I have consulted, or caused a mutual friend to consult, with the Senator from New York [Mr. COPELAND], and that date, I believe, namely, the 29th of this month, is agreeable to him.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

(During the impeachment proceedings, on motion of Mr. Robinson, the proceedings were suspended so that, as in legislative session, the Senate might receive messages from the President of the United States, communicated by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries.)

ADDRESS OF PRESIDENT BEFORE YOUNG DEMOCRATIC CLUBS OF MARYLAND

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I ask that there be printed in the RECORD as a part of my remarks the address delivered by the President of the United States at the city of Baltimore last evening.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The address is as follows:

Address of President Franklin D. Roosevelt Before the Young Democratic Clubs of Maryland, Delivered at Baltimore, Md.,

You in this great armory tonight represent a cross section of our young people who have come to maturity since 1929. You are the symbol of young men and women living in every State of the Union, affiliated with every political party and belonging to every so-called stratum of society.

The world in which the millions of you have come of age is not the set old world of your fathers. Some of yesterday's certainties have vanished; many of yesterday's certainties are questioned. Why have some vanished and many been questioned? Because the facts and needs of civilization have changed more greatly in this generation than in the century that preceded us.

I need not press that point with you. You are measuring the present state of the world out of your own experiences. You have felt the rough hand of the depression. You have walked the streets looking for jobs that never turned up. Out of this has come physical hardship and, more serious, the scars of disillusionment.

YOUTH HAS BECOME RESTLESS

The temper of our youth has become more restless, more critical, more challenging. Flaming youth has become a flaming question. And youth comes to us wanting to know what we propose to do about a society that hurts so many of them.

about a society that hurts so many of them.

There is much to justify the inquiring attitude of youth. You have a right to ask these questions—practical questions. No man who seeks to evade or to avoid deserves your confidence.

Many older people seem to take unmerited pride in the mere fact that they are adults. When youth comes crashing in on them with enthusiasm and ideals they put on their most patronizing smiles and pat the young man or the young woman on the shoulders and in a worldly wise sort of way send them out with what they call their blessing. But—as every young person knows—that is not a blessing; it is a cold shower. What they have really said to you is: "You're young. Enjoy your enthusiasms and your ideals while you can. When you grow up and get out in the world you will know better." And the tragedy is that so many young people do just that. They do grow up and, growing up, they grow away from their enthusiasms and from their ideals. That is one reason why the world into which they go gets better so slowly. reason why the world into which they go gets better so slowly.

OUTLINES YOUTH'S OBJECTIVE

Your objective in the widest sense is, I take it, this: An opportunity to make an honest living; a reasonable chance to improve your condition in life as you grow older; a practical assurance against want and suffering in your old age; and with it all the right to participate in the finer things of life—good health, clean amusement, and a part in the satisfactions of the arts, the sciences, and religion.

Faced with that objective, it is clear that many of the old answers are not the right answers. No answer, new or old, is fit for your thoughts unless it is framed in terms of what you face and what you desire—unless it carries some definite prospect of a and what you desire—unless it is framed in terms of what you face and what you desire—unless it carries some definite prospect of a practical down-to-earth solution of your problems.

For the next few months you are going to be thoroughly bored by so-called answers. There are two or three new panaceas in every day's paper. Here is one picked out at random from three on the same page of one newspaper. The eminent author suggests a four-point cure for all our ills. I hope you will be as thrilled and excited by them as I was. Here they are:

1. Establish a monetary unit with a definite gold content subject to change only by Congress.

2. Restore convertibility of money into gold coin and private ownership of gold. 3. Accept responsibility as the world's greatest creditor nation.

4. Put Federal finances in order.

DO NOT SOLVE PROBLEMS

I ask you what do panacea plans like these offer to you as a way out of the problems that you had today and will get up to face tomorrow? Is there opportunity? Is there work today? Is there assurance for tomorrow? Is this the practical, definite answer you are looking for? Most important of all, is there even a recognition in that type of panacea of the fact that the youth of America has any problems at all?

No, my friends: you have a right to expect something better the

No, my friends; you have a right to expect something better than that. You have a right to expect that those in authority will do everything within their power to help restore conditions that make employment and opportunity possible; more than that, you will be protected, insofar as is humanly possible, from the physical and mental and spiritual ravages of economic and social maladjustment.

1928 WAS NO MILLENNIUM

Some counselors say "confidence and normal prosperity will cure everything—give everybody jobs." They generally mean by that the confidence and prosperity of 1928. But, my friends, 1928 was no millennium. You and I know the simple fact that while production was increasing and profits were increasing in 1928 and 1929 unemployment was growing at an astounding rate. Return to the 1928 kind of prosperity is no sufficient answer. The best that the captains of the country could do for you before the depression was not good enough then, and it is not good enough today.

And you and I know that while the total production of America is about back to the high point before the depression, only a little over 80 percent as many human beings are engaged in turning out that production. It does not matter very greatly what the cause of this is. It may be a greater efficiency; it may be the development of new machinery; it may be a variety of other causes. We cannot legislate against greater efficiency nor can we legislate against the use of new tools—nor would we if we could. But the fact remains. And that fact requires an answer.

Some people tell you that even with a completely restored pros-

Some people tell you that even with a completely restored prosperity there will be a vast permanent army of unemployed.

not accept that. No man who is sensitive to human values dares to accept that. That is why we are not content merely to restore what is sometimes called prosperity. We propose to attack the problem from every conceivable angle.

WOULD LIMIT WORKING AGES

Would limit working aces

We readily admit that a greater purchasing power, far more widely distributed, will mean the consumption of more goods—industrial products and farm products. The production of these goods will mean more employment. Most businessmen believe with us in a greater purchasing power on the part of more people; they know that their businesses will be helped thereby.

To work in unity toward this end constitutes one form of attack, and there are others which we must not overlook.

Our working population increases every year, both because of Our working population increases every year, both because of population increase and because more and more women are working for wages. That is as it should be. But when we face your problems, these increases raise the question as to whether it is not possible and right to limit the active working ages at both ends.

We in your Government are seeking to extend the school age in every State in the Union and to make it easier for boys and girls to stay in school. Work out for yourselves what would happen if all the boys and the girls of 14 and 15 and 16 and 17 who are now working in industry found it possible to stay in school until they were at least 18 years old.

How many jobs would that give to the young people of the Nation who have been graduated from high school and from college? And how much better equipped would be these youngsters who are now at work if they could stay in school to the completion of their education?

In the same way ask yourselves how many jobs would be created if the great majority of people who are now over 65—to take a figure at random—were in a position to retire in security for the balance of their days on earth. And how much greater happiness would such security give to their old age?

CITES EFFECT OF END OF N. R. A.

And there is another angle of reemployment which, from the point of view of youth, is worth pursuing. I will point it by an illustration. In a certain manufacturing industry the average hours of weekly work were greatly curtailed under the operation of the National Industrial Recovery Act, and curtailed, incidentally, with the complete support of the great majority of employers within the industry. When this act came to an end the average hours of work were 36.4 per week. Since that time the great majority of employers in this particular industry continued the old scale of hours. But gradually first a few and then a larger number of employers began lengthening the work week. The result today is that the average of employment in this industry is 39.9 hours per week. Not a serious difference, you say. And yet if you figure it out on the assumption that there were 166,500 men and women in this industry, 10 percent or 16,650 people have either lost their jobs or, by working longer hours, are preventing 16,650 other people from getting employment. Actually the records show that 1,400 people lost their jobs and 15,250 other people were kept from getting work.

It seems reasonable, therefore, that industry can contribute in great measure to the increase of employment if industry as a whole will undertake reasonable reductions of hours of work per week, while, at the same time, they keep the average individual's pay envelopes at least as large as it is today.

week, while, at the same time, they keep the average individual's pay envelope at least as large as it is today.

MUST ASSURE ADEQUATE WAGE

Because the practices of employment definitely affect the prob-lem of unemployment, the Government must give and will give consideration to such subjects as the length of the working week, the stability of employment on an annual basis, and the payment of at least adequate minimum wages. A government doing that is a government that is working actively at the answers to your

We do not yet know enough in a changing economic order to guarantee any nation permanently against times of depression. We believe, however, that steps like these which we have taken and are taking will at least greatly cushion depressions—will prevent the upcurve from rushing to a violent, mad peak of false prosperity and prevent another violent, mad descent into another sink of suffering and disillusionment like the one from which for sink of suffering and disillusionment like the one from which for the last 3½ years we have been surely emerging.

And there is another aspect to the answer which you have a right to expect from us. What do we propose to do about the casualties of depression? Since 1929 those casualties, in America, have run into the millions. They are a charge upon us as a people. I have recognized that fact. And, by every reasonable means, we have sought to care for those casualties—to keep them from the physical suffering of hunger; to keep them from the mental suffering of a loss of morale.

In regard to all these problems there are counselors these days who say, "Do nothing"; other counselors who say, "Do everything." Common sense dictates an avoidance of both extremes. I say to you, "Do something"; and when you have done that something, if it works, do it some more; and if it does not work, do something else.

thing else.

And you young people want action. You believe, as I believe, that the something which needs to be done can be done, and how significantly American it is to believe that.

NATION DUE TO YOUTH'S VIGOR

The vigor of our history comes largely from the fact that, as a comparatively young Nation, we have gone fearlessly ahead doing things that were never done before. We subdued a wilderness that men said could never be conquered. We established a civilization where others insisted a civilization could not survive. Between 1776 and 1789 we built a government for which, in the extent of its democracy, there was no precedent—a government which royalists declared could not endure.

We did all these things with zest. The very air was exhilarating. We were young—and we were getting things—worth-while things—done. It is part of the spirit of America to believe that now, in our day, we can do equally well in getting things done.

I, for one, do not believe that the era of the pioneer is at an end; I only believe that the area for pioneering has changed. The period of geographical pioneering is largely finished. But, my friends, the period of social pioneering is only at its beginning. And make no mistake about it—the same qualities of heroism and faith and vision that were required to bring the forces of nature into subjection will be required—in even greater measure—to bring under proper control the forces of modern society. There is a task which—for importance and for magnitude—calls for the best that you and I have to offer.

There cannot be too many Americans thinking about the future of America. Our country, richly endowed in body, mind, and spirit still has need of menny things. But I am certain that one country, richly endowed in body, mind, and spirit still has need of menny things. But I am certain that one of America. Our country, richly endowed in body, mind, and spirit, still has need of many things. But I am certain that one of its chief needs today is the releasing and the enlistment of the spirit of youth.

LISTS AGES OF FOUNDERS

Do not underestimate the significance of that spirit. Yesterday Christendom celebrated Easter—the anniversary of the resurrection of our Lord, who at the beginning of His ministry was 30 years of age and at His death was only 33. Christianity began with youth, and through the last 2,000 years the spirit of youth repeatedly has revitalized it.

revitalized it.

Our war for independence was a young men's crusade. Age was on the side of the Tories and the Tories were on the side of the old order. At the Revolution's outbreak George Washington was 43, Patrick Henry 38, Thomas Jefferson 32, and Alexander Hamilton 18. Our Constitution, likewise, was the creation of young minds. The average age of the men who wrote the Constitution was about 44. The qualities of youth are not of a sort that self-satisfied people welcome in 1936 any more than self-satisfied people welcomed them in 1776

I have used the words "the qualities of youth." Be wise enough and tolerant enough, you who are young in years, to remember that millions of older people have kept and propose to keep these qualities of youth. You ought to thank God tonight if, regardless of your years, you are young enough in spirit to dream dreams and see visions—dreams and visions about a greater and a finer America that is to be: if you are young enough in spirit to believe that see visions—dreams and visions about a greater and a finer America that is to be; if you are young enough in spirit to believe that poverty can be greatly lessened; that the disgrace of involuntary unemployment can be wiped out; that class hatreds can be done away with; that peace at home and abroad can be maintained; and that one day a generation may possess this land, blessed beyond anything we know, with those things—material and spiritual—that make man's life abundant. If that is the fashion of your dreaming, then I say: "Hold fast to your dream, America needs it."

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE-ENROLLED BILL SIGNED

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Haltigan, one of its reading clerks, announced that the Speaker of the House had affixed his signature to the enrolled bill (S. 2524) to amend section 51 of the Judicial Code of the United States (U. S. C., title 28, sec. 112), and it was signed by the Vice President.

SPECIAL COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE CAMPAIGN EXPENDITURES

The VICE PRESIDENT, in accordance with the provisions of Senate Resolution 225 (agreed to Apr. 1, 1936), appointed the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. Lonergan], the Senator from Indiana [Mr. MINTON], the Senator from Washington [Mr. Schwellenbach], the Senator from Vermont [Mr. Austin], and the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE | as the members of the special committee to investigate campaign expenditures of the various Presidential, Vice Presidential, and senatorial candidates in 1936.

CIVIL-SERVICE RETIREMENT AND DISABILITY FUND-(S. DOC. 196)

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a letter from the President of the Civil Service Commission, transmitting, pursuant to law, the Fifteenth Annual Report of the Board of Actuaries of the Civil Service Retirement and Disability Fund, which, with the accompanying report, was referred to the Committee on Civil Service and ordered to be printed.

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate resolutions adopted by a joint meeting of the Nebraska Home Owners Association, the Workers Alliance of Nebraska, and the Unemployment Council, all of Omaha, Nebr., favoring an immediate appropriation for the relief of all families on the rolls at the F. E. R. A. standard in Douglas County, Nebr., and the engagement on W. P. A. projects of all employables now on the relief rolls, which were referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. COOLIDGE presented a petition, a telegram, and letters in the nature of petitions from members of Lodge No. 1441. International Association of Machinists, of Auburn; Albany Lodge, No. 271, Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, and Commonwealth Lodge, No. 229, Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, both of Worcester; and William Blanchette, legislative representative, Order of Railway Conductors, of Taunton, all in the State of Massachusetts, praying for the enactment of the bill (S. 4174) to foster and protect interstate commerce by authorizing the Interstate Commerce Commission to approve or disapprove of the consolidation or abandonment of carrier facilities of public service, which were referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

Mr. FLETCHER, from the Committee on Banking and Currency, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 9484) to amend section 36 of the Emergency Farm Mortgage Act of 1933, as amended, reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 1828) thereon.

Mr. McKELLAR, from the Committee on Appropriations, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 12098) making appropriations for the Departments of State and Justice and for the judiciary, and for the Departments of Commerce and Labor, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1937, and for other purposes, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 1829) thereon.

Mr. ASHURST, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to which was referred the bill (S. 4353) to provide for the establishment of a term of the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Oklahoma at Shawnee, Okla., reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1830) thereon.

ENROLLED BILL PRESENTED

Mrs. CARAWAY, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that on April 13, 1936, that committee presented to the President of the United States the enrolled bill (S. 2042) for the relief of Grace Park, a minor, the Westerly Hospital, and Dr. H. M. Scanlon.

EXECUTIVE REPORTS OF A COMMITTEE

As in executive session,

Mr. McKELLAR, from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, reported favorably the nominations of sundry postmasters, which were ordered to be placed on the Execu-

BILLS INTRODUCED

Bills were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. HATCH:

A bill (S. 4476) for the relief of Benton Crist; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. FLETCHER:

A bill (S. 4477) providing for loans by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to port districts in certain cases; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

WOMEN IN CONGRESS-ADDRESS BY SENATOR CARAWAY AND EDITORIAL

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, I ask leave to have printed in the Record a very interesting radio address delivered by the junior Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. Caraway] on Monday night, the 6th instant, and also an editorial from the Washington (D. C.) Star entitled "Women in Congress."

There being no objection, the address and editorial were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Ladies and gentlemen of the radio audience, I wish to thank the National Broadcasting Co. for allowing me this time. When they asked me to appear on this program it was suggested that I choose my own subject. However, the inevitable suggestion that I speak on women in politics followed, not from the broadcasting company but others. In fact, A Woman Looks at the Senate was favored. To me that implied talking of the Senate as one seated on the side lines, observing superficially, analyzing, also superficially, then writing a story colored entirely by one's own beliefs. That would be impossible for me as I am not on the side lines. I am of that body, an integral part. What is done there is, in part, my responsibility, so that any discussion would have to be of a serious nature. Those who take a job seriously get to have a pride in their work and a great respect for those associated with them in serious endeavor.

Each Senator is assigned to a number of committees and, insofar as possible, each is allowed a choice in these assignments. Sometimes they have to wait for a vacancy on a committee. The chance of a chairmanship comes from seniority (on a committee), and, of course, the chairmen are always of the majority party. When the Democrats secured a majority in the Senate the ranking Democrat on each committee automatically became the chairman. You see, neither the amount of work you do nor any special aptitude you may show, or knowledge you may have on things considered in a committee, advances you on a road to the chairmanship. However, it can be said that your attention to your duties and your ability does give you influence in the committee. In fact the committees may be termed "schools", in which in executive sessions the subjects are taken up and studied from every angle. Public hearings are often held, in which impassioned witnesses testify for or against the bill. A record is kept of this testimony. It is when such hearings are under way that the offices are swamped with telegrams and letters, hundreds of them sometimes being identical, word for word, and comma for comma. comma.

I remember one time getting many letters on a certain matter. Those letters were answered, naturally, and, to my astonishment, replies were received saying that they were glad to have had my letter but they had not written me concerning this legislation, that they were relying on my judgment in such matters. Some of them even sent affidavits that they had not written me concerning this bill; but I digress. When all the testimony in these hearings is printed, the committee in executive session again goes over the bill, thrashing out the pros and cons, and, after weighing sell the testimony striving to see that no injurities is done that over the bill, thrashing out the pros and cons, and, after weigning all the testimony, striving to see that no injustice is done, trying to protect the helpless, and to be fair. The bill is finally reported to the Senate in the form, you might say, of predigested matter. Of course, someone may be quick to suggest that though presented as predigested matter, they give a lot of people stomach aches; true, but they likely relieve a lot of heartaches, and pains from empty stomachs. This does not preclude amendments on the Senate floor. Very often members of the committee have not expende floor. Very often members of the committee have pet amend-ments which they offer, but as a general rule the bill is passed much as it comes from the committee. That is why it is con-sidered that the committee work is a most important part of the

My committee assignments are most pleasing—Agriculture and Forestry, Commerce, Library, and Enrolled Bills. My favorite is that of Agriculture and Forestry. Maybe because, as some newspaperman has said, "I am a typical farm woman." For weeks this committee has been carrying on an investigation of stock-market trading in cotton, in an endeavor to find out the cause of the slump in cotton prices on March 11, 1935, and the cause of the decline in our export markets.

trading in cotton, in an endeavor to find out the cause of the slump in cotton prices on March 11, 1935, and the cause of the decline in our export markets.

As Arkansas has more miles of navigable streams than any other State in the Union, with the resultant flood-control and other problems, I deem it a privilege to be a member of the Commerce Committee. As chairman of a subcommittee in that committee, I have attended joint hearings in the House, and for a week I conducted hearings on Senator Longram's stream-pollution bill. We have had hearings on the Overton flood-control bill, which conflicted with some other committee work, and so time had to be divided between them. Only last week in the consideration of the House omnibus flood-control bill, we were in session nearly all day, only leaving the committee room for a bite of lunch and to return to the Senate floor for yea-and-nay votes. I left that committee room at 5:30, and it was after 6 when I reached sanctuary; in other words, when I could shut out the world by closing the door of the rented house my son and I occupy in Northwest Washington. Being chairman of Enrolled Bills Committee entails a lot of work, as the function of this committee is to see that the bills which are printed on parchment for the signatures of the Speaker of the House of Representatives, the Vice President, and the President are correctly enrolled from the accompanying papers. This work is tedious but important, as the misplacing of even a comma could bring disastrous results.

Let me give you a brief outline of a run-of-the-mill day for a Senator. Pardon me, but I will have to take one of my days as an example. I arrive at the office around 8 o'clock every morning, go over the letters on my desk which have had to wait over from the day before, and look over some of the home papers. The office force arrives about a quarter of 9, then the serious work of opening.

over the letters on my desk which have had to wait over from the day before, and look over some of the home papers. The office force arrives about a quarter of 9, then the serious work of opening, sorting, filing, and dictating begins. The letters average from 200 to 500 daily. Then visitors begin to arrive. People from home—whom we are always glad to see—people who want autographs, people who want to paint your portrait or do a bas-relief in bronze, people who say they live in Arkansas and want a loan; in fact, people of all sorts and conditions. Do you know that it is not unusual for a Senator to have 25 to 50 callers whom he must see in 1 day? And those who represent nearby States have even more. More than likely there is a call from a committee obest. see in 1 day? And those who represent nearby States have even more. More than likely there is a call from a committee chairman for a meeting at 10 or 10:30—there the morning's gone. The Senate convenes at 12 m. You get out to lunch, but not so far away that you cannot hear the call of the bells in case some bill or amendment should come to a record vote. If lucky, adjournment is had about 4:30 or 5—then back to the office to go over that day's mail. A never-ending round of tasks, all demanding that day's mail. A never-ending round of tasks, all demanding deep concentration and much study.

Let me digress here to comment on the class of letters which filter into a Senator's office. Some are intentionally humorous; others funny because of some bizarre statement made. For example, I had one not long ago saying, "I was brutally murdered in a hospital in —." I will not mention the name of the city. One man, who wanted a job as a detective, wrote: "Please send me gun, badge, and handcuffs by return mail; I know something." Letters from mothers whose sons are in the penitentiary; many, oh, so many, saying they are 74 or 75 years old, nearly blind—cannot something be done to give them only a few dollars per month so that they can last out their days free from the fear that they cannot have enough food to exist upon. Letters telling of such that they can last out their days free from the fear that they cannot have enough food to exist upon. Letters telling of such abject poverty and helplessness that it makes your heart ache. Naturally some of these are spurious, but you learn to differentiate. These letters are all answered, then forwarded to relief agencies in their districts, where they are investigated and relief given if facts warrant. If this administration had done nothing else in the 3 years it has functioned, it would have justified the change of administration, as well as the radical departure from what has been the conventional—nay, the old and ultraconservative way of dealing with these problems. Legislation for all the people and all sections of the United States is a very complex and vexing problem. Take, for example, river and harbor legislation; not all the States are directly affected by this legislation, but it is a problem for all because it involves spending the taxpayers' money. Take the very controversial ship-subsidy legislation; naturally all our States bordering on the Atlantic, the Gulf, the Great Lakes, and the Pacific are intensely interested, while the inland States are interested insofar as freight rates are affected. The same is true of flood control, though more States have such a problem.

There is some talk looking to legislation putting flood control true of flood control, though more States have such a problem.

There is some talk looking to legislation putting flood control in the same category with rivers and harbors. In fact, making it a Government problem, and directly under the supervision of the Corps of Army Engineers. It follows, of course, that States like Arkansas, Tennessee, Louisiana, and Mississippi, with their problems of floods from the Father of Waters, the great Mississippi River, would favor such legislation. The northwest section, with its problem of floods from the Columbia River, would at least be receptive to such legislation. And why not? The people of the lower Mississippi have themselves spent millions of dollars building up a system of levees. Unhappily for them, they cannot tax themselves enough to build an adequate system. True, the Government has in the last few years—appropriations have only come directly following a disastrous flood; and all the money thus obtained has had to be used to repair breaks in the levees, with none left with which to raise the levees to real protection heights.

tained has had to be used to repair breaks in the levees, with none left with which to raise the levees to real protection heights.

The recent flood disasters in the northeast section of this country have certainly brought home to a great many of our people that we have a national flood-control problem. This will, I hope, make it possible to start something really constructive that will be of permanent nature. It is not unusual in our section to have the farm lands overflowed three times in one spring and then have a severe drought during the summer. This is especially true of the St. Francis, Arkansas, and White River Basins. Even though a flood like the one at Johnstown, Pa., only occurs once in 50 years, we cannot afford, with our engineering facilities, to sit idly by, either in a spirit of economy or mere "do-nothingness" and let such wholesale destruction of life and property continue without using these facilities in prevention work. If the manufacturers and industrialists had to produce their wares under the same handicaps as the farmers who buy from them, I wonder how long they would exist.

and industrialists had to produce their wares under the same handicaps as the farmers who buy from them, I wonder how long they would exist.

This administration is the first to really consider agriculture as a major problem. Of course, in the thickly populated centers this does not have much appeal. Anything that boosts the prices of foodstuffs steps on their toes, or, more painfully, their pocketbooks. The more they have to pay for pork and beans, to say nothing of asparagus, alligator pears, and porterhouse steaks, the less they have to spend for automobiles and amusements, so a howl goes up that the farmers are a shiftless lot and their tax money is being squandered for them. It would be enlightening to know just how many of these who so deeply deplore the farm legislation are tax-payers and how many are the propertyless wage earners. Do not misunderstand me—I am just asking here some of the questions I often ask myself, that you may know that every problem has as many facets as the most beautifully cut diamond. That in a final analysis the rights of all must be considered and weighed, then your best judgment invoked to meet the complexities of the legislation for all the people of this so great country. The diverse and often best judgment invoked to meet the complexities of the legislation for all the people of this so great country. The diverse and often extremely divergent interests of one section to the interests of another sometimes act as a brake, but too often make for class legislation in favor of powerful interests and are responsible for the accusation of logrolling. In saying this I am not meaning to imply a criticism of anyone in either branch of the Congress. That body in which I serve is composed of serious-minded, hard-working, conscientious Members. They bring their best judgment to bear on all these problems, for which they deserve the respect of the country. Naturally there are many differences of opinion as to what is best. Right here let me say I am not differentiating between the women and men who are serving in legislative capacities. It is no best. Right here let me say I am not differentiating between the women and men who are serving in legislative capacities. It is no longer a 9 days' wonder that women are in this field. It is an accepted fact, and while sort of a sporadic growth as yet, the time is past for treating them as set apart by sex from any serious legislative qualifications. Not one of them has failed to take the responsibility as less than a sacred trust; while they may bring some fresh viewpoint to bear on matters, they have displayed that broad vision and understanding of the problems which only come from hours of conscientious study. Not one has given evidence that she goes about her legislative duties with less honesty of purpose and understanding than other Members. In the performance of their duties they are governed by the same rules and they as truly represent all the people of their States. That is as it should be. Equal responsibility, equal service, with identical aims.

I am exceedingly proud, even to the point of humility, that my State in three contests has entrusted to me such a grave responsibility. I still feel that nothing but the utmost in loyalty and effort on my part is their due. It is no longer front-page stuff, to the extent that one's head may be turned by publicity, for women to serve in Senate or House, with a woman Cabinet member, and a woman minister to a foreign country. However, if you get big bubbles of self-esteem, you will get them dissolved. One day a nice-looking woman accosted me—this was before Mrs. Long, who is lovely, came to the Senate—saying, "You are a Senator, aren't you?" I said, "Yes." She hesitated, then said, "But I don't know which one you are." That is deflation.

In the few minutes left to me in this informal talk I want to call to your attention that Arkansas will be celebrating her one hundred the left of the States which came to Vertice.

call to your attention that Arkansas will be celebrating her one hundredth birthday as one of the States which form the Nation. It is our hope that a great many of you will find the time to visit It is our hope that a great many of you will find the time to visit us and to investigate the claims always made that in abundance of natural resources, scenic beauty, and citizenship Arkansas excels. The reason for a slow train through Arkansas is in order that the traveler may feast his eyes and restore his soul in this, one of the greatest States of the Union. Many of you, perhaps, know that Hot Springs was the first Federal reservation to be set aside, in 1832, to conserve the healing hot-springs waters. Our citizens take much pride in the fact that the President and Mrs. Roosevelt are to visit our State this year. They view the President as a man of great courage, intensely human, sympathetic, and able. A man who, in these years of stress, has made history in his efforts to fit the Government to the people with justice and impartiality.

I thank you. Good night.

[From the Washington Star of Apr. 8, 1936] WOMEN IN CONGRESS

Senator Hattie W. Caraway, of Arkansas, very properly paid tribute to women in the legislative field of government in her address in the National Radio Forum entitled "A Woman Looks at the Senate." It is, she said, no longer a 9 days' wonder that women are in this field. And yet it is only a little more than women are in this field. And yet it is only a little more than 19 years ago that the first woman took her seat in the Halls of Congress, Miss Jeannette Rankin, a Representative from Montana. Speaking of the women who have since that time held legislative office in Washington, Mrs. Caraway said: "Not one of them has failed to take the responsibility as less than a sacred trust; while they may bring some fresh viewpoint to bear on matters, they have displayed that broad vision and understanding of the problems which only come from conscientious study. Not one has given evidence that she goes about her legislative duties with less honesty of purpose and understanding than other Members."

No one will gainsay this estimate of the women who have served and are serving in Congress. Many of them have been reelected by their constituents. Obviously this has not been because they were women. For, take it by and large, there has been more prejudice against women aspiring to hold seats in Congress than there has been prejudice in their favor. They have been reelected because they did a good job and because their constituents appreciated their work.

Mrs. Caraway is the first woman ever to have been elected a

Mrs. Caraway is the first woman ever to have been elected a Mrs. Caraway is the first woman ever to have been elected a Senator of the United States. It is an office to which she has been twice elected by the people of her State. One woman, Mrs. Rebecca L. Felton, of Georgia, bore the title of Senator before her, but only for a day. Mrs. Felton was appointed to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Senator Tom Watson, of Georgia, back in 1922. Before she had an opportunity to take her seat, Senator George was elected to fill out the unexpired term. Senator George withheld his eventual at the opening of the session for I day. GEORGE was elected to fill out the unexpired term. Senator GEORGE withheld his credentials at the opening of the session for 1 day, and for that day. Mrs. Felton was Senator. For 5 years Mrs. Caraway, however, has been a Senator, a conscientious, hard-working, and intelligent Senator. Mrs. Caraway believes in taking her job seriously, in working at it long hours, and she does both.

It was nearly 15 years after the first woman, Miss Rankin, had been elected to the House that a woman was elected to the Senate of the United States.

of the United States. And it was only a few months ago that a second woman Senator, Mrs. Huer P. Long, of Louisiana, took her seat. The struggle of women for recognition and representation by one of their sex in the upper House of Congress was a long one. Miss Rankin was the first to make serious contest for the honor. After a single term in the House, Miss Rankin sought nomination for the Senate but was defeated in the primaries. Another woman Member of the House, Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick Simms, sought 6 years ago to be elected Senator from Illinois. Mrs. Simms won the nomination but was defeated in the general

The records that women have made in Congress are distinguished—records that many men Members may envy. Three sitting women Members of the House entered Congress in 1925—Mrs. EDITH NOURSE ROGERS, of Massachusetts; Mrs. FLORENCE P. KAHN, of California; and Mrs. Mary T. Norron, of New Jersey. For more than a decade these women have ably served their districts and States in the House of Representatives. Each has been elected six times. Mrs. Norton, a Democrat, is now chairman of the House Committee on the District of Columbia, in charge of legislation for the Nation's Capital. As Mrs. Caraway so aptly said, the time is past when women are to be treated "as set apart by sex from any serious legislative qualifications."

FLOOD CONTROL

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD two editorials, one printed in the Commercial Appeal of Memphis, Tenn., entitled "Pass the Overton Bill", and the other printed in the New Orleans Item of April 11, 1936, entitled "Our Flood Control Bill."

There being no objection, the editorials were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Memphis (Tenn.) Commercial Appeal of Apr. 11, 1936] PASS THE OVERTON BILL

The people of the lower valley would be the last to begrudge their neighbors in Pennsylvania, New York, Massachusetts, and Connecticut the fullest measure of relief from the disastrous floods that have recently overtaken those States. We know what floods are, and we know the absolute necessity of Government cooperation. We know how helpless we are when left to our own resources, and have rightly insisted that it was a national rather than a local problem.

That theory applies to the flood regions of the East as properly as it does to those of the lower valley.

But it is unfortunate, to say the least, that those who are demanding relief in the East are doing so at the expense of the people of the lower valley. They are sidetracking the Overton bill, thereby holding up the completion of the great flood-control project of 1928 upon the mistaken idea that both are projects of a kind and should be marred into a completion seemed.

should be merged into an omnibus measure.

The facts are these: The great lower-valley project of 1928, known as the Jadwin plan, is only about half completed. One reason for the delay is that public opposition to a floodway in north Louisiana became so great that the Government did not see north Louisiana became so great that the Government did not see fit to proceed. Several years ago the House Flood Control Committee, by resolution, directed that a survey be made looking to a reexamination of the entire project. The Mississippi River committee and the Chief of Engineers made this survey, and reported certain modifications. These modifications were approved by such engineers as Jadwin, Brown, and Markham. They came as near bringing together all diverging elements as was humanly possible, with the result that the experts and the leaders all up and down the valley gave it their general approval.

The modifications were submitted to Congress in the Overton bill. No project has ever had more earnest and thorough consideration.

It is designed to carry to completion a project already begun.

sideration.

It is designed to carry to completion a project already begun. It is in furtherance of the national policy adopted in 1928, to wit: That is dealing with flood control of the lower valley the responsibility is to be assumed by Congress.

No policy whatever has been adopted by the Government in respect to all the various projects incorporated in the omnibus bill. It is apparent that a sound flood-control policy applying to all the States and Territories cannot be formulated in a few hours.

This objection is raised not to minimize the necessity for relief or to throw obstacles in the way, but merely to indicate that it may be many weeks before such a policy is whipped into shape. Why, it can be asked, should the lower valley wait on flood-control projects stretching from Maine to California when the Government has already formulated such a policy, has spent over $200,000,000 in prosecution of that work, which, if not further prosecuted, will be practically worthless?

in prosecution of that work, which, if not further prosecuted, will be practically worthless?

The Overton bill, being merely an expression of the previously adopted national policy, has no relation to the eastern flood-control problem. It comes under an altogether separate head. That is why Senators and Representatives familiar with the lower-valley problem are demanding that the Overton bill pass now, without waiting and facing the possibility of its being thrown into the omnibus bill designed primarily to give relief to the East.

Flood control in the East is something new. It is a long, laborious process. In the lower valley the project is already under way. It is in furtherance of a definite, fixed national policy. Delay is not only unwise but serious. Our Senators and Representatives will perform a splendid service if they will continue to present this view forcefully and vigorously to their colleagues.

The Overton bill should be passed now.

[From the New Orleans (La.) Item of Apr. 11, 1936] OUR FLOOD-CONTROL BILL

In leaving New Orleans General Ferguson, head of the Mississippi River Commission, said:

"The outstanding news of the week is that the snags which have delayed the Mississippi River flood bill have been removed."

We fully agree with this appraisal of this news if all the snags have really been removed. It is our understanding that all of them have so far as the Senate is concerned. The prevailing opinion in Washington seems to be that the Overton measure will pass the Senate. We are not so sure, however, about the House. We are not so sure, however, about the House.

Comprehensive floodway legislation along lines satisfactory to the Army Engineers was stalled in the House throughout the last session by opposition from a Louisiana Congressman, Mr. Wilson, himself chairman of the Flood Control Committee, and by several others, all animated by conflicting viewpoints arising from local or regional interests in the floodway program.

Some of the most damaging opposition arose from regional aver-some of the most damaging opposition arose from regional aversion to the Eudora floodway, favored by the engineers. We don't know whether that opposition is to be resumed in this session or not. We have seen no statement that it will, but neither have we seen any to the contrary. Everybody in this State and the other suffering areas of the lower flood valley who wants real comprehensive protection from recurrent catastrophe should turn his attention to the House with a view to advancing the Overton Act, if it gots through the Senate.

if it gets through the Senate.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

The PRESIDENT pro tempore, as in executive session, laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting several nominations in the Public Works Administration, which were referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

(For nominations this day received, see the end of Senate proceedings.)

RECESS

Mr. ROBINSON. I move that the Senate take a recess until 12 o'clock noon tomorrow.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 1 o'clock and 58 minutes p. m.), under the order previously entered, the Senate took a recess, to meet, for the trial of the articles of impeachment against Halsted L. Ritter, tomorrow, Wednesday, April 15, 1936, at 12 o'clock meridian.

NOMINATIONS

Executive nominations received by the Senate April 14 (legislative day of Feb. 24), 1936

PUBLIC WORKS ADMINISTRATION

George H. Sager, Jr., of Kentucky, to be State director of the Public Works Administration in Kentucky.

William F. Cochrane, of South Dakota, to be State director of the Public Works Administration in South Dakota.

Richard A. Hart, of Utah, to be State director of the Public Works Administration in Utah.

James A. Anderson, of Virginia, to be State director of the Public Works Administration in Virginia.

Eugene R. Hoffman, of Washington, to be State director of the Public Works Administration in Washington.

Malcolm L. O'Neale, of West Virginia, to be State director of the Public Works Administration in West Virginia.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

TUESDAY, APRIL 14, 1936

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Heavenly Father, Thou hast set Thy love upon us; we are blessed with Thy jealous care and with Thy unsleeping and faithful watchfulness; praises be unto Thy holy name. We thank Thee for the good gift of life, rich, full, and crowded with interest. These days when so many are seeking something that shall make it fuller and better, grant, blessed Lord, to give them newer and richer blessings of wisdom and understanding. We pray that we may bring to Thee grateful hearts and happy spirits. Enable us to stand where we have fallen and win where we have faltered. Almighty God, increase our devotion to our traditional institutions; embue us plenteously with heavenly gifts, and may we hallow Thy name in all that we shall do. In our Savior's name. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Horne, its enrolling clerk, announced that the Senate agrees to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 11968) relating to the authority of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to make rehabilitation loans for the repair of damages caused by floods or other catastrophes, and for other purposes.

OMNIBUS BILLS

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.
The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.
Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, on Tuesday next, under the rule, omnibus bills will be considered by the House. While I am opposed to some of the individual bills in the omnibus bills, I think at least 75 percent or more should be passed. I want to do everything I can to expedite the consideration of the bills, although I have not one bill to be considered. I note in the RECORD of yesterday that the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. Massingale] asked unanimous consent to speak for 20 minutes on next Tuesday. I understood the gentleman to ask unanimous consent at that time to speak next Thursday. I notice on the calendar this morning the request is listed as Thursday. I should like to know whether the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. Massingale] is to speak on Tuesday or Thursday. While I have never objected to a unanimous-consent request. I think when a special day is set aside for the consideration of omnibus bills that the Members should recognize that fact and not ask unanimous consent to speak on that particular day.

The SPEAKER. The Chair may say to the gentleman that the Journal, which is controlling, shows that consent was given the gentleman to speak on next Thursday.

Mr. COCHRAN. I hope the Members of the House will permit an entire day to be given to the consideration of omnibus bills and not take up part of the time with speeches.

PRIVILEGES OF THE HOUSE

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Mr. Speaker, I rise now to what is known as the privileges of the House. If the Speaker insists or someone objects, I shall prepare a resolution and take an hour. At this time I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 5 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Washington?

There was no objection.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Mr. Speaker, yesterday unintentionally I did not insert myself into anybody's remarks. The gentleman from New York [Mr. Boylan] was making a very fine address upon Thomas Jefferson, yesterday being Thomas Jefferson's birthday, and it was a very fine thing to do, and the gentleman did well. There is no one who admires Thomas Jefferson any more than I do, and there is no one who appreciates a good speech any more than I do, and the gentleman made a very fine speech. In fact, he did better when he started to talk than he did when he was reading. But he seemed a trifle irritated yesterday. I asked unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute to tell the gentleman something in order to enlighten him, if I could. Of course, I am young but yet I keep on trying. The gentleman from New York objected. The gavel fell, and he lost the floor. I told him at that time-and I think the RECORD will so show—that the reason he objected was because he could not answer it. So very suavely and in a very meek and surreptitious manner the gentleman goes to the reporters and suggests they might leave that remark out.

Now, Mr. Speaker, his remarks had ceased. I admit I had no business making the remark, but I did it intentionally, and it was there.

Mr. Speaker, may I ask what right the gentleman from New York had to cause those remarks to be taken out of the Record? The Speaker may have ordered them out, or the House may have ordered them out, but he did not have that right.

Mr. BLANTON. I make the point of order that when a Member is speaking on the floor, as the gentleman from New York was yesterday, and someone attempts to interrupt him and he states he refuses to yield, and he does not yield, no Member then has the right to make remarks and to put them in the Record without being recognized by the Chair or getting permission of the House.

I think the gentleman from New York would have been well within his rights if he had taken a pencil and wiped out the remarks himself, because the gentleman from Washington did not have any right to make a remark in the RECORD unless he got permission of the House or permission of the Chair. Mr. Speaker, I make that point of order.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Mr. Speaker, I should like to be heard on the point of order.

Mr. Speaker, the reason I am not going to try to explain to the gentleman from Texas what I have been telling the House is because I have long ago learned not to describe the beauty of a morning sunrise to a cat.

The SPEAKER. The Chair understands the gentleman did not have the consent of the gentleman from New York to interrupt him?

Mr. ZIONCHECK. May I make this explicit?

The SPEAKER. The Chair is trying to ascertain the facts.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. That is what I am going to try to tell the Chair. I know this is a very delicate point, you know, from a parliamentary standpoint. I do not know what the Chair is going to do. I know how I would decide the question, but that is the only thing I can state to the Chair.

Mr. Speaker, the point is the gavel had fallen. The Speaker had stated "Your time has expired." So the gentleman from New York throws in an objection to my speaking, and then my remarks that followed the objection, without the permission of the House, are taken from the Record. After his time had expired he goes to work and deletes my remarks that I should not have put in anyway, but they were there. He did this without my permission. If the gentleman had called me up and asked me about the matter I would have stated it was all right to delete the remarks.

The SPEAKER. The Chair may say to the gentleman that no Member of the House has the right to have his remarks inserted in the Record unless he has obtained the consent of the House or the Chair or the gentleman addressing the House.

The present occupant of the chair was not presiding at the time, but the Chair understands from the gentleman from Washington [Mr. Zioncheck] that when he asked the gentleman from New York [Mr. Boylaw] for permission to interrupt him the gentleman from New York declined to yield. Thereupon the gavel fell, and the gentleman's remarks were made after the gavel had fallen and without recognition from the Chair or the permission of the gentleman from New York.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. That is right. I admit I was wrong. The SPEAKER. The Chair, under such circumstances, holds that the remarks were not proper for the Record.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. That is right.

The SPEAKER. And certainly if they affected the gentleman from New York or anything he had stated in his remarks, the gentleman from New York had the right to strike them out.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Yes; but, Mr. Speaker, what right did he have to delete remarks that were not properly there and were not within his remarks without my permission or the permission of the House?

The SPEAKER. For the reason that the remarks of the gentleman from Washington were made out of order and affected the gentleman from New York,

Mr. ZIONCHECK. But who is the gentleman from New York to start cleaning up the RECORD?

The SPEAKER. If the remarks affected the gentleman from New York personally or referred to anything he may have said, the gentleman from New York was clearly within his rights in not having the remarks of the gentleman from Washington appear as a part of his speech.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Is he going to start editing the Senate speeches now?

The SPEAKER. The Chair need not reply to that.

Mr. BOYLAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 5 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. BOYLAN. Mr. Speaker, I have been a Member of this House for seven terms. During this entire period I have never objected to the request of any Member to proceed in a regular or orderly way. For the first time during my years of service I am accused of surreptitiously causing some remarks of the gentleman from Washington [Mr. Zioncheck] to be eliminated from the RECORD.

There has grown up a practice in this House lately, and only a couple of months ago I spoke to the Speaker about it, of men rising on the floor and making certain requests and then, after the requests are denied, to continue talking. I have held that under the rules of the House, after a decision is made by the Speaker or the Chairman, no further language should be taken down, and I think you will admit this is right, otherwise we get a lot of extraneous matter in the RECORD that does not belong there.

I am not so obtuse that I need any admonition or instructions from the gentleman from Washington. I have always held my membership in this House in the greatest dignity. I have tried to proceed according to the rules, and, above and beyond all that, irrespective of any rules, I have always tried to be a gentleman. [Applause.] I have never impeded or stood in the way of any reasonable request made by any Member of this House.

Yesterday, the one hundred and ninety-third anniversary of the birth of Thomas Jefferson, I thought we ought to pause a while and consider the work of this great man. As I said yesterday, and as I repeat today, there seems to be a philosophy growing up that there is nothing to the credit of men who have given their lives and their best endeavors for the Republic. A certain element today sees nothing in that philosophy. They see nothing in the historic backgrounds of the past that have been the milestones along which our Republic has traveled. They would have them all sink into insignificance for that of the present day and the present

The gentleman from Washington requested me to yield. I said to him, off the record, I preferred not to yield until I had completed my speech, as I wanted to keep it connected and all together, but the gentleman still persisted, and, as you all know, I try to make it a practice to yield to anyone who requests me to do so. I yielded to the gentleman, and he made a remark in a sneering manner that would tend to disparage any attempt to erect a memorial to the memory of Thomas Jefferson. However, I proceeded with my statement, and after the gentleman sought to interrupt me further several times-

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. BOYLAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 5 additional minutes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent to proceed for 5 additional minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. BOYLAN. The gentleman sought to interrupt me further, and in view of the tenor of his first remark I declined to yield to him. He persisted, however, in his endeavors to spurt himself into my speech. I refused to yield to him, and at the conclusion of my speech he asked time to proceed for 1 minute. Judging by his previous action in his question and statement, I did not care to have any similar remarks follow my address. So I objected to his request.

I cannot recall when I objected to any other man's request before, but I objected for the reason I have stated; and after I had objected he went on with some irrelevant statement to the effect that I did not yield because I was not able to answer the question.

I am not a crystal gazer, and I do not hold forth as an astrologer. I do not know what question was in the gentleman's mind. I do not know his mental processes. Of course, I have certain opinions of them, based on observation of his actions and talk on this floor, but courtesy prevents me from expressing these opinions. [Laughter.] I shall not put them in the RECORD.

Of course, if he tried to spurt himself into my speech-Mr. ZIONCHECK. Mr. Speaker, a point of order.

The point of order is this: I did not intend to refer to other matters, but it is like the gentleman from Texas, when he said that I was doped, and he took the word "doped" out and left a blank.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that the gentleman is not stating a point of order.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. I would have a right to delete those remarks. I think the gentleman from Texas is a son of a Texan, and I am going to take the "Texan" out.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks the gentleman from New York was proceeding in order, and the Chair overrules the point of order made by the gentleman from Washington.

Mr. BOYLAN. Mr. Speaker, I had not quite finished. After I objected the gentleman made this irrelevant remark that I was unable to answer the question. Then when I received the written transcript of the proceedings I noticed that that statement was in the RECORD after I had objected to his request, and therefore I called the attention of the reporter to the fact that extraneous matter had been injected after I had objected to his proceeding.

Now, I said that under the orderly procedure of the House that remark should be eliminated because it was squirted or spurted in there. I took it up with the chief reporter, and he consulted with his colleagues who have been here for many years, and they all agreed that it should come out. I did not take it out, I merely called the attention of the reporter to the rules of the House, and he took it out. gentleman from Washington seems to be very much perturbed about it this morning.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. BOYLAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 5 minutes more.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. RANKIN. Reserving the right to object, we have a very important conference report to dispose of this morning. Mr. BOYLAN. If the gentleman objects, I shall have to raise the question of the privilege of the House.

Mr. RANKIN. I hope the gentleman will not interrupt me until I have finished my statement. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object, although I am not going to object, to the gentleman's proceeding for 5 minutes more. I think this matter the gentleman is now discussing has taken too much time already, and we have a conference report here that affects the people in many States—people whose homes have been washed away by floods or destroyed by cyclones. I shall object to anybody else having time until this conference report is disposed of.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. BOYLAN. So that language was struck out. Now, I have the greatest admiration for the gentleman from Washington. I wish he would pay a little attention to me. I have great respect for the gentleman from Washington.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. And I have for the gentleman from New York.

Mr. BOYLAN. He is young and impulsive and needs a little seasoning, which he will probably get in time. [Laughter.] My admiration, my respect and love for the gentleman are so great that I would not put a stone in his way, but I do say that if he is left to himself he is liable to squirt himself out of his seat, and I would not like to see that happen.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Mr. Speaker, a point of order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. The point of order is this: When I squirt myself out of my seat where will I squirt myself and who cares?

Mr. BOYLAN. The gentleman will probably squirt himself into that oblivion from which he emanated.

The SPEAKER. It is distinctly out of order and against the rules for Members to interrupt another Member who is speaking, especially when seated. The Chair trusts that the gentleman from Washington will observe that rule.

Mr. BOYLAN. Mr. Speaker, I do not want to see the House lose the services of such a valuable gentleman as the Member from Washington. We need all types of character, as they all go to make up a general ensemble. The gentleman from Washington may have his peculiarities, perhaps due to a different temperament, perhaps attributable to the air of the great West, but we tolerate him, and we ask him at all times to have a little respect for the dignity of the House, to feel his membership here, to so carry on that he would show not only in his language but also in his daily actions and conduct that he appreciates being a Member of the great House of Representatives. I have never done anything surreptitiously in my life, and I am too old to start now, and let me assure the gentleman that I shall proceed in the same even tenor of my way.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Is that a promise?

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from New York has again expired.

Mr. BOYLAN. Mr. Speaker, have these interruptions been taken out of my time? If they have, then I have not quite finished my 5 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman ask unanimous consent for more time?

Mr. BOYLAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for another minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the gentleman from New York proceeding for 1 minute?

There was no objection.

Mr. BOYLAN. Mr. Speaker, I do hope that the young gentleman from Washington will not feel that I have spoken harshly about him. Everything that I have said has been said as in the light of a big brother. I do not want to see him go wrong. I should like him to study the rules of the House and be familiar with our procedure, and then I am sure he will not make the same error that he made yesterday.

LEAVE TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. LUDLOW. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 5 minutes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Indiana asks unanimous consent to proceed for 5 minutes. Is there objection?

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object. There is a very pressing conference report here ready for consideration on flood control and flood relief. For 2 weeks we have been trying to get some relief for the people of this country who are in dire circumstances, but we take the time to discuss many matters here that are not of great importance. I think we ought to give consideration to flood-control legislation. I shall not object to this request, but I think we ought to get down to brass tacks here and do something.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object. I agree with the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Rich]. We have a measure here that means almost life and death to thousands, probably hundreds of thousands, of people in this country, many of whom have been out of their homes for a week, ever since the flood struck here several days ago. I wonder if the gentleman from Indiana would be willing to wait and get his time later.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I demand the regular order. The SPEAKER. The regular order is called for. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana?

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, for the present I shall have to object.

THE IMPORTANCE OF THE IMMEDIATE CONSTRUCTION OF AMERICAN AIRSHIPS

Mr. O'CONNELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. O'CONNELL. Mr. Speaker, not a day passes that the press of our Nation fails to publish some article or cable report concerning the new German Zeppelin, the Von Hindenburg, which is the largest airship ever constructed. This airship is scheduled to visit the United States early in May.

This trip of the Von Hindenburg is for the purpose of making a demonstration through which Congress may be influenced to provide more money to construct more Germandesigned airships, like the Akron and the Macon, and perhaps also that the United States may place orders for Zeppelin airships to be constructed in Germany.

The German Zeppelin interests now practically dominate airship construction in the United States by its American Zeppelin patents and its large holding of stock in the Goodyear Zeppelin Corporation, to which the American Zeppelin patents are transferred or licensed.

The Zeppelin influence extends further, in that some former Zeppelin engineers, many of whom are now American citizens, are members of boards which have been appointed to investigate airships. Their reports, directly or indirectly, constitute an influence in favor of the Zeppelin, especially as they appear to recommend only airships that have "demonstrated flight."

The Akron and the Macon have "demonstrated flight" through the appropriation of public funds by Congress. An American airship designer may have an airship endorsed by eminent American engineers as being stronger, safer, and better in other respects, yet its construction may not now be considered by the Government agencies because he has not previously "demonstrated flight."

There is still another important thought that should be considered. The operation of the Graf Zeppelin to South America has definitely increased commerce between Germany and South America. The new Von Hindenburg will also be placed in service to South America, and still further may increase German exports to South America. A sister ship of the Von Hindenburg is reported to be now under construction in Germany, and a deal with Dutch interests is said to provide the construction of more German-built Zeppelin airships to engage in trade to the Dutch island colonies. It seems evident Germany contemplates dominating lighter-than-air transportation.

The Germans have built in Germany only five airships since the World War. Two of these were employed for several months in intercity commercial service with very satisfactory results and with substantial profit, then were delivered to France and Italy as part war indemnity and were broken up.

The Los Angeles was delivered to the American Government, and after many years of successful flight is still reported as sound, and with some repairs could be put in service now. The Graf Zeppelin has conducted a wide range of successful flight for 7 years, in which was included a trip around the world. The Von Hindenburg has completed its first long overseas journey, and is said to be the best airship that has been constructed.

The Zeppelin frame is classified as an indeterminate structure and may be calculated only upon what is termed an "empirical formula" and may not be calculated upon normal engineering formulas. It is interesting to know that the empirical formula is established only through experience of actual construction and use of what is classed as an indeterminate structure.

Prior to the construction of the Akron and Macon, the Zeppelin engineering organization was supplied with data for an airship only as large as the Los Angeles or the Graf Zeppelin. They may have desired to construct an airship the size of the new Von Hindenburg, but perhaps had no data to then warrant such construction. What would they do about it?

It has been stated that when Germany believed it would win the war against France, England, Italy, and Russia the German imperial command considered who would pay Germany. Their opponents were without resources to pay, and if the United States was forced into war against Germany then the United States could pay Germany, for the United States was known to be a wealthy country.

The German imperial command, therefore, is said to have deliberately ordered certain naval operations which resulted in the United States becoming involved and while the opinion as to Germany's winning was an error, they were right in that the United States would pay for the conflict, for while we did not pay Germany, we did pay our allies.

If the German Zeppelin engineers wanted definite information that would warrant them to build the Von Hindenburg, which is larger than the Akron or Macon, and to advance their empirical formulas with construction and operation data, they would need to build larger airships or get someone else to pay for the experiment. My opinion is the United States was again chosen to be "the goat." The | construction and destruction of the Akron and Macon undoubtedly supplied valuable data to the German Zeppelin organization for the construction of the Von Hindenburg.

I do not wish to say anything detrimental to our now valued American citizens of German birth, who may formerly have been Zeppelin-trained engineers and came to our country to aid in the design and construction of the Akron.

The fact remains, however, that these engineers perhaps had not acquired the full technical knowledge then possessed by the Zeppelin organization, or, if they had such knowledge, they did not insist that the Akron and Macon be constructed with certain important reinforcements which I am informed were employed in the construction of previous Zeppelin

I understand that during the Lighter-Than-Air Forum, at Akron, Ohio, July 25 and 26 last year, the Navy Department was charged with responsibility for the loss of the Akron and Macon because the builders were not allowed to include certain reinforcements which had been considered necessary and were included in previous Zeppelin-constructed airships.

I do not know if an investigation has been made concerning these charges or the result of such investigation if made.

The loss of the Akron and Macon is thought to be directly the result of structural failure at a place which in other Zeppelin airships were reinforced, and the operating personnel of these airships were no more to blame than a driver of an automobile should be blamed when a front axle breaks and the automobile is wrecked.

We should at least learn from the loss of $10,000,000 worth of airships, with the lives of scores of men, that we should now question the advice of those who may be responsible for the structural failure of the Akron and Macon and of those who now recommend the continued construction of such airships, when the United States has the most competent structural engineers in the world, who have been ignored when American airship construction has heretofore been considered.

When the new Zeppelin, the Von Hindenburg, arrives in America these American engineers must feel that the American people, the American press, and the American Government have no confidence in their ability to design and construct airships as well as the German engineers and that other nations may feel the American engineer has fallen from his former leadership among engineers of the world.

I have been very much impressed by a brief prepared by Dr. D. B. Steinman, president of the National Society of Professional Engineers, published in the February issue of the American Engineer, as follows:

The engineer—he is the master of the laws of nature. On a sound foundation of mathematics, science, and economics he bends the materials and forces of nature to his plan and rears the strucof civilization.

With vision, resourcefulness, and ingenuity, he labors to increase the comfort, wealth, and safety of his fellow men. He attacks his problems with the vision of the pioneer, the integrity of the scientist, the accuracy of the mathematician, the practicality of the businessman, the resourcefulness of the inventor, and the courage of the conqueror.

He is the planner and builder. He builds his visions into enduring realities.

He is the pathfinder of civilization. He breaks down barriers, bridges chasms, establishes communication, and straightens the way for commerce and human progress.

He is the protagonist of efficiency. He reduces effort, eliminates waste, and increases production.

He is the creator of a nation's wealth. He drains the swamps, reclaims the deserts, develops resources, and harnesses power. He builds the machinery of industry, the wheels of commerce, and the structure of business

He is the great coordinator. He plans and directs the construction of projects representing the investment of millions of dollars and involving the labor of thousands of men.

He investigates with open mind and gets the facts before he makes decisions. He plans with thoroughness and builds with

To his rich heritage from the labors of past generations of engineers and scientists he adds his contributions. He continues the work of forcing outward the challenging barriers that separate man's efforts from the impossible.

Dr. Steinman is an eminent consulting engineer, in the design and construction of both arch-frame and suspension bridges, and is recognized throughout the world as among insurance during such construction and operation.

the leaders in his profession. He has designed many of the great bridges in North and South America, as well as in other sections of the world.

He has knowledge and experience that assures his ability to analyze the Zeppelin arch-bridge type frame, the aerodynamic and load stresses imposed on an airship in flight, and to design an airship structure with the application of the suspension-bridge engineering principles, for any size airships.

One of our American inventors developed the idea of employing the self-anchored suspension-bridge principle in the construction of airships. With the cooperation and advice of the Guggenheim School of Aeronautics, of New York University, following standard procedure, a scale model was made and tested with very satisfactory results. Robinson & Steinman, consulting engineers, were then employed to design a suspension-bridge frame for an airship, to be constructed upon specifications prepared by the Bureau of Aeronautics of the Navy Department, for the Akron and Macon.

Upon the completion of this work Messrs. Robinson & Steinman submitted a report in which were the following statements.

Whatever may be said of the performance of the Zeppelin airship will apply equally to the Respess airship, but the Respess airship would have in addition the following advantages:

Greater strength and safety. Greater inherent strength. Increased length of life. Decreased maintenance costs More efficient use of material. Reduction in cost of construction. Reduction in time of construction. of construction.

Simplicity, accuracy, and definiteness of calculation. The stresses in this airship never reverse, thereby removing all fear of failure in the hull through fatigue and crystallization. The net pay load will be unusually high, facilitating economical commercial operation.

This is the type of airships proposed to be constructed under bill H. R. 2744, for two 7,000,000-cubic-foot airships and their operation in trans-Atlantic service, and in bills H. R. 10186 for a 300-ton military airship and H. R. 12030 for a 300-ton naval airship.

The main purpose of these bills is (1) to demonstrate the practical and profitable operation of American-designed airships in overseas trade and thus may attract private capital to engage in the extension of such operation; (2) to demonstrate the military or naval value of American airships that are designed for commercial use but may be converted to military service in the event of war. Thus we may determine the support the Government should extend as loans to encourage commercial airship construction and operation by private capital, as now provided for our merchant marine.

The value of airships has been determined to a sufficient extent to warrant American airship construction, and such construction has been approved by several Government agencies-the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, the Federal Aviation Commission, the Science Committee, and the Navy, War, and Commerce Departments.

In heavier-than-air transportation the United States is farther advanced than any other nation of the world. With our huge supply of nonexplosive helium gas we also have the opportunity to become the leader in overseas airship transportation. Our leadership in heavier-than-air transportation has been attained through gradually increasing investment of private capital. Leadership in airship overseas transportation may also be established with invested private capital when it is demonstrated such service may be conducted with profit.

The Government itself constructed the Shenandoah. Akron and Macon were constructed under naval specification and supervision. We now have none of these airships, and they were not insured. I am opposed to further airship construction under such conditions. I am in favor of American private agencies attacking the problem of American airship construction and operation and to carry full

That airships may be operated at an attractive profit is indicated by an estimate of the probable annual receipts and expenditures for such service, as contemplated under bill H. R. 2744, for the construction and operation of two 7,000,000-cubic-foot airships, each making a round trip weekly between our Atlantic coast and England or Europe.

Operating charges
Administration and communication	_ $300,000
Fuel and oil
Helium gas
Crew
Engine maintenance and replacement	500,000
Terminal charges
Contingencies	And the Control of the Control of Insurance
Insurance Airship maintenance	500,000
Airship depreciation	500,000
Liquidation of construction loan
Interest at 3½ percent annually
Traffic solicitation and handling of the Stave Department for the Alcon and	6, 035, 000
Estimated income	1840,15
the statement security services to the reproduction for	Pounds
Total pay load available each trip	48,000
Total load, 208 trips	9, 984, 000
Average 75 percent full loads
Average 80 percent of schedule trips	5, 958, 400
Income with $1.50 pound charge	$8, 937, 600
Deduct operating charges	6, 035, 000

These estimates were submitted with realization that no service of this character has ever been operated, and consequently the figures must be taken as approximate. A sincere effort was made to estimate the operating charges high and the prospective income low. It is fair to state also it is believed the pay load will be much more than 48,000 pounds.

Net profit_

Airships for commercial operation of this character must be strong and flexible in order to resist unusual or unexpected stresses during all seasons of the year and in all kinds of weather. They must have speed of at least 100 miles per hour for rapid transportation and to avoid storms as far as may be possible. They must be able to operate at relatively high altitudes if necessary in order to avoid low storms, or seek a level of most favorable air currents, and they must have these qualities without reduction of the useful load beyond the point of providing a profitable pay load.

There are two types of thoroughly tested engineering principles that may be employed in designing airship frames. One is that of the arch-type bridge, that requires a structural weight 40 percent greater than that of a suspension bridge of equal strength and capacity. If the arch-frame bridge were reduced 40 percent in weight it would not be capable of carrying the same load, and no bridge engineer could endorse the safety of such bridge for such load.

The suspension-bridge engineering principles, when employed for an airship frame, not only has the important advantage of reduced weight but receives stress on elastic steel bridge strand wire, and in this type of structure the stresses never reverse, therefore removing all fear of failure in the hull through fatigue and crystallization. In the operation of Zeppelin-frame airships reversal of stress, fatigue, and crystallization of the metal employed cannot be avoided.

That there is a need for safe American overseas airship service and ample opportunity for conducting such service profitably is supported by the House Committee on Commerce in its report on the merchant airship bill, H. R. 8681, June 15, 1932, from which I take the following extract:

The Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 8681) to develop American air transport services overseas, to encourage the construction in the United States by American capital of American airships for use in foreign commerce, and to make certain provisions of the maritime law applicable to foreign commerce by airship, have considered the same and report thereon with amendments and, so as amended, recommend that the bill do pass.

The purpose of the bill is to promote national defense and foreign aircraft serving such trade and trade by having suitable American aircraft serving such trade and available for use in time of war. The creation of commercial airtransport services overseas as a supplement to the American merchant marine is a possibility that has only now become practicable by recent advances in applied science. There is ample evidence that the time has now come to use the air as the medium for rapid transport of the urgent portion of our business representatives, samples, and mails to overseas markets.

The speed of steamships has about reached its economical limit. To maintain a speed of more than 24 knots requires vessels of enor-To maintain a speed of more than 24 knots requires vessels of enormous size and cost. Freight and passengers cannot be found to fill such superships except on the North Atlantic, and even there international rivalry supported by governments has only pushed the speed up to 28 knots. Naval architects propose the ultimate ship of 30-knot speed, to cost twice as much as a 24-knot vessel, saving 1 day in the Atlantic crossing. Such ships, flying our flag, will cost approximately $30,000,000 each, of which amount threefourths is required, under existing law, to be loaned by our Government at low rates of interest.

In the Pacific there is slight possibility of supporting from commercial revenues steamships of much greater speed than are now available. And yet in the Pacific our national and commercial interests may have the greater need for increased speed of transportation. To increase the speed of water transportation materially is usually prohibitive in cost, because the portion of passengers, mails, usually prohibitive in cost, because the portion of passengers, mails, and goods that really require high speed is too small to fill at increased charges the great vessels needed to provide such speed.

The other side of the picture reveals the air over the sea as an available medium for the very high-speed transport by aircraft of this relatively small portion of the traffic now moving that is able to pay for time saved. Instead of a possible speed increase of 10 or 15 percent offered by steamships at a very great cost, aircraft offer the possibility of a speed increase of several hundred percent over existing means and at moderate cost. In other words, the economical speed for aircraft operations is high compared with economical speed for aircraft operations is high compared with that for vessel operations.

Today our trade and manufacture are not simply a matter of domestic industry and exchange. We have developed the principles and practices of quantity production to such an extent that we have become an exporting Nation. This export field is new to our generation, but we are in competition with the old, experienced export nations of the world. If our future in this export field is to be a success we must proceed with a definite program of aggressiveness.

Once we had the leading position in the China trade until the Civil War destroyed the American merchant marine. We had the cream of that carrying trade, because we had the swiftest sailing ships in those days of sail and wooden ships. It was speed that won us the tea and silk cargoes.

In the Atlantic we have no geographical advantage, and if we are to receive our share of trade we must take the lead in securing closer contacts and better relations. Here our problem of maintaining a reasonable position in foreign trade is one demanding the greatest application of American ingenuity.

Europe is fast learning the lesson of mass production from American industry, and with its present almost unchallenged position in the field of steamship transportation bids fair to assume a commanding lead in the Atlantic trade to the exclusion of her commanding lead in the Atlantic trade to the exclusion of her American competitors.

In the Pacific geography has been more favorable to us. We are in the enviable position of being closest to the largest concentration of population on earth. We must take those steps now which facilitate intercourse and increase accessibility.

It is 6 or 7 days from San Francisco to Honolulu by steamship (one ship only making it in 4 days—the fastest on the Pacific), and approximately 14 days to Japan. It is 3 weeks from California to Manila and even longer to Hong Kong or Shanghai. Two months must pass before the average letter receives a reply. Trade must develop slowly under such conditions. Speed is essential for letters and documents, for samples and high-class express traffic, for orders, for the service of filling these orders, and for the transport of business representatives.

The application of airships of the Akron type to trans-Pacific

The application of airships of the Akron type to trans-Pacific service has been represented to the committee by responsible American business and shipping men as promising a profound alteration ican business and shipping men as promising a profound alteration in the effects of geographical distance. For example, Hawaii can be brought within 36 hours of California, giving not only obvious trade benefits but also a powerful corrective to the unfortunate effects of the relative inaccessibility of our primary Pacific fortress. Airship service to Manila can cut the travel time from 3 weeks to 6 days and bring Shanghai, Hong Kong, and Tokyo as close to our west coast as London, Paris, and Berlin are by steamship from our east coast. Airships on the North Atlantic can deliver passengers, mails, and express in Europe in less than half the time now taken by the faster foreign steamships.

Such overseas air-transport services will be supplemental to the merchant marine, which must continue to carry the bulk of passengers and mails and all of the heavy cargo. The merchant marine is supported by the volume of our foreign trade and will be benefited to the degree that airships succeed in stimulating this trade. Captain Dollar has well said, "When business representatives can visit their foreign customers more quickly they will go more often, get more orders, and our ships will get more cargoes."

The airship as a new vehicle for the service of our foreign trade

The airship as a new vehicle for the service of our foreign trade can give an increase in speed over our existing fast steamers comparable to that following the replacement of sail by steam in the last century.

The volume of traffic now moving across the Pacific and Atlantic is enormous. For example, over 1,000,000 persons crossed the North Atlantic by steamship in 1930. Of these, 100,000 persons each way went first class and half of them booked passage at extra fares on the 10 fastest ships. An airship service to Europe giving a sailing twice a week would carry the small fraction of this traffic for whom time saving was really worth while.

Across the Pacific the present passages to 65 to 2000.

Across the Pacific the present passenger traffic is very much less than on the North Atlantic. Even in 1929 but 100,000 persons crossed the Pacific. It is obvious that passengers do not travel when ships are slow and distances great. While the traffic available for the trans-Atlantic airship service is more than ample, the need for a speedier service across the Pacific is even more evident.

need for a speedier service across the Pacific is even more evident. The weight of all mail dispatched from New York to Europe reaches annually nearly 40,000,000 pounds, of which about 3,850,000 pounds is first class. The weekly shipment of first-class mail by all steamers exceeds 69,000 pounds. With two airships sailing weekly, a large portion of this first-class mail could be expedited, but with a surcharge to the public in the form of an extra stamp the volume actually designated to be sent by air can be controlled by the post office. The post office can in this way adjust the relation between the compensation paid to the carrier and the surcharge paid to the post office.

Across the Pacific like the passenger movement, the mail move-charge paid to the post office.

Across the Pacific, like the passenger movement, the mail movement is less than across the Atlantic, the first-class portion of such mails being about 28 percent of Atlantic first-class mail. This quantity is within the capacity of airships to handle.

There is no international express business, but it is to be expected that a rapid air-transport service will develop such a business analogous to our domestic railway and air express. Newsreel films, machinery parts, style goods, plans, specifications, drugs and cultures, manuscripts, and samples may be counted on for such shipments. Also there will always be a great variety of miscellaneous merchandise which through special attendant circumstances must be shipped by the fastest means available regardless of cost. Such shipments may represent the specifications for new of cost. Such shipments may represent the specifications for new construction, a delayed order, machinery repair parts, technical apparatus, and the like.

There appears to be in our foreign trade a large potential volume of passengers, mall, and express that can benefit by time saving. These three classes of business should share in an equitable manner the expense of operating the air service.

The United States has in the past established itself as leader in fast overseas transportation, but today other nations have larger and faster ships. The construction and operation of these ships are possible only through very large Government construction loans and operation subsidies.

Rear Admiral H. I. Cone, retired, when chairman of the Advisory Committee of the United States Shipping Board Bureau, told the Federal Aviation Commission that "the Government should build a series of airships suitable for transoceanic passenger and express service." In that way, he declared, "the United States would assume world leadership in the aircraft industry, enabling us at the same time to recapture our lost position in the field of world shipping", adding, "the United States will be left hopelessly behind unless we take steps for building airships to fill out our merchant

In the consideration of building and operating commercial airships, with subsequent construction of additional airships with private capital, the operations as stated must be conducted at a profit. Thus, there are two vital points to be decided: The type and size of the airships to be constructed and the conditions under which the airships shall be operated.

In the choice of airships the type and size that provide the greatest strength and safety, with assurance of rendering the most valuable commercial and military service, should be selected. The conditions under which the airships may be operated should give assurance of a reasonable profit, after providing for replacements, liquidation of principal, and interests on funds employed in the construction and in establishing the service.

Assuming that the present airships can be improved, for important improvement has always heretofore resulted with the extension of transportation operations, shall we be content to build airships on the Zeppelin adaptation of the archframe bridge construction, or shall we seek improvement through the advice and service of our eminent American engineers?

Some of my friends in Congress have suggested that

We know about the Zeppelin's performance and we are not engineers to determine the highly technical principles involved in a comparison of the Zeppelin frame and the suspension-bridge frame.

Fundamentally, the suspension-bridge-frame airship is, to our highly trained engineer, just another suspension-bridge-type structure that is covered with waterproofed fabric, in which gas balloons are installed, with engines for propulsion, with control surfaces provided for directing flight, and with other equipment installed.

If a duplicate of the Akron, the Macon, the Graf Zeppelin, or the new Von Hindenburg were constructed, the only difference being in the type of frame employed, both airships would perform equally well. If the frame in the new airship is stronger, safer, and costs much less to construct, that is the airship we should have.

In order to determine what airships we should build, a committee of Congress may call American engineers of structural design and obtain their opinion as to the more dependable frame, then call representatives of our great construction engineering organizations and ask if they could build the suspension-bridge airship frame when designed; call those capable of supplying and fitting the cover to the airship; call those who have constructed gas bags, balloons, or blimps, and are capable of installing the gas bags in the airship; call our leading manufacturers of airplane or other suitable engines; call experienced men from our Government agencies who are capable of advising concerning other equipment for the airship; then finally call those who are experienced in operating airships to secure their opinions concerning their ability to fly the airship if the only difference is the frame.

If the suspension-bridge frame is better, the airship should be better. If the construction is simpler and the airships can be built quicker, we need airships now, and the time element is of material value. If the cost of construction and maintenance is less, such airships will have a considerable advantage as a vehicle of transportation and commerce. With these facts supported by American engineers who have designed and constructed our great public works, for which we have appropriated millions of dollars, then we are warranted in accepting the judgment of these engineers and in approving the airship bills, H. R. 2744, H. R. 10186, and H. R. 12030, and this should be done by the present Congress.

Mr. Speaker, I feel this is a matter of vital importance to our Nation. The airship is destined to become a major form of air transportation, and we will realize this fact within a very few years, perhaps after another nation has become well established, and we may not then obtain the dominating place in overseas rapid transportation.

At the present time we have the only supply of nonexplosive helium gas in the entire world; we have our unsurpassed American engineers, who have been pioneers in the major improvements that we have secured in the past 50 years; and we have a Congress in session concerning which history can record as being responsible for American domination of airship overseas transportation, for extending our commerce by air to the trade marts of the world, and for giving our country a valuable means of defense in event of war.

I have investigated the sentiment of Congress concerning American airship construction and operation. I believe a majority of Members, in both the House and Senate, favor action by the present Congress and would vote in favor of such legislation were an opportunity provided for them to

RELIGIOUS LIBERTY

Mr. MAVERICK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MAVERICK. Mr. Speaker, I have made numerous talks on this floor concerning civil liberties. Today I shall say only a very few words about religious liberty.

(Note.—Should any person making research desire to find facts concerning freedom of speech and a résumé of cases. especially of the wartime, see speech delivered by me Mar. 4, 1936, CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.)

My purpose is merely to mention the danger to religious liberty by the suppression of civil liberties. All the statements I have made in reference to civil liberties in my recent speech and in other speeches apply in equal force, if not greater force, to all religions, churches, and even all unorganized philosophical or religious theories.

The history of the world shows that religious groups are often utilized by selfish interests under some false theory of preventing subversive tactics, immoral tendencies, and so on, when the real purpose is to eliminate civil liberties, and the result has always been the loss of religious liberties. It is obvious that the church should fight all subversive movements and anything that might degrade the Nation morally, but it should look with decided suspicion on any plan that might lead to its loss of civil and religious liberty.

I respectfully suggest to every minister in America and every person who loves his own religion to fight consistently for civil liberties, in which is included freedom of conscience and religion.

NEUTRALITY

Mr. SCHULTE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the gentleman from Indiana extending his remarks in the RECORD?

There was no objection,

Mr. SCHULTE. Mr. Speaker, ladies and gentlemen of the House, it was my pleasure and privilege sometime ago to vote for extension of the neutrality legislation. We passed this same legislation in 1935, but owing to the fact that the law expired our President asked us to extend the act for another year in order that this country would be in a position to meet the emergencies that may arise from threatening war clouds to the east and the west. Hardly has this neutrality legislation been approved by this Congress than war clouds began to darken in the European war zone and the Far East. Wars nowadays are not contemplated nor declared, they simply start. And it was with these thoughts in mind that the President asked extension of the neutrality law.

I am not altogether satisfied with the present law, because I feel that it is not strict enough to keep us out of war with other nations into which we may be drawn and in which we have no business. Since this act was extended I have received hundreds of letters from the fathers and mothers of my district urging that this country pass a neutrality law that will definitely keep this country from becoming embroiled in another world war. The law which was recently signed by the President forbids the sale of arms to belligerents, and for that we can be thankful. It forbids the lending of money to belligerents, and from that it is shown that America has learned a lesson from the World War. It authorizes the President, at his discretion, to withdraw the protection of the United States Government from Americans traveling on vessels flying a belligerent's flag.

But our neutrality law does not forbid, or even limit, the building up of a synthetically prosperous American trade in war materials other than arms, and the development of an economic stake in other people's war.

None of us can forget that memorable day in April 1917 when newspapers heralded throughout the land the news, "America declares war!" Thus from Sarajevo, in 1914, to April 1917, the hand of Europe has drawn us ever closer and closer. With all our resources, with all our strength, with all our might, we struck for justice, for freedom, and for humanity. From every walk of life, from the hills and valleys, from the cities and the countrysides, from the offices and the workshops, from the platform and the pulpit even, there was mobilization of valor such as only a people who love liberty truly, who believe in Government where individual opportunity is synonymous with individual liberty, in a land where "every man is set free to be his best and do his best", could produce.

I am sure, ladies and gentlemen, that the American people do not want to have such another war forced upon them as the one this Nation was virtually shoved into almost a score of years ago-a war which has left its scars even on the people of this generation. No father or mother wants to send his son off to war to make the supreme sacrifice. This is the age of reason and not barbarism. But, my friends, the I concretely that war is costly and does not pay:

same propagandists that lit the torch that led the way for the god of war into America in 1917, 1898, in 1863, and during the Revolutionary War, are again at work. The same propagandists, the same munition manufacturers, and the same interests are today fostering another war. Little do they appreciate or care about the value of home life. Little do they care about the loved ones that need a mother's care. Little do they care about the hardships of battle. They will receive their profits in bloody bonds, high prices for their products, and gloat over the gouging of their huge profits.

Just recently one of the foremost newspapermen of this country predicted that in 2 more years the world would again be tossed into the chaos of war.

That is why our President wished the extension of the present neutrality law. He foresaw the trend of events. The American people, who have paid and paid for wars, realize what war means to our civilization and the peace and tranquillity of our homes. It means that the man who is going to do the fighting, who does the real and final paying, is going to stop and give particular thought to the question of neutrality. He is going to stop and ask himself:

"Why must I be placed in a foreign territory to fight?" "Why must I be the one to sacrifice my life when my country is not directly embroiled?"

"Why must I be the one to sacrifice my life for those who sit in swivel chairs and make millions and millions in war profits from manufacturing implements of war, of death and hell, while I lie in the mud and the filth in the trenches in the dark?"

Now, let us stop and think what we have paid-what was the price, in blood and money, paid by America, Great Britain, and all of the Allies for the World War from 1914

Did you ever stop to think, my friends, that the number of dead totaled 6,938,519; that 3,437,740 soldiers were seriously wounded, and that 8,516,497 were otherwise wounded? Did you ever stop to consider that America's entry into the World War cost this Government the staggering sum of $50,361,-435,200.78, and more?

Wars have been costly for the people of this country not only from a financial standpoint but from the standpoint of deaths and casualties. I should like to set forth some figures just to reveal the toll of wars which this country has engaged in. In the Revolutionary War from the Battle of Lexington to the surrender of Yorktown, in 24 engagements, the American losses in the field were about 8.000.

In the War of 1812 the number killed in battle was about 1,500; the total number killed and wounded in land battles was approximately 5,000, with the grand total of losses, including prisoners, 9,700.

In the Mexican War the total losses were estimated at 1,549 killed or died of wounds; 10,986 died of disease. In the Civil War the Union Armies' total number of deaths was 359,528. Of these, 67,058 were killed in battle and 43,012 died of wounds, giving a total of 110,070 deaths from battle casualties. For the Confederate Armies it is estimated that the battle losses were 94,000 and that twice that many died of disease.

The total loss of life in the Spanish-American War totaled 2,910, including 280 killed. The wounded number 1,577, of whom 65 died. Those who died of disease totaled 2,565.

Losses sustained by the United States troops in the Philippine Insurrection totaled 777 killed, 227 died of wounds. 2,572 died of disease, while 598 died of miscellaneous causes to total 4,165 deaths and 2,911 wounded.

Statistics on America's participation in the World War reveal: Total number of men in active service in the front line, 1,390,000; total number of deaths in action and from wounds, 48,909.

I should like to call your attention at this moment not only to the staggering toll suffered by the Allied armies during the World War but to the number of dead, those seriously wounded, otherwise wounded, and prisoners taken or otherwise missing of all armies engaged on both sides to illustrate

Casualties of the Great World War, 1914-18

Country	Known dead	Seriously wounded	Otherwise wounded	Prisoners or missing
United States Great Britain France Russia Italy Belgium ³ Serbia Rumania ⁴ Grecce ³ Portugal ¹ Japan ⁴	1 107, 284 2 807, 451 2 1, 427, 800 2, 762, 064 107, 160 287, 000 707, 343 339, 117 15, 000 4, 000 300	43, 000 617, 740 700, 000 1, 000, 000 500, 000 40, 000 322, 000 200, 000 10, 000 5, 000	148, 000 1, 441, 394 2, 344, 000 3, 950, 000 462, 196 100, 000 28, 000 (4) 30, 000 12, 000 907	4, 912 64, 907 435, 500 2, 500, 000 1, 359, 000 100, 000 116, 000 45, 000 3
1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1	6, 938, 519	3, 427, 740	8, 516, 497	4, 653, 522
Germany Austria-Hungary Turkey Bulgaria	1, 611, 104 911, 000 436, 924 6 101, 224	1, 600, 000 850, 000 107, 772 300, 000	2, 183, 143 2, 150, 000 300, 000 852, 399	772, 522 443, 000 103, 731 10, 825
THE REPORT OF THE PARTY OF THE	3, 960, 252	2, 857, 772	5, 485, 542	1, 330, 078
Grand total	9, 998, 771	6, 295, 512	14, 002, 039	5, 983, 600

Includes deaths at home and in Expeditionary Force.
Includes colonial casualties as follows:

Force	Dead	Wounded	Prisoners or missing
Great Britain: Canada Australia New Zealand India French colonials	60, 383 54, 890 16, 500 59, 296 42, 569	155, 799 158, 199 41, 432 46, 969 { 15, 000 44, 000	8, 761 () 45 () 3, 500

*Unofficial.

*Exclusive of deaths at Wallachi while controlled by Germany, of the 18,000 prisoners taken by Bulgaria only 7,200 were returned alive, and of the 98,000 prisoners taken by Austria and Germany 43,000 were reported dead, 15,000 were returned alive, and the remainder were reported as still held.

*Included in preceding column.

*Exclusive of influenza deaths and those killed in Macedonia retreat.

*Serious.

Serious.
Otherwise.

Reference: From Bogart, Ernest L.: Direct and Indirect Costs of the Great World War (p. 272). (Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.)

My dear friends, this is "a Government of the people, by the people, for the people", and I have a very high estimate of the intelligence of my constituents, and justified confidence in their good judgment, and sincerely appreciate their earnest desire to be helpful to me by the letters they write and the telegrams they send in the sacred trust they have imposed on me to cast my vote for neutrality legislation that will be so airtight that this country will never again ally herself to take up arms in succor to another country and send the flower of our youth across perilous seas to fight the battles of another country.

From the thousands of letters which I have received, the greater number which indicate a clear conception of the issues involved in our neutrality program, it is apparent to me that the people of the First Congressional District of Indiana are against this Government sending our boys outside of the confines of the United States to fight a war that is none of our concern. I have always been opposed to any entangling alliances with foreign nations, and I believe, as I am sure that 92 percent of the people believe, that this Government of ours should remain free from becoming embroiled with any foreign countries.

In fateful situations like the present, when the question of strict neutrality is involved, when a false step may mean destruction, when a blunder may amount to a crime, when a mistake may mean a hurt which can never be healed, it would be "plucking the fruit of unripe wisdom" to disregard the war clouds which are forming on all sides of us at the present. I do not mean to speak of the danger of this country going to war. I do not mean to speak of the horrors of war. Were I to do so, I should dwell most upon the anguish of those at home, of families broken up, hopes blasted, bodies crippled, insanity and disease, debt and poverty, and want and famine, which are only a few of the results of every great war.

I would speak of liberties lost, constitutions destroyed, of peoples exterminated by the immediate savagery of war or languishing in bondage for generations under tyranny, foreign or domestic, military or economic, that always rides in the wake of war. I will not let my mind dwell upon the distress and disaster that wars bring, but we cannot forget what has happened in former wars, and know that what we need now is the strictest kind of a neutrality measure.

Are we particularly uneasy about the Atlantic coast, fearing the landing there of enemy spies or armies? No. Are we anticipating danger from the 3,000 miles of Canadian border? No. Are we especially apprehensive about the invasion of our country from that portion of the Pacific coast not contiguous to Mexican possessions? No. But our uneasiness lies in the intrigue that newspaper headlines carry to us today of the menacing dangers as evidenced by the darkened war clouds to the east and to the west. That is why I say that this Government should be on its guard as to the happenings all about us.

This country is today sitting on a dangerous precipice, from which foreign nations and the big munitions manufacturers are trying their mightiest to tumble us into oblivion. In London recently the League of Nations Council tried to reach a settlement of the problems tossed into its lap. There was talk that it might propose a new agency through which the nations of Europe might settle their disputes and agree upon a common adjustment and protection of their interests. It is obvious that this cannot be done through the institutions and covenants growing out of the World War. These have been so warped and violated by all nations concerned that they have lost their prestige and usefulness. The League covenant has been reduced to shreds and tatters, and the Kellogg and Locarno pacts have gone the same way.

Another war is not the answer to the question. No nation is financially able to support a war over any grievance that now exists. I am sure that with adequate neutrality that this Nation will not become entangled. I am sure that this country wants no part of any war over existing disputes now at stake.

We must have a strong neutrality law, sponsored by the people of this great Nation of ours, that will safeguard the priceless Government established by Washington and his compatriots and preserved by Lincoln and his invincible heroes and saved by those two great Presidents, Woodrow Wilson and Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

Such a government is worth fighting for, worth dying for. If necessary, every patriot, every free man, every American, will draw his sword to uphold, vindicate, and make good the wise and patriotic stand taken by at least 92 percent of the American people who do not wish to send our armies across dangerous seas to fight a war for the benefit of the munition manufacturers and a foreign power.

The brave, generous, and patriotic people I represent as a Member of this House desire peace with all the world, and as long as I am a Member of Congress I shall never vote to declare war on any country unless this country is invaded by a foreign power, when it will become the duty of every able-bodied citizen to protect and preserve this great Nation.

LOANS TO REHABILITATE FLOOD DAMAGE

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report upon the bill H. R. 11968, relating to the authority of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to make rehabilitation loans for the repair of damages caused by floods or other catastrophes, and I ask unanimous consent that the statement be read in lieu of the report.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Maryland calls up a conference report upon the bill H. R. 11968 and asks unanimous consent that the statement be read in lieu of the report. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the statement of the conferees.

The Clerk read the statement.

The conference report and statement are as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT

[To accompany H. R. 11968]

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 11968) relating to the authority of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to make rehabilitation loans for the repair of damages caused by floods or other catastrophes, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, and 9, and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 7: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 7, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following:

"Sec. 3. Title I of the National Housing Act, as amended, is amended by inserting after section 5 thereof the following new

"'SEC. 6. (a) The Administrator is authorized and empowered, upon such terms and conditions as he may prescribe, to insure banks, trust companies, personal finance companies, mortgage companies, building and loan associations, installment lending companies, and other such financial institutions, heretofore or hereafter approved by the Administrator as eligible for credit insurance, against losses which they may sustain as a result of loans and advances of credit, and purchases of obligations representing loans and advances of credit, made by them subsequent to the date this section takes effect and prior to January 1, 1937, or such earlier date as the President may fix by proclamation upon his determination that the emergency no longer exists, for the purpose of financing, by the owners of real property or by lessees thereof under a lease for a period of not less than one year, the restoration, rehabilitation, rebuilding and replacement of improvements on such real property and equipment and machinery "'SEC. 6. (a) The Administrator is authorized and empowered, restoration, rehabilitation, rebuilding and replacement of improvements on such real property and equipment and machinery thereon which were damaged or destroyed by earthquake, confagration, tornado, cyclone, hurricane, flood, or other catastrophe in the years 1935 or 1936, either on the same site or on a new site in the same locality where the damaged or destroyed property was located. The Administrator is authorized to grant insurance under this section to any such financial institution up to 10 per centum of the total amount of loans, advances of credit, and purphases made by such financial institution for such purpose, and centum of the total amount of loans, advances of credit, and purchases made by such financial institution for such purpose, and any insurance reserve accumulated by any such financial institution under section 2 of this title prior to April 1, 1936, shall be applicable to the payment of any losses sustained by it as a result of loans, advances of credit, or purchases insured under this section.

of loans, advances of credit, or purchases insured under this section.

"(b) No insurance shall be granted under this section to any such financial institution with respect to any obligation representing any such loan, advance of credit, or purchase by it (1) unless the loan bears such interest, has such maturity, and contains such other terms, conditions, and restrictions, as the Administrator shall prescribe in order to make credit available for the purposes of this section; and (2) unless the amount of such loan, advance of credit, or purchase is not in excess of $2,000, except that in the case of any such loan, advance of credit, or purchase made for the purpose of such financing with respect to apartment or multiple family houses, hotels, office, business, or other commercial buildings, hospitals, orphanges, colleges, schools, churches, or manufacturing or industrial plants, such insurance may be granted if the amount of the loan, advance of credit, or purchase is not in excess of $50,000."

And the Senate agree to the same.

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 8: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 8, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following:

"Sec. 4. (a) The third sentence of subsection (a) of section 2 of the National Housing Act, as amended, is amended to read as follows: 'The total liability incurred by the Administrator for all insurance heretofore and hereafter granted under this section and section 6 shall not exceed in the aggregate $100,000,000.'"

And the Senate agree to the same.

T. ALAN GOLDSBOROUGH, M. K. REILLY, JESSE P. WOLCOTT, Managers on the part of the House. DUNCAN U. FLETCHER, ROBERT F. WAGNER, ROBERT J. BULKLEY, JAMES COUZENS, JOHN G. TOWNSEND, Jr., Managers on the part of the Senate.

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 11968) relating to the authority of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to make rehabilitation loans for the repair of damages caused by floods or other catastrophes, and for other purposes, submit the following statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the conferees and recommended in the accompanying conference report:

On amendment no. 1: The House bill authorized rehabilitation On amendment no. 1: The House bill authorized rehabilitation loans by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to be made to "corporations, partnerships, or individuals." The Senate amendment adds "municipalities, or political subdivisions of States or of their public agencies, including public-school boards and public-school districts, and water, sewer, drainage, and flood-control districts." The House recedes.

On amendment no. 2: The Senate amendment adds "highways and bridges" to the type of structures enumerated in the House bill with respect to which such rehabilitation loans might be made. The House recedes.

The House recedes.

On amendment no. 3: The House bill provided that such rehabilitation loans might be made with respect to property damaged or destroyed by catastrophes in the years "1933, 1934, 1935, 1936, and 1937." The Senate amendment provides that the catastrophes must have occurred in the years "1935 or 1936." The House

On amendment no. 4: The House bill contained a requirement that as a condition to obtaining any such loan, the repair, construction, reconstruction, rehabilitation, or acquisition for which the loan was made should be deemed by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to be "economically" useful or necessary. The Senate amendment eliminates the word "economically." The House recedes.

On amendment no. 5: The House bill provided that the aggregate amount of such loans made by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation should not exceed $25,000,000. The Senate amendment increases the amount to $50,000,000. The House recedes.

On amendment no. 6: This is a clerical amendment. The House

On amendment no. 7: This amendment adds a new section to title I of the National Housing Act, as amended, under which the Federal Housing Administrator is authorized to insure financial institutions heretofore or hereafter approved by him as qualified by experience and facilities as eligible for credit insurance, against losses which they may sustain as a result of loans, advances of credit, and purchases of obligations representing loans and advances of credit, made by them for financing the restoration, recredit, and purchases of obligations representing loans and advances of credit, made by them for financing the restoration, rehabilitation, rebuilding, and replacement of property damaged or destroyed by flood or other catastrophe in 1935 or 1936. To be eligible for such insurance, the loans or advances must have been made subsequent to the date the new section takes effect and prior to January 1, 1937, or such earlier date as the President may fix by proclamation upon his determination that the emergency no longer exists, and no such loan or advance may be so insured unless it was made to an owner of real property or to a lessee thereof under a lease for a period of not less than 1 year.

The maximum amount of insurance which may be granted under the new section to any approved financial institution is fixed at 20 percent of the total amount of such loans, advances of credit, and purchases made by it, and any insurance reserve which it may have accumulated under section 2 of the National Housing Act prior to April 1, 1936, is made applicable to the payment of any losses it sustains as a result of loans, advances of credit, or purchases insured under the new section. The provisions with respect to the maximum amount of individual loans and advances which may be insured, and those which relate to interest, maturity, etc., correspond to the provisions contained in such section 2.

The conference agreement retains the provisions of the Senate amendment, but reduces the maximum amount of insurance to be granted to any such approved financial institution from 20 percent of the total amount of its loans, advances of credit, and purchases to 10 percent of such total amount.

On amendment no. 8: This amendment changes the provision of existing law that the total liability of the Administrator for all insurance under section 2 of the National Housing Act, as amended, shall not exceed $100,000,000, so as to make this limitation applicable not only to such section but also to the new section added to such act by Senate am ever, that if the President finds at any time that there exists a necessity for such insurance in order to make ample credit available, he may authorize the Administrator to incur additional liability for such insurance in an amount not in excess of the amount of the liability incurred under the new section. There was no corresponding provision in the House bill. The conference agreement retains the $100,000,000 limitation, but eliminates the authority of the President to allow the Administrator to incur additional liability and the president of the president o bility for such insurance.

On amendment no. 9: This amendment adds a provision to section 2 of the National Housing Act, as amended, for the purpose of removing certain technical difficulties that have arisen in connection with the administration of title I of such act. It authorizes the content of the c tion with the administration of title I of such act. It authorizes the Administrator to waive compliance with his regulations in certain cases where the enforcement thereof would impose an injustice upon an insured institution which has substantially complied with such regulations in good faith, and where such waiver would not increase the obligation of the Administrator beyond that which would have been involved if the regulations had been fully complied with. There was no corresponding provision in the House bill. The House recedes.

T. ALAN GOLDSBOROUGH, M. K. REILLY, JESSE P. WOLCOTT, Managers on the part of the House. The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Maryland [Mr. Goldsborough] is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 10 minutes

Mr. Speaker, I do not think I will require the 10 minutes which I have allotted to myself. I am going to ask the Members to give as careful attention as possible, and I will be brief.

Some days ago the House passed a bill providing that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation should continue to make loans in flood areas up to $25,000,000. That bill went to the Senate, and the Senate, because of the terrible condition in the South, due to the tornado, increased that amount from $25,000,000 to $50,000,000.

In addition to that, the Senate added to the bill, as an amendment, a bill which provided for additional power on the part of the Federal Housing Commission to insure loans, which bill had been tabled by the House Committee on Banking and Currency. By the time the conferees met we realized the overwhelming and overpowering effect of this tornado through the South, and this, in addition to conditions in the flooded area, caused a majority of the House conferees to yield to the Senate and agree to leave in the bill the indicated Senate amendment in a modified form. The House yielded, but it was careful about what it did. The so-called housing part of the bill, which the Senate had passed, provided for 20 percent insurance. In order for us to agree to recede from our position, we required the Senate to yield to us and reduce that amount to 10 percent. The bill passed by the Senate also provided that the $100,-000,000 insurance limitation, which was in the bill originally, could be increased in the discretion of the President; the provision giving the President this right was stricken from the bill at our instance.

Now, the exact situation is this: There are several members of the Committee on Banking and Currency, of which number I am one, who never approved of the principle involved in title I of the Federal housing legislation, but we are confronted in this flood area and in this tornado area with a great national calamity which must be met in the best way possible. The House committee felt, and I am sure the Senate committee felt, that the Housing Commission and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation were not relief agencies, and that whatever money was dispensed by either of those organizations should be loaned, but it should be loaned on very reasonable terms.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. I yield.

Mr. RANKIN. As I understand it, the Federal housing provision in this bill, as it was explained to me by members of the Senate committee, will reach a certain class of cases that could not be taken care of under the Reconstruction Finance Corporation provision of the bill. Is that correct?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. That is correct, and I am coming to that.

Now, under the provisions for loans to be made by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, those are loans, many of which would not be made by private organizations. I have discussed the matter several times with officials of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. Their purpose is to charge not more than 5-percent interest, and charge as little as $3\frac{1}{2}$ -percent interest if they can possibly do it.

These loans to be made by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation will be of distinct value. In the first place, the interest rate will not be as large as it would be if the money were loaned by any private organization. Second—and I have this very definite understanding with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation—they are going to make these loans quickly. They have said to me, "One reason we cannot assure you of a rate of less than 5 percent is because we have to make these loans quickly, and we have to take more of a chance than we have been taking in making loans."

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. I yield.

Mr. RICH. As I understand it, these loans are going to be made by the Federal Housing Administration?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. I am coming to that now. I was speaking of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Mr. RICH. May I ask the gentleman another question?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Certainly.

Mr. RICH. Will the flood sufferers and the tornado sufferers be given the same privilege under the terms of that bill?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Oh, absolutely.

Mr. RICH. In cases where practically everything has been ruined and they have only their good name on which to get a loan, does not the Reconstruction Finance Corporation feel that is a pretty stiff rate to charge; and should they not under conditions of this kind grant a loan at, say, a rate of 3 percent, because these people will never rehabilitate their properties unless they get some advantage? There are many people who will never start up in business or improve their property if they cannot see the light of day ahead.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. I am sure that the directors of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation are going to act as fast as they can in making loans and make the interest rates as low as possible.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 5 additional minutes.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. I would rather get into the Housing Administration end of it a little first.

Mr. RANKIN. I just wanted to say to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Rich] that the Chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation said he would take this proposition up with the Board and that they might be able to lower the interest rate later; but that they did not want to hold up these loans in the meantime when the interest rate could be lowered after the loans were made.

Mr. RICH. Do I understand they will make a loan now and may change the rate later on?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. One of the things they said was that they had to make the loans quickly and that after they made them, if they found they were sound, then they could lower the rate.

Mr. RANKIN. At any time?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. At any time.

Mr. KOPPLEMANN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman vield?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. I yield.

Mr. KOPPLEMANN. That we may have a clear understanding of the gentleman's conversation with the directors of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, I ask the gentleman if he is satisfied after his talks with them that they will make loans without insisting on their usual requirements for collateral and security?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUCH. That is exactly what I have said. They say they are going to make the loans quickly; and I may say to the gentleman from Connecticut that to my certain knowledge they have had their representatives in the flood and tornado areas for the past several days waiting only for the passage of this act.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. I yield.

Mr. WILLIAMS. As I understand the situation, there is no conflict now between the House bill and the Senate bill so far as they concern loans to be made by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation; they are substantially the same.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. They are substantially the same.
Mr. WILLIAMS. The only controversy is on the question of whether these loans shall be insured by the Housing Ad-

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. I was just coming to that.

Mr. WILLIAMS. The Housing Administration has been charging not 5 percent but 10, and the plan is to continue that under this bill, is it not?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. I am going to make my statement just as full as I can. Mr. WILLIAMS. So, if this bill passes, loans made to sufferers in the flood and tornado districts will be at 10 percent instead of 5 percent.

Mr. RANKIN. That does not apply to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation loans.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Not at all, but to the housing feature of the bill. There is no question of dispute here so far as loans made by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation is concerned. My question is whether those loans will not be made under title I to the National Housing Administration and insured by them, permitting banks and financial institutions of this country still to continue to charge the sufferers in these districts 10 percent instead of 5 percent if this bill passes?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. I will answer the gentleman, but I would rather do it in my own way. We are coming now to loans made under title I of the Housing Act. These, I emphasize, will be loans that under no circumstances could be secured from any other body in the world because of the power to insure given by the Housing Act amended as proposed.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 5 additional minutes.

Mr. TREADWAY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. TREADWAY. May I ask the gentleman if in general the changes that have been made by the conferees add to the opportunity of those in need of aid to secure loans from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Very greatly.

Mr. TREADWAY. The gentleman knows that was the general purpose of the bill as it was originally drawn?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. It will add very greatly to the liberality of the law.

Mr. TREADWAY. And the gentleman assumes, does he not, that the R. F. C. officials will realize that the purpose of the bill is to liberalize the securing of aid?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. That is what they say and I am certain they are sincere.

Mr. TREADWAY. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. MAY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. I should like to complete my explanation, but I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. MAY. If the R. F. C. provision has been liberalized and they can make loans promptly why have the Housing Administration connected with it at all?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Because the R. F. C. could not make many of the loans and they would not be justified in doing so under their organization. I refer to the loans that may be made under title I of the Housing Act, and I will tell the gentleman why in a minute.

Banks in 22 States and the District of Columbia have built up a reserve of insurance amounting to $39,166,670. Under this bill the reserves which they have built up are available to protect them on new loans which they may make. In addition they have a 10-percent protection under this conference report which they may use to build up new reserves which will make it possible for the banks to lend without any security at all in many instances.

Some may say that is unsound because the Government in many cases will have to stand this loss. That is true. They may also say it is unsound because there is no reason why the banks should be subsidized. That is true. But the answer is that without the provisions of the housing bill in this conference report millions of these people who have lost their all by flood and tornado will not be able to get a single solitary dollar at any rate of interest. I make two statements. First, that on the class of loans contemplated by title I of the Housing Act no organization in the world or no finance company in the world would make these loans. Second, I say that if there should be a case where a finance corporation would make the loan the rate of interest would not be 9.7 percent but at least twice that amount.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 5 additional minutes.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri

Mr. WILLIAMS. Take an individual who has had his home or his business swept away by flood or tornado, what chance is there for him to get relief when he pays, as the gentleman says, not 10 percent but twice that rate? Why try to bring him relief? If we are going to make a relief institution out of this why not give it to him directly instead of through the banks?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. The gentleman misunderstood me. I said while he would have to pay to the Housing Commission 9.7 percent, if in any case he could get the money from any other finance organization he would have to pay at least twice that much.

Mr. WILLIAMS. How would he ever get out with that burden? Where would there be any relief to him after all?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Of course, that is begging the question. He does not have to borrow the money. It may be that when an individual goes to a finance corporation and borrows money he is simply borrowing grief, but I say if we are going to pass a measure which has any democracy at all left in it, unless we resort to a measure which is socialistic pure and simple and has none of our form of government in it at all; in other words, unless we are going to take the position that whenever a man's house burns down or whenever a high wind injures his property, or whenever a drought destroys his crop, the Government shall make a direct grant to him, then I say this act is as liberal, in my judgment, as we possibly can make it.

Mr. Speaker, in conference I personally experienced a great deal of difficulty. The Assistant Administrator of the Housing Administration produced figures showing the extent of the flood and tornado devastation. It was appalling. For instance, in Lee County, Miss., persons killed 150, injured 600, homes destroyed 700, homes damaged 300. In Hall County, Ga., persons killed 176, persons injured 500, homes destroyed 630, homes damaged 83.

When I saw the devastation and destruction shown in this exhibit I reached the conclusion that the star of hope should not be withdrawn from the people in flood and tornado areas and that we should pass the bill which we agreed to in conference.

Mr. SPENCE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. SPENCE. If this is not the bill that our committee reported, I think every member of the committee would have a right to render such criticism as he deems just. What I cannot understand is, if the accumulated reserve is going to absorb the losses, why should the lending institution charge the borrower 9.7 percent. Will the gentleman explain that?

the borrower 9.7 percent. Will the gentleman explain that?
Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. I raised that question myself in conference. Among other conferees on the Senate side was Senator Couzens. Senator Couzens, as is well known, has had a very wide and broad experience.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 5 additional minutes.

Senator Couzens assured us that these banks, even though they were protected by insurance, were not going to act in an irresponsible manner. The loans, he stated, were so small, on the average, that they required the charging of that rate of interest in order to allow them to get out whole and make a reasonable profit. My own judgment was governed very largely by what Senator Couzens said. So far as I know, his business experience has been as wide as that of any man in either House.

Mr. RICH. I should now like to ask the gentleman this question. When a bank lends an individual money, naturally the banker is thinking of the depositors' money and he is responsible to the depositors and is unable to make grants that the R. F. C. could make under the power of Government regulation, provided we permit regulations that are going to help these individuals who have been so unfortunate as to have their property damaged or destroyed.

I appreciate that the banker today will coax people to take money at 21/2 percent if they are men who have a good and sound financial statement, but they will charge other people 5 percent. I had not any thought or idea when we tried to draft this bill that we were going to make it a money-making organization so far as the Government is concerned. I thought it was to be a matter of relief with the idea that anyone who borrowed this money would do so at liberal rates of interest in order that he might establish himself and conduct his own business or could buy something for his home in order to get along in spite of the damage done by the floods. I was hopeful we were going to do something like this, because the gentleman knows, and I know, that we have contributed much money here in the past 2 years that has not been spent, perhaps, as the gentleman or I would spend it. Regardless of that, let us now give some actual relief to these flood sufferers. The Lord knows they need it, and they are never going to get help unless we help them.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. May I say to the gentleman that so far as I am personally concerned, my close associates on the committee know that my idea of legislation is very different from this, but the point I am making is that the poor devil at the other end, who is the man I want to help, does get some distinct benefit out of this legislation, in spite of everything else that can be said, and so far as I am concerned he is the only one I am interested in at all.

Mr. Speaker, I will, at the end of my remarks, place in the RECORD a letter and some tables sent me by Mr. Walsh, Assistant Administrator of the Housing Administration, relative to the flood and tornado situation.

FEDERAL HOUSING ADMINISTRATION, Washington, April 10, 1936.

Washington, April 10, 1936.

Hon. T. Alan Goldsbordugh,

House Office Building, Washington, D. C.

My Dear Congressman Goldsbordugh: In accordance with your request of this afternoon, attached is a list of the States affected by the recent floods or tornadoes. This list also shows the number of lending agencies in each of these States which have already made loans under title I of the National Housing Act; also the insurance reserves already built up by such lending institutions as a result of such loans.

I regret that time has not permitted me to break this information down by counties, but such statistics would not be particularly significant, because these lending institutions frequently lend outside of the counties in which their headquarters are located.

Furthermore there are a number of large finance companies which operate on a national basis and which have also built up large insurance reserves under title I. The privilege of tapping these old reserves when loans are made to flood or tornado victims should tempt such lending institutions to make loans on a

I also attach for your information a list of the counties that were affected by floods or tornadoes and the Red Cross estimate of the number of families that were affected.

If there is any further information you desire, let me know and I shall get it if at all possible.

Sincerely yours,

Assistant Administrator.

P. S.-I have sent a similar letter, with enclosures, to Senator

State	Countles affected by flood	Counties affected by torna- does	Number of F. H. A. lending in- stitutions	Insurance reserve built up
Massachusetts Connecticut Pennsylvania Maryland	5 4 34 5		186 97 419 55	$2, 414, 472 880, 461 3, 483, 234
Ohio	9 16 6		238 59 53	729, 240 2, 089, 222 291, 622 237, 314
MaineGeorgia	7	13	53 109	188, 345 847, 244

State	Counties affected by flood	Counties affected by torna- does	Number of F. H. A. lending in- stitutions	Insurance reserve built up
Mississippi North Carolina Tennessee New York Kentucky South Carolina Alabama Vermont Indiana Illinois Virginia Missouri	2 17	7 4 5 3 2	82 79 61 626 86 29 68 39 261 93	$271, 582 453, 302 1, 151, 090 13, 359, 626 553, 697 241, 039 423, 832 106, 942 1, 379, 907 3, 013, 432 819, 215
Missouri 1 New Jersey District of Columbia	1		316 20	3, 548, 495 601, 284
Total			3, 404	39, 166, 670

Number of affected counties not yet known.

Location of flood-relief operations in the eastern area, showing the number of families affected Apr. 10, 1936

Region	State	Counties affected	Families affected
A. New England	Maine	7 6 3 5 4	1, 584 7, 152 500 9, 300 4, 179
Total, region A		25	22, 715
B. New York C. Eastern Pennsylvania D. Central Pennsylvania E. Western Pennsylvania	New York Pennsylvania do do	2 12 13 10	1, 800 21, 200 17, 490 23, 189
F. Upper Ohio River	West Virginia	12 9	18, 092 8, 768
Total, region F		21	26, 860
G. Potomac River	Maryland West Virginia Pennsylvania District of Columbia	5 4 1	1, 645 601 25 60
Total, region G		10	2, 331
H. Kentucky-Indians	KentuckyIndiana	20 6	2, 402 148
Total, region H		- 26	2, 550
	Virginia New Jersey Illinois Missouri	2 1 2 (¹)	(0)
Total		5
Grand total (except where unknown).		124	118, 135

1 Unknown

Location of flood-relief operations in the eastern area, showing the number of families affected Apr. 10, 1936

	County	Families affected	State
Region A (New England): Maine	Androscoggin Cumberland Kennebec Oxford Penobscot Somerset York	500 35 264 400 16 10 359
New Hampshire.	Carroll Cheshire Coca Grafton Hillsboro Merrimack	12 292 160 106 4, 979 1, 603	1, 58
Vermont	- Caledonia Windham Windsor Scattered	3 100 100 297	7, 15
Massachusetts	Essex Hampden Hampshire Middlesex Worcester	1,800 7,000 100 300 100	50

	County	Families affected	State total
Region A (New England)—Con. Connecticut	Hartford Litchfield Middlesex Windham	3, 800 79 100 200	4, 179
Total, region A			22, 715
Region B (New York)	Broome	1,500	1,800
Region C (eastern Pennsylvania)	Bradford Cameron Clinton Columbia Luzerne Lycoming Montour Northumberland Potter Snyder Union Wayne	50 16 4,500 34 6,500 5,000 150 4,500 (1) 200 100 150
Region D (central Pennsylvania)	Bedford Blair Cambria Center Clearfield Dauphin Elk Huntingdon Juniata Lancaster Mifflin Somerset York	100 750 11, 000 150 250 3, 000 (¹) 650 250 213 842 75 210	21, 200
Region E (western Pennsylvania)	Allegheny Armstrong Beaver Clarion Fayette Indiana Jefferson Washington Westmoreland W yoming	17, 000 500 3, 000 100 23 750 200 100 1, 486 30	17, 490 23, 189
Region F (Ohio River): West Virginia	Brooke Cabell Grant Hancock Hardy Marshall Mason Ohio Pleasant Tyler Wetzel Wood	8, 000 750 35 300 27 560 750 6, 400 50 20 700 500
Ohio.	Belmont Columbiana Gallia. Hamilton Jefferson Lawrence. Meigs. Monroe. Washington	1, 668 1, 400 400 700 1, 400 100 800 300 2, 000	18, 092 8, 768
Total, region F			26, 860
Region G (Potomac River): Maryland	Allegany	1,000 20 150 100 375	1, 645
West Virginia	Hampshire	160 61 230 150	601
Pennsylvania District of Columbia	Bucks	25 60	25 60
Total region G			2, 331
Region H (Kentucky and Indiana): Kentucky	Ballard Bracken Breckenridge Campbell Carlisle Carloll Fulton Greenup Hardin	25 75 12 1,400 20 63 100 4 25

Location of flood-relief operations in the eastern area, showing the number of families affected Apr. 10, 1936—Continued

Location of flood-relief operations in the eastern area, showing the number of families affected Apr. 10, 1936—Continued

	County	Families affected	State total
Region H (Kentucky and Indiana)— Continued. Kentucky	Hancock Henderson Hickman Jefferson Kenton Livingston McCracken McLean Mason Trimble Union	50 40 100 75 (1) (1) (1) (200
Indiana	Clark Dearborn Jefferson Perry Spencer Vanderburg	12 10 27 15	2, 400
Total, region H.			2, 550
Virginia	Arlington Shenandoah Passaie	(1)
Illinois	Alexander	(3)
Grand total			118, 135

American National Red Cross, spring tornadoes of 1936, Apr. 2-6, 1936

	Number	Number of persons		Number of homes
State	of counties affected	Killed	Injured	De- stroyed	Dam- aged
Alabama Georgia Mississippi North Carolina South Carolina Tennessee	2 13 7 4 3 5	5 204 168 13	8 769 700 305 22 49	12 1, 067 748 76 67 73	208 761 383 335 118 30
Total	34	402	1, 853	2, 043	1, 835

Source: Department of Accounts, Apr. 9, 1936.

American National Red Cross, spring tornadoes of 1935, Apr. 2-6, 1936

		Per	sons	Homes
State	County	Killed	Injured	Destroyed	Damaged
Alabama	Madison	4	5 3	5 7	200
Total	r ickens	5	8	12	208
Georgia	Cherokee			1 8
Do Do	Cobb Crisp	22 176	150 500	284 630	150 83
Do	Lee Lincoln Putnam Tattnall	1	2 27 6	6 43 10	262
Do Do	Terrell Toombs	1	10 10	50 5	40 176
Do	Wilkes	4	62	26	43
Total		204	769	1,067	761
Mississippi	ChickasawItawamba	9	32		18
Do Do	Leake Lee Poutotoe	2 150	40 600	25 700	25 300
Do	PrentisYalobusha	3 4	15 13	15 8	40
Total		168	700	748	383
North Carolina	Alamance Cabarrus Guilford Orange	11 11 1	7 3 288 7	2 5 67 2	2 35 296 2
Total		13	305	76	335

American National Red Cross spring tornadoes of 1936, Apr. 2-6, 1936—Continued

	State County	Per	sons	Homes
State		Killed	Injured	Destroyed	Damaged
South Carolina Do	The state of the s		20 2	65 2	100 13 5
Total			22	67	118
Do	Lewis Lincoln Maury McMinn Wayne	1 7 0 4	3 15 0 31	33 14 22	10
Total		12	49	73	30
Grand total		402	1, 853	2, 043	1, 835

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time and yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Hollister].

Mr. HOLLISTER. Mr. Speaker, it is with considerable reluctance that I rise today in opposition to this conference report, because no one is more mindful than I am of the necessities of the situation and of the suffering that certain communities in our country have gone through in the last few weeks. I believe it is only proper, however, before we risk a number of millions of the money of the people of the United States, as expended by the Government in a project of this kind, that the Members of the House understand exactly what they are doing.

Lawyers have a saying that hard cases make bad law. It is equally true that hard cases make bad legislation.

We have before us in this conference report a double-barreled relief effort, an attempt to help the stricken areas by giving the Reconstruction Finance Corporation the right to make relief loans, and also an attempt to help the stricken areas by putting the Housing Administration into the relief business.

This bill as it passed the House contained only the first of these two efforts. The Senate added the second effort, and it is this second part, with reference to the Housing Administration, to which I object, and which I should like to explain to the Members of the House

You will recall that when the Housing Act was originally adopted it was a four-barreled effort to pump out private money into the building trades, which everyone knew were greatly depressed, and which it was felt, if stimulated, would add the greatest possible impetus to the heavy-goods industries. This was done by title I, providing for the insurance of certain loans; title II, providing for general mortgage insurance; title III, providing for national mortgage associations; and title IV, providing Federal insurance of deposits in building and loan associations.

Title I is what we are dealing with today. In this connection we should remember that we had before the House only 2 or 3 weeks ago a change in title I of the Housing Act, which had been given careful consideration by the House Banking and Currency Committee, careful consideration in the Senate Banking Committee, and careful consideration on the floors of both bodies. It was finally adopted after a great deal of discussion and a great deal of energy and time had been put into it.

The changes we then made involved the tapering down of the activities of the Housing Administration at the request of the Administrator himself, and after due consideration had been given by the Administration to the whole plan of housing. By this we cut down insurance to 10 percent. We cut out the insurance of new buildings. We cut out the insurance of equipment and made certain other changes in the Housing Act as it existed before that time.

When the floods struck 2 or 3 weeks ago there was an immediate effort to change the Housing Act by putting back into effect the very things we had stricken out a few days before and liberalizing it even beyond that.

That bill was submitted to the other body and to the House. The House Banking and Currency Committee voted almost unanimously to table it. Various members had different ideas on the subject and were actuated by different motives, but all agreed that it was not a bill which should be submitted to the House.

The committee in the other body, with little consideration, reported it out, and it was attached to our bill for Reconstruction Finance Corporation loans when it reached the other body.

Our bill as it passed here provided for an additional $25,000,000 for Reconstruction Finance Corporation loans for stricken districts, but that was changed in the Senate to $50,000,000, which the Reconstruction Finance Corporation intimated was too large, as they were not geared to loan that amount in the time stated in the bill.

Let us give thought to what we are trying to do with these different agencies. The fact is we have got the purposes of the different agencies inextricably mixed up. Notwithstanding the appointment of various coordinators, we have not got proper coordination.

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation is a superbank to supply lending facilities when ordinary banking facilities have broken down. The Housing Administration is a method of pumping out a little more private money by the aid of Government insurance.

I say we are doing the wrong thing when we use the Housing Administration as a relief agency. If we want to take a certain amount of money and give it directly for relief when our local facilities have failed, we should pass it over to a regular relief agency and not to an agency set up for a totally different purpose.

When we passed the bill providing for the Reconstruction Finance Corporation we provided it with certain functions to make loans where the banks could not or would not lend. But here we are putting a Government agency into work which it is not fitted for and for which it was never conceived.

We should keep these differentiations distinctly in mind and, when needs come before the House, we should supply the need from the proper agency of Government and not take the wrong one to do the work, as we are doing in this case. It is for that reason that, as one of the conferees, I did not sign this conference report and oppose it now.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. HOLLISTER. Yes.

Mr. RANKIN. The reason given by the members of the Senate committee for inserting this provision was that, in the first place, it gives two methods of handling these loans, and, in the second place, that it would enable them to reach cases that could not secure loans through the R. F. C. In other words, there are border-line cases that could not qualify to obtain a loan through the R. F. C.

Mr. HOLLISTER. The gentleman faces the problem realistically, as I do. The gentleman admits, as I do, that it is putting the Housing Administration into the relief game. I say it should not be there, that relief should come through one of the relief agencies.

Mr. RANKIN. It is not a relief game. These are people who are trying to rebuild their homes. It is not putting them into the bread line. It is merely to liberalize these loans and enable people to secure them, who would otherwise be shut out.

Mr. HOLLISTER. We considered that on the floor of the House 2 or 3 weeks ago. The President signed the bill only on the 10th of April. It was then decided at the request of the Housing Administration that it was wrong to permit Government insurance of new construction on an absolutely unimproved lot, that there was not sufficient security. It was also decided that there should not be insurance granted a man who had the property under lease for only 1 year, that the lease should run for at least 6 months beyond the term of the obligation which covered the loan. As we have this before us today, if you have a piece of property which has been leased for a year only, there may be an obligation incurred to improve it, which runs for 4 or 5 years, and yet the Government must insure that obligation 3 or 4 years beyond the time the lease has expired.

on land entirely swept clear of improvements and have the loan insured. You do not even have to build on the same land, as long as it is in the neighborhood. Further, under the bill as it has been agreed on by the conferees, the insuring institution may take advantage of whatever insurance reserve has been built up under its previous operations under the Housing Act. This means that there will be little care taken in the making of these relief loans and, therefore, a substantial loss ultimately to the Government because of its insurance

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Ohio has expired.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. HANCOCK].

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, ladies and gentlemen of the House, in the space of 5 minutes it is utterly impossible to do more than mention, much less discuss intelligently, the important features of this report. Let me say at the outset that to have and to hold a kindly interest in and sympathetic attitude toward people in trouble and distress is the highest and most ennobling of human traits. I therefore deem it unnecessary to play upon your emotions or invoke your sympathies in connection with this extremely important measure. I know that the membership of the House is keenly anxious to do everything within its power to afford relief and assistance to those eligible under the bill in question. It is but human that our sympathies are more deeply touched when we see our own neighbors and the people of our own States afflicted. Within the past 2 weeks a terrific and devastating calamity in the form of a tornado struck the central portion of my State, leaving death, injury, and property wreckage in its path. For more than a month members of our committee have been working assiduously to get through legislation to help those who have been victimized as a result of these catastrophes. I am certain that every Member of the House today wants to go the limit with us in providing relief and financial assistance to these unfortunate classes of our

As one of the conferees of the House I could not, however, conscientiously agree to this report, and I therefore refused to sign it. All of the conferees agreed to every Senate amendment, with the exception of section 3, which is designed to make title I of the Federal Housing Act an effective means of relief to those who have suffered losses and property damages as a result of floods, storms, tornadoes, and other similar catastrophes. This section was carefully and fully considered by our committee last Monday a week ago, and with the exception of one vote was placed on the table. The committee, very sanely and properly, in my opinion, took the position that under title I the relief intended for those in distress would go largely to the lending institutions. They also reached the conclusion that those who needed assistance should not be forced to pay a rate of interest amounting to 10 percent and be subjected to the practices and "pressureism" which has been carried on in connection with the loans made under title I. From the discussion and debate, as reported, it is also quite clear that the members of the committee felt that it would be unsound public policy to permit the Federal Housing to insure second, third, and fourth mortgages on restored or replaced properties up to $50,000, which is permissible under section 3 of the bill as added by the Senate. No man whose property has been damaged or swept away by a freak of nature should be subjected to the method of lending or the terms and maturities provided under title I. Many of us took the position that assistance to these unfortunate people should be provided either by direct relief or through a sound but liberal lending plan, or both.

I cannot refrain from calling to the attention of the House the fact that under the language of section III the Government not only insures those lending institutions up to 10 percent of the total loans made in the flood- or tornadostricken areas, but permits the institutions operating in these areas which have been or may be hereafter approved by the as quickly as possible, in order that loans might be made with

The Senate has inserted a provision that you may build | F. H. A. to use their present insurance reserves to cover any loss. This in effect could amount to a 30-percent insurance and make the United States Treasury liable up to 100 percent if the amount of such mortgages was less than the total insurance reserve. I am therefore convinced in my own mind that this is a bad and unsound provision and that its operations will in the long run amount to a disservice to the people who are to be assisted and helped. For that reason, and that reason alone, I think this report should be voted down and the bill sent back to conference with instructions that the House conferees refuse to agree to this amendment. Nothing could be more serious or cruel than to raise a false hope in the minds of suffering and destitute people. No person or institution should profit excessively by their plight and calamity. Under the F. H. A. provision this will certainly happen as the day follows the night.

With this exception, I should heartily favor this legislation, because I am confident that the R. F. C., through its Board of Directors and administrative officers, will go the limit in taking care of the situation. I am also satisfied that loans from the R. F. C. will be based on the most liberal interest terms, perhaps not to exceed 4½ percent, and will be made to run over a period of not less than 10 years. Of course, these loans will have to be so secured as reasonably to insure repayment. If the assistance is to take the form of a loan, it should be made on a liberal but sound basis. I am also convinced that the R. F. C. is organized and equipped to meet this situation promptly and effectively. Notwithstanding the unjust criticism which has been directed toward the Chairman and Board of Directors, I know that this money will be put out quickly where it will serve a useful and necessary purpose. I want to see the Government brush aside all red tape and technicalities in administering the $50,000,000 provided for assistance through the R. F. C. in restoring, rehabilitating, and replacing the properties affected in these areas, and I think it is adequate to meet the legitimate credit demands. If not, we can provide more later on.

May I hurriedly, in conclusion, call the attention of the House to the fact that section IV of the bill has nothing whatever to do with its real purpose. It appears to me to be nothing but a "cover up" section to protect the F. H. A. against its own mistakes. If I read it correctly, it is designed to permit the Administrator to take care of the losses incurred by some of the lending institutions even though such lending institutions have violated the rules and regulations governing loans made under title I. It is another example of what I have tried to point out on previous occasions to this House regarding the administration of title I. Everything under title I seems to be aimed toward the assistance of the lending institutions rather than the borrowers. I am at times amazed when I think about how little is done for those whom we think we are passing legislation to help and assist. There is no doubt in my mind but that the House will adopt this report, but I make bold to predict that under the Federal Housing provision the bulk of the relief proposed will ultimately find its way into the coffers of the newly created and fly-by-night lending institutions, to the great, serious, and prolonged distress and suffering of the would-be real beneficiaries and at their

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from North Carolina has expired. [Applause.]

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. RANKIN].

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, when this bill passed the House a few days ago, providing for $25,000,000 for loans to people in the flood-stricken areas, I supported it. I did not dream then that within a short time the people I represent would be in even a more distressed condition. With the rack and ruin that has been wrought, not only by floods but by tornadoes that have visited certain Southern States, those people are in such condition they cannot wait. Therefore we have tried to get this legislation to the floor of the House which to rebuild and repair their homes and their public buildings. I dare say that no money ever advanced by this Government will be more fully returned than the money provided in this bill. No money that we have ever spent will do more good for the morale of the people than this will for the ones who are now in distress. Like bread cast upon the waters, it will return after many days.

This bill should have been passed weeks ago, even before the tornado struck my section. The people all up and down these navigable streams, people whose homes were washed away and whose property was destroyed, have been pleading for money with which to rebuild.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RANKIN. I yield.

Mr. RICH. Do I understand they are going to charge people down in the gentleman's district 9.7 percent if they want to make a loan?

Mr. RANKIN. I will say to the gentleman from Pennsylvania that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation will make these loans at not to exceed 5 percent. As I explained to the gentleman a while ago, I talked to the Director, the head of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and he said he would consult his Board and, if possible, would bring that rate of interest down. I should like to see it reduced to 3 percent.

Now, with reference to the Federal housing provision of this bill, I went before the Senate committee and suggested that it probably would be unwise to attach it to this measure. I was told that it merely furnished an additional method of getting money to people who could not be taken care of otherwise, because there were many of those people who had very little equity in their homes, or whose property was only slightly damaged and who could not qualify under the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for a loan, but who could do so with the F. H. A. It does not affect the rest of the

TUPELO

On Sunday night, April 5, a terrific cyclone swooped down upon the city of Tupelo, Miss., my home town, leaving death and destruction in its wake.

Just why fate should wreak such a visitation upon the helpless men, women, and children of that fair city we cannot understand. It must remain one of the unsolved mysteries of all time.

It left our people stunned and bewildered, amidst their dead and injured, and surrounded by a devastation that human language cannot describe.

Tupelo had always been among the first to contribute to the relief of disaster victims elsewhere, but had never asked for anything for herself or for her own people.

But in the face of this awful disaster she was compelled to ask for help, especially in the way of the loans provided for in this bill, with which to rebuild and rehabilitate.

I want to take this opportunity to express to the Congress, to the President; and to the public generally our heartfelt gratitude for the expressions of sympathy and the offers of assistance that came from every hand.

The responses of the people of Mississippi, from the Governor down, as well as those of the peoples of the surrounding States, can never be forgotten. The State militia, the Red Cross, the American Legion, and every other civic, religious, or patriotic organization responded with the same unselfish devotion and the same generosity the people of Tupelo have always manifested toward others similarly Governmental agencies came to our assistance, and it seemed to me that every Member of the House and Senate manifested a desire to help.

President Roosevelt, the man who came to rejoice with us in the days of our triumph, did not forget us in the dark hour of our distress.

From every section of the country, and even from foreign lands, came expressions of sympathy through the press and over the radio, all of which has helped to strengthen us with renewed courage for the gigantic task that now lies before us-the task of rebuilding and making Tupelo a better and brighter place in which to live.

We cannot bring back our dead; nor can we ever forget them. Their memories will linger in our hearts until for us all time shall cease.

But we can, and we will, carry on the work of rebuilding just as they would want us to do if they were here, and just as they would do if our positions were reversed.

Give us this opportunity to secure funds with which to rebuild and watch Tupelo vie with other cities in the floodand storm-stricken areas.

With the same courage and devotion which has actuated our citizens in the past we will build a new Tupelo that will again challenge national admiration, and of which the State of Mississippi will be justly proud. [Applause.]

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Wolcott].

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. Goldsborough] in his statement said that the star of hope should not be taken from the people of the devastated areas by refusing to adopt this conference report. The gentleman from Maryland and I are in accord in a great many instances, and we are in accord in this particular. I am afraid that about all the flood sufferers and those unfortunate people in the devastated cyclone areas are going to get from this bill is the opportunity which it affords to follow the star of hope to their destinies. It is regrettable that this might be true.

I have a great deal of confidence in the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to administer this bill if it is enacted into law. I likewise have a great deal of confidence in the Administrator and all others in authority in the Federal Housing Administration. Perhaps that confidence is based upon the fact that they have been almost too conservative in their policy in months and years gone by; but because of that, I have every confidence that this bill is going to be administered in the spirit in which we pass it. In fact, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation is a relief agency. The Federal Housing Administration is a relief agency. I cannot see, as an individual Member of this House, and not attempting to speak for my party, what difference it makes whether we give the relief sought under the act in flood- or cyclonedevastated areas or in other communities. After all, the purpose of the F. H. A. is to give employment in the building trades, and it matters little whether this is done by insuring loans for rehabilitating these flood- and cyclone-devastated areas or the restoration of property which has deteriorated slowly over a long period of time. There are those people in these areas who need this relief just as much as or more than the man who, in the course of years, has allowed his property to disintegrate in value. It does not make any difference whether that relief is given in flooded or cyclonedevastated areas or in all of our other communities, because I have always considered the Federal Housing Administration as a relief measure, in that it gives relief to the building trades and therefore puts men to work. I have lamented their very conservative policy in that regard. I think we can continue to have perhaps too much confidence in their policy due to their conservative approach to this subject.

I cannot see any particular reason why this conference report should not be adopted. I say that, being the member of the Committee on Banking and Currency who made the motion in committee to table a bill similar to the Senate amendment. I made that motion sincerely at that time, because the Federal Housing Administration did not seem to be very keen for it. Nobody was asking for it. Nobody was urging it. I think we as a committee asked them to draft the bill and submit it to us for consideration.

But when we got into a full consideration of the question in the conference and found out how much it might mean in building up the hopes of the afflicted people in these areas I decided that it might be a very good bill if for no other reason than its psychological effect upon these sufferers.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 additional minutes to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. WOLCOTT. People whose homes were destroyed must at the present time have a rather black outlook on life. If we can give the banks in those localities any encouragement to make loans by insuring them against 10 percent of their loss, then I think we should do it, because so long as the person whose home has been swept away or damaged by flood or cyclone has the hope of getting some relief from his local bank his outlook is not so dark; and the local bank, so long as its loan in such a case is to be insured to 10 percent, will adopt an easier policy. I have full confidence in the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and in the Federal Housing Administration to carry on the same conservative policy they have adopted, and it is my belief the Government will suffer only an infinitesimal loss upon the liquidation of these two agencies.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOLCOTT. I yield.

Mr. RICH. Does the gentleman think the flood sufferers are really going to get much relief under this bill?

Mr. WOLCOTT. My fear is they will not get the relief I would like to give them, not even under this bill.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Mr. Speaker, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. Kopple-Mann]

Mr. KOPPLEMANN. I appreciate the kindness of the gentleman in yielding me this time. The questions I have asked and the answers given, however, quite cover any statement I might make. I express the hope that the bill, as reported by the conference committee, will be passed.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members, whether they have spoken on this bill or not, may have 5 legislative days within which to extend their remarks on the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. Fuller). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Maryland?

There was no objection.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the conference report.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the conference report.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. Hollister) there were—ayes 85, noes 11.

So the conference report was adopted.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS—FLOOD INSURANCE

Mr. QUINN. Mr. Speaker, it is encouraging to have the assurance of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation that loans to flood sufferers will be made quickly. This is no time for needless red tape. If the work of rehabilitation is to accomplish anything worth while, the people in the flooded areas must be enabled to rehabilitate at once. Every hour of delay means an increase in the aggregate loss to each individual and each community.

In urging prompt action on these loans I want to remind my colleagues, Mr. Speaker, that a total of $50,000,000 is a very small amount with which to meet the present emergency. In the Pittsburgh district alone we figure our flood losses at more than $100,000,000, and when this bill first was considered I pointed out that great manufacturing plants in my home section, among them the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., estimated their damage in the millions of dollars. The total damage to merchants and home owners in a comparatively small area soon runs into the hundreds of thousands of dollars. In the Borough of Tarentum, with a population of about 10,000, the loss exceeds $2,000.000.

With the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Connery], I believed the bill should be amended to provide $100,000,000, but the House would not accept it. While we were talking about the flood losses in Pennsylvania, the Ohio Valley, and New England, we received news of the devastating hurricanes in the South. This second calamity emphasized the need for a more liberal allotment of R. F. C. funds.

The people in the stricken regions have shown wonderful fortitude. Instead of bewailing their adversity they have studies have been made by the Corps of Engineers, U. S. A., started to rebuild. They are doing everything possible in under authority of Congress, with Federal and State funds.

helping themselves. That is why the Government should assist promptly.

The gentleman from Maryland [Mr. Goldsborough] tells us that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation has agents in the field to make investigations, and that in consequence no time will be lost in authorizing rehabilitation loans. I take him at his word, feeling sure that he has every confidence in his statement, but I reserve the right to do everything in my power to urge action on applications from my district. If I think there is any delay I will be camping right there on the R. F. C. doorstep, and I will probably not be lonesome, judging by the attitude of some of my colleagues from Pennsylvania, New England, and down South. We are conscious of a righteous cause.

While larger concerns generally are able to finance themselves and are already on the way to repair their damage, the smaller losers, merchants and householders, together with municipalities and school boards, require the R. F. C. money for immediate work. They should not be hampered by red tape.

So much for relief loans. If the National Government had heeded warnings given many years ago we from the Pittsburgh and upper Ohio Valley district would not be here today asking for aid. If proper flood-prevention methods had been taken our loss would have been trifling in comparison with what it is today.

The rivers at Pittsburgh have risen above flood stage three times within the last month, and we have had 90 floods in the past 80 years. The aggregate toll in the loss of human life, damage to property, and effect on the health of the community of these 90 floods cannot be conceived. In recent years, owing to contributing forces such as encroachments on the channels of the streams, the destruction of forests and soil erosion, inundations have been more frequent and infinitely most costly.

In 1907 the waters rose to a stage exceeding 35 feet. At that time it was regarded as a record, but predictions were made that some day a 40-foot flood would sweep the city. On March 18 last the stage was 46 feet, and the entire downtown business district of Pittsburgh was submerged. In some of the large stores and office buildings pumps are still at work in the basements.

Although floods had been a tradition in Pittsburgh since the days when British troops garrisoned Fort Pitt, no organized movement toward their prevention was made until after the disaster of 1907. On February 20, 1908, the flood commission of Pittsburgh was organized. For more than a quarter of a century it has carried on an aggressive campaign for practical flood prevention. Elaborate flood studies made in recent years have been based largely on the pioneering undertaken by the Pittsburgh commission.

In Pittsburgh we are proud of the names of the eminent men who served on the engineering committee of the commission. They were E. K. Morse, Emil Swensson, W. G. Wilkins, George S. Davison, Paul Didier, Julian Kennedy, Morris Knowles, and G. M. Lehman. They worked for years and prepared a comprehensive report on the subject, which was published in 1912. It is probably the first report of its kind treating of the source control of floods on a large scale, and it is not surprising that it received wide attention and approval by engineers. Their work and far-sighted recommendations aroused the country to urgency of scientific measures to impound flood waters and to construct adequate flood walls.

I regret that time does not permit me to relate something of the history of the flood commission of Pittsburgh and its long struggle over almost insurmountable obstacles. If I could tell you its story, I would make you Mississippi levee builders sit up and take notice.

Under Mr. Davison as its president, the commission carried on its work year after year. The cooperation of the Federal Government was obtained. In addition to the exhaustive and costly engineering studies and plans made by the commission's staff of engineers, several surveys and studies have been made by the Corps of Engineers, U. S. A., under authority of Congress, with Federal and State funds.

With the establishment of the Public Works Administration and the wide use of Federal funds for various projects, the suggestion was advanced for the allocation of some of this money for flood control. Here was an opportunity to carry out in a thorough and substantial way the entire plan of the flood commission.

To meet the requirements of the Public Works Administration, the flood commission, in conjunction with the city of Pittsburgh and more than 100 municipalities along the rivers in Pennsylvania, Ohio, and West Virginia, formed the tri-State authority, and in the name of this organization applied for P. W. A. funds to construct its system of reservoirs.

The tri-State authority is a worthy successor of the pioneer commission. Its president is William B. Rodgers, a Pennsylvania State senator and a member of the third generation of practical Pittsburgh rivermen. Mayor J. G. Payne, of Oil City, Pa., is vice president, and W. A. Wyman, of Pittsburgh, secretary and treasurer. On its executive committee are Mayor Payne; Mayor George H. Lysle, of Mc-Keesport; Mayor William N. McNair, of Pittsburgh; Mayor Charles F. Schultze, of Wheeling; Mayor Earl Applegate, of Steubenville; Mayor Daniel Boone Dawson, of Charleston; Mayor J. Fred Thomas, of Sharon; Mayor Fred T. Wilson, of Fairmont; Mayor James G. Bollander, of Franklin; Mayor Daniel J. Shields, of Franklin; Mayor J. Morton Harper, of Marietta; Burgess Jacob Maximer, of Kittanning; Hon. John J. Kane, chairman of Allegheny County commissioners; and Cornelius D. Scully, president of Pittsburgh Council. William P. Witherow is chairman of the Pittsburgh Citizens' Flood Committee.

The tri-State authority is urging a system of 13 floodstorage and navigation reservoirs in the headwaters of the Allegheny, Monongahela, and upper Ohio Rivers. These have been recommended also by the Mississippi Valley Committee of the Public Works Administration and the Water Planning Commission of the Natural Resources Board. If constructed, these reservoirs would bestow priceless social benefits upon millions of inhabitants of the several States who dwell within the watersheds of the uncontrolled streams. The estimated cost of the 13 reservoirs is in round numbers about $70,000,000. This is a large sum, but it is a low-priced premium on a policy of flood insurance which has more than 100 years to run.

COMMERCIAL AIRPORT, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill (H. R. 3806) to establish a commercial airport for the District of Columbia and ask unanimous consent that the statement may be read in lieu of the report.

The Clerk read the statement.

The conference report and statement are as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT

[To accompany H. R. 3806]

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 3806) to establish a commercial airport for the District of Columbia, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the amendment of the Senate insert the following:

the Senate insert the following:

"That there is hereby created a commission to be known as the 'District of Columbia Airport Commission' (hereinafter referred to as the 'Commission'), to be composed of three Members of the United States Senate, to be appointed by the President of the Senate, three Members of the House of Representatives, to be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and three persons to be appointed by the President of the United States, who because of their official positions are interested in the development of a commercial airport in the District of Columbia. No person shall serve on the Commission who has any financial interest direct or indirect in any site or sites for said airport No person shall serve on the Commission who has any financial interest direct or indirect in any site or sites for said airport which may be the subject of consideration. The Commission shall proceed immediately after its appointment and organization to examine all available data concerning potential sites for commercial airports and to inspect such potential sites, and shall select a site for such purpose with due regard to the cost of its acquisition and development, its safety, and its adaptability to the requirements of commercial aviation and national defense.

"SEC. 2. The Commission shall preserve its decision and selection in confidence and shall make a confidential report thereon to the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives, or the Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House of Representatives if Congress is not in session: Provided, however, That said report shall be made as soon as practicable. "Sec. 3. The members of the Commission shall receive no salary as such, but shall be reimbursed for actual expenses incurred in the discharge of official duties as such commissioners. There is There is hereby authorized to be appropriated the sum of $10,000, to be charged one-half to the moneys in the Treasury to the credit of the District of Columbia and one-half to the moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, which shall be used for carrying out the purposes of this Act, including the employment of such experts and other assistants as the Commission may deem necessary

And the Senate agree to the same.

VINCENT L. PALMISANO, JACK NICHOLS. EVERETT M. DIRKSEN, Managers on the part of the House. WILLIAM H. KING, MILLARD E. TYDINGS, WARREN R. AUSTIN, Managers on the part of the Senate.

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (S. 3806) to establish a commercial airport for the District of Columbia, submit the following statement in ex-planation of the effect of the action agreed upon and recommended in the accompanying conference report.

in the accompanying conference report.

The Senate amendment strikes out all after the enacting clause, substituting other provisions in lieu thereof.

Section 1 of the Senate amendment authorizes the President to appoint a District of Columbia Airport Commission of seven members, specifying their qualifications and duties. The substitute agreed to in conference provides for a commission of nine members, three to be appointed by the President of the Senate, three by the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and three by the President. President.

Section 2 of the Senate amendment provides that a confidential report shall be made to the President of the Senate and Speaker of the House of Representatives during the second session of the Seventy-fourth Congress. The substitute agreed to in conference further provides that this report may be made to the Secretary of the Senate or the Clerk of the House of Representatives if Congress to the second session clerk that the contract of the Senate or the Clerk of the House of Representatives if Congress to the second session clerk that the contract of the Senate of the Se gress is not in session, also that the report must be made as soon as practicable.

Section 3 of the Senate amendment provides that members of the Commission shall receive no salary as such, but shall be reimbursed for actual expenses incurred in the discharge of their duties; also appropriates $1,000 to be charged one-half to District of Columbia funds in the Treasury of the United States and one-half to United States funds not otherwise appropriated, for the purposes of the set. The substitute expect to in conference purposes of the act. The substitute agreed to in conference authorizes the appropriation of $10,000, to be charged one-half against moneys in the Treasury of the United States to the credit of the District of Columbia and one-half against the moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be used for carrying out the purposes of the bill, including the employment of experts and other assistants.

VINCENT L. PALMISANO.

VINCENT L. PALMISANO, JACK NICHOLS. EVERETT M. DIRKSEN, Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, I think we should be informed what changes have been made in this report over the last one. There was considerable argument when the last conference report on this bill was brought up for consideration.

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Speaker, the previous conference report requires the appropriation of $100,000, of which $10,-000 was to be used for the making of a survey and $90,000 to purchase options. Considerable controversy arose over the options. This feature has been eliminated. All we ask today is $10,000 in order that the committee may make an appropriate survey. Of this sum $5,000 is to be taken from District of Columbia funds and $5,000 is to be contributed by the Federal Government.

Mr. SNELL. That is all the authority that is given to spend money, $10,000 for the purpose of making this investigation?

Mr. PALMISANO. That is all.

Mr. SNELL. And they cannot sign any options to buy any property?

Mr. PALMISANO. They have no power whatever except

Mr. SNELL. And to make a recommendation to Congress? Mr. PALMISANO. Yes.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PALMISANO. I yield. Mr. COCHRAN. I was the one who objected to $90,000 being used for the purchase of options. Is there anything in the report, should it be adopted, that is binding upon the Congress to accept the recommendations of the Commission?

Mr. PALMISANO. There is absolutely no obligation on the House to accept anything the Commission recommends.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the adoption of the conference report.

The conference report was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

LEGISLATIVE APPROPRIATION BILL, 1937

Mr. SNYDER of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill (H. R. 11691) making appropriations for the legislative branch of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1937, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the conference report.

The conference report and statement are as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 11691) making appropriations for the legislative branch of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1937, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as

That the Senate recede from its amendment numbered 29.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, and 30, and agree to the

J. BUELL SNYDER. Louis Ludlow, John F. Dockweiler, Edward C. Moran, Jr., D. Lane Powers, Managers on the part of the House. MILLARD E. TYDINGS, JAMES F. BYRNES,
JOHN G. TOWNSEND, Jr.,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 11691) making appropriations for the legislative branch of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1937, and for other purposes, submit the following statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon and recommended as to each of such amendments in the accompanying conference report, namely:

SENATE

On amendments nos. 1 to 11, inclusive, relating to the office of the Secretary: Provides for the establishment of 10 new positions and the elimination of 7 positions, and allows increases in the salaries of 2 positions, all as authorized by a Senate resolution, and a net increase of $7,140, as proposed by the Senate.

On amendments nos. 12 to 15, inclusive, relating to the document room: Eliminates one position at $1,860; provides for the promotion of three assistants from $1,860 to $2,040 each; and for the tion of three assistants from $1,860 to $2,040 each; and for the reduction of one first assistant from $3,360 to $2,640; and one second assistant from $2,400 to $2,040, all as authorized by a Senate resolution; and appropriates a total of $16,140, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $18,540, as proposed by the House.

On amendments nos. 16 to 24, inclusive, relating to the office of the Sergeant at Arms and Doorkeeper: Provides for increases amounting to $3,320 in the salaries of five employees and for one additional telephone operator at $1,560, all as authorized by a Senate resolution, and appropriates $259,664, all as proposed by the Senate in light of an appropriation of $254,784, as proposed by the Senate, in lieu of an appropriation of $254,784, as proposed by the House.

On amendment no. 25: Appropriates $18,000 for folding speeches and pamphlets, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $10,000, as proposed by the House.

CAPITOL POLICE

On amendments nos. 26 and 27: Appropriates $100,680, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $100,440, as proposed by the House, and provides an increase of $240 in the salary of the captain of the Capitol Police, as authorized by a Senate resolution.

ARCHITECT OF THE CAPITOL

On amendment no. 28: Makes immediately available $25,000 of the appropriation for care and improvement of the Capitol Grounds, as proposed by the Senate.

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS

On amendment no. 29: Appropriates $92,990, as proposed by the House, instead of $77,990, as proposed by the Senate, the additional $15,000 being provided for continuation of publication of the Digest of Public General Bills by the Legislative Reference Service

On amendment no. 30: Appropriates $7,000, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $5,000, as proposed by the House, for the purchase of books and periodicals for the Supreme Court library.

J. BUELL SNYDER. Louis Lublow, JOHN F. DOCKWEILER, EDWARD C. MORAN, Jr., D. LANE POWERS, Managers on the part of the House.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. SNYDER] is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. RICH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SNYDER of Pennsylvania. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. RICH. Does this conference report increase the legislative appropriation in any way?

Mr. SNYDER of Pennsylvania. The conference report increases the appropriation by $15,000.

Mr. RICH. And the bill is still $600,000 under the bill of last year?

Mr. SNYDER of Pennsylvania. Absolutely. I may say to the gentleman that in our bill we included an amount of $15,000 for the legislative digest. The Senate cut this out, but in the meantime there were demands which came in from Senators and Members of the House that it be continued for 1 more year, and this amount was accordingly put back.

Mr. RICH. But it is still $600,000 less than last year?

Mr. SNYDER of Pennsylvania. Yes.

Mr. RICH. I want to congratulate the committee on keeping it down. I shall serve notice now that we are going to fight all of these appropriation bills which have been increased.

Mr. SNELL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SNYDER of Pennsylvania. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. SNELL. May I ask the majority leader what the program is going to be for the balance of the afternoon?

Mr. BANKHEAD. If the gentleman will permit a Member to speak for 2 or 3 minutes and give me a chance to talk to some of the others, I shall be able to inform him.

Mr. SNELL. That will be satisfactory.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the adoption of the conference report.

The conference report was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. WHELCHEL] may address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Maryland?

There was no objection.

Mr. WHELCHEL. Mr. Speaker, on behalf of my people in my home city, Gainesville, Ga., I wish to express my sincere appreciation for the wonderful kindness and assistance rendered to alleviate the distress caused by the terrible tornado which recently visited our little city, the "queen city of the mountains", as we lovingly call it, laying waste homes, destroying noble edifices, and taking from our midst those who were near and dear to us. This unanimous expression of sympathy and the aid extended have caused the dark cloud to begin to lift and our people to see the light of day.

To the various relief organizations, including the Red Cross, the C. C. C. boys, the militia, and the F. E. R. A., we owe a debt of gratitude; they functioned splendidly under efficient leadership. To the Congress of the United States, including the Banking and Currency Committee, which gave sympathetic hearing in our hour of distress, making available Federal funds for the rehabilitation of our people and for relief of dire distress; and to our President of the United States. whose personal visit, expressing words of sympathy and bidding us Godspeed, we extend our heartfelt thanks.

This terrible catastrophe at my home city, affecting as it did my friends, my constituents, and my loved ones, has come very close to me, and I cannot express in words my appreciation and admiration for the splendid work done by the agencies mentioned and by the entire Nation in alleviating such distress as is seldom seen and giving evidence of the true nobility of soul inherent in mankind. Again I thank you. [Applause.]

OMNIBUS CLAIMS BILLS

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, in the consideration of omnibus claims bills tomorrow, Wednesday, April 22, the parliamentary situation will be that the Clerk will continue to read omnibus House bill 8524. At the time of adjournment, March 17, we had read up to title VI.

Titles I and III had been stricken from the bill. I offered an amendment to strike titles II, IV, and V from the bill, but my amendments were rejected. I feel this was due to the fact that a Member had moved to strike out the enacting clause and many Members came to the floor who had not been following the proceedings during the afternoon.

I do not feel it is fair to move to strike out the enacting clause in an omnibus bill, even if one is opposed to the entire bill. It seems to me the House should be allowed to debate each bill for the 10 minutes allowed under the rule, and then let the Members decide the issue. I am opposed to the entire bill that is pending. This omnibus bill comes from the Committee on War Claims and I have given it very careful consideration.

When this bill is disposed of, and that should take but a few minutes, several bills from the Committee on Claims will be considered, as well as a bill from the Foreign Affairs Committee, and two from the Committee on the Public Lands. As I have stated before, I feel that over 55 percent of the bills included in the omnibus bills should pass, but there are many that should not pass, in my opinion.

I do not think when an individual, company, or corporation has had its day in court and failed to recover, that we should send the case back to the Court of Claims, nor under any circumstances should we appropriate money direct from the Treasury to pay the claim.

The great majority of the Members of the House are lawyers. Where is the lawyer who, having won his case in court, would agree to giving the opposition a second opportunity to recover damages from his client; or where is the individual who has successfully defended a suit for damages against him would say to the court, "Give the plaintiff another chance"?

We must remember that when we appropriate money to pay these claims we are asking our constituents, taxpayers, to foot the bill.

My view is that we should pass the meritorious bills and defeat those that have been pending for years, some of them as many as 30 years, as well as others that have no merit. In the first bill continued March 17 there were bills growing out of the Civil War. There are other Civil War bills on the calendar today.

The first bill to be considered is title VI of H. R. 8524.

TITLE VI-H. R. 4408-SOUTHERN OVERALL CO.

This bill would confer jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to adjudicate a claim upon the basis of the fair and reasonable value of articles delivered to the War Department under a contract of November 23, 1917. This claim is for $6,000.

Does Congress wish to waive the statute of limitations, when this claimant negligently failed to file suit seasonably in the Court of Claims, after the claim had been rejected by both the War Department and the Comptroller General? What extenuating circumstances would justify such an exception? The claimant has already been paid the fair and reasonable value of the articles delivered exactly as provided in its contract. Are the terms of the contract to be wholly ignored? As Mr. Justice Bradley said:

If the contract did not express the true intention of the parties, it was the claimant's folly to have signed it (Brawley v. United States, 96 U. S. 168).

TITLE VIII-S. 281-FRED G. CLARK CO.

This bill proposes to pay losses sustained due to claimant's compliance with an order of the War Industries Board issued in 1918 directing that stock of wool grease on hand be withheld from sale or delivery pending further instructions. The amount is $13,000.

Why should this claimant be granted such preferential treatment when other similar dealers are not likewise given relief? Did the Government take any property of claimant? Is there any evidence of a contract, express or implied, obligating the Government to pay for these supplies? Does Congress wish to pay a claim which both the War Department and the Court of Claims (71 Ct. Cls. 662) have denied as being without merit?

TITLE IX-H. R. 3075-MACK COPPER CO.

This bill proposes to confer jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to reopen and readjudicate a claim arising out of the use and occupancy by the Government during the World War of a tract of land situated in California.

A similar bill, S. 1878, was vetoed by the President on September 7, 1935.

This land was purchased by the claimant for a little over $300,000. The claimant has already been paid, pursuant to judgment of the Court of Claims—rendered on June 6, 1927, no. D-134—the sum of $229,500, with interest on $150,000, for the taking, use, and damages to this property. Does the Congress wish to again have this claim examined and settled, with the possibility of ultimately paying an amount in excess of the cost of the property without acquiring the title to it? Is it not fundamental that damages for use and occupancy shall not exceed the value of the land? Is there to be no end to the number of times a claim is settled and adjusted?

TITLE X-H. R. 2213-CHARLES P. SHIPLEY SADDLERY & MERCANTILE CO.

This bill to pay direct from the Treasury is for the cancelation of a lease held by Charles P. Shipley Saddlery & Mercantile Co., at Camp Funston. The original claim was for $17,000 and the bill authorizes payment of $11,902. The report shows the War Department considered this claim allowed and paid $3,579. The War Department strongly opposes payment of the claim.

. The next omnibus bill is from the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

H. R. 8664 (OMNIBUS)

S. 267—MATTHEW E. HANNA (DECEASED), WILLARD L. BEAULAC, MARION P. HOOVER

This bill as reported carries separate items for the relief of three Foreign Service officers and employees for losses of personal property suffered by reason of an earthquake at Managua, Nicaragua, and fire immediately following the earthquake.

Earthquakes and fires resulting therefrom are not uncommon in Nicaragua, and no showing has been made that these officers and employees could not have insured their personal property against such hazards. Does the Congress wish to place the United States in the position of an insurer of the personal property of its employees? Or should they be held to provide such insurance themselves; and if they do not, should not the loss be theirs? Why should Foreign Service personnel be afforded relief of this nature and the same protection be denied other officers and employees of the Govern-There are no legal or equitable obligations on the United States to pay these claims, except the item of $153.08 in the claim of Mr. Hanna, representing the amount of public money and vouchers lost during the fire resulting from the earthquake, which would appear to be meritorious and proper for relief. Are the United States Treasury and taxpayers to be held responsible for an act of God?

Mr. Hanna died recently, since this bill was reported. Congress will soon be called on to pass a bill paying his widow a year's salary, a policy we have always followed when one in the Foreign Service dies.

The next bill is from the Committee on Claims and contains many bills of merit. I have enumerated some to which I propose to try and have stricken from the bill.

H. R. 8750 (OMNIBUS)

TITLE I-H. R. 796-A. E. CLARK

This bill proposes to pay a per-diem allowance to an employee of the Census Bureau which was disallowed under the provisions of the standardized Government travel regulations promulgated by the President pursuant to law. Under these regulations, there was no authority to pay Mr. Clark travel per diem while at his official station at Longview and no authority in any Government officer to bind the Government to an agreement to do so.

Does Congress wish to give one employee benefits denied thousands of others? When a person enters the Government service, does he or she not agree to be bound by a contract of employment which, if travel is to be performed, includes the provisions of the standardized Government travel regulations? Does Congress wish to cause dissatisfaction and discontent among other employees by ignoring these regulations in a particular case of no more merit than thousands of others? This is a small claim, $566, but it would be setting a dangerous precedent to pass it.

TITLE IV-H. R. 2087-DELAWARE BAY SHIPBUILDING CO.

The bill to permit the Delaware Bay Shipbuilding Co. to enter suit against the Government is strongly opposed by the Treasury Department, which holds it was the duty of this company to properly protect its property. The damage was the result of a collision with a Coast Guard vessel. The Government department holds there is no reasonable ground for holding the Government responsible but, on the contrary, holds the corporation is responsible to the Government for the damage to the Government vessel.

TITLE VIII-H. R. 2674-G. ELIAS & BRO., INC.

This bill proposes to pay the claimant $24,139.28 for alleged losses in connection with changes in plans and specifications for airplane parts furnished under contracts with the War Department in 1926 and 1927.

The contracts provided for such changes in plans and specifications and required the contractor to "submit evidence to the contracting officer of the amount involved by such change or changes", and that for any change increasing the cost of performance "an equitable adjustment will be made at the time such change or changes are made." Instead of the contractor submitting evidence of increased cost at the time the changes were made, the contractor accepted the changes with the statements thereon that "Contract price and terms of delivery not affected."

Does Congress wish to allow extra compensation for losses alleged to have been sustained over 9 years ago, when no claim therefor was requested or made at the time the changes were agreed upon? Is it not a condition precedent to the payment of increased costs under a contract that claim therefor, supported by proper evidence, be filed at the time changes are made? (Plumley v. United States, 43 Ct. Cls. 266, 226 U. S. 545.) Are the terms of the contracts and the principles of contract law to be disregarded entirely?

TITLE X-H. R. 3218-FRED HERRICK

A similar bill, S. 491, became Private Act No. 335, Seventyfourth Congress, approved August 27, 1935, after this title was included in the omnibus bill, H. R. 8750.

TITLE XIX-H. R. 6661-MAJ. JOSEPH H. HICKEY

A similar bill, S. 2741, became Private Act No. 388, Seventy-fourth Congress, approved February 11, 1936, after this title was included in the omnibus bill, H. R. 8750.

TITLE XX-S. 753-WALES ISLAND PACKING CO.

The claim of the Wales Island Packing Co. for $100,000 results from a favorable decision of the Court of Claims. However, it originated before any Member of this House was ever elected to Congress.

TITLE XXIII-S. 921-C. J. MAST

This bill proposes to pay for damages to claimant's crops from 1924 to 1928 by reason of breaks in a Government irrigation dike caused by muskrats burrowing in the bank of the dike.

Does Congress wish to obligate the Government to pay for several measures included in the damages resulting from ravages of muskrats when the Gov-tion of Members of the House.

ernment was exercising due care in trying to eliminate such predatory pests and was not otherwise negligent in operating the irrigation project? Are not such damages one of the risks assumed by farmers using water from irrigation projects? Is it not just as logical to say that the Government would be obligated to pay a farmer the value of chickens killed by a fox straying from a national forest? Only $255 is involved, but if you pass this bill, how many more will follow?

TITLE XXIV-S. 998-GEORGE LAWLEY & SON CORPORATION

This bill, if enacted, would pay a contractor $92,781 in excess of the contract price of two torpedo boats constructed for the Navy under contracts entered into in 1898. Delivery of the boats was delayed several years due to contractor's inability to secure certain materials promptly and to strikes in contractor's plant. The amount claimed represents increases in wages and cost of materials during the period of delay. It also appears claimant had had no prior experience in constructing torpedo boats. Congress has heretofore referred the matter to the Court of Claims, which has held that the claim is for a gratuity and therefore without legal or equitable merit. Case no. 15005, congressional, decided January 8, 1934.

Does Congress wish to adopt the policy of referring claims to the Court of Claims for hearing and adjudication and then refuse to accept the findings of said court? Are the terms of contracts and established principles of contract law to be disregarded in settling claims against the United States? Will this not encourage other concerns without experience in particular work to secure Government contracts in the belief that the Government will pay any losses sustained by them in the performance thereof?

Include conclusion of law, page 2280.

TITLE XXV-S. 1036-BR. GEORGE W. RITCHEY

This identical bill became Private Act No. 153, Seventyfourth Congress, approved July 22, 1935. Hence the pending bill, if enacted, would authorize payment of a claim already satisfied in full.

YAX REFUNDS

There are in this bill numerous cases where it is provided to pay certain claimants or to refer their cases to the Court of Claims growing out of payment of taxes, and so forth, which cannot now be paid, due to the statute of limitations, and so forth.

It has long been the established policy of Congress by its action on similar bills to refuse to act favorably on such legislation, no matter how meritorious the claim might be. I have had several such claims where the Treasury admitted an overpayment, but the relief bills were never passed.

The Treasury repeatedly has held-

The position which this Department has taken and which Congress has sanctioned is that it is a sound policy to have statutes of limitation and that the policy upon which statutes are based must be adhered to, notwithstanding hardship in particular cases.

Then, again, I quote from a Treasury report:

The Treasury Department has consistently opposed the enactment of special legislation designed to remove the bar of limitations on refunds as unfair to other taxpayers with equally meritorious claims.

One dislikes to deny a taxpayer money illegally paid or money due as an overpayment of income and other taxes, but to open the door would mean claims involving hundreds of milions of dollars. Then, again, some attention must be paid to the position the Government finds itself in. In making audits the Government has found where money is due, but it cannot collect because of the statute of limitations. This likewise involves hundreds of millions of dollars. It is only in fraud cases where the Government can go beyond the statute of limitations.

President Roosevelt has vetoed claims of this character.

H. R. 9045 (OMNIBUS)

This bill also is from the Committee on Claims. There are several measures included in this bill to which I call the attention of Members of the House.

TITLE II-H. R. 3559-JOHN L. ALCOCK

Under this bill the Court of Claims would be given jurisdiction to adjudicate a claim for anticipated profits under executory contracts between claimant and foreign buyers covering spruce lumber, which the United States commandeered for war purposes. Claimant has heretofore recovered damages for the loss on lumber in his possession at the time the Government took over all spruce timber.

Does Congress wish to obligate the Government to pay anticipated and speculative profits? Is it proper to pay a profit on goods which the claimant never owned or had in his possession? Did the claimant suffer any actual loss by having to pay damages to its customers for breach of contract resulting from an act of the United States in its sovereign capacity and as a war measure? Why should this claimant receive preferential treatment over other persons and concerns who were similarly situated?

The report shows the contention of the War Department is assailed by the committee. The War Department says in part:

If the relief be granted, it is believed such action would constitute a precedent too dangerous to even contemplate, as it would open up untold tens of thousands of claims of a like nature, for the reason that during the war the Government not only requisitioned ships which were under contract and charter at the time of their requisition but undertook the control of wheat, sugar, coal, and other commodities of almost every nature, thereby rendering impossible the execution of previous contracts, respecting these commodities, and took over steel mills, railroads, shipyards, telephone and telegraph lines, the capacity output of factories and other producing activities. If this bill should be enacted into law, it is the opinion of this Department that it will inevitably result in a stampede and gold rush in the nature of claims upon the Government in comparison with which the Klondike gold rush would appear as a solo affair. If this should be passed, it is difficult to understand why, in principle, every soldier who was drafted into the military service would not have an equally meritorious claim against the Government for a special act of Congress for relief to compensate him for the difference between his meager Army pay and the pay, salary, or earnings he was receiving in civil life.

It seems to me, in view of such a statement from the present Secretary of War, Congress should give more than ordinary consideration to this proposed legislation and defeat the bill.

TITLE IV-H. R. 3729-HENRY W. BIBUS AND OTHERS

The claim of Henry W. Bibus and others grows out of the purchase of land for use by the Government during the war, for which the claimants were paid $472,250.30. There are 11 claimants, and all but 2 received the option price. In one instance the compromise was $5,000 less, and in the other the same amount. In four cases the Government paid more than the option price. The report shows the Government spent millions for improvements. It converted the land into highly desirable industrial property by reason of the expenditure in excess of $6,000,000. Now the former owners want the Congress to pass a bill that might result in their securing the amount between the purchase price and the sale price—over a million dollars. The War Department is opposed to the bill, and the Congress should defeat it.

In direct contrast to this recommendation is the bill for the relief of the Western Electric Co., Inc., which originates with the War Department. This in itself is evidence that the Department is fair, because it admits the Government is obligated, prepares the bill, submits it to the Congress, and asks for its passage.

TITLE VI-H. R. 4841—RELIEF OF CERTAIN ARMY DISBURSING OFFICERS AND OTHERS

A similar bill, S. 556, became Private Act No. 214, Seventy-fourth Congress, approved August 14, 1935, after this title was included in the omnibus bill. H. R. 9054.

TITLE IX—S. 1360—TERESA DE PREVOST

The bill has been pending for many years and grows out of the so-called Alsop award of July 4, 1911, made by the King of Great Britain as arbitrator.

Mrs. de Prevost maintains this money should be paid to her by the Government because of alleged irregularities in the distribution through the State Department to claimants under the Alsop award. The United States Government held the Government of Chile was liable to the United States, acting for certain named persons and their heirs. The King of Great Britain was named as arbitrator, and he decided in favor of the United States. The contentions of the claimant indicate a former Assistant Solicitor of the State Department resigned after the award had been made and within a few years entered the case as an attorney. If the allegations of Mrs. de Prevost are true, then the Assistant Solicitor of the State Department was guilty of unethical conduct, to say the least. This lady has spent many years around the Capitol in an effort to secure the passage of an act to reimburse her.

Mrs. de Prevost died several weeks ago, and, so far as I can ascertain, she did not leave any relatives in this country.

The Committee on War Claims reported the next bill and of course has to do with claims growing out of the war. Some even go back to the War of the Rebellion.

H. R. 9112 (OMNIBUS)

TITLE I-H. R. 237-ROWESVILLE OIL CO.

The bill is to remove the statute of limitations so far as it applies to the linters claim of the Rowesville Oil Co. arising out of a contract it had with the Government in 1919. The Judge Advocate General of the War Department indicates that at this time, with incomplete records, the Government would be at a great disadvantage in defending this suit if the bill was passed. Further, while the plaintiff made a plea at the time of cancelation of contract that it feared bankruptcy. the Judge Advocate General says:

As a matter of fact, the plaintiff did not fail. Like all industries connected with the manufacture of munitions, the plaintiff made great profits as a result of the war.

The company did not protest the cancelation clause at the time the contract was made. When the war ended there was no further use for buying linters used in the manufacture of explosives, and the cancelation clause was in all such contracts so the Government would be protected when it no longer needed the explosives. The amount involved is not indicated by the report or bill. It might be pertinent to say, however, there are now before the Court of Claims cotton linters claims amounting to over $6.000.000.

TITLE II-H. R. 254-FARMERS STORAGE & FERTILIZER CO.

The second bill is for the Farmers Storage & Fertilizer Co., and is similar to the Rowesville Oil Co. bill.

TITLE III-H. R. 3790-WALTER W. JOHNSTON

This bill proposes to pay a balance alleged to be due claimant for services rendered in behalf of the United States Shipping Board Emergency Fleet Corporation during the years 1918 and 1919 in launching ships built for the Government at various shipbuilding yards.

In decision of April 30, 1930, no. E-455, the Court of Claims found the value of the claimant's services in launching the ships to be $20,000, and that $5,495 of that amount had been paid by the shipbuilding corporations, the amount of the judgment being $14,505. Does the Congress wish to authorize this payment notwithstanding the claimant has already been paid in full, in the view of the Court of Claims?

The net judgment was paid by the Government. It amounted to $14,505 and was paid September 6, 1930. This certainly should dispose of the claim. The bill seeking further reimbursement should be defeated.

TITLE V-H. R. 4059-ELLA B. KIMBALL

The bill to pay Ella B. Kimball, daughter and heir of Jeremiah Simonson, is a Civil War claim. It provides for payment of $16,441.81 for furnishing supplies and labor in the construction of the U. S. S. Chenango. The findings of the court were submitted in 1907, but all efforts to collect the money by an act of Congress have failed, as have hundreds if not thousands of other Civil War claims.

TITLE VI-H. R. 6356-JOSEPH G. GRISSOM

The claim of Joseph G. Grissom of $1,153.43 is another Civil War claim. This was to cover a period between the time he was commissioned by a Governor and actual date of muster in. One hundred and sixty-three such claims passed the House but were rejected by the Senate. This is the first time since 1914 this claim has been reported by a House committee.

TITLE VII-H. R. 7727-GEORGE B. MARX

The claim of George B. Marx grows out of an informal contract to make 200 wire carts for the Signal Corps in 1918. The War Department canceled the order on November 9, 1918, later considered the claim, and paid Marx $139,876.86. Marx claims $76,574.12. The committee, despite the objections of the War Department in the Seventy-first Congress, recommended Marx be paid $58,259.02. The bill was defeated. Now it is proposed to refer the case to the Court of Claims. The Government should not be required to defend such a suit.

TITLE VIII-S. 2520-T. D. RANDALL & CO.

This bill proposes to authorize the Court of Claims to readjudicate a claim for losses and damages arising out of contracts for furnishing hay to the War Department in the year 1918. The claim was referred to said court by Private Act No. 507, Seventieth Congress, approved March 2, 1929, and denied by the court for the reason there was no agreement or understanding whereby the Government was to provide cars for shipping the hay, and, there being no breach of contract by the United States, no liability resulted for the alleged losses and damages (71 Ct. Cls. 152).

Does the Congress wish in effect to amend the contracts at this late date by changing the rights and obligations of the parties thereunder so as to make the Government liable for risks which the contractor voluntarily assumed in its undertakings? Are not such risks usually assumed by those engaged in similar enterprises? Should not such risks be anticipated and guarded against by appropriate covenants in the contracts or by insurance?

This company wants $20 and $25 a ton for 3,600 tons of hay it contracted to furnish the Government for $14 per ton. The Government paid the contract price.

The next two omnibus bills are from the Committee on Claims, H. R. 11214 and 11215.

H. R. 11214 (OMNIBUS)

TITLE II.-H. R. 2479-CHARLES G. JOHNSON

The bill is for the relief of Charles G. Johnson, State treasurer of the State of California.

I have no objections to this bill, as the coupons have not been presented to the Treasury Department, but I do object to the wording of the bill, as it should read, a bill for the relief of the Maryland Casualty Co., as that company has actually paid the loss, and in the end, Mr. Johnson will reimburse the surety company.

TITLE XI—S. 925—TO CARRY INTO EFFECT THE FINDINGS OF THE COURT OF CLAIMS IN THE CASE OF WILLIAM W. DANENHOWER

This is an ancient claim, over 15 years old.

Section 9 of the act of February 12, 1901, according to the Court of Claims shows, provided among other things for the payment, 50 percent by the United States and 50 percent by the District of Columbia for all damages to property owners resulting from, incidental to, or connected with all relocations and changes of alinements and grades of the tracks of said railroad or the streets of the city.

The act of June 29, 1906 (34 Stat. 624, 625), repealed section 9 of the act of February 12, 1901, and provided for the ascertainment of the actual damages resulting to property owners from changes made in streets and railroad tracks under the act of 1901, taking into consideration all benefits received through said changes by a commission appointed by the Supreme Court of the District, or by the verdict of a jury selected by said court if the parties should be dissatisfied with the award of the commission. The filing of the petition with the commission was limited to 12 months after the date fixed for the meeting of said commission.

No suit was ever brought under section 9 of the act of February 12, 1901, or claim filed as provided by the act of June 23, 1906, by the claimant.

The actual damages caused by the depreciation in value of claimant's property in the fall of 1903 due to changes in the grades of New Jersey and Virginia Avenues and the relocation of the tracks of said railroad company under the act of 1901 was $42,260.

It seems to me if the Congress is to reimburse this owner, the District of Columbia should be required to pay 50 percent of the damages, but this bill calls for the payment of the entire amount from the Treasury of the United States. It further appears that this owner slept on his rights and did not take advantage of the acts referred to.

TITLE XII-S. 952-ZELMA HALVERSON

The decedent in this case lost his life while fighting a forest fire in Montana during August 1933, as an employee of the Sieben Livestock Co., of Helena, Mont. It seems to be admitted by everyone, except a representative of the company, that at the time of his death as a result of the fire. Harry Halverson continued to be employed with the company. He was not employed in the Forest Service of the United States at any time up to and including the time of his death, August 21, 1933, and if there was any intention to so employ him, such employment was never actually consummated but merely in the embryo stages. The only positive statement to the contrary is from one Fred Sheriff, an official of the company who hired Halverson and his interest in shifting any pecuniary liability from the company to the Government at once manifests itself. In other words, if employed by the company and not by the Government, there is neither moral, equitable, nor legal obligation upon the Government, such obligation resting squarely upon the company. There appears to be no sound reason why the United States should assume the liability if in fact that liability is rightfully upon another.

TITLE XIV—S. 1328—SNARE & TRIEST CO., NOW FREDERICK SNARE

The contractors in this case are asking the Congress to grant them the sum of $83,978.05 in full settlement of all claims against the Government for damages incident to delays (alleged to have been caused by the Government) in connection with work performed by them under a contract for furnishing labor and materials necessary in the improvement of the water front at the submarine base, Key West, Fla. The contractors have had their day in court on two different occasions. Claimants entered into this contract for the development of the submarine base under the appropriation act of July 1, 1918 (40 Stat. 725), which expressly and specifically appropriated the sum of $1,000,000 only, and while the Secretary of the Navy was authorized to enter into additional obligations, the performance of any work by the contractor in excess of the amount so specifically appropriated was necessarily done at their peril. From the committee reports and the testimony of naval engineer experts it appears much of the work was of a useless nature or at best susceptible of destruction by hurricane, but, notwithstanding this testimony, the Congress appropriated an additional $800,000 for further development of the project to the benefit of the contractors. The contractors knew that obligations entered into under such a provision of law were limited in payment to the extent of the appropriation—the courts have so held. When they proceed in the face of a limited appropriation they gamble with the generosity of a sympathetic Congress and in their efforts to secure the profits which they estimate upon bidding on such work they actually, if not intentionally, exert a moral duress or coercion.

In the Seventy-third Congress, S. 1760 authorized the Court of Claims again to hear and adjudicate the case without regard to the statute of limitations.

This bill, however, does not return the case to the Court of Claims, where it has been on two previous occasions, but directs the Secretary of the Treasury to pay the money direct, by providing that the Secretary of the Treasury shall pay the $83,978.05.

If any action is to be taken by the Congress on this bill it certainly should be to return the claim to the Court of Claims and not pay the claim from the Treasury as the bill provides.

TILE XV—S. 1431—COLLIER MANUFACTURING CO. OF BARNESVILLE, GA.

The contracts under which the claim of the Collier Manufacturing Co. was predicated were entered into by the firm of Clift & Goodrich, and the Court of Claims has found that settlements with the latter company were made by the Government. The Government dealt with Clift & Goodrich, not with the Collier Co.; there consequently was no privity of contract between the Collier Co. and the Government, and it is not perceived why it should be necessary to pay this company the sum of $48,719.70 in full settlement of all claims when they have in fact no claim against the Government. The case has been decided adversely to the Collier Co. by the War Department Board of Contract Adjustment and by the Court of Claims (certiorari denied by the Supreme Court of the United States).

Whether the Collier Co. profited by this or other contracts for furnishing supplies to the Government during the war is not known, but it is reasonable to suppose that they, like many others, found business with the Government during the stress of war conditions very profitable. It is reasonable to assume, also, that Clift & Goodrich, who apparently acted as brokers, were no exception in this respect, and if there was any unwarranted interference with the output and acceptance from the Collier Co., they, it would seem, should look to the party with whom they were dealing and not to the Government.

H. R. 11215 (OMNIBUS) TITLE I—H. R. 653—GEORGE R. BROWN

This is a bill to authorize payment of pay and allowances to George R. Brown, a former second lieutenant in the National Guard, to cover a period during which it is claimed he was illegally placed in a discharge status from the service of the United States. A fact that was apparently overlooked when the War Department acted to restore claimant to an active status was that when his National Guard organization was transferred into the Federal service on August 4, 1917, he was not an officer of the National Guard, having been discharged therefrom by the Governor July 28, 1917, which order was received August 1, 1917, and therefore he was not an officer in the service of the United States when the alleged illegal discharge order was issued or at any time during the period for which pay and allowances are claimed.

It is a further fact that Lieutenant Brown rendered no services during the period in question, never reported to a military post or station, and was not ordered to do so. The accounting officers of the Government in 1918 and the Court of Claims in 1924 found no merit in the claim and the War Department in agreement therewith has reported adversely. Amount claimed, $689.90.

TITLE IV-H. R. 2115-FIRST LT. R. G. CUNO

This bill would reimburse First Lt. R. G. Cuno for damages to his personal property which were sustained by reason of a storm which flooded a warehouse at Langley Field, Va., August 23, 1933, where the Government had stored the property during the officer's absence as a patient at Walter Reed General Hospital. The property was stored free of charge and, at most, the Government was merely a gratuitous bailee, requiring the exercise of only ordinary care and certainly not liable for damages resulting from unforeseeable causes. The damages to the property may be considered as the result of an act of God, any consequent losses necessarily resting on the owner of the property.

Since as early as 1885 (23 Stat. 350) the Government has accepted only a limited liability for loss, destruction, or damage of the property of personnel of the military services (see act of Mar. 4, 1921, 41 Stat. 1436), but it has never gone so far as to insure personal property of an Army officer against loss, damage, and destruction when the custody by the Government was for convenience of the owner of the property. The amount involved is $851.61.

TITLE VIII-H. R. 3179-JESSE ASHBY

The claim of Jesse Ashby arose out of work required to be performed under contract dated April 28, 1931, for painting plaster walls in the new Department of Commerce Building, Washington, D. C., and the provisions of this title VIII have for their purpose a reference of his claim to the United States Court of Claims with jurisdiction to hear the same notwithstanding the failure of any Government officer to give proper written orders for additional work with instructions to adjudicate the same upon the basis set forth in the bill. Article 3 of the contract requires that any claim resulting in an increase in the contract price must be asserted within 10 days after the change is ordered and supervisory officers of the Government have stated that the claim of the contractor is more in the nature of an afterthought subsequent to completion of the work, based upon his personal opinion that the profits should have amounted to more than were actually realized on the job. This merely shows the value which flows to the Government under section 3709, Revised Statutes, in requiring competition from contractors. Common experience teaches that oftentimes profits are small, and in some instances losses are incurred as a result of competitive bidding on close estimates. This is a chance that all contractors take in entering into competitive bidding, and in this particular case claimant stands on no different footing than other contractors similarly situated. In any event, if the claimant thinks he has a legal claim against the Government under the contract he is not precluded from pursuing whatever remedy he believes himself entitled in the Court of Claims, the statute of limitations not having run at this time. If the Government is going to guarantee a realization of the profit estimated by a contractor, then the protection accorded the Government by the provisions of section 3709, Revised Statutes, will be practically nullified. No amount is estimated.

TITLE XIII—H. R. 6105—FOR THE RELIEF OF THE NEW AMSTERDAM CASUALTY CO.

This bill is for the relief of the New Amsterdam Casualty Co. This company furnished the bond for one Zangwell Engelsher, who had been indicted on six counts for counterfeiting. You have hundreds of similar cases where forfeited bail bonds will be demanded when bills of this character pass. Then, again, it would be interesting to know who guaranteed this bond when it was written by the company. In many cases I have heard of surety companies demanding security before they will furnish such bonds. Was the company reimbursed, and if so, will it return this money to those who furnished the guaranty?

TITLE XVII—S. 895—TO CARRY OUT THE FINDINGS OF THE COURT OF CLAIMS IN THE CASE OF THE ATLANTIC WORKS, OF BOSTON, MASS.

The claim of the Atlantic Works, of Boston, Mass., is a more or less ancient one, the basis thereof being predicated upon construction of the revenue cutter Daniel Manning, under the terms of a contract with the United States dated June 27, 1895. The vessel was completed October 7, 1897, was delivered to and accepted by the United States, and the full contract price, plus the cost of extra work, was paid and received by the contractor as payment in full.

It appears clear from an examination of the findings of fact by the Court of Claims, to whom was referred the case under the Tucker Act of March 3, 1887, that the error in estimates for the job was due in large part to the inexperience and lack of facilities for handling the same. Finding V of the court was worded as follows:

The claimant's shipyard was principally for repairs; it was a small but good repair yard in which no vessels had been constructed in recent years. It was totally inadequate at the time of claimant's bid for construction of a ship of the type and dimensions of the Manning. The mold for laying down the hulls of vessels was not nearly large enough to lay down a vessel of the dimensions of the Manning. The hull of the vessel was to be constructed of wood and steel, and there were no facilities in the claimant's plant for curving the steel plates, which were shaped by the Government at the Boston Navy Yard. None of the responsible employees of the company had had any experience in the construction of wood and steel vessels or in the construction of any large vessels for some years, as the plant for some time had been devoted almost entirely to repair work.

And the nature of the claim was summarized in the Court's conclusion of law as follows:

If the Court have jurisdiction under any of the provisions of the Tucker Act to render judgment, its conclusion is that there is no liability upon the United States under the terms of the contract to pay said claim, and that the claim is neither a legal nor an equitable one. The claimant insists that the claim is one for "a grant, gift, or bounty" by the Government and the payment of such a claim rests in the judgment and discretion of Congress.

This claim thus appears to be merely another case where the Government is asked to donate or give to a contractor moneys of the taxpayer to partly reimburse such contractor for losses due to errors in estimating its costs and profits on Government work. The amount involved is $22,170.30. TITLE XVIII—S. 2119—FOR THE RELIEF OF AMOS D. CARVER, S. E. TURNER, CLIFFORD N. CARVER, SCOTT BLANCHARD, P. B. BLANCHARD, JAMES B. PARSE, A. N. BLANCHARD AND W. A. BLANCHARD AND/OR THE WIDOWS OF SUCH OF THEM AS MAY BE DECEASED

The claim of Amos D. Carver et al., in the sum of $35,916.68 is stated to represent losses incurred by the owners of the schooner Betsy Ross by reason of interference with, delays to, and forced cancelation of a private charter of and the appropriation of the use of said vessel by the United States Shipping Board on or about April 5, 1918. The basis for the claim appears to be that the loss was incurred in handling a shipment of wheat for the United States Food Administration from Australia to New York instead of a shipment of chrome ore to the west coast of the United States under a private charter. The United States Shipping Board has denied appropriation of the use of the vessel and the Supreme Court of the United States has confirmed the contention of the Government on the merits to the effect that no liability attached to the United States, this action being on writ of certiorari after judgment by the Court of Claims against the United States.

It is noted that the figures of $35,916.68, prepared by the claimants, were arrived at by crediting the Government with amounts paid to the owners of the vessel for shipment of lumber from Puget Sound to Australia and shipment of grain from Australia to New York and debiting against such receipts each and every expense incurred in connection with both shipments. As before stated the Supreme Court of the United States has found that no legal liability existed, and if the Congress sees fit to pass the bill in behalf of the claimants as a grant or gift there would appear to be for ascertainment what, if any, expenses were incurred by the owners incident to the shipment of wheat from Australia to New York over and above the expenses which would have been incurred in the shipment of chrome ore, taking into consideration the respective freight charges which would have accrued to the owners on each shipment. From all that appears the shipment of chrome ore under the original charter may have resulted in a greater loss than the shipment of wheat, incident to which it apparently is contended the loss was incurred.

There are other omnibus bills on the calendar, but I am sure they will not be reached on this call.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. LUDLOW. Mr. Speaker, I renew my request for permission to address the House for 5 minutes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Indiana asks unanimous consent to address the House for 5 minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. LUDLOW. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks and include therein a very brief letter received from Commander James E. Van Zandt, national commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

Mr. LUDLOW. Mr. Speaker, we have had a great deal of belligerency and fighting conversation in evidence here today, and I intend, therefore, to speak for a few minutes on the subject of peace.

Before starting this week to Japan, James E. Van Zandt, the national commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States, authorized his approval of House Joint Resolution No. 167, the war-referendum and anti-war-profits resolution which I have introduced as a means of keeping America out of foreign wars.

I welcome the support of this great soldier and the members of his organization who have fought the wars of our country in foreign lands. Certainly no one has a better right to an opinion on my war referendum and anti-war-profits proposal than those who have freely offered to die for America on foreign soil. They have given the full measure of devotion. They have furnished for the inspiration of future generations in the long lane of centuries a glorious example of unselfish service which cannot be dimmed or tarnished by things past or present or things to come.

They have a special right, which they have earned in the crucible of sacrifice, to evaluate any and all proposals that are designed to protect the young men of the future from being drawn into the shambles of foreign wars. They have evaluated the resolution I have introduced, and I am immensely pleased to say they have placed on it the seal of their approval. The Veterans of Foreign Wars would spill every ounce of their blood to defend America from attack or invasion, but they would erect every safeguard to prevent our fine young manhood from being drawn into slaughter pens in foreign countries. That is what my proposed constitutional amendment seeks to do, and that is why Commander in Chief Van Zandt and his patriotic followers are for it.

In a note sent to me on the day he started on his long journey, Commander Van Zandt said:

If I were not leaving Washington at noon today for Japan, it would be a pleasure for me to call upon you and discuss this matter with you personally. I addressed the Indiana Legislature recently and attempted in a humble way to convey to them the splendid work you are doing as a Member of the Indiana congressional delegation, and especially your efforts in regard to our country being kept free from becoming involved in any foreign entanglements. The legislation that you have introduced coincides in many ways with our thoughts to keep this country out of war, and as commander in chief of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States it is a pleasure to not only thank you for your interest in this matter but to congratulate you on the initiative you have taken in bringing his matter to the attention of the Congress of the United States.

The declaration of Commander Van Zandt in favor of House Joint Resolution No. 167, my war-referendum and anti-war-profits resolution, follows a similar endorsement from the American War Mothers of America, whose sons crossed the seas to fight in the World War. Meeting in national convention in Washington, the American War Mothers unanimously approved my resolution, declaring that the women of the future must never go through the ordeal of grief and suffering that had been their fate. The 21 railroad brotherhoods, representing the largest group of organized labor in the world, have put their united force back of my resolution, knowing that the men who compose the rank and file of labor are the most certain to be victims of unjustifiable wars.

My proposed constitutional amendment has two sections. One guarantees a popular vote on a declaration of war, except in the case of attack or invasion. The other section takes the profit out of war. Take the profit out of war and there will be few wars. The referendum section of the amendment is based on the philosophy that those who have to suffer, and if need be, to die and to bear the awful burdens and costs of war, should have something to say as to whether war shall be declared. What could be more elementally just than that?

I know that Commander Van Zandt would be pleased if his friends who are Members of the House of Representatives would sign discharge petition no. 28 which I have filed at the Speaker's desk to bring House Joint Resolution No. 167 out of the committee, where it has been reposing since February 14, 1935, exactly 14 months, so that it may receive consideration and action in the House. Surely it is a measure of such importance and has such widespread national support that it is worthy of being brought out into the light, debated, possibly amended, and either approved or disapproved in a record vote. Fifty-two Members of the House. not quite one-fourth of the number required to make the petition effective, have so far attached their signatures. During the hearing on this resolution before the Judiciary subcommittee, Dr. Arthur Call, secretary of the American Peace Society and the Interparliamentary Union, in arguing for a favorable report on the resolution said:

I believe that if this discussion were carried onto the floor of the House it would be equally educational to all the Members of the House and to the people of America generally.

I wish to echo that sentiment and that belief, and I plead with Members of the House to sign discharge petition no. 28 so that in this historic forum we may have a free and open discussion on the subject of how to keep America out of foreign entanglements, based on a resolution, which, without pride of authorship, I may say is conceived in a spirit of service and which I sincerely believe is the best proposal so far advanced to keep America out of wars which we should not enter. [Applause.]

CALENDAR WEDNESDAY

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that business in order on tomorrow, Calendar Wednesday, be dispensed with.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. BOILEAU. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 5 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin?

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, let us have an understanding what is going to happen here for the balance of the afternoon. I thought we had an understanding that no business would be transacted except the presentation of a rule.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I may say to the gentleman that my purpose is to move to adjourn immediately.

Mr. SNELL. I thought the gentleman would object to the other Member addressing the House for 5 minutes.

Mr. BOILEAU. The other request was granted.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I am not going to object to the request made by the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. PARSONS. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Will the gentleman withhold that for a moment?

Mr. PARSONS. I withhold the point of order.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I expected to make the motion to adjourn now, but inasmuch as the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Boileau] has asked unanimous consent to proceed for 5 minutes, out of courtesy to him I shall not object. I give notice, however, that I shall object to any further remarks.

Mr. COCHRAN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri?

Mr. COCHRAN. The gentleman has asked and received permission that business on tomorrow, Calendar Wednesday, be dispensed with. Under a special order of the House memorial services are set for next Tuesday. Under the rule, next Tuesday would have been taken up for the consideration of omnibus claims bills. While I am opposed to some of the individual bills, I am in favor of the passage of practically 75 or 80 percent of them. May I suggest to the majority leader that he ask unanimous consent to take up these omnibus bills next Wednesday?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I am perfectly willing to do that unless in the meantime the tax bill is ready for consideration.

Mr. FULLER. Mr. Speaker, I demand the regular order. The SPEAKER. The regular order is called for.

The gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Boileau] asks unanimous consent to address the House for 5 minutes. Is there objection?

Mr. FULLER. I object, Mr. Speaker.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted to Mr. Wilcox, for 4 days, on account of important official business.

SENATE ENROLLED BILL SIGNED

The SPEAKER announced his signature to an enrolled bill of the Senate of the following title:

S. 2524. An act to amend section 51 of the Judicial Code of the United States (U. S. C., title 28, sec. 112).

BILL PRESENTED TO THE PRESIDENT

Mr. PARSONS, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that that committee did on this day present to the President, for his approval, a bill of the House of the following title:

H. R. 11053. An act authorizing the President to present the Distinguished Service Medal to Commander Percy Todd, out pride of authorship, I may say is conceived in a spirit of British Navy, and the Navy Cross to Lt. Comdr. Charles service and which I sincerely believe is the best proposal so A. deW. Kitcat, British Navy.

Mr. BOILEAU. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BOILEAU. I would like to ask the Speaker a parliamentary inquiry with reference to the discharge petition, discharging the Committee on Rules from the consideration of the Frazier-Lemke bill.

I would like to ask the Speaker as to the number of signatures required in order to complete the petition. As I understand, the rule provides it must be signed by a majority of the total membership of the House of Representatives. There have been previous rulings at previous times to the effect that when Members sign the petition their names remain thereon and are effective to the petition even after their deaths or resignation or when for any other reason they are no longer Members of the House.

At the present time, as I understand, there are 214 names on the petition, including the names of some Members who have resigned or who are now deceased.

In view of the specific wording of the rule, which provides that the petition is completed when the names of a majority of the total membership of the House are attached to the petition, I would like to ask for the information of the House-because I think it is a matter that all the Members are interested in-how many signatures are actually required; and in this connection I may state that there are very few precedents in the RECORD. One of the precedents occurred at the time the Patman bonus bill was brought up for consideration. At that time the petition was removed automatically from the Clerk's desk when 216 names were attached to it. It was removed from the Clerk's desk and appeared in the Congressional Record, in conformity with the rule, on the following day, with 216 names on the petition, and that was all. So at that time it was not considered necessary, at least by the Clerk, although I do not believe there was any definite or formal ruling by the Chair, to have 218 signatures.

I understand the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Patman] later on, either the same day or perhaps the following day, asked that two more names be put on the petition, and in the permanent Record 218 names appear, but the precedent on the part of the Clerk, at least, was that 216 names, or a majority of the then Members of the House, were sufficient. I do not know whether that was in conformity with the view of the Speaker at that time or not.

I would like to have the Speaker give the House the benefit of his ruling on this point.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. BOILEAU. I will be pleased to yield to the gentleman.

Mr. O'CONNOR. The gentleman has raised a serious question to which much thought has been given.

Mr. BOILEAU. I appreciate that.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Did the gentleman advise the Speaker in advance that he was going to make this parliamentary inquiry?

Mr. BOILEAU. I did not.

Mr. O'CONNOR. As I say, it is a very important matter, and to adequately discuss it would require going back to the debate on the adoption of the rule itself. I submit to the gentleman whether it would not be fair to the Speaker, as well as to the rest of us—

Mr. PARSONS. Mr. Speaker, I renew my point of order that a quorum is not present.

Mr. BOILEAU. Mr. Speaker, I do not yield for that purpose. I do not know whether the point of order is well taken or not, but I do not yield for that purpose.

The SPEAKER. The point of order of no quorum having been made, no further business is in order until a quorum is established.

Mr. PARSONS. Mr. Speaker, I insist on my point of order.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will count, but pending the count the Chair may state that he is prepared to answer the parliamentary inquiry of the gentleman from Wisconsin. Evidently there is not a quorum present.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 2 o'clock and 2 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until tomorrow, Wednesday, April 15, 1936, at 12 o'clock noon.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

776. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a letter from the Chief of Engineers, United States Army, dated April 6, 1936, submitting a report, together with accompanying papers and illustration, on a preliminary examination and survey and reexamination of Ashley River, S. C., municipal yacht basin and connecting channels and channels to the grounds of the South Carolina Military Academy (The Citadel), authorized by the River and Harbor Act, approved August 30, 1935, and requested by resolution of the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, House of Representatives, adopted February 13, 1935 (H. Doc. No. 449); to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and ordered to be printed, with illustration.

777. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a letter from the Chief of Engineers, United States Army, dated April 8, 1936, submitting a report, together with accompanying papers and illustration, on a preliminary examination of Point Remove Creek, Ark., a tributary of the Arkansas River, with a view to the control of floods, authorized by act of Congress approved July 1, 1935 (H. Doc. No. 450); to the Committee on Flood Control and ordered to be printed, with illustration.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII,

Mr. BLAND: Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries. H. R. 11915. A bill to amend the Coastwise Load Line Act of 1935; with amendment (Rept. No. 2404). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. PITTENGER: A bill (H. R. 12282) to provide for the establishment of Coast Guard stations at or near Beaver Bay, Two Island, and Hovland, Minn.; to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. SIROVICH: A bill (H. R. 12283) providing for a surgeon and ship hospital on vessels; to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. SUTPHIN: A bill (H. R. 12284) to lease an unused portion, useless for military purposes, of the Fort Hancock Military Reservation to the State of New Jersey for a public aquatic park and pleasure ground for the benefit and enjoyment of the people of the United States; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. ELLENBOGEN: A bill (H. R. 12285) to rehabilitate and stabilize labor conditions in the textile industry of the United States; to prevent unemployment, and to provide minimum wages, maximum hours, and other conditions of employment in said industry; to safeguard and promote the general welfare; and for other purposes; to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. BUCHANAN: Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 567) to provide an additional appropriation for expenses of special and select committees of the House of Representatives for the fiscal year 1936; to the Committee on Appropriations.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. ANDRESEN: A bill (H. R. 12286) granting an increase in retired pay to Frank E. Monville; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. BACON: A bill (H. R. 12287) for the relief of Silver Line, Ltd., as owner of the British motor vessel Silverfir, and Osaka Shosen Kaisha, as owner of the Japanese motor vessel Buenos Aires Maru; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. CHRISTIANSON: A bill (H. R. 12288) granting an increase in retired pay to Frank E. Monville; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. FLETCHER: A bill (H. R. 12289) granting a pension to John Herschler; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. KLOEB: A bill (H. R. 12290) granting a pension to Lenace Marlin; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. TOLAN: A bill (H. R. 12291) for the relief of H. A. Montgomery; to the Committee on Claims,

By Mr. WILCOX: A bill (H. R. 12292) for the relief of James B. McDonald; to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 12293) for the relief of James B. Mc-Donald; to the Committee on Claims.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

10719. By Mr. COLDEN: Resolution adopted by the board of directors of the Mining Association of the Southwest, Los Angeles, Calif., on March 30, 1936, asking that the existing and proposed income-tax laws be so amended, revised, or enacted as to exempt gold producers of the United States from the payment of an income tax on gold newly produced in the United States or its possessions; to the Committee on Mines and Mining.

10720. Also, certified copy of resolution of the board of governors of the Truck Owners Association of California, expressing approval of the work of the Federal Coordinator of Transportation, and recommending that that office be made a permanent part of the Interstate Commerce Commission and the retention of the incumbent Coordinator of Transportation; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

10721. By Mr. CONNERY: Petition of the mayors and selectmen representing the cities and towns of Massachusetts within the flood area, urging that legislation should be enacted providing for an expenditure by the Federal Government in the sum of $130,000,000 to cover cost of flood control, and end of soil erosion, sanitation, riverside beautification, and an end of pollution of the three great New England streams, namely, the Connecticut, the Merrimack, and Blackstone Rivers; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

10722. Also, petition of the Peabody Chamber of Commerce, opposing the enactment of Senate bills 3958 and 3959; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

10723. By Mr. JOHNSON of Texas: Petition of Rev. Edward D. Hamner, Oakwood, Tex., favoring House Joint Resolution No. 167; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

10724. Also, petition of Frank Johnson, chairman of Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, Teague, Tex., favoring House bill 11609, by Mr. Crosser of Ohio; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

10725. Also, petition of E. A. Havekost, secretary, Limestone County R. L. C. A., Groesbeck, Tex., favoring an amendment to House bill 11148, so as to reduce the age of beneficiaries to those under 35 years; to the Committee on the Civil Service.

10726. Also, petition of C. W. Barber, of Aquilla, Tex., favoring House bill 11609, the Wheeler-Crosser bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

10727. By Mr. LEHLBACH: Petition of the Daughters of America, Star of A. J. Smith Council, No. 90, Newark, N. J., to take House bill 5921 out of committee; to the Committee on Rules.

10728. By the SPEAKER: Petition of the second district board, Wisconsin Federation of Women's Clubs, urging the repeal of section 213 of the Economy Act of 1932; to the Committee on Appropriations.

SENATE

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 15, 1936

(Legislative day of Monday, Feb. 24, 1936)

IMPEACHMENT OF HALSTED L. RITTER

The Senate, sitting for the trial of the articles of impeachment against Halsted L. Ritter, judge of the United States District Court for the Southern District of Florida, met at 12 o'clock meridian.

The respondent, Halsted L. Ritter, with his counsel, Frank P. Walsh, Esq., and Carl T. Hoffman, Esq., appeared in the seats assigned them.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Sergeant at Arms by proclamation will open the proceedings of the Senate sitting for the trial of the articles of impeachment.

The Sergeant at Arms made the usual proclamation.

On request of Mr. Ashurst, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of the Senate, sitting for the trial of the articles of impeachment, for Tuesday, April 14, 1936, was dispensed with, and the Journal was approved.

(At this point, on request of Mr. Robinson and by unanimous consent, the Senate, sitting for the trial of the articles of impeachment, suspended its session in order that the Senate might receive a message from the House of Representatives by Mr. Haltigan, one of its reading clerks. The message, which is noted elsewhere in the RECORD of today's legislative proceedings, having been received, on motion of Mr. Robinson, the Senate resumed its session sitting for the trial of the articles of impeachment.)

Mr. ROBINSON. I suggest the absence of a quorum. The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators

answered to their names:

Adams Clark Johnson Pittman Keyes King La Follette Radcliffe Reynolds Ashurst Connally Coolidge Austin Copeland Couzens Bachman Robinson Logan Bailey Lonergan Schwellenbach Barbour Barkley Davis Long McAdoo Sheppard Shipstead Dieterich Donahey Benson Bilbo Duffy McGill Smith Fletcher Black Thomas, Okla. Thomas, Utah Townsend McNary Maloney Metcalf Bone Borah Frazier George Gerry Gibson Glass Brown Truman Vandenberg Bulkley Minton Moore Bulow Burke Guffey Murphy Murray Van Nuys Hale Harrison Wagner Walsh Byrd Byrnes Capper Caraway Norris Hastings Wheeler Hatch Nye O'Mahoney White Carey Hayden

Mr. ROBINSON. I announce that the Senator from Alabama [Mr. Bankhead], the Senator from Colorado [Mr. Costigan], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCarran], and the Senator from Florida [Mr. TRAMMELL] are absent because of illness, and that the Senator from Oklahoma IMr. GORE] and the senior Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS], and the Senator from Idaho [Mr. Pope] are necessarily detained from the Senate. I request that this announcement stand for the day.

Overton

Mr. AUSTIN. I announce that the Senator from Iowa [Mr. Dickinson] is necessarily absent.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Eighty-six Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

DELIBERATION WITH CLOSED DOORS

Mr. ASHURST. I move that the doors of the Senate be closed for deliberation.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Arizona.

The motion was agreed to.

Holt

The respondent and his counsel withdrew from the Chamber.

The galleries having been previously cleared, the Senate (at 12 o'clock and 8 minutes p. m.) proceeded to deliberate with closed doors.

UNANIMOUS-CONSENT ORDER ENTERED BEHIND CLOSED DOORS

Mr. ROBINSON. I ask that the unanimous-consent agreement entered into during the deliberations of the Senate sitting for the trial of the articles of impeachment behind closed doors may be published in the RECORD.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The agreement referred to is as follows:

Ordered, by unanimous consent, That when the Senate, sitting as a Court, concludes its session on today it take a recess until 12 o'clock tomorrow, and that upon the convening of the Court on Friday it proceed to vote upon the various articles of impeachment.

Mr. ROBINSON. I should like to say, for the benefit of those who were not present, that, on account of the enforced absence from the Senate tomorrow of a number of Senators who desire to be present and vote, the closed deliberations in connection with the proceedings pertaining to the impeachment case will be finished tomorrow, and a vote will be taken upon the convening of the Senate on Friday. If there should be time afforded at the conclusion of the closed session tomorrow, I shall ask for a legislative session.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ROBINSON. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. I just stepped out a moment ago, and I understand an agreement has been entered into to vote on the pending impeachment case Friday. If that be true, I shall have to ask to be excused, because I will be compelled to be away on Friday. I did not know that such an agreement had been entered into. I do not, however, want to change the agreement.

Mr. ROBINSON. I am sorry, but it cannot now be changed. Mr. BARKLEY. Very well.

LEGISLATIVE SESSION

Mr. ROBINSON. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of legislative business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of legislative business.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

During the impeachment proceedings, on motion of Mr. ROBINSON, the proceedings were suspended so that, as in legislative session, the Senate might receive a message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Haltigan, one of its reading clerks, announcing that the House had agreed severally to the reports of the committees of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the following bills of the House:

H. R. 3806. An act to establish a commercial airport for the District of Columbia;

H. R. 11691. An act making appropriations for the legislative branch of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1937, and for other purposes; and

H. R. 11968. An act relating to the authority of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to make rehabilitation loans for the repair of damages caused by floods or other catastrophes, and for other purposes.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED

The message also announced that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the following enrolled bills, and they were signed by the Vice President:

H.R. 3806. An act to establish a commercial airport for the District of Columbia:

H. R. 4387. An act conferring jurisdiction upon the United States District Court for the Western District of Michigan to hear, determine, and render judgment upon the claim of Barbara Blackstrom:

H. R. 11691. An act making appropriations for the legislative branch of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1937, and for other purposes; and

H. R. 11968. An act relating to the authority of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to make rehabilitation loans for the repair of damages caused by floods or other catastrophes, and for other purposes.

SALE AND DISTRIBUTION OF MILK PRODUCTS IN CHICAGO AREA

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a letter At 4 o'clock and 45 minutes p. m. the doors were opened. I from the Chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, transmitting, pursuant to House Concurrent Resolution 32, Seventy-third Congress, second session, an interim report of the Commission with respect to the sale and distribution of milk and milk products in the Chicago, Ill., sales area, which, with the accompanying report, was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

REPORT OF THE CLAIMS COMMITTEE

Mr. LOGAN, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (S. 4444) directing the Court of Claims to reopen certain cases and to correct the errors therein, if any, by additional judgments against the United States, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 1831) thereon.

ENROLLED BILL PRESENTED

Mrs. CARAWAY, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that on April 14, 1936, that committee presented to the President of the United States the enrolled bill (S. 2524) to amend section 51 of the Judicial Code of the United States (U.S.C., title 28, sec. 112).

BILLS INTRODUCED

Bills were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. LOGAN:

A bill (S. 4478) for the relief of Joseph N. Wenger, lieutenant, United States Navy, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. HARRISON:

A bill (S. 4479) for the relief of John Edward Johnson; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. WHEELER:

A bill (S. 4480) to regulate the transportation and sale of natural gas in interstate commerce, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

By Mr. DAVIS:

A bill (S. 4481) to correct the military record of Ralph Smythe; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

A bill (S. 4482) granting an increase in pension to Cora Kennedy; to the Committee on Pensions.

On motion of Mr. Sheppard, the Committee on Military Affairs was discharged from the further consideration of the bill (S. 4435) authorizing the President to present in the name of Congress a medal of honor to Harold R. Wood, and it was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

AMENDMENT TO RIVER AND HARBOR FLOOD CONTROL BILL

Mr. SHEPPARD submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 8455) authorizing the construction of certain public works on rivers and harbors for flood control, and for other purposes, which was referred to the Committee on Commerce and ordered to be printed.

MARINE CASUALTY INVESTIGATION BOARD-AMENDMENT

Mr. GIBSON submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 8599) to provide for a change in the designation of the Bureau of Navigation and Steamboat Inspection, to create a marine casualty investigation board, and increase efficiency in administration of the steamboat inspection laws, and for other purposes, which was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed.

ATALA N. LAMAR

Mr. HARRISON submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 280), which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate hereby is authorized and directed to pay from the appropriation for miscellaneous items, contingent fund of the Senate, fiscal year 1935, to Atala N. Lamar, widow of Lucius Quintus Cincinnatus Lamar, late an employee of the Senate under supervision of the Sergeant at Arms, a sum equal to 6 months' compensation at the rate he was receiving by law at the time of his death, said sum to be considered inclusive of funeral expenses and all other allowances.

RURAL ELECTRIFICATION-REPRINT

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that there be printed in bill form in parallel columns Senate bill 3483, the rural electrification bill and House amendment thereto. The bill is in conference.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the order is made.

WAR DEPARTMENT APPROPRIATIONS-APPOINTMENT OF CONFEREE

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. Norbeck] is absent on account of illness. He was appointed one of the conferees on the War Department appropriation bill. It is desirable that a meeting of the conferees be held very shortly, and I ask unanimous consent that the Senator from South Dakota may be excused from further service as a member of the conference committee on the part of the Senate, and that the Chair appoint a Senator to serve as conferee in his place.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. Norbeck] will be excused from further service as a member of the conference committee on the part of the Senate on the War Department appropriation bill, and the Chair appoints the senior Senator from Wyoming [Mr. Carey] as a conferee in place of the Senator from South Dakota.

TAX EXEMPTION OF OLYMPIC GAMES RECEIPTS

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, some days ago, at the suggestion of the Senator from California [Mr. McADoo], who was then absent because of illness, I asked that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill 11327, to exempt from taxation receipts from the operation of Olympic Games, and so forth, the Senate sometime ago having passed an identical bill. The House did not act upon the Senate bill, but acted upon a similar bill of its own.

I now ask unanimous consent, with the approval of the Senator from California, the author of the bill, that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill 11327.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, my attention was diverted. I inquire if this is the bill to which I objected the other day? Mr. ROBINSON. It is.

Mr. McNARY. This is a House bill?

Mr. ROBINSON. Yes; the Senate has already passed a similar bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Arkansas for the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill (H. R. 11327) to exempt from taxation receipts from the operation of Olympic Games if donated to the State of California, the city of Los Angeles, and the county of Los Angeles, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That no Federal income tax or gift tax shall now or hereafter be imposed upon any present, past, or future members of the Tenth Olympiade Committee of the Games of Los Angeles U. S. A. 1932, Ltd., in respect of any surplus of moneys received by such committee from the operation of the Olympic Games in California in 1932 and donated (1) by such committee, or any of its members, to the State of California, or (2) by such committee, or any of its members, through the Community Development Association, Ltd., to the city of Los Angeles in such State in such State or the county of Los Angeles in such State.

W. P. A. IN RHODE ISLAND-ARTICLE FROM PROVIDENCE JOURNAL

Mr. METCALF. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a very interesting article from the Providence Journal of April 14 instant.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Providence Journal of Apr. 14, 1936]

QUITS DEMOCRATS; COST, ONE W. P. A. JOB—DAY AFTER CAPEVERDIAN LEAGUE SWITCHES LOYALTY TO G. O. P., SECRETARY IS DROPPED—VICTIM IN DIRE STRAITS—J. F. DELGADO, VETERAN AND FATHER OF FOUR, SUDDENLY TOLD WORK IS NOT SATISFACTORY

FOUR, SUDDENLY TOLD WORK IS NOT SATISFACTORY

The day after the Capeverdian Civic Democratic League of Rhode Island officially changed its name to the Capeverdian Civic Republican League, its secretary, John F. Delgado, a World War veteran and father of four, was dropped from the W. P. A. rolls.

Since last October, Delgado had been working with a pick and shovel on the Blackstone Boulevard W. P. A. project during the days and tending to the books of the league, which has 85 members, at night. During recent months the league members underwent a change of political heart and voted to transfer their affiliation from Democratic to Republican. As secretary, Delgado signed the official papers changing the name and they were filed at the office of the secretary of state on March 31.

NOTIFIED OF DISMISSAL

The next morning Delgado went to work as usual at the Black-stone Boulevard project. He was directed to report immediately, he said, to the W. P. A. headquarters on Custom House Street. There, he said, he was told he was being summarily dropped from the rolls. Delgado asked for an explanation and was told that his the rolls. Delgado asked for an explanation and was told that his record was bad, that his foreman had reported him as being unable to do the work required, of refusing to do his work, and of being late in reporting for duty on several occasions.

Since that time Delgado's family, which lives at 57 Sheldon Street in the Fox Point section of the city, has been living a more or less hand-to-mouth existence, Delgado said yesterday, while he searched for work. He applied to the city welfare department for aid, and was told by his district welfare worker, he said, that his situation would be investigated and acted upon as soon as possible.

SERVED IN UNITED STATES ARMY

In 1915 Delgado came to America from the Cape Verde Islands, and 3 years later he enlisted in the United States Army. He served for 13 months and was honorably discharged. He was a spinner by trade, but when the depression came he was forced onto the relief rolls. For two winters he attended Americanization classes. He became active in the Capeverdian League. "Naturally, being poor and without any relief, I feel badly," he said yesterday, "but what hurt me was the claim that I had a poor record. I deny that I was unable to do my work; I did do it. It is true that I was late upon occasion, but that was during the winter months. I had to transfer from one trolley car to another to get to the job, and this sometimes delayed my arrival. You see, this is the first time that I have ever been discharged from any position since I started to work as a boy."

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. ROBINSON. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

EXECUTIVE REPORTS OF THE APPROPRIATIONS COMMITTEE

Mr. McKELLAR, from the Committee on Appropriations, reported favorably the nominations of the following persons to be State directors of the Public Works Administration:

Alvin D. Wilder (California); Forrest M. Logan (Indiana); George H. Sager, Jr. (Kentucky); Louis A. Boulay (Ohio); William F. Cochrane (South Dakota); Richard A. Hart (Utah); and Eugene R. Hoffman (Washington).

The VICE PRESIDENT. If there be no further reports of committees, the clerk will state the first nomination in order on the calendar.

POSTMASTERS

The legislative clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations of postmasters.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the nominations of postmasters be confirmed en bloc.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the post-office nominations are confirmed en bloc.

That completes the calendar.

Mr. ROBINSON. I move that the Senate take a recess. The motion was agreed to; and (at 4 o'clock and 55 minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess, to meet, sitting for the trial of the articles of impeachment, behind closed doors, tomorrow, Thursday, April 16, 1936, at 12 o'clock meridian.

CONFIRMATIONS

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate April 15 (legislative day of Feb. 24), 1936

POSTMASTERS

ARIZONA

William I. Welker, Bowie.

ARKANSAS

Alfred J. Jefferies, Clarendon. Lawrence H. Green, Crawfordville. Bennie H. Lucy, Elaine. Hazel P. Screeton, Hazen. Rhetta L. Cooper, Hughes. Paul B. Garrett, Okolona. Gertrude A. Parrish, Rector.

James A. Watson, Springdale. Joe Davidson, Winslow.

KENTUCKY

Stanley H. Jones, Fort Knox. George M. Roach, Fulton. Anna May Moore, Hazard. Isaac N. Combs, Lexington. George J. Covington, Mayfield. Benjamin F. Shepard, Wayland.

Lyman Ellis, Canton. Frank X. Oakes, Fairfield. William Gerald Jordan, Fryeburg. Wade P. Clifton, Greenville Junction, Marita E. Peabody, Houlton. Embert Worcester, Phillips. Eugene P. Lowell, South Paris. Maynard A. Lucas, Union. Howard F. Wright, Wilton. Mildred A. Holbrook, Wiscasset.

MICHIGAN

James A. Maxwell, Auburn. Harold P. Snyder, Bear Lake. William D. Pinkham, Belding. Anne C. Parsal, Benton Harbor. Samuel Robinson, Charlotte. Delwin J. McDonald, Cheboygan, Francis Jackson, Clare. Elizabeth H. Ronk, Clarkston. Frank H. Crowell, East Jordan. Joseph J. Voice, Fife Lake. Fred W. Zehnder, Frankenmuth. Ralph Edward Peterson, Frankfort. Robert H. Edsall, Greenville. Walter C. Schoof, Imlay City. James O. Peet, Ithaca. William A. Seegmiller, Owosso. Frank Knight Learned, Plymouth. Myron I. Lutz, Pullman. Arthur J. La Bo, Rockwood.

MINNESOTA

Palmer M. Swenson, Dawson.

Carroll Wisdom, Bowling Green. Garnett B. Sturgis, Eureka. Clyde G. Eubank, Madison. George W. Daniels, Novinger.

NORTH DAKOTA

Hugh H. Parsons, Fessenden. Orna F. Leedy, Goodrich.

OHIO

Marvin L. Sollmann, Anna.

OKLAHOMA

Roy Jessie McCormick, Alva. William R. Marlin, Pawnee.

PENNSYLVANIA

Elmer N. Zepp, Hatfield.

TENNESSEE

Walter E. Nixon, Dayton. John Cort Sadler, Gainesboro.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 15, 1936

The House met at 12 o'clock meridian.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Heavenly Father, we would cherish in this moment of devotion the greatest of gifts, which is a thankful heart. Give us the spirit of truth which subordinates the lower elements of life. Breathe upon us the inward tranquillity and linger on the stepping stones of self, but may we patiently mount to higher levels. Blessed Lord, arm us with the sense of victory that overcometh the world, with that grace that resists every evil influence and that serenely sustains in every ordeal and turns to advantage every vicissitude. As patriots and devout lovers of our country, may we delight to clothe ourselves with the garment of Christian brotherhood. Open our eyes to the large purpose and the high efficiency demanded by the public service. Through Christ our Redeemer. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MOTION TO DISCHARGE COMMITTEE

Mr. BOILEAU. Mr. Speaker, the question presented yesterday afternoon is of vital importance to the membership of the House, and I trust the Speaker will tolerate me for a few minutes while I present the views of those of us who have been studying this rule, and who believe that the signatures of a majority of the present membership of the House attached to the petition is sufficient to bring to a vote the question of discharging the Rules Committee from further consideration of the Frazier-Lemke bill.

I have been able to find very few precedents in connection with the discharge rule. I have looked up the precedents dealing with language similar to this language which appears in other rules of the House.

There are numerous rules of the House referring to majorities, and the Constitution itself refers to a majority of the membership of the House of Congress. The Constitution of the United States states that either House of Congress can organize to carry on business when a majority is present; or, in other words, a majority shall constitute a quorum.

The precedents of the House and of the Senate are and have been for a long time to the effect that that language which provides that a majority shall constitute a quorum means a majority of the Members of either House who have been elected, sworn, and living, and who have not resigned. In other words, a majority under the Constitution for the purpose of establishing a quorum is a majority of the present membership of the House, which today is 429.

In all the precedents I have been able to find which relate to the interpretation of the word "majority", and regardless of the exact language used in stating that a majority is necessary, the rulings have been that a majority means a majority of the membership of the House at the moment.

The rule we have before us today, and which is in effect at the present time, states that when a majority of the total membership of the House shall have signed the motion it shall be entered on the Journal, and so forth. The language is "the total membership of the House." This rule is the only rule which I have been able to find in which that exact language "total membership of the House" is used, but it seems clear to me, Mr. Speaker, that the proper rule of interpretation should be that unless the rule specifically states that some different gage for determining what is a majority is expressly written into the rule, that the rulings of the Chair on other rules relating to a majority should be observed in this case, and that in this case it should be held that a majority of the total membership of the House means a majority of the present total membership of the House, and nothing else. The total membership of the House today is 429, and a majority of the total membership of this House today is 215. It seems to me there is nothing in the rules of the House that would justify any different

There is only one precedent I have been able to find which deals with this particular rule, and that is when the Patman bonus petition was completed and was spread upon the Journal and printed in the RECORD on August 22, 1965. That petition was completed when 216 names were attached to it. On August 22 last the precedent established by this House was that a majority of the total membership of the House consisted of 216 Members, not 218. I do not want to say that that was the ruling of the Chair, because, so far as silence of the uttermost thought and feeling. Let us not | I know, neither the Parliamentarian nor the Speaker nor anyone else advised the Clerk to spread the petition on the Journal when 216 names were attached, but the precedent established on that day was that 216 Members completed the petition. It was a majority of the membership of the House, and the daily RECORD for August 22, 1935, lists the names of 216 Members, which was a majority of the total membership of 431. At least 216 was then considered to be a majority, and the RECORD shows that at that time the petition, in conformity with the rules, was automatically spread upon the Journal and incorporated in the RECORD. It is true that on the following day, August 23, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Parman] made this statement:

> Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Record be corrected on page 14579 to show a total of 218 names on the peti-tion instead of 216.

> That was only because the gentleman from Texas was able to obtain more signatures and because he did not want the question raised on this particular petition when it should be brought up for consideration. That does not mean that that correction was necessary. The words addressed by Mr. Parman to the Speaker are not incorporated in the permanent Record, so that if we want to find that particular language it is necessary to go back to the daily RECORD. The language was excluded for some reason from the permanent RECORD, and I presume in conformity with the rules of the House. The permanent RECORD now shows that there were 218 names on the petition, whereas as a matter of fact there were only 216 names when the petition was completed, as is clearly shown by the daily RECORD. That is the only precedent. It is a precedent established by the Clerk, but after all, the Clerk is the one who is directed by the provisions of the rule to interpret it and act in conformity with it, and if 216 names were sufficient then, it would seem to me that 215 names now are sufficient.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. BOILEAU. Yes.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Of course, the permanent Record does show 218 names, because 2 additional names were put on simultaneously with the request made by Mr. PATMAN.

Mr. BOILEAU. I think I made that clear.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BOILEAU. Yes.

Mr. BLANTON. Of course, this is a matter of construction to be made by the Speaker. He can decide either way and be right, because the burden is upon the Speaker to determine and announce what was meant by the House when it used that language.

Mr. BOILEAU. I appreciate that.

Mr. BLANTON. This point, however, is in the case, in favor of the gentleman's contention. Why did the House use the language "total membership"? Why did it not just say 218? At one time it said 145. If the House intended that 218 Members should sign the petition, it would have been much simpler to have used that language-218 Members of the House. But the House saw fit in the rule to say 'a majority of the total membership of the House" . realizing that the total membership changes from time to time.

Mr. BOILEAU. I thank the gentleman for his contribu-There is nothing in the precedents that would indicate that any other interpretation should be placed on this rule than that a majority of the total membership means a majority of the present total membership of the House. It may be said, and I have heard it suggested by those who take a different view, that we should go to the debate in this House at the time the rule was adopted to assist us in interpreting the rule. I examined the debate and read it over very carefully last night. I submit that there is not one word in the debate at the time the rule was adopted that would justify any Member of the House or the Speaker of the House in believing that the House at that time meant that a majority requires more than a majority of the present total membership of the House. A majority of the total membership of the House today, for quorum and other purposes is 215, because there are now 6 vacancies, leaving a total membership of 429.

It is true that in that debate some Members referred to the new rule as the rule that required a majority to discharge a committee. Others referred to it as the "218 rule." That expression, "218 rule", was used many times during the debate, but there are many very good reasons for that. The first reason was that we were changing a rule that specifically provided for 145 signatures. The old rule did not say "one-third of the membership of the House." said, "145 Members." So that when we were changing the rule from the 145 to a majority, on the opening day of the session, when we had a complete, full House of 435 Members it required 218 to constitute a majority. But if the Speaker will read the debate, I am sure the Speaker will come to the conclusion that that particular point was not even remotely in the minds of those who participated in the debate. Several times 218 was mentioned, but that was because Members were using figures to compare the new rule with the old rule of 145, and the use of figures was the most convenient way of referring to the two rules-the 145 rule and the majority or 218 rule-which on that day constituted a majority of the total membership of the House of Representatives.

Another point I want to bring out is this: The rule that was in operation during the Seventy-first Congress required a "majority of the membership of the House." It did not contain the word "total." It read "when a majority of the membership of the House shall have signed the petition", and so forth. There are no decisions relating to the language in that rule. It may be argued that when we used the words "total membership" in the present rule we meant something different than when we had the old rule in the Seventy-first Congress. I submit there is a very logical reason why the word "total" was left in the present rule, and that reason does not justify us in coming to the conclusion that any special emphasis should be placed upon the use of that word. The 145 rule that was in effect during the Seventy-second and Seventy-third Congresses provided that "when Members to the total number of 145 shall have signed the petition", and so forth.

Now, Mr. Speaker, this new rule adopted on the opening day of the Seventy-fourth Congress was an amendment of that rule. That old rule was before the committee and the House for amendment. The word "total" was in the old rule, and the amended rule naturally retained that word, because there was no need of striking it out. Leaving the word "total" in the amended rule does not change or alter the meaning of the rule at all.

I submit, in conclusion, that the precedents of the House are all to the effect that a majority of the House, regardless of the exact language used, means a majority of the Members who have been elected and sworn and who have not died, resigned, or been expelled.

It seems to me to be clear, from the debate when the rule was adopted, and considering the circumstances surrounding its consideration, that there was no intention on the part of the House to require more Members to sign the petition than are required to constitute a quorum to do business, and I submit that 215 Members today is a majority of the total membership of this House.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is ready to rule.

It has not been the practice to permit discussions of parliamentary inquiries, but this matter is one of importance, and the Chair has indulged the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Bolleau] to present his views.

The gentleman from Wisconsin indicated when the House adjourned on yesterday that it was his intention to renew his inquiry this morning, and that has given the Chair an opportunity to examine the debates which took place when this rule was adopted at the beginning of this Congress and to consider the various points raised by the gentleman from Wisconsin. The Chair is going to ask the indulgence of the House, for he thinks that the importance of this question, the fact that it has been raised for the first time, will justify him in taking a little of the time of the House.

The parliamentary inquiry of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Boileau] raises de novo a question as to the actual number of signatures necessary to effectuate a petition under the discharge rule of the House of Representatives.

The distinguished gentleman seems to contend that there is required only a majority of the actual sitting Members at any particular moment; that if the authorized and apportioned membership of the House of 435 be reduced at any time by death, resignation, or other cause the number necessary is an actual majority of the remaining sitting Members. Precisely, the gentleman contends that because of six vacancies, by reason of three deaths and three resignations, the number of sitting Members is reduced to 429, of which 215 only is required instead of 218, a majority of 435, the authorized membership of the House.

As a precedent in support of his contention, the distinguished gentleman from Wisconsin cites an instance occurring in the closing days of the first session of this the Seventy-fourth Congress, in August 1935. At that time there were five vacancies in the House. On August 22, 1935, there were 216 signatures to the petition on the bonus. The Clerk, on whose advice it is not clear, thereupon entered the petition in the Journal as a completed one. Two days later the gentleman from Texas [Mr. PATMAN], the introducer of the bonus bill, H. R. 1, and the prime mover of the petition. asked the unanimous consent of the House that the RECORD be corrected to show the petition bore 218 signatures. This consent was granted, and thereupon two additional Members signed the petition, making 218, and in the permanent RECORD of the proceedings of the House the number of signers appear as 218. The judgment of the distinguished gentleman from Texas at that time is significant.

It might be worth while to review the history of the socalled discharge rule for the purpose of the Record and future rulings, and especially because the question is of first instance and of considerable parliamentary importance.

The first rule of this nature was adopted in the Sixty-first Congress, on June 17, 1910. That rule, however, did not provide any actual number of signers necessary to discharge a committee. It merely provided that when the motion was seconded by a majority of the House, meaning those voting, by a teller vote, the bill was placed on the appropriate calendar.

This rule of 1910 was twice amended, but in no substantial particular, in the Sixty-second Congress in 1911 and 1912.

In the Sixty-eighth Congress, on January 18, 1924, the "motion to instruct a committee" was adopted. This rule required the signatures of 150 Members.

In the Sixty-ninth Congress, on December 7, 1925, the number required to "instruct" a committee was increased from "150" to "a majority of the membership of the House." No question ever arose under that rule similar to the one now presented to the Chair.

In the Seventy-second Congress, on December 8, 1931, the present discharge rule, an entire departure from, and revision of, the previous rule, was adopted. That rule, which is the existing rule, except for the number of signatures necessary, provided for 145 signatures. Of course, that number is exactly one-third of the membership of 435, but the number "145" was used instead of the fraction "one-third."

In the Seventy-fourth, the present Congress, on the opening day, January 3, 1935, the existing discharge rule, requiring only 145 signatures to a petition to discharge a committee, was amended to require a majority of the total membership of the House. (Congressional Record, Jan. 3, 1935, p. 13.)

It is interesting, and possibly significant, to note the addition of the word "total" in this amendment, which word did not occur in the rule adopted in the Sixty-ninth Congress on December 7, 1925, which required a majority of the membership.

It cannot be gainsaid that on any inquiry as to the membership of the House the answer would be 435. It is beyond conception that the answer would contain the qualification that except it is only 429 now, because we have 6 vacancies by reason of death and resignation.

Because the question has never been raised before, it should be of assistance in determining the issue, to refer to the debate on the adoption of the present rule. This debate will be found in the Congressional Record of the first session of the Seventy-fourth Congress on January 3, 1935, on pages 13 to 20.

The gentleman from New York [Mr. O'CONNOR], chairman of the Rules Committee, offered the resolution (H. Res. 17) to amend the discharge rule, being rule XXVII, by amending the last sentence of the first paragraph of section 4 thereof to read as follows:

When a majority of the total membership of the House shall have signed the motion, it shall be entered on the Journal, printed with the signatures thereto in the Congressional Record, and referred to the Calendar of Motions to Discharge Committees.

Debate thereupon followed, opened by Mr. O'CONNOR. In the course of that debate the distinguished gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. O'MALLEY] said:

Under the proposed change 218 Members are necessary (p. 14).

Mr. O'Connor referred to the change as "the 218 rule", and referred to the rule as requiring the signatures of "218 Members."

The distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Dunn] said (p. 14):

Does not the gentleman [Mr. O'CONNOR] believe that the number of 145 is really more democratic than 218?

The distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Ransley], the ranking minority member of the Rules Committee, in opposition to the proposed change in the rule, said (p. 15):

It is now proposed to increase that number to 218, which means an absolute majority, not of the Members present when the matter is to be considered, but a majority of the membership of the entire House.

The distinguished gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Marrin], the assistant and acting leader of the minority, said (p. 15):

I say without hesitation we are taking a backward step today if we increase the number required to discharge the committee from 145 to 218.

The distinguished gentleman from Indiana [Mr. Greenwood], second ranking majority member of the Rules Committee, said (p. 16):

• • This amendment will change it from 145 to 218.

Whereupon the distinguished gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Keller], who opposed the change, referred to the change as requiring "218 signatures."

The distinguished minority member from Minnesota [Mr. Knurson] referred to the number of signatures necessary as "increased to 218" (p. 17).

The distinguished gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Connery] twice referred to the resolution under debate as "changing this rule from 145 to 218", and as the "218 rule" (p. 18).

The distinguished gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Mapes], one of the outstanding parliamentarians of the House and a member of the Rules Committee, referred to the proposal as one "to require 218 Members to sign the petition" (p. 19).

Again Mr. Knutson, of Minnesota, referred to the proposal as "a new rule requiring 218 signatures on a motion to discharge a committee" (p. 19).

Again, Mr. Dunn of Pennsylvania said (p. 20):

I am opposed to changing this rule from 145 to 218.

From the above references to the debates it is reasonably deductible that the figure of "218" was definitely in the minds of the Members of the House when the last change in the discharge rule was adopted. The Chair might state that he heard the debate which occurred on the adoption of this rule at the last session of this Congress, and there was not a single Member of the House who discussed it, either for or against the proposed change, who did not refer to and accept the idea that it meant 218 Members of the House.

The rule is commonly referred to as the "218 discharge rule", and no question has ever been raised until now as to the reduction of that number by reason of deaths or resignations, and so forth, of Members.

It is in the interest of proper and orderly parliamentary procedure that the number of signatures required on any such petition to discharge a committee should be definitely known and ascertained in advance. The number required should be stable and not variable from moment to moment. It might well be that deaths of Members could happen without the House being advised at the very moment. Likewise, resignations, which properly are sent to the Governors of the States, might not at the immediate moment be called to the attention of the House.

The Chair will divert for a moment to call attention to the fact that the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Underwood] sent a formal notification of his resignation to the House on yesterday, whereas he resigned last week.

Nor is it beyond the realm of possibility that resignations of Members might be deliberately presented so that the number of signatures already filed on a petition might constitute a majority under the contention of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Boileau].

Because of all of the foregoing reasons the Chair is constrained to hold that under the "discharge rule" of the House, requiring "a majority of the total membership of the House", the exact number of 218 Members was intended, and is necessary before a discharge petition is effective, and no less number will suffice, irrespective of temporary vacancies due to death, resignation, or other causes.

BILL S. 3524, TO PROVIDE FOR THE CONTROL OF FLOOD WATERS IN THE MISSISSIPPI VALLEY, TO IMPROVE NAVIGATION ON THE MISSISSIPPI RIVER AND ITS TRIBUTARES, TO PROVIDE FOR IRRIGA-TION OF ARID AND SEMIARID LANDS, AND FOR OTHER PURPOSES

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the Record and to include a letter from the Secretary of War.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. Speaker, a bill introduced in the Senate—S. 3524—proposes a Mississippi Valley authority as an instrument for the attainment of the following objectives:

First. To provide for the control of the floodwaters of the Mississippi River Valley.

Second. To improve navigation on the Mississippi River and its tributaries.

Third. To provide for the irrigation of arid and semiarid

Fourth. To provide for the restoration and preservation of ground water levels in the Mississippi Valley.

Fifth. To protect and preserve the fertility of the soil of the Mississippi Valley.

Sixth. So far as is consistent with and in order to lessen the expenses of flood control, navigation, and irrigation, to provide for the generation, transmission, distribution, and sale of electric power.

These are worthy objectives, and their attainment should be fostered by the Federal Government; but the methods proposed in this bill are so inconsistent with the best principles of governmental organization that they promise in the long run to hinder rather than promote the improvements that it intends to stimulate.

The vast area of the Mississippi Valley involves a great number of streams of widely varying characteristics, and the manifold possibilities of their development give the bill an almost unpredictable scope. A somewhat similar authority has been established in the Tennessee Valley as an experiment to determine the practicability and workability of such an administrative and executive instrument. The working out of this plan should be observed carefully over an extended period so that the measures of its advantages and disadvantages can be weighed accurately and confident judgment passed on them before similar developments are tried elsewhere, and particularly before similar developments on even a much larger scale are undertaken or even seriously considered.

The proposed Mississippi Valley Authority would be in its essence a field administrative agency charged with the execution of operations widely divergent in character encompassing an area approximately three-fourths of the continental area of the United States. In that vast region this corporation would supersede many thoroughly qualified existing departments of the Government, schooled by long experience and training in their several fields of activity, and better fitted by organization, talent, experience, and aptitude to carry on the development of the Mississippi Valley as they have supervised it throughout the Nation for many years than any other organization likely to be devised.

Expansion and extension of the work of these great groups is merely a matter of providing additional appropriations. With such appropriations they can carry out and attain, more efficiently and more promptly than any new and untried agencies can hope to do, the objectives toward which this bill is directed.

In particular, it is my conviction that the services of the Army engineers in the development of the Mississippi Valley cannot be dispensed with or curtailed without disastrous consequences. Most of the objectives of the bill are centered around the improvements of the rivers of the valleys and hinge upon the regulation of stream flow, control of floods, improvement of navigation, the generation of hydroelectric power, and the irrigation of arid and semiarid lands. River improvement of these classes have been included in the duties of the Army engineer organization for a century. The Congress has very wisely entrusted the execution of its directives to that efficient organization, and the reasons and the wisdom of that course has been convincingly demonstrated.

The Army engineer organization constitutes the only general engineering organization of considerable magnitude in the Government service. All of the other engineer organizations-and there are many of excellent quality and talent throughout the several governmental departments—are closely specialized and their organization and talent are devoted to the particular tasks for which they were created. On the other hand, the War Department must maintain for use in time of war an engineering organization qualified to perform, under the stress of war emergency, in the most expeditious and efficient manner, any engineering task incident not only to the conduct of military operations, offensive and defensive, but also to the civil activities which must back up and supplement the military activities. War grows more and more complicated with the development of scientific instruments; and with the organization of entire nations in arms, military operations become more and more nearly an application of all of human arts and knowledge to the purposes of frustrating an enemy similarly organized and prepared. The Army engineers must therefore be prepared to provide any service that may be needed in the entire field of engineering, on any scale that may be demanded.

For such primary purposes it is necessary to maintain in time of peace a highly trained, skilled, and energetic engineer organization as an important part of the National Military Establishment. It must be practically experienced in the conduct of engineering work of varied kinds. It must be capable of extraordinarily rapid expansion to meet the needs of war. All of these primary qualifications in the engineering arm of the military service can be developed only by professional application in time of peace which, as the Nation has recently had impressive evidence in the devastating floods that have occurred this year, has its emergencies no less than those of war.

So I can cite, with complete confidence, the obvious wisdom of the Congress in developing this great general engineering organization through the years, and utilizing it to the fullest extent in time of peace in the execution of governmental engineering enterprises of all kinds that are not inseparably a part of the work of some other existing Government department. The interests of the Government in national defense, as well as in the economy of its peacetime activity, have all been served eminently by this wise policy. As a consequence the Army engineers have taken the leadership in almost every field of engineering, planning, design, construction, and operation. They have made surveys, exploratory, geodetic, topographical, and hydrological. They have constructed locks, dams, harbors, piers, power plants, lighthouses, breakwaters, roads, railroads, bridges, public buildings, monuments. They have salvaged wrecks, removed rock barriers, dredged channels, built levees, rectified river channels, controlled floods. In fact, every engineering activity on which the forces of the Government have been engaged throughout its history has been pioneered in some phase by the Army engineer.

To refresh the recollection of this fact it is only necessary to refer to a few notable examples. I mention the surveys west of the one-hundredth meridian; the explorations of the Missouri Valley and the great West; the highway systems of Alaska, Cuba, Puerto Rico; the Panama Canal; the Lincoln Memorial Bridge; the great Muscle Shoals power plant; the Washington Monument; the Library of Congress; the Mississippi River; the salvage of the wrecks of the Maine and of the Morro Castle. These are only the examples known to every schoolboy. The list could be extended and multiplied indefinitely. Even the river-control projects now being constructed by the Tennessee Valley Authority were conceived, located, and designed in their general features by the Army engineer organization.

While I have taken the Army engineers as a conspicuous example of the efficiency of the permanent agencies of the Federal Government, the others, too, have attained notable success and efficiency in the conduct of their specialized activities. They are younger and newer, but they, too, have built up traditions of loyalty, efficiency, self-sacrifice, and devotion to the public service of the most gratifying and inspirational nature.

If we are to develop the Mississippi Valley for the benefit of the citizens who now live in it and for others who will be attracted to it in the future-and nobody can hope for the attainment of the worthy objectives of this bill more fervently than myself-we can do so effectively, economically, expeditiously, and without danger of the introduction of politics, favoritism, and waste only by devoting to those ends the great ability of these permanent governmental organizations which have been built up in their efficiency, loyalty, and experience through the years. We cannot hope to benefit by supplanting such organizations with new and untried administrative devices for the development of a territorial area three-fourths the size of the United States. They would duplicate the work which the permanent agencies have been performing effectively for many years, and which they will continue to perform promptly and efficiently in the remaining area of the United States during the years that would be wasted in the Mississippi Valley while the proposed authority would be building its organization and learning from the beginning the lessons which the Army engineers learned a century ago and are applying diligently in the Government service today.

The report of the Secretary of War upon the bill proposing the establishment of a Mississippi Valley Authority contains sound views and principles on governmental organization. This report is quoted below.

Hon. E. D. SMITH,

Hon. E. D. Smith,

Chairman, Committee on Agriculture and Forestry,

United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

Dear Senator Smith: In your letter of January 10, 1935, you enclosed S. 3524, a bill to provide for the establishment of a Mississippi Valley Authority, and providing for the control of flood waters of the Mississippi River, the improvement of navigation, and the provision of irrigation of arid and semiarid lands, and for other purposes, and asked for a report from this Department. Department.

A careful examination of the bill indicates as its purpose a comprehensive development of the Mississippi River and tributary basins under the control of an authority similar to the Tennessee Valley Authority, but with broader and more varied powers. large area involved, the great number of streams of miscellaneous characteristics, and the many purposes of the proposed development give the bill an almost unlimited scope. The Tennessee Walley Authority was established as an experiment to determine the economic practicability of a combined utilization of the water resources of the Tennessee River in connection with its improvement for navigation. It should be worked out more completely, so that the measure of its advantages and difficulties can be accurately weighed before new but similar developments are tried elsewhere, or on a larger scale.

The Mississippi Valley Authority would be essentially a field administrative agency charged with the execution of operations in an area comprising approximately three-fourths of the United States. The limits of a field administrative agency should be such that its executive head can fully supervise the operations within the territorial area without material loss of time in visiting the works therein. The most efficient results can be obtained from such an agency only when the kinds of work it has to do are of the same general type, or at least closely allied in character. An enlarged field area in which the immediate executive is unable personally to supervise the activities of the area, or which groups a number of activities involving widely different techniques, would require an inordinate number of highly paid senior executives and greatly disproportionate overhead costs. The engineering organization of the War Department is now charged by law with the preparation of plans and the execution of works for the improvement of story bashors and other wareness. ment of rivers, harbors, and other waterways. Its work is sub-divided into areas of suitable extent for efficient administrative and divided into areas of suitable extent for efficient administrative and field control and by technical assignments adapted to efficient planning and supervision. Similarly, the other major engineering organizations of the Government are equipped to handle efficiently and economically their particular specialized assignments throughout the country. The creation of a Mississippi Valley Authority would remove a large area from the jurisdiction of the established Government agencies and would deprive the Government in this would remove a large area from the jurisdiction of the established Government agencies and would deprive the Government in this area of the capable services afforded by the trained personnel of these agencies. Savings can be effected only by a curtailment of the services rendered to the public.

Land improvements to protect and increase the fertility of the soil and for allied purposes are of great social usefulness, but they are not so closely related to waterway improvements as to require their planning and execution by the same organization. Neither is it necessary for economy or other reasons to have one organization in charge of both irrigation developments and stream imtion in charge of both irrigation developments and stream improvements for flood control and navigation. Irrigation plans are generally separate and distinct from flood-control and navigation generally separate and distinct from flood-control and navigation plans, and they are now being satisfactorily developed by distinct organizations equipped for specialized study.

The established organization of the Government contemplates intimate control by Congress and the President of its activities through the several executive departments authorized by Congress and functioning directly under the President. The records and duties of these departments are well conceived, and the necessity is not apparent, except under emergent conditions, for the creation of a superorganization, or corporation, which may not be fully responsive to congressional direction. Such a corporation, with broad general powers to carry out large and varied public improvements at enormous cost over an extensive territory, embracing ments at enormous cost over an extensive territory, embracing almost three-fourths of the United States, would function in the field of diminishing returns and thus reduce the degree of control now maintained, with the inevitable result of waste, increased overhead, and loss of efficiency in execution. The War Department, therefore, does not view the proposed bill with favor.

The Bureau of the Budget advises that there is no objection to the submission of this report.

Sincerely yours,

Secretary of War.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will state there are two special orders this morning. The Chair announces to the House that in deference to those Members and also under the orders of the House, he will not recognize anyone for any business except those who wish to extend their own remarks or to correct the Journal.

THE GOVERNMENT MUST PROTECT ITS CITIZENS FROM EXPLOITATION

Mr. HILDEBRANDT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the Record.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. HILDEBRANDT. Mr. Speaker, thinking people will applaud President Roosevelt's words in Baltimore in what was virtually the opening speech of his campaign for reelection. The President made it clear that, so far as his administration is concerned, the Government intends to continue seeking to eliminate unemployment, poverty, and economic injustices.

The old doctrine of leaving things alone and letting predatory interests do whatever they please is no longer in favor. It is now recognized that the Government has a definite obligation to protect its citizens from exploitation. Just as, in time of war, official authority is utilized to protect the people from the enemy, so in time of peace this authority should be used for their defense against another foe. Economic insecurity is certainly as much an enemy as any alien army-more so, in fact, for no alien army has ever invaded the United States, and the wars in which we have participated have been only occasional, while uncertainties of livelihood are ever present, so far as a large share of the population is concerned.

When the Executive declared that "the Government must give, and will give, consideration to such subjects as the length of the working week, the stability of employment on an annual basis, and payment of at least adequate minimum wages", he voiced the sentiments of average people. Such a view is not satisfactory, of course, to those who extort vast profits from the public and who thrive by legalized robbery, but it is eminently satisfactory to the general run of citizens. Big business is prone to quote Thomas Jefferson's statement that the best government is that which governs least, but the remark was made by Jefferson in quite a different sense than that in which it is misused by profiteers. Jefferson was opposed to official interference with purely private matters, but he was equally against letting greedy interests ride roughshod over the rights of the masses. In this highly industrialized civilization, regulations are needed that would have been entirely unnecessary in the age in which Jefferson lived. A nation of many farms, only small villages, and no great cities did not require traffic restrictions that are imperative today. To argue against such restrictions by quoting Jefferson would be no more illogical than to argue against strict control over industrial and trade matters.

MEETING OF SUBCOMMITTEE OF THE COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY DURING THE SESSION OF THE HOUSE

Mr. CITRON. Mr. Speaker, at the request of Subcommittee No. 4 of the Committee on the Judiciary, I ask unanimous consent that this committee be permitted to sit during the session of the House this afternoon.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Connecticut?

There was no objection.

ABSENTEE VOTING

Mr. RAMSPECK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a few short excerpts from the Georgia law with reference to absentees voting.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia?

There was no objection.

Mr. RAMSPECK. Mr. Speaker, since the foundation of our Government the right of our citizens to exercise the ballot has been one of our most cherished possessions. Our forefathers fought for this right, and it seems to me that those who believe in good citizenship should not fail to exercise this privilege.

With reference to those who work for the Federal Government, I would personally go further and say that the Federal employee who fails to maintain his or her registration, who fails to qualify under the laws of the State from which such employee comes, is to that extent failing to be a good citizen and a good employee.

Of course, there are certain restrictions placed by law upon the activities of employees in the classified civil service. They are not permitted to be active in partisan politics, but this does not in any way circumscribe their right to vote. They should vote, but, of course, should vote as they please and should not be in any way influenced in the exercise of this right by political parties or supervisory officials.

With the exception of the people who have their legal residence in the District of Columbia, I feel that every employee of the Government in Washington should exercise the right of citizenship by qualifying and voting in our elections. Forty-one States now provide for absentee voting, and a majority of the States permit absentee registration.

The citizens of Georgia now residing in the District of Columbia can get assistance if they desire to qualify for voting by contacting the Georgia Democratic Club, whose offices are located at 1110 F Street NW., telephone National Georgia has no method by which a person may register as a voter by mail, but having once qualified for voting, it is possible for our citizens residing in the District to cast an absentee ballot by complying with the State laws on that subject.

In the hope that it may be of some benefit to my fellow Georgians now residing in Washington, I submit the following information in regard to absentee voting and qualifications, registration, and becoming a voter:

ABSENTEE VOTING

The act of 1924, section 34-3301, Code of Georgia of 1933, provides that any voter, when required by his regular business and habitual duties to be absent from his regular place of voting, and then only, may vote by absentee ballot. He must follow the following procedure:

First. Apply by letter sent by registered mail to the registrar of his county for a ballot. This letter must be registered and must be sent to the registrar not less than 30 days nor more than 60 days prior to the primary or general election, and the applicant must enclose with his application sufficient postage for the return of the blank ballot to him (sec. 34–3302).

Second. Upon receipt of the application, the registrar shall satisfy himself that the applicant is duly qualified to vote in the county, and shall enroll the name and address of the applicant, if found eligible, in a book to be provided for the purpose (sec. 34–3305).

Third. The registrar shall then forward to the applicant, if found eligible, (a) a certificate to the effect that the applicant is a qualified voter and that his application has been received and mailed to the indicated address. To this certificate other certificates are attached outlining the procedure to follow in opening and completing the ballot, also designating the necessary person to attest the ballot and certificates.

- (b) A properly addressed envelope for the return of said ballot.
- (c) A printed slip giving full instructions regarding the manner of marking the ballot in order that it may be counted, how prepared and how returned, which printed slip shall be provided by the ordinary or executive committee (sec. 34–3305).

Fourth. Upon receipt of these documents the applicant shall not open the sealed envelope marked "Ballot within", except in the presence of the postmaster at the address where he receives his mail, and he shall then mark and refold the ballot without assistance and without making known the manner of marking same, and then and there place the ballot in the envelope provided for that purpose in the presence of the postmaster (sec. 34–3303).

Fifth. The postmaster or his assistant or, in the case of their refusal to act, any person qualified by the laws of Georgia to take acknowledgement of deeds, shall fill out and sign the coupon attached to the certificate of registration and enclose the coupon with the ballot in the sealed envelope provided for that purpose (sec. 34–3303). In case the applicant is located in a foreign country, the procedure is taken before an American consul, and if the applicant is enlisted in the Army or Navy, before his commanding officer (sec. 34–3304).

Sixth. The applicant, after having the ballot marked and attested as stated, reseals the same in the special envelope provided for that purpose, which must be done in the presence of the postmaster or his assistant, and then place this envelope containing the ballot and the voucher in another envelope directed to the registrar, which is then mailed (sec. 34-3307).

Seventh. Upon receipt of the returned ballot, the registrar shall make an entry on the book referred to in the following language:

Deposited in sealed box by me on ---, 19---

The registrar shall then add his signature and shall deposit the envelope containing the ballot in a sealed box to be provided for that purpose where it shall remain until the day of the election. The coupon which is returned to the registrar along with the sealed envelope containing the ballot is filed with the original letter of application. The return sealed envelope must show the series number and letter of the ballot deposited therein (sec. 34–3311).

Eighth. On the day of the election the registrar shall deliver the box containing these ballots to the managers of to pay poll taxes when and as due.

the election, with a triplicate list thereof, all of which shall be in a sealed box. They shall also deliver to the managers the pad or pads with stubs showing the series number and letter of the ballots furnished, and no ballot shall be counted unless the series letter and number on the stub shall correspond with the series letter and number on the ballot contained in the envelope returned by the voter (sec. 34–3312).

Ninth. At the close of the election this box is opened by the managers and the ballots deposited in the regular ballot box. As each envelope is removed from the sealed box the name of the voter is called and checked, as if he were present, voting in person (sec. 34-3313).

Tenth. When all the ballots have been accounted for and either voted or rejected the empty envelopes are returned to the original box, which is again sealed, with the letters of applications and coupons of the rejected envelopes, if any, on which shall be written the cause of rejection, signed by a majority of the managers. The box shall then be resealed and not opened within 90 days except by order of the court (sec. 34–3314).

In all county elections the county executive committee or city executive committee, as the case may be, or other particular authority, shall provide to the registrars ballot forms for absentee voters, which shall be printed and prepared in pads with the series number different from that used for voters who vote in person, each ballot having a stub containing the series letter and number of the ballot. These ballot forms are to be furnished to the registrars as required.

The above is, in substance, the contents of the act of 1924, codified as chapter 34-33 of the Code of Georgia of 1933.

QUALIFICATION OF VOTERS FOR THE PRIMARIES AND GENERAL ELECTION OF 1936

First. Any citizen who will be 21 years of age on or before November 3, 1936, may register and vote in any primary or general election of 1936.

Second. To qualify to vote in any county or State primary held after May 3, 1936, to nominate candidates for the general election in 1936:

(a) Any person offering to vote must have been duly registered as provided by law, and his or her name must appear on the voters' list prepared by the board of registrars and filed in the office of the clerk of the superior court. A voter must be thus qualified to vote in the general election in which candidates are being nominated before he or she can vote in any primary to nominate candidates for the general election.

(b) All past due poll taxes, if any, including poll taxes for 1935, must have been paid on or before May 3, 1936.

Third. In any primary held before May 3, 1936, the board of registrars may at any time file supplemental voters' list in the office of the clerk of the superior court, giving the names of voters not on the regular voters' list that have qualified to vote, and when a copy of the same has been furnished to the election managers such persons may then vote.

Fourth. Poll taxes are levied as of January 1 of each year and become past due after December 20 of each year. The payment of poll taxes for 1936 is not a necessary qualification to entitle one to vote in the primaries and general elections of 1936, as poll taxes for 1936 will not be past due until after December 20, 1936.

Fifth. Male citizens are not liable for poll taxes for the year in which they become 21 years of age unless they become 21 on January 1. They are liable for poll taxes for each succeeding year until they become 60 years of age.

Sixth. Female citizens are not liable for poll taxes until they register and then are not liable for poll taxes for the year in which they register unless they register on January 1. They are liable for poll taxes for each succeeding year until they become 60 years of age.

Seventh. Female citizens, after having once registered, cannot now have their names stricken from the registration list as they could before 1928. Once registered, they remain registered and subject to the payment of poll taxes as provided by law and may become disqualified to vote for failure to pay poll taxes when and as due.

Eighth. May 3, 1936, is the last day for paying poll taxes, registering, and qualifying to vote in any primary held after May 3, 1936, and in the general election in 1936. No one can pay poll taxes, register, or otherwise qualify after May 3 1936

INIQUITIES OF THE PRICE-DISCRIMINATIONS BILL

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD, including therein an address I made over the radio on the subject of price dis-

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, under leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD I include my address delivered over the red network of the National Broadcasting Co. on Saturday, April 11, 1936, as follows:

As one of the ranking members of the Judiciary Committee of As one of the ranking members of the Judiciary Committee of the House of Representatives, I desire to voice emphatic protest against the enactment of the so-called price-discriminations bill, sometimes called the Robinson-Patman bill.

Why do I oppose? Because the consumer will be made the goat.

Why do I oppose? Because the consumer will be made the goat. It will be a raw deal for the housewife. There was ample testimony before our committee that the enactment of this bill would increase the cost of food alone to the consumer by approximately $750,000,000 annually. The increase in the cost of clothes and other essentials would be comparable. Prof. Harold G. Moulton, director of the Brookings Institution of Washington, a distinguished economist.

"This bill, insofar as it would strike at all those who have here-tofore been effective in reducing prices, to that extent will raise prices."

If I do nothing else in Congress, I will throw myself across the path of this monstrosity of a bill.

We have passed tariff bills to help the manufacturer. We passed the Guffey coal bill to help the coal miners. We passed a Soil Erosion Act to help the farmers; a Wagner bill for the employees. Have we ever passed a bill specifically to help the consumer? Emphatically, no—because they are not organized. Their voice is inarticulate. The least we can do is to prevent the passage of a bill that will hurt the consumer. You, Mr. Breadwinner, and you, Mrs. Housewife, if you at least want your wages to go as far as they have gone heretofore in purchasing power and do not want those wages to buy less, protest to your Congressmen and Senators and tell them you want their unconditional opposition to this bill. them you want their unconditional opposition to this bill.

WHAT, SPECIFICALLY, DOES THIS BILL DO?

WHAT, SPECIFICALLY, DOES THIS BILL DO?

It sets up, in disguise, some of the more vicious features of the N. R. A. It would prohibit price differentials based on definite quantities of goods sold unless justified by a difference in cost of manufacture, sale, or delivery. In other words, this bill would prevent generally effective quantity discounts on large purchases. It also establishes arbitrary classifications of buyers instead of classifications worked out by sound-business practice based upon years of experience. The bill is supposed to amend the Clayton Act, which makes quantity discounts unlawful only as they tend to create a monopoly or lessen competition. The Clayton Act requires free and open competition, whereas this bill stifles competition and compels price discriminations. This bill in addition sets up the Federal Trade Commission as a "satrap" with unlimited power to issue orders fixing and establishing quantity discount limits on all classes of commodities. The said Commission is given the unrestricted right to prohibit differentials based on differences in quantities greater than those it elects to fix and establish. Thus it can establish a ceiling—making it high or low as it sees fit—and discounts cannot be made effective beyond that ceiling unless expensive court procedure reverses the Commission in proceedings under which the Commission's findings as to facts are accepted as final. This is a very broad and a very unusual power to extend to an administrative body, responsible neither to the Congress nor to the President.

THE FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION WILL BE CONVERTED INTO A HUGE BUREAUCRACY

How many articles are there generally in commerce? This is difficult to answer. The average wholesale pharmaceutical concern, e. g., handles 70,000 separate items. A typical department store handles over 100,000 items. The average retail druggist alone handles 8,000 articles. The only method of visualizing a totality of the number of articles of commerce is to multiply these typical figures by the scores of lines of endeavor not mentioned. Assume, to be conservative, that this total is a quarter of a million. That would mean that the Federal Trade Commission would have to employ thousands of experts to pass upon the merits of the tens of thousands of controversies that would be thrown upon it. Such a job would baffle Athena herself. Everyone of the 2,000,000 and over businesses large enough to be listed in Dun & Bradstreet is a potential litigant before the Federal Trade Commission in connection with this bill—not on one item but on scores, and not once a year but dozens of times. Furthermore, there would be imminent danger of harassment to every business of all sorts. Informers would abound everywhere. Unfair competitors would be all too anxious and willing to file complaints. of the number of articles of commerce is to multiply these typical

THE BILL WOULD BE UNENFORCEABLE

There would be a recurrence of the "bootlegging" as under the N. I. R. A. You can pass all the laws you wish against spooning in the park, yet "necking" in the park will be as popular as ever. So here you pass a bill interfering with the natural laws of competition, with age-worn traditions of commerce, but those habits and customs will be just as potent as ever. As to the unbridled bureaucracy involved it is well to recall the recent S. E. C. case bureaucracy involved it is well to recall the recent S. E. C. case as evidence of the determination of the Supreme Court to scotch bureaucratic invasion of the citizen's rights. When you compare the prices that your grandfather paid for the essentials and conveniences of life with the prices that you pay today; when you compare the price, for example, that you paid for an automobile a decade ago with what you pay for one today, you can see vast reduction in prices. That has been due to mass production and mass distribution and elimination of numerous functions and services in the fabrication and transportation of the goods from the mass distribution and elimination of numerous functions and services in the fabrication and transportation of the goods from the manufacturer to the consumer, as well as to the immemorial right to reduce prices as the result of larger quantity of purchases. Large distributors buying larger quantities are able to pass these savings on to the consumer. The Supreme Court of the United States recognized this recently when it placed the imprimatur of its approval on quantity discounts. Chief Justice Hughes said "that encouragement of large sales through quantity discounts might reasonably be expected to build up total production, and thus effect economies."

Thus we have this anomalous situation. The proponents of this bill frown on "quantity discounts", which the Supreme Court approved.

THE SMALL MERCHANT WOULD NOT BE HELPED

This bill would also prohibit payment of brokerage fees to anyone directly or indirectly connected with the buyer. Would this benefit the representative independent merchant? Obviously not. On the contrary. The voluntary groups or associations of independent stores (there are over 100,000 members of voluntary chains in the grocery field alone) which gain a considerable prochains in the grocery field alone) which gain a considerable proportion of their competitive advantage through performing their own brokerage function, would be seriously hampered in buying deprived of such brokerage. They would be compelled to deal in all cases through an independent broker or middleman. This will add to their costs. This will increase their prices to consumer. This bill would prohibit the paying of any service compensation to merchants, such as allowances for advertising or sales promotion, unless such allowances were proportionately available to all customers alike. Would this help the small merchant? Emphatically no

Why? If I have a retail shop at Forty-second Street and Broadway, New York City, where a window display of an advertised product is invaluable, I could get no more for that display than a shopkeeper who has his place of business along the water than a shopkeeper who has his place of business along the water front or in the gas-house district, where the window advertising display isn't worth a tinker's damn. Any small merchant in a good location would be hurt by this prohibition.

Furthermore, the small recommendation of the small recommendation of the small recommendation.

good location would be hurt by this prohibition.

Furthermore, the small manufacturer must rely on selected point-of-sale advertising. He cannot possibly afford to buy this type of advertising from all of his customers (regardless of their ability and facilities to perform a service). By this prohibition he would be put to a great competitive disadvantage with the large manufacturer (with plenty of money for advertising). From the point of view of the independent retailer, reduced advertising of standard items would immediately result in reduced sales and hence with lower volume would result in a smaller profit margin. Thus one of the effects of this bill, which is designed to discourage monopoly, might well actually encourage monopoly, i. e., help make the large manufacturer much larger.

WOULD THIS BILL IMPROVE THE POSITION OF LABOR?

Again, no. It would increase the price of goods to the consumer. Therefore, the state of living of the laboring man would be reduced because his wages, which will not be increased, would buy less. This reduced demand for goods reduces manufacturing volume, which in turn increases against the cost of manufac-turing. This invariably results in the lowering of wages or the laying off of labor.

THE REQUIREMENT OF F. O. B. METHOD OF DELIVERY, I. E., OUTLAWING ALL BASING POINTS, WOULD SERIOUSLY DISLOCATE ALL INDUSTRY

Regardless of the merits or demerits of this system of pricing, it must be remembered that another committee in Congress has been wrestling with this problem for some time and is about to report out a bill specifically addressed to this problem and based on careful and thorough study of its many ramifications. To interject such far-reaching legislation into this bill, which has had the benefit of no hearings on the subject whatsoever, since this is an onticely new provision is most illegislated and depressing entirely new provision, is most ill-advised and dangerous.

The method of pricing would have most serious and deleterious effects upon industry. It will mean that prices to the vendee will vary in accordance with distance and cost of transportation from the seat of manufacture or extraction, as in the case of coal or other minerals. All quotations must be f. o. b. manufacturing plants or mines. This restriction will localize all industry and manufacturing.

The circle of customers, therefore, will be more and more definitely delimited. The result will be increases in manufacturing and distributing costs and cutting off from customers of the full benefits of mass production and distribution. The consumer again will "pay the piper."

IS THIS BILL LIMITED IN ITS EFFECT JUST TO CHAIN STORES?

No. The bill, although prepared and sponsored by a small wholesalers' group, is broad enough in its terms to affect practically every line of business.

I hold no brief for the chain stores. They doubtless have many besetting sins. Any efficient independent with up-to-date methods need never fear the chain. I repeat, chains are not guiltless. They deserve some restrictions, and any unfair or predatory practices like "loss leaders" should be outlawed, but certainly we should not give vent to our spleen against the chains, if thereby we bring ruin to other distributors and manufacturers and thus hurt and harm the consumer and the laborer.

WHAT EFFECT WILL THE BILL HAVE UPON FARMERS?

Very bad indeed. The city dwellers of modest means spend a very heavy percentage of their expenditures for products of the farm. Furthermore, the farmer spends an important percentage of his expenditures for fabricated articles. Therefore, this bill becomes a double-edged sword at the farmers' throats, for it would both raise the price of articles they buy and, by reducing the purchasing power of city dwellers, cut down the amount that could be spent for their products.

Numerous farm organizations, like the National Farm Bureau Federation and the National Cooperative Council, appeared in opposition to the bill.

THE BILL IS PALPABLY UNCONSTITUTIONAL

It seeks to ape the Agricultural Administration Act and the National Industrial Recovery Act in an endeavor to regiment industry and place business in a strait jacket by regulating prices, aside from the questions of monopoly and unfair competition. It will meet the same fate in the courts as did those measures. It involves an unrestrained delegation of legislative power to the Federal Trade Commission without sufficient standards or safeguards. In addition, it tries to interfere with purely intrastate commerce. Keeping in mind the Schechter decision, which declared the N. I. R. A. unconstitutional, I cannot waive aside the thought that any attempt to regulate the cost of a chicken in a slaughterhouse is no different than an attempt to regulate the price of a pill or a plaster in a drug store or the cost of a bunch of soup greens in a grocery shop. The independent druggist and grocer, who seems to want regimentation and regulation with a vengeance, is simply deluded in a sponsorship of this bill. when they come to their sober senses they will realize that the cure will be worse than the disease.

Remember, this bill seeks to do the impossible—make equals out of unequals.

SOME ASPECTS OF TAXATION

Mr. SHANLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. SHANLEY. Mr. Speaker, for a long-range policy no student of taxation can view with equanimity the present ratio of excise taxes to other constitutional impositions. The following table discloses the percentages of the six great tax brackets:

CustomsExcise (processing taxes excluded)	nt
Death duties Stamp taxes Noiscellaneous Noi	31 12 50 4 3
	00

It will be seen that excises, excluding the processing taxes, take 50 percent of the burden of the entire fiscal scheme of this country. Most economists and tax experts are convinced that this type of tax is inevitably passed on to the consumer irrespective of the source of the governmental payment. Who but the consumer pays our theater, our tobacco, and our other semiluxury taxes? If the consumer does not pay them, industry itself must foot the bill, and this in itself is a hard-ship, especially if it is a small industry that is affected.

Aside from this angle, is it not a dangerous policy to exhaust half of our taxing possibilities in one field alone? Is that a well-balanced long-range scheme? Are there not too many eggs in one basket?

If our internal revenue was built upon income taxation alone, it would be such a burdensome method of imposts that it would eventually wear itself out. Periods of depressions disclose that incomes are severely hit first of all. Too great reliance on this form of collection is dangerous. Reasonable percentages of all types of taxes are necessary for a well-balanced system. Let us look at the English system:

Perc	ent
Income and surtax Customs Excise (processing taxes excluded) Death duties	41 26 16 13
Stamp taxesMiscellaneous	3
Total	100

We derive three times as much revenue from our excises as do the British. With the great and startling disparity between the investing and consuming public in the early days of the depression it is quite obvious that this type of tax places a disproportionate burden on the consumer. There is in addition always a legislative tendency to use it as its effect is less direct and not felt by the receivers as quickly as the other increases would be. Here again the class that is imposed upon has less facility for quick observation and apprehensiveness of the legislative changes than others and are thus never in a realizing sense of the dangers of indirect collections.

In following the line of least resistance in this respect, the nations which have unconsciously made the excise tax the recipient of the heaviest assessments have gone to another extreme to make this classification bear an additional load. This is the practice of extending the lists of commodities. Obviously the barrier of nuisance difficulties has prevented some extensions beyond reason, but still there has always existed the temptation to overload this pack horse with further necessities, luxuries, and semiluxuries beyond the point of saturation and endurance.

It is submitted that rates on alcoholic beverages, tobacco compounds, and a well-chosen list of extensively used seminecessities which are just this side of absolute necessities may be used. With these provisions the additional aids of ready accessibility and easy supervision are necessary. Obviously also no tax is so adaptable for these tests as that of gasoline but that placement has been so overworked by all types of governmental subdivisions that further or even continued impositions are provocative of partial confiscation.

It is easy to see that the rule that consumption works inversely to taxation at certain points is all too true. When we realize the tremendous structures which depend upon the use of gasoline alone in the car manufacturers, and oil-refining industries, distributing stations, the tire industry, the insurance field, accessory fabrications, road patrols, and courts, it can easily be seen what instant repercussions are possible in the further incidence of taxes on this all-important commodity. It is the time-old procedure of working a good thing to death.

The excise field itself is bracketed within the tried taxes on all types of spirits in a domestic and foreign sense, on beers, mineral and table waters, wines, tobacco, sugar, matches, lighters, gasoline and oils, amusements, and the larger brewer collections, furs, jewelry, and kindred articles, all with past revenue histories.

In pointing out the terrific burden that is being borne by excises it is, of course, understood that mere changes here are not enough. One should obtain a picture of the entire tax structure of this country in the local and Federal phases and also contrast our system with the British where greater experience is evident. The picture must be painted in its entirety.

Here, for example, we insert the contrast in bulk payments of taxes between our Federal and State Governments. These figures are taken from the admirable report of the Magill-Parker-King committee, which has just published A Summary of the British Tax System. We quote:

In neither the United States nor Great Britain are the data covering local revenue or receipts entirely satisfactory or up-to-date. However, some close approximations of the total tax burden may be made. Tax customs and revenue re United Kingdom, year 1933-34 total.

2000 02 00000
TAX AND CUSTOMS REVENUE, UNITED KINGDOM, YI	EAR 1933-34
Total National Government receipts, taxes, and	00 417 005 000
customs	$3, 417, 395, 000
Total local government receipts from taxes	1, 142, 425, 000
Total	4, 559, 820, 000
Per-conite hurden	99.11

TAX AND CUSTOMS RECEIPTS, UNITED STATES, FISCAL YEAR 1934

Total National Government receipts, taxes, and customs $2,985,673,000

Total local government receipts from taxes 6,416,064,000

It can be seen from the above data that the per-capita tax burden in Great Britain is about 33 percent more than the per capita burden in the United States. The British National Government collects about three times the amount collected by the local subdivisions. In the United States the reverse is true, and the local subdivisions collect over twice the amount of tax collected by the National Government.

EXPENDITURES

It should be noted, however, in connection with the fact that the per-capita tax burden in the United States is considerably less than in the United Kingdom, that in respect to expenditures at this particular time a number of factors must be considered. Although between March 4, 1933, and June 30, 1934, the national debt had increased by about six billion, there are important offsets to this amount, including such items as an increase in cash balance, "profit" resulting from the change in the gold content of the dollar, securities consisting of notes and other obligations held by various agencies in which the Government has an interest, and projects financed in whole or in part from Federal funds. In making comparisons of the local and national tax burdens in the two countries, it is difficult to give effect to the weights of these various factors. Therefore, for present purposes they are eliminated, and the following comparisons are noted merely from the angle of actual expenditures:

TOTAL EXPENDITURES

United Kingdom, year 1933-34: Total National Government expenditures, including grants to local governments Total local government expenditures, exclud-	$3, 467, 095, 000
ing expenditures out of grants from National Government	1, 840, 000, 000
TotalPer-capita expenditure	5, 307, 095, 000 115
United States, fiscal year 1934: Total National Government expenditures Total local government expenditures	7, 105, 050, 000 9, 697, 000, 000
TotalPer-capita expenditure	16, 784, 050, 000 133

In respect to expenditures, therefore, it would appear that the per-capita expenditure in the United States during the past fiscal year was about 16 percent more than the percapita British expenditure.

The above comparisons do not take into account certain receipts from interest, lands, tools, and so forth, in the respective countries.

NATIONAL DEST

It is perhaps fitting to compare the national debt of the United Kingdom and the United States, since the payment of these debts is an important consideration in connection with revenue requirements.

United Kingdom, Mar. 31, 1934: Total internal debt Total external debt
Total gross debt Total net debt Per-capita debt	89, 726, 130, 000 89, 111, 650, 000 850
United States, June 30, 1934: Total public national debt Per-capita debt	27, 053, 141, 414 215

It further may be estimated from reliable sources that the debt of the local subdivisions in the United Kingdom amounts to about $6,505,000,000, and in the United States to about $19,600,000,000. Accepting these figures as approximately correct, we may state the grand total of all public debt per capita in the two countries as follows:

United Kingdom (national and local) $991 United States (national and local) 370 It is obvious, therefore, that as to the total per-capita debt the United States is in a much better position than Great Britain.

To sum up the comparative revenue and financial situation of the United States and the United Kingdom, the following points will be briefly stated:

First. The total tax burden per capita is about 33 percent more in Great Britain than in the United States.

Second. In respect to the relative productivity of the taxes imposed by the national governments, there is comparatively little difference in the two countries, except that the United Kingdom derives somewhat more from death duties and income taxes in proportion to the total collection and somewhat less from excises than is the case in the United States.

Third. The per-capita expenditure in the United States is about 16 percent greater than the per-capita expenditure in Great Britain.

Fourth. The per-capita public debt of the United Kingdom, including the debt of the local subdivisions, is approximately two and one-half times the per-capita public debt of the United States and the States, including their local subdivisions.

To carry our study a little further in suggestive bases it might be well to briefly outline the income-tax comparison of the two countries also. It may serve as a balancing effort to those who are too prone to accept the British system in toto without discerning only the features that are best suited to this Nation.

It is said on reliable authority that the British incometax returns have averaged 8 percent of the national income. On a comparative basis this schedule would give us over $4,000,000,000.

On all incomes in the brackets below $200,000 our rates are considerably lower than in England. To put a few concrete examples: There a man with an income of $1,500 pays $20, gives $68 for $2,000, and is taxed $158 for $2,500. When it is $3,000 a year here we pay but $22, while across the water the charge is $246, all considerably startling differences.

The area of exemptive wealth in our country includes a vast pool of people whose incomes range from zero to the last bracket of exemption. It is over 100,000,000, which means that the taxable classes above in the triangle of wealth are indeed small. England's nontaxable numbers are overwhelmingly larger than ours and in that way the British system draws into the treasury vast sums that are impossible in this country under the present system.

With this study in mind, it is well that we review the brilliant, soul-inspiring chapters in early colonial hist—y which forever stamp the problems of taxation with the very fundamentals of representative government.

The power of taxation in the hands of the representatives of the people is the proudest heritage in the history of the American Colonies and the United States of America. Lord Camden, the English Chancelor, said in the height of the struggle on taxation preceding the Revolution:

Taxation and representation are inseparately united. God hath joined them. No British Parliament can separate them.

Whether the British Parliament had a constitutional right to tax us as a vassal colony was a hair-line decision by the very letter of the existent law, and the overwhelming weight of opinion, backed by nonresistance and an almost abject obedience to constituted authority, seemed in the way of the American colonists.

Americans, fortunately, viewed it differently, and as one historian said:

Very few writers went so far as to say that lawful authority might be resisted in cases of extreme necessity. But the colonizers of America, who had gone forth not in search of gain but to escape from laws under which other Englishmen were content to live, were so sensitive to appearances that the blue laws of Connecticut forbade men to walk to church within 10 feet of their wives. And the proposed tax of only £12,000 might have been easily borne. But the reasons why Edward I and his council were not allowed to tax England were reasons why George III and his Parliament should not tax America. The dispute involved a principle, namely, the right of controlling government. Furthermore it involved the conclusion that the Parliament brought together by a derisive election had no just right over the unrepresented nation, and it called the people of England to take back its power. Our best statesmen saw that whatever might be the law the rights of the nation were at stake. Chatham in speeches better remembered than any that have been delivered in Parliament exhorted Americans to be firm.

In the Middle Ages we see that even in the very crudities of the taxing principle it was declared that no tax was lawful that was not granted by the class that paid it * * * recognition of the inseparability of the representation and taxation. Even Philip de Commines said that not a prince in the world can levy a penny without the consent of the people. That age knew the principle of the income tax; it knew also that right of revolt was recognized and even sanctified by religion.

The 3-pence tax broke up the British Empire. An adamant stand in England on taxation and an equally determined and obstinate resistance in America culminated after 12 years in the boarding of an English ship, the Dartmoor, in the Boston Harbor and the jettisoning of its cargo into the Atlantic, probably the mildest beginning of any revolution in all history.

The revolutionary spirit infused our fathers and they stood on the inexorable principle of the unity and soleness of taxation and representation. Seventeenth-century colonial charters nurtured that spirit. A Connecticut preacher in 1638 said, "The choice of public magistrates belongs unto the people by God's own allowance. They who have the power to appoint officers and magistrates it is their power also to set the bounds and limitations of the power and the place unto which they call them." As a matter of fact, Connecticut possessed so finished a system of self-government in the eyes of one British authority that "it served as a model for the Federal Constitution."

The right of taxation and its indissoluble bond with that of representation is thus enshrined in the historical background of American liberty. It is the birthright of our people yet its neglect has been one of the outstanding disgraces of our body politic. A Turgot in France and a Gladstone in England succeeded in interesting the electorate of their respective countries in immortal studies and speeches. They vivified the drab subject in a way that made its intricacies common knowledge. It is to be hoped that there will emerge from the present session and its doings a realization by the American people of this proud privilege and responsibility.

Briefly this unfolds the simple story of taxation with its break-down into various types of schedules, the relative popular plans in England and our own country and the inapplicability of some of the criticism that is heaped upon our Americans who do not know the philosophy of the British balanced budget. The priceless heritage of American colonial history and the interwoven nature of taxation and representation in our conflict with the mother country all gives us the basis for asserting and hoping that this priceless heritage will become the subject of study by every American.

Is it too much to hope that the usually dry subject of taxation may prove to be the accepted understood hope of American long-range visions. It is notorious that the spenders are better organized than the savers. That is why it is easy to obtain appropriations but almost impossible to get men to agree upon or to accept a taxing schedule. Intimate knowledge of this vast subject underlying the very substructure of government must be in every man's knowledge if we are to advance.

England has mastered this intricate problem so that Englishmen everywhere accept the onerous tax burden, because it is for England, and English Government connotes a readiness to treat each problem with promptness and allpervading watchfulness. This accounts for the advance of the British Isle in social legislation and for the ready cheerfulness with which each Briton accepts these heavy income charges.

We have traced the merits of our problem of taxation. Let us therefore look at the constitutional sides of our problems.

It must be remembered that until the Federal Income Tax Act of 1894 was declared unconstitutional an income tax was assumed to be legal and was actually levied and collected during the Civil War. In the memorable 5-to-4 decision, however, the Supreme Court declared that act void.

The decision was extremely unpopular, and an amendment to the Constitution was added after adoption in 1913. This corrects the defect of the 1894 act by permitting the levying of a Federal income tax without its being apportioned among the States.

What is our constitutional side of taxation?

Two clauses of section 8, article I, become most important, and we have appended them here for study and reference:

1. The Congress shall have power to lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts, and excises to pay the debts and provide for the common defense and general welfare of the United States; but all duties, imposts, and excises shall be uniform throughout the United States.

18. To make all laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into execution the foregoing powers, and all other powers vested by this Constitution in the Government of the United States or in any department or officer thereof.

It is to be noted that Congress has the power to levy all types of taxes. The word "taxes", however, seems to refer to direct impositions, such as property, capitation, and income taxes, while the words "duties", "imposts", and "excises" blanket all indirect levies, such as excise, duties upon manufacturers, sales, business transactions, consumption, occupation, and privileges, as well as customs duties on exports. Though there is a direct injunction against export taxes by the Federal Government under section 9, it is significant that indirect taxes must be uniform throughout the United States. which means that the subject indirect taxes must be levied under the same classification and at the same rates of assessment throughout the country.

It is to be noted that in the restrictive clause, beginning "duties, imposts, and excises shall be uniform throughout the United States", that the word "taxes" is left out.

The Supreme Court has said that uniformity is used in a geographical and not in a sense of equality (Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 41). Congress may tax one class of property and not another. It may distinguish between tickets to the theater and tickets to baseball games. Tickets for a certain amount may be included and exemptions for tickets for other amounts authorized.

The mandate that "direct taxes must be imposed against the States on the basis of population" obviously prevented Federal property taxes and capitation taxes, but since the sixteenth amendment income taxes have been levied without apportionment against the States.

The clause "to lay taxes for general welfare" is to be construed to restrict the expenditure of money raised by taxes for purposes that will promote general welfare.

It is significant that President Andrew Jackson vetoed a bill appropriating money for the national highway because it would not serve all States of the country and therefore would not be for the general welfare.

After the famous McCullough v. Maryland decision (4 Wheat. 316) the principle that the Federal Government can tax States, their instrumentalities, governmental subdivisions of States or their instrumentalities excepting for nongovernmental functions was enunciated by Chief Justice Marshall

The Federal Government cannot tax State real property or State bonds or income, nor can it tax State employees engaged in governmental functions or the income of Federal

The history of taxation in the matter of using its funds for the purpose of regulation has been most instructive. From the decisions Congress has gone far beyond the purpose of raising revenue, and we have such examples as the tariff for protection; the prohibitive 10-percent tax on State bank notes in 1866; the 10 cents a pound on oleomargarine in 1902; the famous tax on matches in 1912. On the other hand, at a latter date, the equally famous 10-percent tax on child labor has been held unconstitutional as the intent and motive of the act was so obvious that it could not be construed as anything but a regulatory measure.

The study of this phase of constitutional law can only show that the Supreme Court has changed its idea from the original decisions. Here the fear of encroaching on State rights has deterred Congress laterally in giving its approval to this type of legislation. Obviously there is a marked line between taxation for revenue only and taxation for regulatory purposes.

The sixteenth amendment—"the Congress shall have power to lay and collect taxes on income from whatever source derived, without regard to any census or enumeration"-has as its intent the relief of all income taxes from apportionment against the States and from a consideration of the source from which the income is derived. It is not an extension of the power to tax but the removal of a restriction.

Obviously the word "income" is a key word, and the definition of the Supreme Court in Taft v. Bower (271 U.S. 470) is helpful as a concrete example. If John Doe owns a house which was valued in 1932 at $50,000, and the house is now worth $80,000, the difference between these is not income so long as the house is not sold. Should John Doe receive a rental from the property, that is income within the meaning of the term and the definition of the Supreme Court.

On the other hand, the English law is different. If John Doe was a recipient of dividends from a corporation, that is income and taxable: but if the corporation issues "a stock dividend", this is not income but capital, unless it is sold.

The tax applies also to ordinary net earned and earned income, and on this subject there is a base field of litigation too intricate for explanation here.

Aliens in this country are forced to pay income taxes as well as nonresidents conducting business in the United States, and our citizens abroad are taxed, as well as National and State banks. In the case of the latter a bank incorporated by the State is not a State instrumentality.

We have already seen that under the Marshall decision in Marberry against Madison, employees in the State and its subdivisions are exempt, including State, county, and city employees, school teachers, and even employees of municipally owned public utilities. Congress has, however, made additional exemptions in cases of certain institutions, like churches, Red Crosses, schools, and scientific organizations.

CONCLUSION

Churchill once said:

No statesman e'er will find it worth his pains To tax our labors and excise our brains

Now Britain always balances her budget, but it is done only by the heaviest of taxation schedules, as we have said. It hits vast numbers untouched by our American plan, and the English people affected are those who have not one-half our comforts or conveniences. Wide differences in habits, customs, and outlook make one possible where another would result in chaos. The average Englishman is content with a condition of life that would be intolerable to most Americans. There are no extremities there, so that often the most threatening of labor or economic troubles fade into solution without conflict. Englishmen preferred to be taxed most heavily in this generation for the expenditures that were a result of this generation's set-backs.

Right here it must be admitted that the British had 30 years of social security before we even touched it, and this country only embarked upon the program as a result of the most threatening civil cataclysm in all history. England had her slum clearance, her coal reorganization, and her control schemes in industry and other features that approximate our New Deal legislation long before we did.

In the Midland Bank Review, that every Congressman receives, we find a very pertinent statement: "The Government has accepted a large measure of direct responsibility for the trend of business", a pronouncement that must make us wonder here. Its * * of the British method of advancing along fronts where we would expect stagnant stand-pattism.

It can be seen from our study of English taxation that the English people understand their taxing problems. This, too, is all the more certain because their system is a decentralized | one with some 753 districts throughout the country. We will not extend this to show how closely personal and cooperative the entire British scheme finds their method of procedure and how warmly understood this system of personal help and understanding finds a responsive echo in the individual citizen of the British lion. Briefly their plan is so fundamentally aimed to assist the citizen in making out and taking advantage of every possible item of exemption that it works with greased and loyal wheels.

Our tax economists are highly in favor of many of the features of this admirable British plan, because it tends to make each English citizen feel that he is getting a sympathetic hearing all along the line. He feels that he is part of the system itself and finds a pride in entering into the spirit of teamwork. Now, they have not reached the millennium where every man inwardly exults because he pays taxes and because he secretly feels that other citizens less fortunate point him out as a man whose industry and thrift is such that he can pay a high income tax to his government. We may hide a smile at such a tax utopia, but such a future, wherein men are esteemed because of their tax payments, much as we in America respect those who turn their philanthropy into buildings, endowments, and so forth, but that time would be near if we had a realizing sense of the importance of expenditures in this country and strong emphatic interest localized in spending programs. Both would work to the advantage of all and would serve as a counteractive to both injudicious spending and equally vicious taxation.

NEGLECTED SPRINGFIELD

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by including therein a radio address made by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GRANFIELD].

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a speech delivered by my colleague Hon. WILLIAM J. GRANFIELD, of Massachusetts, over WMAS broadcasting station in Springfield, Mass., on April 11, 1936, on Neglected Springfield, as follows:

Much has been said recently of a controversial character. through the newspapers and other agencies, with reference to the activities of the W. P. A. in this district. Realizing that most of the information given through these agencies has been incorrect and unreliable, I recognized the absolute need on my part, as your Member of the Congress, to present the National Government's version of this issue. I am not here to defend the national administration or its agent, the local W. P. A.; neither needs any defense by me.

Before going into my subject, permit me to say that the W.P.A. was created by the Federal Government for the purpose of relieving distress and unemployment in our communities, and, incidentally, it must follow that the welfare costs of the cities and towns, and the tax burdens resulting from heavy welfare costs, are also reduced. You can well understand that when the welfare costs in our cities and towns are reduced there is a consequential costs in our cities and towns are reduced there is a consequential reduction in taxes.

The accomplishments of the Federal relief program in this district, by contrast, can be best described by taking the city of Springfield as an example. In the last 2½ years the national administration has poured into this city, under the C. W. A., the E. R. A., and the W. P. A., funds in excess of $4,000,000. These funds were made up as follows: For the operation of the C. W. A. and the E. R. A. a sum of $3,050,901.84; the W. P. A., which began on November 15, 1935, the sum of $426,702. This, my friends, does not include the tremendous sum of money spent by the P. W. A. While these funds poured into the city of Springfield by the Federal Government may loom large, they are only a portion of what the city of Springfield and its unemployed could have received had its city government exercised that authority which was conferred upon it and which was its responsibility. At least another million dollars of Federal funds would have found their way into million dollars of Federal funds would have found their way into the hands of our citizens and the unemployed.

the hands of our citizens and the unemployed.

How are these funds allotted by the Federal Government? They are allotted proportionately, with the cities bearing the smaller proportion, to pay for projects which must be initiated by the city government. If the city government fails in its responsibility to its citizens in the initiation of sufficient projects to take up the slack in its unemployed, who would ordinarily be paid by these Federal funds, the result is that the city and its unemployed do not receive these Federal funds and the city remains under its allotted quota. District no. 6, of which Springfield is a part, has a quota of 15,000. This quota was broken down for the cities and towns so that Springfield's quota was 4,760. There have been certified for W. P. A. employment 8,360, but the quota allotted to Springfield is 4,760. Bear in mind, however, that during the flood emergency this quota limitation had been removed, so that a greater number of 4,760. Bear in mind, however, that during the flood emergency this quota limitation had been removed, so that a greater number of the 8,360 could have been employed.

During the operation of the W. P. A. the city of Springfield has failed woefully in meeting its obligation to its unemployed. At no time was it able to meet its full quota of 4,760; in fact, the city of Springfield has averaged approximately 2,000 under its quota throughout the operation of the W. P. A. Just think of that, ladies and gentlemen—2,000 of our citizens were, and are, without employment by reason of the failure of the city government to set into motion municipal W. P. A. activities to put them to work. Translated into a money loss to the city of Springfield, since November 15, 1935, to March 15, 1936, a period of 4 months, it is the staggering sum of $446,000 and the loss of employment to approximately 2,000 families (for under the W. P. A. regulations only one in each family may be employed). The loss of these jobs by our citizens, many of whom are provided for by the welfare department of the city of Springfield, has a decided effect upon your tax rate, and had they been employed, the welfare cost to our city would have been materially reduced. The employment of these 2,000 persons would have meant much to our merchants; their employment would have created a purchasing power of hundreds of thousands of dollars.

This is no idle charge. Let me make a comparison with the other cities and towns in this district. As an example, let us select Holyoke, or Northampton, or West Springfield, or Chicopee. For the moment let us take our neighbor—Holyoke, Holyoke's quota is 1,800. It has maintained its quota throughout the existence of the W. P. A. and recently, in consequence of the flood, it has gone far beyond its quota.

The town of West Springfield has a quota of 407. It has maintained its quota throughout the operation of the W. P. A., and for flood, it has gone far beyond its quota.

The town of West Springfield has a quota of 407. It has maintained its quota throughout the operation of the W. P. A., and for the past several weeks it has been from 150 to 250 in excess of its quota. Only the other day citizens of the city of Springfield, in order to carry out the projects that had been approved by the Federal Government for the town of West Springfield, were sent over there to do work in that town when they should have been employed on projects right here in Springfield, if the city government had done its duty to the citizens of this city. Springfield is the only community in our immediate vicinity that has not exceeded its quota. Agawam is 62 over its quota; East Longmeadow, 32; Longmeadow, 17; Ludiow, 35; Amherst, 24; Easthampton, 109; Hadley, 23; Northampton, 54; South Hadley, 42; Chicopee, 250. Is it not singular that Springfield is not included in this list?

It is of interest for you to know that when the city of Spring-

It is of interest for you to know that when the city of Springfield falls to use the allotment of Federal funds allocated to it, these funds are distributed among the other cities and towns in the district, and the taxpayers of the city of Springfield are forced to pay taxes to the Federal Government for the funds that have been assigned to the city of Springfield, and distributed elsewhere. Why have the officials of the city of Springfield failed in their obligation to our citizens? What excuse do they offer for their failure to provide employment for our people? Last night, over this station, one of the members of the city council stated: "We can no longer wait for the red tape of Federal projects to be unsnarled, while our needy citizens walk the streets seeking employment. We can no longer sit idly by and hope for the necessary changes in the Federal set-ups so that work can be more easily provided." I must repeat the last sentence of his quotation—"We can no longer sit idly by and hope for the necessary changes in provided." I must repeat the last sentence of his quotation—"We can no longer sit idly by and hope for the necessary changes in the Federal set-ups so that work can be more easily provided." Yes; that is a very frank confession. The members of the city government have been sitting idly by and waiting, and in consequence of their inaction our needy citizens have been walking the streets seeking employment. Ladies and gentlemen, does not that member of the city council know that at the present moment there are pending 20 unfinished W. P. A. projects and 23 approved W. P. A. projects, making a total of 43 W. P. A. projects, none of which have been set into motion by the city of Springfield? He speaks of red tape. These 43 projects are ready for action and they would give employment to approximately 1,700 unemployed citizens. Nothing needs to be done so far as the Federal Government is concerned and all that the city government needs to do is to put them into motion. The excuse is offered that the unfinished projects have been delayed because the weather is receral Government is concerned and all that the city government needs to do is to put them into motion. The excuse is offered that the unfinished projects have been delayed because the weather is unseasonable. Yet, in the face of all this, a great many projects similar in character in other cities and towns in this district have been under way for weeks.

Criticisms of this character made by certain officials and a certain morning newspaper published in Springfield are unjust and unfair. I wish to repeat again, the Federal Government and its authorized representatives allocated to the city of Springfield the sum of $625,000 for flood relief and reconstruction. This was not the limit to which the Federal Government was willing to go in this emergency. Some persons feel that the $625,000 should have been presented to them to use as they saw fit, to carry out their pet projects and their petty ideas. Any child knows when a request is made, even for a small sum, from its parents the first question asked by the parent is, "What are you going to use the money for?" The Federal Government is no different. It is acting today as a parent to this community, and all other communities that are in distress. The $625,000 is available just as soon as the city of Springfield presents its projects for approval, and I must say in this respect that had the city of Springfield followed the example of the city of Hartford, flood rehabilitation and reconstruction would be well under way at the present time. I talked with his honor the mayor of Hartford, Thomas Spellacy, today.

Contrary to local newspaper reports, he informed me that he received no direct grant and no blank check from the Federal Government. He did, however, with the assistance of his city government, when the flood was at its height, anticipate projects which were essential and necessary. These projects have been approved and the money is being used by the officials in Hartford and flood rehabilitation in that city is well under way to the satisfaction of its citizens. There was no red tape in Hartford; there was no red tape in West Springfield, or Chicopee, or Northampton, or Holyoke, or any of the other communities in this district, but Springfield's failure is alleged to be due to red tape. Had the city of Springfield and those in charge of our affairs followed a course similar to the one followed in Hartford, there would be very little reason for complaint or criticism on the part of anyone. Our city government failed absolutely to anticipate the flood emergency, and 7 days ago filed projects in form acceptable to the W. P. A. Administrator. These projects were approved yesterday and amounted to $126,000.

During the flood emergency, and while the waters were receding, $15,000 was immediately available for truck hire in the city of Springfield.

There was no red tape attached to this fund. It was here in the city of Springfield.

There was no red tape attached to this fund. There was no red tape attached to this fund. It was here in the city and for the use of the city, and is now being expended by the local director, without the approval of anyone. In addition to this provision, which was made for truck hire, 600 men were put to work immediately and the expense was borne in its entirety by the Federal Government. Yet considering all of this, a morning newspaper in the city of Springfield during the past few days made every effort possible to misinform our people. Under date of Wednesday, April 8, a picture of an excavation on Rowland Avenue was carried on its second page captioned "W. P. A. money awaited to repair damage." Underneath the picture it read, "Rowland Avenue can be filled and the street restored to safety for motorists when It was here in the carried on its second page captioned "W. P. A. money awaited to repair damage." Underneath the picture it read, "Rowland Avenue can be filled and the street restored to safety for motorists when and if W. P. A. flood reconstruction funds are released for use in Springfield." Why, ladies and gentlemen, at that moment there were 1,000 W. P. A. workers assigned for this type of work, and 43 trucks were provided by the local district director, Harry M. Ehrlich. Apparently there was not sufficient ingenuity in the entire city government, nor the newspaper, to suggest to those in authority that someone take one of the available trucks and go to a gravel pit and make that excavation safe for motorists, every cent of which would have been paid by the W. P. A. from a fund already in the possession of the district director.

Another example of the character of leadership that the citizens of Springfield are subjected to at the hands of its city government was clearly demonstrated on Monday night at the meeting of the city council, when the council refused to approve an order for $300 for the rental of a suitable place to store 47 carloads of food consigned to this district, without cost to our taxpayers, by the Federal Government. This food was valued in excess of several thousand dollars. To the credit of his honor the mayor, the necessary rental space was obtained the following day, and this enormous amount of food saved to the needy of our city.

Ladies and gentlemen, may I direct your attention to a very important matter. From the inception of the Federal relief program the city of Springfield has submitted 171 projects for approval to the national administration. Of this number, 160 projects have been approved, and 43 are pending at the present moment without action, while 2,000 of our citizens walk the streets unemployed. The 11 projects that were disallowed by the Federal Government involved the employment of only 261 persons and were disapproved with justification.

Officials of the city government should stop pe were disapproved with justification.

Officials of the city government should stop penalizing the unemployed of our city. They have been long suffering. Stop penalizing the city and Federal taxpayers. They have been heavily burdened. Accept your responsibility and bestir yourselves into action so that your city and my city may receive those benefits to which it is entitled.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that my colleague the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Gifford] may address the House tomorrow for 20 minutes after the reading of the Journal, the disposition of business on the Speaker's table, and the special order heretofore entered for the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. Massingale].

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

Mr. GREEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on tomorrow, after the reading of the Journal, the disposition of business on the Speaker's table, and the special orders heretofore entered, I may be permitted to address the House for 15 minutes.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I think we have heard enough about the Florida canal; and if this is only for home consumption, why cannot the gentleman take 5 minutes and extend his remarks in the Record?

Mr. GREEN. It is not only for home consumption.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. It is going to be something about the Mediterranean fruit fly, then.

Mr. GREEN. Mr. Speaker, I modify my request and ask to be permitted to address the House for 10 minutes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Florida [Mr. Green] asks unanimous consent that on tomorrow after the reading of the Journal, the disposition of business on the Speaker's table, and the special orders heretofore entered he may address the House for 10 minutes.

Is there objection?

There was no objection.

AMENDMENT OF WAR MINERALS RELIEF STATUTES

Mr. COX, from the Committee on Rules, reported the following resolution (Rept. No. 2406), which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed:

House Resolution 487

Resolved, That upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of S. 1432, an act "To amend section 5 of the act of March 2, 1919, generally known as the War Minerals Relief Statutes." That after general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and continue not to exceed 2 hours, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Mines and Mining, the bill shall be read for amendment under the 5-minute rule. At the conclusion of the reading of the bill for amendment the Committee shall rise and report the same to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted, and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion, except one motion to recommit, with or without instructions.

The SPEAKER. Under the special order, the Chair recognizes the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Maverick] for 20 minutes.

AMERICAN PEOPLE MUST HAVE WORK; KNOWLEDGE AND ART ARE NOT SINS

ICKES AND HOPKINS, P. W. A. AND W. P. A., ARE ALL RIGHT

Mr. MAVERICK. Mr. Speaker, since I have come to Congress I have heard a great deal of loose talk about the outstanding problem of today—unemployment. I have heard bitter and unthinking cricitism of the administration's effort to give useful work to those who, through no fault of their own, can find none and need it. I have heard Harry Hopkins and Harold Ickes beaten over the head until they must be bloody with the hard knocks of their noisy critics. So today I am going to talk about Harry Hopkins and Harold Ickes, the W. P. A. and P. W. A., and the Department of the Interior.

Mr. Speaker, we can pick up the newspapers at any time of the day or any day in the year and read criticisms of what the administration is doing, but we can never read any constructive criticism by the critics. I said we can take any day. Let us take the Washington Post of today's date. We see these headlines:

New Deal enemies denounce Roosevelt proposals for idle.

Then the subhead reads:

Hoover offers program to put capital to work as alternate.

In other words, it is the same old idea, and it is a conflict of economic theories which we must face. Mr. Hoover and the Republican Party believe we should take the money of the Government and subsidize capital only; they believe that the Government should give the money to big business instead of to the working people. This is what the newspaper states. Then it proceeds to show that the only idea is to give it to big business.

In another article in the same paper they showed it was unconstitutional to do anything for the working people of the United States, saying, in effect, that what Mr. Roosevelt sought to do for the people was "unconstitutional." In other words, the attitude of the enemies of the administration is that what we are trying to do is unconstitutional; therefore, do not do anything for the people of the United States.

MR. FLETCHER BUNGLES AGAIN

Again, in the same paper appears the statement:

Mr. Fletcher agreed that everyone would like to see shorter hours and higher wages, but pointed out that the President did not explain how they could be brought about "unless through an autocratic government to be installed if he should be reelected."

The attitude is that if we do anything for the welfare of the American people it is autocratic and, therefore, it should not be done.

Using the word "autocratic" does not fill any stomachs nor put any people to work. Personally, I believe that government is supposed to be for the people, and where the autocracy comes in I cannot understand. We can be sure, however, that Mr. Fletcher has correctly stated the Republican case—criticize and do nothing.

Mr. Speaker, I am not confining my remarks to Republicans; many Democrats have the same attitude. Ex-Senator Reed, of Missouri, said that the Democratic administration was a Fascist administration and a communistic administration. Now, one cannot be a Fascist and a Communist at the same time, but he accuses the Democratic administration of being both; and he ends by saying in reference to certain work being done by the Democratic administration that nothing done by Stalin, by Mussolini, by Hitler—thus mixing them all up—was more drastic, more brutal, and more destructive of liberty than what is being done by the Democrats.

He takes the attitude that what we have done in providing for the American people is destructive of liberty. Then we go to the headlines and we see something stated about the opposition to the Government today. It is stated:

Anti-New Dealers Backed Farm Group. The Industrialists of Liberty League Helped Finance Independent Council.

What is this racket? The Liberty League goes out and gets a large amount of money together, mostly donated by the Du Ponts, and then they have a group which call themselves the "Farmers' Independence Council." Then this "farm organization" gives out propaganda to the American people.

There are many others. Take, for instance, the Southern Committee to Uphold the Constitution created down in Texas by "leading" Democrats. It is just another false-front organization financed by Liberty Leaguers and the munitions interests, Raskob, and that crowd. The Southern Committee to Uphold the Constitution was created altogether by old John Henry Kirby, who has no influence whatever in the South, and one or two minor racketeers in that part of the country. There are numerous of these false-front organizations. The idea is that some organizer who has been faking the American people for years adopts some sort of name indicative of virtue, patriotism, or friendship to the worker, the farmer, or the veteran; then he goes up and secretly gets money from the Du Ponts and munitions interests and others; then he operates as though his organization were bona fide. I have looked through dozens of organizations operating in Washington who claim thousands and even millions in membership, and many of them have absolutely no membership at all—their only membership is some cheap, vulgar fellow who gets good pay for misleading the people through money that he gets through either the Liberty League or a selfish interest similar to that. (See V, False-front and racket organiza-

And all this racketeering information goes out to the American people through the press. The American people can see through this thing, I am certain.

Mr. Speaker, we have heard a lot of aimless talk about boondoggling, about communism, about "brain trusts", and all of that; but I notice that the Republicans, after criticizing our "brain trust" for all this time, have gone out and hired a "brain trust" of their own.

REPUBLICANS GET A "BRAIN TRUST"-SECOND RATE

They hired a lot of college professors; and, although I do not want to slander them just because they are a part of the Republican "brain trust", I think they are a second-rate "brain trust." Now, this second-hand "brain trust" is going to get together and get its research in shape in order to plead | the erroneous ideas of our friends over on the right. [Mr. MAYERICK indicated the Republican side.] I understand that three of these Republican "brain trusters" tried to get jobs with the administration, but that on account of their deficiencies none got jobs. So Mr. Fletcher hired them.

There has been a great deal of criticism of knowledge. It seems to be a sin to have knowledge, to know something, to have brains, to have been to college, or to have been a professor at one time: so the form of criticism which it takes is to make the same sort of banal, silly, and idiotic statements which we have heard. If you get three alphabetical letters together, it seems to be some sort of a sin or some sort of a reprehensible act. It is no more sinful for an agency of the Government to be designated by letters of the alphabet than it is to say "R. R." when you talk about a railroad. Now, Mr. Speaker, I am going to say a few words about Mr. Hopkins and Mr. Ickes.

BOTH W. P. A. AND P. W. A. SHOULD BE CONTINUED

My idea is that the work of Harry Hopkins must be continued and the work of Mr. Ickes ought to be continued, and irrespective of personalities, whether we like them or not and whether the Republicans have control of the Government or not, this work has to go on. It does not make any difference whether we like these men or not. I happen to like them. I think they are good men. But it does not make any difference about personalities. Relief in this country has probably been more inadequate than it has been adequate, and there probably has not been enough in the way of public works.

HOPKINS HAS DONE GOOD JOB

Mr. Hopkins has been spoken of as an overbearing, arrogant sort of fellow, but I want to say that the character of work he has had to do has required more or less strength of character in his actions. Personally, I think he has done as good a job as could have been done under the circumstances. No other man in the United States, in my opinion, could have done it as well as Harry Hopkins. I think he is a very able man and he has done an exceptionally good job.

ICKES BELIEVES GOVERNMENT SHOULD USE BRAINS

Mr. Ickes is Secretary of the Interior and has a vast job to perform. They say that he has a forthright manner, and I think he has. He has been accused of being a reformer, and I think that he admits it. Mr. Ickes believes there should be brains in the Government of the United States and so do I. I think this continuous criticism of men in Government because they have brains is probably because the opposition does not want men with brains in the Government service. They want all the men with brains in big business and all the brainless, spineless people in the United States Government, so that big business may run the Government as it did up until March 1933 except for a few brief intervals.

As for Mr. Ickes, I know of no Cabinet officer in recent times who has performed his public duties with more ability, forthright honesty, and distinction. When his work as organizer and public official is known to the country he will take a place with the big men in the history of the United States.

THE RECORD OF W. P. A.

Let us review some of the things concerning Harry Hopkins and some of the things concerning relief. In 1932 there were millions of destitute, suffering people in the United States of America. What was the policy at that time? The policy was to lend $90,000,000 to Mr. Dawes or $10,000,000 to a big bank. When the Democratic Party came into power that policy was changed. We continued to lend to these large financial groups, but at the same time we gave consideration to the people of the United States.

Today there are something like 70,000 projects going on under the Works Progress Administration.

There are something like 3,500,000 people doing useful, self-respecting work. We have found it is necessary to fit the work to the things which distressed people in each community can do in order to get them off relief. One combut if it happened to have few skilled workers and many unskilled workers on relief, it might, in the case of W. P. A., get the park. For the people must come first with W. P. A., and the projects must fit what those particular distressed people can do.

One of the greatest dangers in America today is due to the threatened loss of human skill. I know myself of hundreds of skilled workingmen who have been forced into idleness and the result is that they are losing their skill. Moreover, young men of America who are coming along are not getting a chance to acquire skill. Therefore we are getting to a situation where we have less skill in this country as time goes on. W. P. A. is saving the skill of literally millions of our people, and I say that is of tremendous value to this country.

Occasionally we have a few good words said about us, and I want to read what the Magazine of Wall Street said about this proposition, because even a magazine of Wall Street occasionally is forced to say something friendly and truthful about the Government, and here is what they say:

Perhaps the most inspiring achievement of the Roosevelt administration is its widespread reconstruction of the physical surface of America.

There has been nothing like this present wholesale improvement and subjection of nature within a brief time since the world began.

This refers to the work of the Department of the Interior, the W. P. A., and the P. W. A. (See IV. Department of the Interior, for further facts on operations of Interior Department.)

DITCH DIGGING IS O. K., BUT WHY SHOULD EVERYBODY DO IT?

Now, I am going to refer somewhat to the matter of manual labor. I do not think that manual labor is a bad thing. I believe that men should work with their hands, but there seems to be the impression in the country today that if a man loses his job he ought to go out and dig a ditch. I think that most of these people are willing to work, and most of these people are willing to dig ditches if they can, but some of them cannot do it.

There are millions of people in this country who were bond salesmen, who were selling these worthless bonds of their various organizations, and these men were capable men, but lost their jobs not on their own account.

There are professional men, some doctors, and some of them lawyers, and now all of these people are slurringly referred to as "white collar" workers. It seems to be wrong to have a white collar. If you lose your job you are supposed to lose your self-respect and get yourself a dirty collar and go out and work in a sewer. This seems to be the attitude of the enemies of relief toward the unemployed. (See II, More about white-collar workers.)

Many fine people are engaged in this W. P. A. work. We have women who, in better times, nursed our children and nursed us when we were sick. We have actors, and we have comedians, and we have newspapermen. We have in the W. P. A. white-collar group alone over a quarter of a million men and women who are doing self-respecting, intelligent work. We have teachers who are doing this kind of work. Should these people be allowed to starve or should they be made to dig ditches because of political venom? We have, for instance, 50,000 school teachers, men and women, teaching both children and adults in this country. They have taught half a million adults to read and write, for one thing. They are bringing about a great revival of interest in education.

We also have, for instance, musicians. We have men who never did anything but work as musicians, and they are playing music on W. P. A. music projects, for the pleasure and instruction of the public. I say that is right. (See III, More about music.)

MELLON AND "FOREIGN MASTERS"; W. P. A. AND AMERICAN ARTISTS

Then, for example, we may take art. Art is looked down upon by some American people, and therefore I want to say something about art. I have just got a few pictures of the W. P. A. and put them out here in the lobby.

At one time this country spent $100,000,000 in buying so-called foreign masterpieces. Mr. Mellon goes over to munity might want to build a high school more than a park, Europe and spends $1,000,000 on one picture. He goes over there and buys a picture painted 400 years ago, and he brings that back to this country and shows this $1,000,000 picture for the edification of the people of the United States. My only comment on that is that I have no objection to foreign masters; they are all right. But, on the other hand, W. P. A. spends something like $1,500,000 to $2,000,000 to put several thousand living native artists to work and save them from starvation. It puts their product in the high schools and colleges and various places all over the country for the edification of the American people, and a great howl goes up.

Mr. Mellon spends $1,000,000 for one picture 400 years old by a man who is dead and does not get any benefit from it. The Government spends $2,000,000, and we are told that we are a bunch of boondogglers. Well, I am for boondoggling, and I hope they will do the same thing again, and I want you to walk out here in the lobby and see some of the boondoggling pictures which I have had hung there. (See I, More about boondoggling.)

P. W. A. IS O. K.: SO IS SECRETARY ICKES

I now want to mention the fact that the P. W. A. has done a good piece of work. This work has been done under Secretary Harold L. Ickes. I think he is one of the ablest men in the United States Government. The only thing I know against Mr. Ickes is that he was once a Republican, but he is doing the best he can to live that down. [Laughter.]

The work of Mr. Ickes has been soundly financed. He has been criticized for being careful and for taking too much time, but he has seen to it that this work has been carefully done, and I now want to read you some of the details that must be carried out in reference to P. W. A. work.

I want to bring out to you how these projects are carried on and how they are selected.

COMMUNITIES AND P. W. A.; LOANS PAID BACK AT 4 PERCENT

First, P. W. A. projects are selected by the local communities themselves. No attempt is made to "sell" the community a project. The State, county, municipality, or other local subdivision must make a formal application.

Second. P. W. A. projects are approved only after rigid examination into their need, usefuless, social desirability, legality, engineering feasibility, and financial soundness.

Third. The cost to the Federal Government is the amount of the grant only. The major part of the cost of every P. W. A. project is paid by the local community. P. W. A. loans are being repaid to the Federal Government with interest at 4 percent. Municipal bonds taken by P. W. A. as security for Government loans are being resold at a profit to the Government.

Fourth. The construction of P. W. A. projects provides needed employment for skilled and unskilled workers at prevailing wages. Because of the types of construction a vast amount of indirect employment also is created in manufacturing plants, steel mills, machine shops, and so forth, in the fabrication and transportation of materials and supplies.

Now, I have tried to present some of the things of the P. W. A., and there is other work in the Department of the Interior, which includes various activities. (For more information on Interior, see IV, Department of the Interior.)

As I said in the beginning, the work of Harry Hopkins has got to be continued whether we want to do it or not. We cannot let starving people die. I do not know how much money ought to be allowed him, but many think it ought to be a billion and a half.

Now, as to Secretary Ickes, I believe that his good work for the Government should be continued. As to the amount he should have. I do not know whether it should be a hundred million or a billion. The experts on the Appropriations Committee can probably tell us that.

Here is the situation in which we find ourselves. We find ourselves under a barrage of criticism as to everything we do. We know that this work has got to be done whether we like it or not. We find that Mr. Ickes' work is sound, and the loans made come back at a certain rate of interest.

So I say this much: Let us keep going the good work of

I MORE ABOUT BOONDOGGLING

In early America the word was "toggle", and it meant a useful gadget which a pioneer could make with his hands out of whatever materials he had where he happened to be. Daniel Boone made a "toggle" out of thongs-a device to tie his rifle on his head when he wanted to swim a stream, so his powder would stay dry. It was a mighty useful gadget, and became widely known as the "Boone-toggle." Boy Scouts have used "boondoggle", a corruption of the old term, to mean handicrafts, and a handicrafts teacher was the innocent author of the current political use of the word.

п

MORE ABOUT WHITE-COLLAR WORKERS

Some 43,000 professional and technical workers are engaged in health research, assistance in hospitals, library work, nursing, scientific research, and other technical effort. Nearly 32,000 more are working on special fact-finding studies for local governments, natural-resource surveys, and kindred activity.

Some 26,000 recreational workers are directing athletics, playground activities, game rooms, camps, and recreation programs for the underprivileged.

Ten thousand clerks in W. P. A., and 22,000 more in other governmental units, are modernizing old public record systems, restoring valuable archives, and repairing books.

TTT

MORE ABOUT MUSIC

If you want to measure the magnitude of this program, consider that 163 symphony and concert orchestras, 51 bands, 15 chamber music ensembles, 69 dance orchestras, 22 choruses, and 6 opera or operetta units are training or performing in various sections of the country.

Here is an example of the sort of human experience that keeps cropping out. A high W. P. A. official, who is a music lover, heard the symphony orchestra in Portland, Oreg., play an impressive number. He never had heard the selection before, and asked the director what it was.

"It is an original work by a member of the orchestra," the director replied. "We found him digging a ditch."

(Note.-Would you want to let that musician continue in his own work, for which he is fitted, pleasing also the people, or kick him back into a ditch?)

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR

1. Department of Conservation and Public Works

Virtually all of the diverse activities of the Department of the Interior are touched with a conservation interest. Because of this and because the Department is charged with the administration of a vast part of the public domain it would seem to me to be most fitting to change the name from Interior Department to the Department of Conservation. The name proposed is more expressive and descriptive of the functions of the Department. It also has been suggested that the Public Works Administration be transferred to this Department, which then would become the Department of Conservation and Public Works. A bill to authorize this change is now pending in Congress. Secretary Ickes has endorsed it.

There follows a brief résumé of what the various bureaus and divisions of the Interior Department are doing for the people of the United States:

2. Bureau of Reclamation

Permanent improvements of continuing benefit to each of the far western arid and semiarid States are the results of the Bureau of Reclamation construction program.

A glance at the achievements of the reclamation service will indicate the promise held by its new projects. With an expenditure of less than $250,000,000, four-fifths of which came from sale of public lands and royalties from oil and mineral leases on public lands in these Western States. and one-fifth of which came from repayment by water users of money once spent to build Federal irrigation projects, Harry Hopkins, and also the work of Mr. Ickes. [Applause.] the Bureau of Reclamation had in 1935 created homes for 752,766 persons out of deserts and had added more than $1,000,000,000 to the taxable wealth of the Western States.

Boulder Dam was pushed to completion 2 years ahead of schedule by Secretary Ickes. This was made possible largely because a Public Works Administration allotment of $38,000,000 permitted engineers to push the job at full speed throughout the period when concrete was being placed and, incidentally, when employment was most needed. It is only to be regretted that the construction could not have been completed sooner by 1 year, because when the Colorado River went dry in 1934 the resultant drought in the Imperial Valley, which is entirely dependent upon the river, cost farmers $10,000,000. However, Boulder Dam prevented a flood and a drought in 1935 and is ready to perform the same services this year and forever more.

The manifold blessings Boulder Dam has brought to the Southwest will have their counterpart in the Northwest when Grand Coulee Dam is completed.

Literally scores of communities in what has been called the Great American Desert have been succored by the new work begun by the Bureau of Reclamation. The Utah projects, the Wyoming, Oregon, and New Mexico projects, those in Montana, Idaho, Arizona, Nevada, and California, the projects in Washington and Colorado, guarantee to future generations more secure lives through regulation of water supplies and conservation of the West's most important natural resource, its water. The intense drought of 1934 emphasized the value of reclamation by leaving the Federal irrigation projects as oases in the great dustpan. Counties and perhaps even States were saved from catastrophe that year by the balancing influence of stored water on their agriculture and their economy.

3. National Park Service

The National Park Service is charged with the administration of all Federal park areas. There are now 131 separate park units in the national park and monument system, with a total area of 24,160 square miles.

The National Park Service also is charged with the supervision and maintenance of most of the Federal buildings in Washington, the notable exceptions being the Capitol and related buildings, the Library of Congress, and the Supreme Court Building. It also supervises a few Federal buildings outside the District of Columbia.

In connection with the administration of emergency conservation work in the park areas, the Service also is charged with the supervision of emergency conservation work in State, county, and metropolitan parks.

The national park and monument areas are widely varied in size, geographical location, and type of exhibits. They include the most spectacular scenery the country has to offer, and also its most sacred historic shrines and prehistoric treasures. In the field of natural science these areas are supreme, furnishing unexcelled outdoor classrooms for the study of world building and biology. All parks and monuments are absolute wildlife sanctuaries.

The national parks and monuments have been made accessible to the public, but in the wilderness areas great care has been taken to preserve the primitive, and to keep the greater part of such regions untouched by roads and manmade developments other than simple trails. In the areas of tourist concentration, automobile camps have been provided by the Government, and the necessary hotel, lodge, and similar accommodations provided by private capital under Government supervision. Motor transportation is available and also stores carrying tourist supplies.

The National Park Service assists visitors to understand and enjoy the parks through its educational service, which includes the operation of museums and the furnishing of information services by employees trained in the natural sciences and in history. This naturalist and historian service includes conducted hikes and caravans to points of interest.

4. Office of Indian Affairs

When Secretary Ickes took office he became responsible for the problem of the Indians. For his Commissioner of Indian Affairs Mr. Ickes chose John Collier, long a fighter for Indian rights.

These two men came into office at the end of what has justly been called a "century of dishonor", during which, by Government action, the Indians had been despoiled of two-thirds of their lands and had seen their trust funds willfully dissipated.

The Indian death rate was more than twice the general death rate. Civil and constitutional rights were systematically denied to our oldest Americans. An autocratic bureaucracy governed their lives; their wealth continued to flow to whites; their range and farm lands were disappearing through erosion.

In $2\frac{1}{2}$ years the new administration has revolutionized the Indians' situation.

Secretary Ickes went to the root of the Government's Indian policy by asking Congress to abolish the nefarious land-allotment system. He recommended legislation for the consolidation of Indian land holdings, for the restoration of tribal lands, and for the acquisition of lands for homeless Indians. All of these recommendations were enacted into law.

Equally fundamental was Secretary Ickes' proposal, which Congress adopted as the Indian Reorganization Act, granting to the Indians constitutional rights, and giving them means to shape their own destiny. Since the act's passage 176 distinct Indian tribes here adopted its terms.

When Secretary Ickes took office Indian native culture and religion were under official ban. For Indians there was no liberty of conscience. Savage espionage laws ruled Indian life. A clean sweep has been made of these tyrannical, un-American statutes and policies.

I have referred to the disastrous effects of soil wastage upon Indian lands. Effective erosion-control measures are being carried out on Indian lands, many of which are controlling areas in the watersheds of several of the great western rivers.

Under Secretary Ickes Indian education in boarding schools remote from the homes of the children has been supplanted by teaching in more than 100 day schools which have been established, where children are trained for practical living. In many of the schools the most liberal and productive educational work now going on in the United States can be observed. These schools are thronged by adults at night, as well as by children during the day.

I have sketched only a part of Secretary Ickes' achievement in the Indian field. I could refer in addition to the unification of the Federal Indian Service with the various services of the States; to the demonstration furnished through the Indian emergency conservation work and public works that Indians are willing, indeed, eager workers; to the work being done to salvage the Indian crafts; to the expanded health work, I could mention the pending general Indian-welfare bill for Oklahoma, passed by the Senate and now reported by the House Indian Committee, which has been pressed for enactment by Secretary Ickes during the last year.

The Indians' life-tide definitely has been turned at last; their future is assured.

5. Division of Grazing

The Division of Grazing of the Department of the Interior has supervision of the use of some 80,000,000 acres of the public domain for the grazing of livestock. Passage of the Taylor Act in June 1934 charged the Secretary of the Interior with the responsibility of regulating grazing to prevent further deterioration of the public lands, to effect improvements in the range, and, in general, to take steps looking toward the stabilization of the livestock industry.

An innovation in land legislation, the act is being administered along novel lines. The area within its jurisdiction, covering 10 Western States, has been divided into 34 districts. Each district elects an advisory board of stockmen who pass on applications for licenses or permits and make recommendations to the Secretary of the Interior on the administration of the law. Thus the users of the range are given a voice in its government.

At the present time stockmen are granted temporary licenses giving them the privilege of grazing their stock on the public range. Regulations require that the licensees have some so-called commensurate property of their own to supplement the use of the range, and this qualification and prior rights to the use of the range are both considered in granting licenses. As soon as surveys, evaluating every acre of land in the vast domain, have been completed stockmen will be given long-term permits for use of the range.

There are more than 15,000 livestock men operating under the Taylor Act. The range is used as supplemental feeding for their 1,576,976 cattle, their 6,401,525 sheep, their 145,753 horses, their 172,481 goats, a total of 8,282,232 head of livestock.

An indication of the success of the Department's policy of self-government is found in the comparatively few number of applicants for licenses who have appealed from the findings of the advisory committees. In 16,000 applications considered, only 51 appealed to the Director of Grazing.

The C. C. camps have played an important part in the Division of Grazing program. Forty-five camps have been established on the range, and their enrollment put to work developing water resources, building cattle trails, constructing fences, destroying predatory animals and rodents, and eliminating poison weeds.

6. General Land Office

There are 197,261,754 acres of public lands, including the recently formed grazing districts in the United States proper, of which 54,000,000 acres still remain to be surveyed. These figures do not include lands in national parks, forests, Indian, and other reservations. This takes no account of the hundreds of millions of acres of public lands which, through the General Land Office, have already passed into the hands of private citizens under the homestead law.

The Department of the Interior itself had its inception in the surveying which began shortly after the Revolutionary War and continues to this day. A surveyor general started the work in 1796 which was put in the General Land Office in 1812. Congress authorized establishment of the Department of the Interior in 1849 and the General Land Office and other bureaus were placed in this Department.

The Commissioner of the General Land Office is charged with the survey, management, and disposition of public lands, and the adjudication of claims relating thereto, the granting of railroad and other rights-of-way, easements, the issuance of patents for lands, and with furnishing certified copies of land patents, and of records, plats, and papers on file in his office.

Uninspiring as the term General Land Office is, no bureau of the Government has meant more to the citizens of the United States or has made a larger payment in the coin of peace, contentment, and prosperity of thousands upon thousands of our people.

7. Geological Survey

The Geological Survey is concerned with the discovery, appraisal, and development of natural resources, including water power. Among its activities are the making of topographic and geological surveys, the gaging of streams, the classification of lands by field examination, the supervision of mineral leasing on public lands, and the investigation of mineral resources in Alaska. In bringing to light sources of vast mineral wealth so as to permit its development, the Survey has been of inestimable value to the people. Its work is scientific and practical, and the Survey's opinions are regarded as authoritative.

In his annual report the Director of the Geological Survey said there is an insistent Nation-wide demand for increased activity in topographic mapping because of the publicly recognized need for maps as bases for so many private and public activities. Urban and rural development, road locations, census and soil problems, crop-control problems, irrigation, park and forest administration—all need these maps acutely.

The mineral industry depends upon the scientifically sound and impartial reports of the Survey upon the active and potentially active mining districts of the Nation.

Effective cooperative relations have been maintained with a number of the States in geologic work, study of water supplies, and topographic mapping. Similar relations exist with the Petroleum Division of the Department of the Interior.

the National Resources Committee, the Tennessee Valley Authority, the Office of Indian Affairs, the Bureau of Public Roads, and many others.

8. Bureau of Mines

The Bureau of Mines is the branch of the Federal Government charged with looking after the safety of the millions of workers in the extensive mineral industries, and with making investigations designed to increase efficiency in the mining, treatment, and utilization of the hundred or more of commercial minerals on which the very existence of the Nation depends.

The Bureau has trained nearly a million miners in first-aid and mine-rescue methods. It has conducted exhaustive studies in the use of explosives in mining, the use of safer types of electrical machinery, lamps, and other mining equipment, the hazard of gases and dusts encountered in mines, and many other mine safety problems. Largely as a result of these studies, the death rate in the coal mines has registered a steady decline, and the disastrous mine explosions that formerly shocked the Nation have come to be almost rarities.

As a result of the Bureau's technologic studies, enormous mineral wastes have been reduced, the costs of producing minerals have been lessened, and the percentage of mineral recovery from ores has been increased. The new knowledge obtained from the Bureau's studies has resulted in the recovery of millions of dollars' worth of metals which formerly were not recovered; many mines which otherwise would have been too low grade to work, have been enabled to continue operations, and thousands of men have thus been given employment. The Bureau has shown the oil operator how to prevent enormous wastes of petroleum and natural gas.

The Bureau has been a pioneer in the study of fuel combustion and has substituted sound scientific principles for guesswork in fuel-burning practice. The prevention of waste in the utilization of fuel has greatly benefited both the average housekeeper and the operator of the big power plant.

The Bureau collects and disseminates statistical data and studies the economics of production, distribution, conservation, and storage of the numerous essential minerals. Results of these studies are used widely by the mineral industries to keep in touch with market trends and to solve their problems.

9. The Office of Education

The Office of Education in the Department of the Interior is a small organization with a large job. This agency, under United States Commissioner of Education J. W. Studebaker, is doing a splendid service for American education—public, parochial, and private, despite limited appropriations and facilities to serve a nation that finds one of every four of its men, women, and children in some kind of school each day.

Today one thinks of the Office of Education as having several major divisions. The General Education Division constantly carries on studies in the general fields of education, ranging all the way from nursery schools to colleges and universities. These include studies on subjects dealing with elementary and secondary schools, health education, parent education, exceptional children, Negro education, and the like. The Office, really an educational observation post, finds progressive practices in both teaching and administration, making this information known in many ways to all school systems, in an endeavor to bring about higher standards of learning and more efficient handling of school problems. The Vocational Education Division, on the other hand, goes far beyond research. This Federal service actually supports, financially, vocational education in all the States. To a greater extent, therefore, in vocational education than in general education, the Federal Government makes possible something resembling equality of educational opportunity. This applies also to vocational rehabilitation, directed by the Office of Education and actually financed by the Office's appropriations.

Another major division is the one responsible for C. C. C. camp education. This division has worked diligently during the past 2 years to set up an educational program in the C. C. C. camps, aimed at reducing illiteracy and providing general and vocational education. As the result, 71 percent of the C. C. C. members are now voluntarily participating in some form of organized educational activity.

The Office of Education is also capitalizing the demands for emergency work for people on relief. It is doing this by carrying forward projects which potentially and actually have tremendous social significance. Among these are a study of the organization and administration of local school units, looking to better efficiency and economy in school systems throughout the United States; a university research project, which will bring from graduate schools reports on many studies and problems important educationally; a public forums project, which is expected to discover problems and potentialities of public forums as a method of adult civic education; an educational radio project, regarded as the first major attempt to develop the possibilities which radio holds for education; and a national study of vocational education and guidance opportunities for Negroes.

10. Division of Territories and Island Possessions

By Executive order, there was established in the Department of the Interior, effective July 29, 1934, the Division of Territories and Island Possessions, and there were transferred thereto from the Bureau of Insular Affairs, War Department, the functions pertaining to the administration of the government of Puerto Rico. Jurisdiction with respect to Alaska, Hawaii, and the Virgin Islands had previously been vested in the Department of the Interior, and these activities also were transferred to the new division, which now includes supervision over the Governor's office, Alaska Railroad, Alaska Road Commission, Alaska reindeer and Alaska insane, in Alaska; the Governor's office and Hawaiian Homes Commission in Hawaii; and the Governor's office, the Virgin Islands Co., and Bluebeard Castle Hotel in the Virgin

The Division was created by the President not only to perform the ordinary supervisory functions previously exercised with respect to the Territories and insular possessions but to coordinate the activities of the various governmental agencies operating therein and to carry out comprehensive programs for their economic and social rehabilitation. The Virgin Islands Co. has been very effective in carrying out the Federal Government's rehabilitation program in the Virgin Islands, and among the projects now under way there are the Bluebeard Castle Hotel, which was constructed by the Government to assist in the development of tourist trade in St. Thomas; a rum distillery and sugar mill in St. Croix; subsistence homesteads; rural and urban housing; and so forth. The resettlement of approximately 200 families from continental United States in the Matanuska Valley of Alaska was undertaken by the Federal Emergency Relief Administration about a year ago, and there is every reason to believe that it will be a success.

The experience gained in connection with this project will be extremely valuable in carrying out plans for a progressive colonization program for the Territory over the next 5 or 10 years. The Director of the Division is Administrator of the Puerto Rico Reconstruction Administration, which was created by Executive order dated May 28, 1935, and it has inaugurated a comprehensive program for the economic and social rehabilitation of Puerto Rico. Through the various projects now in operation, employment has been given to over 30,000 workers and it is expected that this number will be increased as new projects get under way.

11. Petroleum Conservation Division

Effective April 1 of this year, there was set up under the Office of the Secretary a Petroleum Conservation Division under the immediate charge of a Director. This Division will assist the Secretary of the Interior in administering the act of February 22, 1935 (49 Stat. 30), and under his direction is authorized to discuss the work of any agency dealing with oil and gas, recommend action on any case brought to its attention, coordinate information, and, through appropriate channels, act as the contact agency with the Interstate Oil Compact Commission, present required data to the Congress, attend oil and gas conferences in which the Department is interested, cooperate with the oil-producing States in the study of physical waste and the enactment of uniform oil- and gas-conservation laws, and contact other departments of the Government whose work deals in any measure with oil and gas.

FALSE-FRONT AND RACKET ORGANIZATIONS

The Liberty League, similar organizations, munitions interests, Du Ponts, and similar elements often finance false-front organizations. Herewith are two:

First. "The Farmers' Independence Council", an alleged farmers' organization. The list of "contributors" is as follows:

Lammot Du Pont, $5,000.

J. N. Pew, Jr., of the Sun Oil Co., $2,000.

Arthur Beeter, attorney for Swift & Co., Chicago, $3,500. Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president of General Motors, $1,000. S. M. Swenson, of 52 Wall Street, New York, $1,000.

Winthrop W. Aldrich, chairman of the board of the Chase National Bank of New York, $500.

E. P. Prentiss, of Boston, $499.75.

S. Rheinstein, of New York, $150.

R. E. Fisher, of the Pacific Gas & Electric Co., $1,000.

G. E. Baldwin, of the Libby, McNeill & Libby Co., $1,500.

G. E. Roberts, of the National City Bank of New York, $100. Oakley Thorne, of New York, $500.

George A. Ball, of Muncie, Ind., $500.

Ogden L. Mills, former Secretary of the Treasury, $100.

C. N. Bliss, of New York, $200.

J. D. Cooney, attorney for the Wilson Packing Co., $1,500.

A. B. Echols, of the Du Pont Co., $210.

A. G. Milbank, of New York, $500.

C. H. Haskell, of the Du Pont Co., $500.

A. C. Corbishley, of Swift & Co., $1,000.

J. N. Leonard, hay commission broker, $590.

Second. The Southern Committee to Uphold the Constitu-

The list of "contributors" are as follows:

John J. Raskob, $5,000.

Pierre S. Du Pont, $5,000.

Lammot du Pont, $500. Henry B. Du Pont, $500.

Iréneé Du Pont, $50.

Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., $1,000.

O. C. Huffman, president Continental Can Co. of New York,

Ogden L. Mills, New York, $100.

Charles S. McCain, Chicago, United Power & Light Co., $200.

W. E. Smith, Standard Oil Co., $100.

Alvan Macauley, Detroit, Packard Motor Co., $50.

A. C. Marshall, Detroit, Edison Co., $250.

Frank B. Kellogg, former Secretary of State, $50.

John W. Prentiss, of Hornblower & Weeks, New York City,

William I. Walter, New York City, $150.

John B. Stranch, National Bearings Metal Corporation. $200.

Lewis H. Egan, Union Electric Light & Power Co., $200.

S. H. Curlee, of St. Louis, $300. Finlay J. Shepard, New York City, $20.

Carleton Macy, New York City, $10.

H. C. Hopson, Associated Gas & Electric Co., $10.

John F. Neylan, San Francisco, general counsel for Hearst papers, $100.

E. W. Mudge and L. F. Mudge, of Weirton Steel Co. and National Steel Co., $100 each.

THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS

The SPEAKER. Under special order the Chair recognizes the Commissioner from the Philippines [Mr. Paredes] for

Mr. PAREDES. Mr. Speaker, I realize that this House needs its precious time for the consideration of many other more important matters than the subject of my address. I I therefore thank you for having unanimously consented to my addressing you today.

With the passage of the independence law (Public Act No. 127, approved Mar. 24, 1934, commonly known as the Tydings-McDuffie Act), this Congress has set the crowning mark to the brilliant work that the United States has been undertaking, for the last 38 years, of helping a dependent people achieve the blessings of self-government, for we thereby receive the assurance of the enjoyment of complete independence at the end of 10 years. It is my privilege, as the first official representative of the new Philippine Commonwealth, to voice the gratefulness of my people for everything that you have done for us.

By gradual steps, as each preceding one justified a move forward, you have granted us the right to select our own local officers and then our legislature; later on you gave us a greater participation in administrative and executive officers; and, finally, you have permitted us the right to frame our own constitution and to establish a government exclusively of our own, with three independent but coordinative powersthe legislative, the executive, and the judicial—and with full powers of sovereignty, save only in matters of trade relations with your country, the currency, and our foreign affairs. Pursuant to that law and the constitution enacted in accordance therewith, we inaugurated on November 15, 1935, our Commonwealth Government and have started to enjoy the privileges and at the same time carry on the burdens imposed

It is gratifying to say that we have had a fair start under auspicious circumstances, beginning as it did with a demonstration of friendship and good will by several distinguished members of both Houses of Congress, headed by their respective illustrious presiding officers. Notwithstanding the difficulties and inconveniences of a long journey that lasted not less than 20 days each way, these bearers of good will, leaving behind them their more important duties and personal conveniences, came to our land to encourage us with their presence on the inauguration of the new government. To them and to their charming ladies and the newspapermen who joined the party, I wish to express the high appreciation of the Filipino people. Their democratic ways, the interest they all have shown to learn our needs, and the proven friendship and solicitude they have for everything that concerns us, have won for them the everlasting esteem and regard of the Filipinos and have earned for the United States the strengthening of the ties of a firm and ever-growing friendship with, and the enduring gratitude of, our people. Nothing could have been done to cement our feelings of gratitude and friendship for this country better than this congressional trip. And I wish to take advantage of this opportunity to say that the good wishes for our welfare which prompted you to approve the independence law and to come to our shores are beginning to be realized.

At the head of our government stands one of the greatest figures in contemporary oriental history, Hon. Manuel L. Quezon, the first president of our Commonwealth. With the far-sightedness of a real statesman his first official message to the national assembly was a strong appeal for national unity and consciousness. He recommended and obtained the enactment of a law for a compulsory universal military training and, under the direction of one of the ablest soldiers the United States ever had, Gen. Douglas MacArthur, the national army is being organized with no other purpose than to safeguard our nation against possible aggressions within and from without. With a strong hand President Quezon has restored the public morale in two provinces where two of the most dangerous bandits the Philippines have ever known had been, previous to the inauguration of the Commonwealth, terrorizing the inhabitants. With an unusual courage the president has made his stand definite for a civil service free from considerations other than efficiency; has set precedents in the standards of an impersonal and efficient administration of justice and public affairs; has started an uncompromising campaign against commercialized vice; and has secured the creation of a court of appeals whose judges he ap- a 3 cents per pound processing tax on coconut oil from the pointed with no other consideration than the insuring of absolute justice to all, to the end that everyone, no matter what his station in life, may be assured of an impartial and speedy justice.

And, preparatory to facing the burdens that the new status carries with it, and for the purpose of establishing our economic fabric on a firmer foundation, he has appointed an economic council composed of the ablest men we have among our economic leaders and a survey board to undertake the task of overhauling the machinery of the Government for the simplification of its functions and the elimination of wastage of our heretofore complicated bureaucracy.

With a good surplus, due to the wise policy of the last of our American Governors General, the Honorable Frank Murphy; with a budget favorably balanced the last few years, as well as during the present one; with the determination to simplify our machinery of government and to reduce expenses; with a statesman of the ability and greatness of heart of the Honorable Frank Murphy as United States High Commissioner; with a sympathetic Administration and Congress in the United States; and with the innate and proven capacity of the Filipinos for self-government and a disposition to do their duty and to follow the leadership of our President, there is every reason to view the future with confidence.

But absorbed, as you are, by your many serious domestic problems, you are liable to feel that you have already completed your task in the Philippines by giving us the independence law and to overlook the intention underlying the same. Just as you did give legal existence to the Philippine nation by constructive legislation, you can wreck your own splendid work by reactionary laws, predicated on a philosophy other than the generous purposes and the purport of the independence act. We take it that the evident purpose of said law is to prepare the Filipinos for complete independence by giving us control of our own internal affairs, as well as time and opportunity for readjusting our economics to enable us to face the burdens of an independent government. The law has been an offer on your part, conditioned upon the fulfillment of certain specified obligations on ours. We accepted the offer, including a definite statement of your great President, acquiesced in by Congress, when he said in his message of March 22, 1934:

 * where imperfections or inequalities exist, I am confident that they can be corrected after proper hearing and in fairness to both peoples.

The Filipinos take the law to be a solemn contract to which both your country and the Philippines have bound themselves. We consequently deem that, unless it be by mutual consent, the contract cannot be, and should not be, modified.

However, barely 1 week had elapsed since the acceptance of the independence law when Congress saw fit to indirectly amend the same by enacting the Jones-Costigan law on May 9, 1934, under which our sugar exportation to the United States during the calendar year 1934 was reduced, from 1,500,000 to a quota of 1,015,000 tons, almost 500,000 tons, valued at $35,000,000, notwithstanding the fact that the limitation of 850,000 long tons the independence law imposes on our sugar exports to the United States would not take effect until the establishment of our commonwealth.

A year had scarcely passed since the enactment and the acceptance of said independence law when Congress passed another law modifying its economic provisions, if in a way favorable to us, in another discriminatory to a country that is still under the protection of the American flag. The Cordage Act (Public, No. 137 of June 14, 1935), while enlarging the amount of cordage that the Philippines may import free of duty into the United States, has included binder twine, which by the general revenue laws is of free and unlimited importation even by foreign nations. Six million pounds is the limit of Philippine cordage, while foreign cordage has no limit at all.

And within the same period a provision was incorporated by Congress in the 1934 Revenue Act (sec. 6021/2) imposing Philippines, notwithstanding the provisions of the independence law allowing importation of oil free of duty to the extent of 200,000 long tons.

It is not surprising that the high spirit of fairness and justice of your President, aroused by such action, prompted him to recommend to Congress, in his message of May 28, 1934, the reconsideration of the tax on the ground, among others, that the congressional action in imposing it was "directly contrary to the intent of the provisions in the Independence Act", it being in effect a "withdrawal of an offer made by the Congress of the United States to the people of the Philippine Islands" and because the "enforcement of this provision at this time will produce a serious condition among many thousands of families in the Philippine Islands."

Representations were made by Philippine government officials protesting against the tax and asking for its reconsideration and elimination, and the Coconut Planters' Association, in December 1934, joined the protest and request, among some of the reasons being that "the tax is grossly unfair to the Philippines", the "tax is not proportionate to the value of the commodity on which it is imposed", and "there is no danger of any overproduction of copra and coconut oil in the Philippines."

The protest implies that the tax will eventually ruin an industry upon which more than one-fourth of the Philippine population depends for its living. The recommendation of your illustrious President, in said message was that the tax be reconsidered "in order that the subject may be studied further between now-May 28, 1934-and next January, and in order that the spirit and intent of the independence act be more closely followed."

The time for study as proposed by the President having elapsed, a bill has been filed in this House by Congressman DOCKWEILER-H. R. 8000-and its counterpart in the Senate by Senator Guffey-S. 3004-lifting the tax insofar as Philippine oil used for nonedible purposes is concerned, leaving it to stand with reference to oil for edible purposes. While this bill does not entirely satisfy the Filipino side of the case, we must admit that it may be considered as the "form of compromise which will be less unjust to the Philippine people and at the same time attain, even if more slowly, the object of helping the butter- and animal-fat industry in the United States" that the President in his aforesaid message found lacking in the protested tax.

Section 6021/2 of the 1934 Revenue Act, which the Dockweiler bill, H. R. 8000, seeks to amend, was enacted as a protection for domestic oils and fats. But while it has worked hardship to the Philippine oil industry, as will be seen later, it could not give the desired protection. According to the Census Bureau records, the consumption of edible coconut oil increased 31 percent in 1935 as compared to 1933. This is because the tax applies to both edible and nonedible oils. The nonedible usage being the largest-twothirds of consumption-it establishes the price level at which coconut oil sells in the United States. The burden of a tax equal to 100 percent of the value of the oil at the time the tax was levied prevents Philippine coconut oil from moving into industrial products, such as rubber goods, soap, and tanners' oils, at the normal rate-less soap is being made-which enables the edible-oil user to obtain his supplies at a lower price than would be the case if there were no tax applying to industrial usages. The removal of the tax for industrial usage would force the edible user to pay more for coconut oil because the manufacturers who employ coconut oil for nonedible products would pay a higher price for our coconut oil if it were rendered tax free. The edible users would be forced to pay this increased price for oil plus the tax which would remain in effect on all oil used by them. The Dockweiler bill would put coconut oil back into normal channels of consumption—that is, the industrial—and reduce its edible use. The tax-free Philippine coconut oil would not displace domestic farmers' oil and fats. It would only displace lauric-acid-containing oils, none of which is of domestic origin.

On the other hand, the fears of wreckage of the copra and are proving to be realities since the enforcement of this tax. The average price of copra and coconut, as compared with the average price of former years, is only half of normal, notwithstanding the shortage of the domestic supply of oil resulting from the drought.

In order to ascertain what injury the Philippines have undergone as a result of the imposition of the 3 cents per pound excise tax on their coconut oil, 4 normal price yearsnamely, 1926 to 1929, inclusive-should be selected and the volume and value of exports of coconut oil and copra from the Philippines to the United States during these years compared to the year 1935, the first complete calendar year for which figures are available since the passage of the excise tax which went into effect on May 10, 1934. And we note that the volume of exports from the Philippines to the United States of both copra and coconut oil for said 4-year average, compared with the year 1935, apparently shows no injury from the excise tax.

In 1935 the volume of copra exports from the Philippines increased 135,784,000 pounds, or 41 percent over the 4-year average, and the volume of coconut-oil exports also increased 30,079,000 pounds, or 11 percent, over the 4-year average. This increase in exports, however, cannot be due to the tax, as anyone could easily realize. It was due to the necessity of the United States importing 2,650,000,000 pounds of oils and fats as a result of the domestic shortage of production of fats resulting from the 1934 drought and the consequent diminution of the supply of livestock, oleaginous materials, and so forth. Even with this shortage, the total importations of coconut oil, as such and in the form of copra, did not exceed 25 percent of the total importations required to fill up the deficit in United States oils and fats supplies, while the normal relationship of coconut oil in the form of oil and copra imports to the total vegetable-oil imports has been 38 percent over a period of years.

Had it not been for the tremendous deficiency in the United States supply of oils and fats, the importation of copra and coconut oil from the Philippines would have been greatly lessened as a result of the excise tax. When the United States supply of hogs and other livestock returns to normal, and cotton and corn production is increased due to the removal of restrictions incident to the governmental control program it can be anticipated that the volume of coconut-oil and copra exports from the Philippines to the United States will be heavily reduced.

But, while the United States took more coconut oil and copra from the Philippines in 1935 than it would have under normal conditions, owing to the 1934 drought, the prices at which it purchased its Philippine coconut oil and copra were about one-half of the average normal price as paid in the years 1926 to 1929. The average value per pound of copra exported from the Philippines to the United States for the 1926 to 1929 period was 4.40 cents per pound, and the value in 1935 was only 2.36 cents per pound, or a decrease of 46 percent in value as compared with normal. The average value of the shipments of copra from the Philippines to the United States was fourteen and one-half million dollars. The value of the copra shipments from the Philippines in 1935 to the United States was $10,987,000. In other words, while there was a 41-percent larger shipment of copra from the Philippines to the United States there was a decrease in total value obtained of 24 percent.

Copra yields 63 percent of coconut oil. The excise tax of 3 cents per pound on coconut oil, therefore, amounted to 1.8 cents a pound on copra, which is 63 percent of 3 cents per pound. If this 1.8 cents per pound is added to the average price of copra exported from the Philippines in the year 1935 (2.36 cents per pound), the sum aggregate is 4.16 cents per pound, or the equivalent of 18.30 pesos per hundred kilos in the islands, which brings it within the price range which Philippine copra growers were accustomed to get in normal years, namely, 17.73 pesos per hundred kilos in 1929, as a low, to 21.36 pesos per hundred kilos in 1926, as a high.

It is, therefore, evident that had not the tax on Philipcoconut industries in the Philippines by reason of the tax pine coconut oil been in existence in the year 1935, the price realized on Philippine copra exported to the United States would have been near the normal.

Referring now to coconut oil, we will find that the average value of the coconut oil shipped from the Philippine Islands to the United States for the years 1926 to 1929 was 7.72 cents per pound, which may be fairly said to represent the normal value of Philippine coconut oil. But the average declared value of coconut-oil exports from the Philippine Islands to the United States for the year 1935 was only 3.42 cents per pound, or a decrease, as compared to the normal value, of 56 percent. The total value of coconut-oil shipments from the Philippine Islands to the United States in 1935 was $12,255,000, and during the 4 normal-price years the average was $24,588,000, which represents a decrease in value of $12,-333,000, or 50 percent, despite an increase of 11 percent in the volume of exports.

If the excise tax of 3 cents per pound be added to the 3.42 cents per pound, which, as already stated, represents the average value of coconut-oil shipments from the Philippines to the United States in 1935, the aggregate is 6.42 cents per pound, which compares closely with the 7.72 cents per pound shown as the normal export value of Philippine coconut oil on the 1926-29 period.

But this is not all, Mr. Speaker. This processing tax is not laid on cottonseed oil of foreign origin, with the result that the importations of this product increased enormously since the imposition of the tax, with the consequent advantageous competition to our coconut oil. Other foreign oils were brought in in greatly increased quantities, because they are not subject to the processing tax. And more recently babassu oils appeared to complete the ruin of the Philippine oil. The use of babassu kernels in the United States has never developed extensively in the past, although the same is not subject to the excise tax; however, in the first 2 months following the trade agreement with Brazil, which includes babassu in the free list, the importation of babassu oils jumped to a figure that exceeds the importations of the whole year preceding. And as the qualities of babassu are almost the same as coconut oil, we find that our coconut oil is now quickly being replaced in this market by the babassu oil. This situation, Mr. Speaker, has moved the coconut planters of the Philippines to appeal to Congress for the enactment of the Dockweiler bill in a telegram sent to me and already transmitted to this honorable body. May I be allowed, for the purpose of completing the record, to read here said message in its entirety?-

Philippine Coconut Planters' Association earnestly requests enactment of Guffey-Dockweiler bill. Excise tax on coconut oil is not only unfair to Philippine industry, without benefiting American agriculture, but creates advantage in favor of foreign vegetable oils, especially babassu from Brazil, which does not pay the tax. Coconut industry is one of the basic Philippine industries, providing means of livelihood and purchasing power to one-fourth of country's population. Unless Guffey-Dockweiler bill is passed, Philippine copra and coconut oil will be rapidly displaced by other imported oils in American market, and Philippine industry will imported oils in American market, and Philippine industry will suffer severe losses, which will be reflected in the life of the masses and the revenues of the government. We appeal to the Congress for justice and reestablishment of the conditions as to trade relations prescribed in the independence law.

(Signed) Philippine Planters' Association

(Signed) PHILIPPINE PLANTERS' ASSOCIATION.

The members of the national assembly representing the coconut-producing districts have joined in the above request by a radiogram sent to me and also already transmitted to the House. This radiogram reads:

Assembly representing coconut-producing provinces appeal to Congress on behalf 4,000,000 Filipinos to approve Dockweller bill. Big landed coconut planters almost unknown here, because coconut holding much more diffused than any other single industry; hence better consumers' American goods. Philippine consumption American goods almost directly proportionate to copra price level.
Although prices other major Philippine products have been improving or kept in steady level, consumption American goods has not shown improvement because copra price level has not improved, slight improvement despite handicaps being negligible. (Signed) Lavides, Maneja, Dizon, Alano, Luna, Montano.

And finally the President of the Philippine Commonwealth has also asked me to do what I can to expedite the passage of the Dockweiler and Guffey bills. His message to me

For Commissioner PAREDES: After extended deliberation I have decided to support the Guffey-Dockweller bills, as beneficial to the Philippine coconut industry, in that they will result in (1) higher copra prices and better demand for Philippine copra, and (2) in the elimination of much of the competition our products are offering in edible channels, which is the chief source of complaint offering in edible channels, which is the chief source of complaint from American dairy interests. Philippine copra producers and oil mills further claim that on present basis they are losing much of their former inedible trade to other oils and fats of foreign origin available cheaper because of excise tax, and without benefit to domestic producers. These bills appear to offer reasonable compromise and should do much to simplify and harmonize the general situation. I request that you do everything that is necessary to expedite the passage of these bills.—Quezon.

Mr. Speaker, I am complying with a duty to my government and my people in transmitting to this House and joining the above requests for enactment of the Dockweiler bill (H. R. 8000) and by presenting to you on their behalf the situation as I see it. This excise tax violates the spirit of the covenant contained in the independence law, and it ruins one of our largest industries in the Philippines without benefiting yours. I submit that under all equitable principles our products are entitled to all reasonable advantages over those coming from foreign countries. Your glorious flag still waves sovereign over our land. We not only feel ourselves in duty bound to a complete allegiance to you, but we have in the past sufficiently shown our loyalty when your country entered the World War. Our industries have been built to fit a free trade that you have imposed upon us, with the best of intention to help us develop our commerce, we must admit, but over our objections as voiced at the time by our Philippine Assembly and our Resident Commissioners. We feel that taxes which ruin such industries should be repealed.

In the noble experiment conducted by the United States the Filipinos have done their part with a deep sense of responsibility. In the covenant contained in the independence law we have done and we are ready to continue doing our part. It is only just to publicly acknowledge that you, your people, and the administration have so far done theirs, and that the deviations from the established policy, which I have pointed out, might be due to pressing serious domestic problems that caused you to overlook our status or to have a mistaken appraisal of the effects of your action. I voice the feeling of my people when I say that we know you will not deliberately take any action that may tend to undermine your own splendid work in the Orient, and that the innate sense of justice of this great Nation will not permit the wreckage of a newly born nation aspiring to be free and independent by such action as might be construed by the rest of the civilized world as a deliberate attempt to stem the tide of progress. There is an abiding faith in our hearts in the sense of sportmanship of the American people, and this faith is our guarantee of happiness and prosperity. We trust that you will heed our requests. I thank you.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PAREDES. Yes; with pleasure.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, if it should embarrass the gentleman to answer the question which I shall propound, I shall not press for an answer, though I would like to have it answered, or if he wishes to reserve the preparation of his answer and put it in the RECORD afterward, that will be satisfactory. I read an article a few days ago apparently cabled from Manila by a correspondent, I think a full column or more, which appeared in the American papers. It dealt with the intense interest now being displayed in the Philippines by Japan, and stated that various excursions from the Philippines to Japan were prepared and carried through by the Japanese, that teachers, officeholders, businessmen, and so forth, were joining those excursions by groups; that a very great display of interest was being made by Japanese influences in all Filipino affairs, and contacts were being established in Manila. In other words, that a process of Japanese infiltration is taking place, and the article further stated that there is an atmosphere growing up in Manila, being that ultimately there will be built up a change of masters in the Philippine Islands. gentleman can comprehend without any further statement on my part what that change of masters would be. Would the gentleman care to give the House any expression on that proposition?

Mr. PAREDES. Mr. Speaker, to start with, I do not know of any such movement or interest, and I do not believe there is anything like an organized campaign; but, assuming that there is, for the sake of argument, that is all the more reason, I say, for this Congress to pay attention to our requests, because the Congress has pledged itself to give us complete independence and ought to see to it that we shall enjoy the blessings of complete independence by helping us place ourselves beyond the reach of foreign nations.

The SPEAKER. The time of the Commissioner from the Philippines has expired.

Mr. KOPPLEMANN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. KOPPLEMANN. Mr. Speaker, the work of rehabilitation from floods throughout the Nation is going on steadily and fast. The terror has disappeared, poignant memories are losing their sharpness. Soon the debris will be cleared, ruin repaired, removing all visible memory of the flood.

Just tribute is being paid to the various municipal, State, and Federal agencies, civic bodies, and private associations, philanthropic and otherwise, municipal, State, and Federal officials, others who are employed in the service of the Government.

But I want to pay tribute also to the courage and loyalty of the thousands of individuals who stuck by their respective posts, giving in their own quiet way the service which the community needed as long as that service could be given. I saw in my own district, in Hartford and in adjoining towns, the policemen, the firemen, the State militia, the Coast Guard, the Boy Scouts, the C. C. C. boys, the veterans, all joined in the effort of helping those in distress.

There were also the mill hands, the factory workers, employees in stores and warehouses striving to keep the flood devastation at a minimum, pumping out the water, fortifying the places where they worked. There were the restaurant keepers, the employees of restaurants, supplying food and drinks to the men who were desperately battling the flood. There were the employees of public utilities, the telephone men and girl operators, the telegraph operators, who kept the wires humming with messages as long as those wires could hold out.

There are men and women whose names, because of their work during those trying days, will be written in the annals of Connecticut. These of whom I have just spoken are the unsung heroes and heroines. But even if their names are not inscribed, the memory of their courage, devotion, and service to their fellow men will live long in the hearts of those who witnessed their deeds and those who heard about them.

We in Congress are working desperately to put through legislation which will permit the construction of floodcontrol projects so that the tragedies of the past month may never be unnecessarily visited upon us again. I ask that we pause one moment and give a cheer for the unsung heroes and heroines of the flood. [Applause.]

LEAVE OF ABSENCE TO HOMESTEAD SETTLERS DURING 1936

Mr. DEROUEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 9997) granting a leave of absence to settlers of homestead lands during the year 1936, with a Senate amendment thereto, and concur in the Senate amendment.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Louisiana asks unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill H. R. 9997, with a Senate amendment thereto, and concur in the Senate amendment. The Clerk will report the Senate amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 2, after line 18, insert:
"Sec. 2. Any homestead settler or entryman, including any entryman on ceded Indian lands, who is unable to make the payments due on the purchase price of his land on account of economic conditions shall be excused from making any such payment during the calendar year 1936 upon payment of interest, in advance, at the rate of 4 percent per annum on the principal of any unpaid purchase price from the date when such payment or payments became due to and inclusive of the date of the expiration of the period of railed granted becaused." period of relief granted hereunder."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object. I think the chairman of the committee should make an explanation to the House, so that we will know exactly what the Senate amendment does and in what respect it changes the House bill.

Mr. DEROUEN. The Senate amendment does not change the House bill, except in this respect: It provides that those seeking an extension for the year 1936 must pay in advance all interest in arrears, as well as the interest for the year 1936, on the purchase price of ceded Indian lands.

Mr. SNELL. That is, they must pay the back interest?

Mr. DEROUEN. They must pay all interest in arrears plus interest for the year 1936 in advance at 4 percent.

Mr. SNELL. What concessions are we making to them?

Mr. DEROUEN. Just granting an extension of another year.

Mr. SNELL. And this has the unanimous approval of the gentleman's committee?

Mr. DEROUEN. Yes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The Senate amendment was concurred in.

WATERSHEDS OF SANTA BARBARA COUNTY, CALIF.

Mr. DEROUEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 6544) to conserve the water resources and to encourage reforestation of the watersheds of Santa Barbara County, Calif., by the withdrawal of certain public lands, included within the Santa Barbara National Forest, Calif., from location and entry under the mining laws, with a Senate amendment thereto, and concur in the Senate amendment.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Louisiana asks unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill H. R. 6544, with a Senate amendment thereto, and concur in the Senate amendment. The Clerk will report the Senate amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 3, line 20, after "therefrom", insert ": Provided further, That any person desiring to locate and enter upon any such withdrawn lands under the mineral-land laws may make such location and entry upon a showing satisfactory to the Secretary of the Interior and the Secretary of Agriculture that the lands to be entered are chiefly valuable for minerals."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object. As I listened to the reading of the amendment it seemed to me it is very far reaching. Will the gentleman from Louisiana please explain what it does and what the attitude of his committee is in regard to it?

Mr. DEROUEN. The committee, I believe, reported this bill unanimously. The bill was passed by the House, with the consent and approval of the Republican Members, and the Senate has added a provision. That provision is this, that any person desiring to locate and enter upon such withdrawn lands under the mineral-land laws may make such application and entry, upon a showing satisfactory to the Secretary of the Interior and the Secretary of Agriculture that the lands to be entered are chiefly valuable for minerals. In other words, it must have the approval of both the Secretary of the Interior and the Secretary of Agriculture as to the facts in the case that these lands are more valuable for mineral. That is all it does, and I think it is a very good provision.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. DEROUEN]?

There was no objection.

The Senate amendment was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

SPECIAL COMMITTEE ON INVESTIGATION OF LOBBYING ACTIVITIES Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 475.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 475

Resolved, That upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of Senate Joint Resolution 234, joint resolution authorizing the Senate Special Committee on Investigation of Lobbying Activities to employ counsel, in connection with certain legal proceedings, and for other purposes, and all points of order against said joint resolution are hereby waived. That after general debate, which shall be confined to the joint resolution and continue not to exceed 1 hour, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on the Judiciary, the joint resolution shall be read for amendment under the 5-minute rule. At the conclusion of the reading of the joint resolution for amendment, the Committee shall rise and report the same to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted, and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the joint resolution and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit, with or without instructions.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, one-half of the time on the rule I yield to the ranking minority member of the Committee on Rules, to be by him in turn yielded as he sees fit.

Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 25 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, the time at my disposal is not sufficient to permit of a full explanation and discussion of the purpose of this resolution. I beg the membership to refrain from propounding questions until I have, in the main, completed my statement.

On July 11, 1935, the Senate adopted Senate Resolution 165, setting up a special committee of five, which was—Authorized and directed to make a full and complete investigation of all lobbying activities and all efforts to influence, encourage, promote, or retard legislation, directly or indirectly, in connection with the so-called holding-company bill, or any other matter or proposal affecting legislation.

The committee was authorized-

To employ and to call upon the executive department for clerical and other assistance and to require by subpena, or otherwise, attendance of such witnesses and the production of such correspondence, books, papers, and documents, to administer such oaths, and to take such testimony and to make such expenditures as it deems advisable.

The committee is under the chairmanship of Senator Black and is commonly referred to as the Black committee. On July 29, 1935, the Senate adopted Senate Resolution 184, amending Senate Resolution 165 by broadening the discretion of the special committee as to the time and place of sitting, and enlarged its powers by directing it—

(a) To investigate and report to the Senate upon the financial structure corporate affiliations, interlocking stock ownerships and directorships, and the financial relationships, stock transactions, capitalization, expenditures, and operations of such persons, companies, corporations, partnerships, and groups as have sought in any way to influence the passage or defeat of legislation, or to influence public contracts, activities, or concessions; (b) to investigate and report upon the political contributions and activities of such persons, corporations, partnerships, or groups, their officers and agents, and their efforts, if any, to control, directly or indirectly, the sources and mediums of communication and information.

Later the committee caused to be served upon the telegraph companies maintaining offices in Washington, subpenas duces tecum calling for the production of certain telegrams. Some of the subpenas were specific in identifying the evidence called for, but others were general in form calling for production of all telegrams sent by, charged to, received, or paid for by certain named parties between the dates of February 1 and August 1, 1935.

After the committee had made disclosures as to the destruction of certain messages and the possible improper use of telegraphic means of communication the Federal Communications Commission made an order directing an examination of the books, papers, and files of the telegraph companies maintaining offices within the District of Columbia and did send its agents into such offices who did examine the books, records, and papers of the telegraph companies and did make copies of telegrams pertinent to the purposes of its investigation and to the inquiry being conducted by the committee.

It is charged that the aid of the Communications Commission was invoked by the Black committee and that the Commission, in the work that it did, was acting as the agent and representative of the committee. Agents of both the committee and the Commission acted together in the examination of the books, papers, and files of the telegraph companies, and it is fair to say that probably the Communications Commission was brought into the picture by the committee. It is a fact, however, as repeatedly stated by Senator Black, that the committee holds no telegrams or other evidence obtained from the telegraph companies except that which was produced under subpena.

Around the middle of March, last, Mr. William Randolph Hearst came into the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia seeking to restrain and enjoin the Black committee and the Federal Communications Commission from the further examination of the books and papers of the telegraph companies and the use of the telegrams already obtained insofar as affects messages passing between Mr. Hearst and any of his agents and employees or as between him and any news agencies or other corporations having to do with the publication of news which are under his ownership or control.

On April 8 the court denied the relief sought by plaintiff, holding that it was without authority to enjoin a committee of the Senate and that as to the Communications Commission the question was moot as the Commission answered that it had no intention of making further search and seizure under the order which it had made and its examination conducted.

In prosecution of the determination to contest the issues raised by Mr. Hearst the Senate adopted Senate Joint Resolution 234 granting authority to engage counsel to represent defendants in the suit which is, in effect, against the Congress of the United States, and this resolution is now before the House for action. As to any present necessity for engaging counsel, I am not advised; that is, of course, a matter for the Senate committee to decide. Under the law no committee of Congress can pay any one employee more than $300 per month, which sum is wholly inadequate to engage competent legal talent to handle this case. The fee of counsel is to be paid out of contingent funds of the Senate and to be fixed by the Senate Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

The basis of Mr. Hearst's suit is that the examination of the books, papers, and files of the telegraph companies by the Black committee and the Federal Communications Commission constituted an unreasonable search and seizure, and was in violation of the rights of plaintiff under amendments 4 and 5 of the Constitution; that many of the telegrams examined and copied and noted were of a private, personal, and privileged nature and have no connection whatever with the subject matter of the investigation, or with any subject matter concerning which Congress could enact valid legislation: that among the telegrams examined, copied, and noted were messages from the plaintiff to his associates and employees and messages from his associates and employees to plaintiff, or to other associates and employees of plaintiff; that copies of messages in the offices of telegraph companies are the property of the senders and that neither the plaintiff nor any of his employees or associates, agents or attorneys have given any authority whatever to the Black committee or to the Federal Communications Commission, or to any of the communications companies, or to anyone else to read, copy, or make any use whatsoever of messages passing between them; that the Black committee is without authority to make any use whatsoever of messages obtained; that the Federal Communications Commission was without authority to send their agents into the office of telegraph companies to make the examination complained of, and had no authority to divulge to the Black committee or any other the result of their examination: that Congress is without authority under the Constitution to regulate, interfere with, restrain, restrict, censor, or inquire into the conduct of the business of the press; that no agency of the Government has the power to go on a fishing expedition into matters concerning the conduct of the business of the press, to obtain messages exchanged between publishers and their employees or between employees of publishers relating to the business of the press and to turn such messages over to other agencies of the Government for whatever use such other agencies may desire to make of them; that the use of messages passing between plaintiff and his associates and employees, or between his associates and his employees could result in no valid legislation; that all of the messages passing between plaintiff and his associates and employees or between his associates and his employees are privileged under the first, fourth, and fifth amendments of the Constitution.

Plaintiff prays that the Black committee, the Federal Communications Commission, and their agents and employees, be restrained from making any use whatever of any of the messages sent by or received by plaintiff which have been copied from the record of any of the communications companies, and from the disclosure of the contents of any such message to anybody other than plaintiff; that they be restrained from making any further demands upon any of the communications companies transmitting messages of the plaintiff or his associates or employees for copies of such messages or any information whatever pertaining thereto; and that they be restrained from retaining or holding any such messages which might now be in their possession or from keeping or retaining any copies thereof.

From what has been said it clearly appears that serious questions are raised by the suit affecting the constitutional privileges and prerogatives of both the House and Senate. It is a challenge to the right of Congress to legislate in the exercise of its constitutional powers.

The whole question is a terribly tangled one and is full of apparent contradictions. Effort at clarification invariably bogs down in confusion. This has probably been due to the fact that discussion has proceeded upon the assumption that ours is a government that is absolute trinity in form, that all powers have been nicely and exactly divided into three parts, when this is not true. Such a thing is difficult, if not impossible, of accomplishment. The legislative department performs acts which, taken separately, are judicial and executive in character, but all included within and as a necessary part of legislation. Each of the other departments exercise mixed powers, but which are not regarded as such, being powers that are incidental to, included within, and as a necessary part of the primary functions which they perform.

The Senate committee is acting under a resolution that has the force of law and forms a proper basis for its proceedings. The committee occupies the same status as does the Senate, for it is the Senate acting through the device of a committee rather than as an entire body.

It is the undisputed right of the citizen to be secure against unreasonable search and seizure and against being compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself. These are rights which are to be regarded as the essence of constitutional liberty, and the guaranty of these is as important and as imperative as are the guaranties of other fundamental rights of the individual citizen and are not to be depreciated by any kind of encroachment. A committee of Congress is under the same obligation to respect these rights as all others. But the power of Congress, through committees or otherwise, to investigate as incidental to legislation is inherent and cannot be defeated on sentimental grounds.

While the subpenas used by the committee are substantially the same in form as those heretofore used by committees of the House and Senate and other investigating bodies, some of them undoubtedly do not meet the requirements of the law; and under some circumstances production under them would probably constitute unreasonable search and seigure

The circumstances would indicate that the Communications Commission made its order of investigation at the instance of the Black committee, but this would not invalidate its proceedings so long as it keeps within the scope of the Communications Act of 1934. As to the right of search and seizure, the Commission and the committee do not stand exactly upon the same footing. The Commission investigates for one purpose and the committee for another. Yet the product of the search of both, legally acquired, may be used by either when pertinent and relevant to the object sought to be accomplished.

It must not be overlooked that the constitutional inhibition against unreasonable search and seizure as contained in the fourth amendment is primarily for the purpose of protecting the citizen against being compelled to testify against himself in a criminal prosecution and violation of his rights as contained in the fifth amendment, and, too, it must not be overlooked that protection against such eventuality is provided for by law both as to the Commission and the committee. All questions of privilege insofar as concerns investigations conducted by committees of Congress are wiped out by reason of the immunity clause against prosecution as contained in the act of January 24, 1857, as amended by act of January 24, 1862, the constitutionality of which has been upheld by the Supreme Court.

If the Communications Commission, in its search, made discoveries relevant or irrelevant to the purposes of the investigation provided for in Senate Resolutions 165 and 184 and revealed them to the committee without being required so to do, such evidence would probably be held to be inadmissible in a suit at law upon the ground that disclosure to the committee violated the secrecy provision of the Communications Act. Or, if the Commission was not acting upon its own responsibility and not within the scope of its authority, but solely as agent of the committee, and if the subpenas under which evidence was obtained were wholly blanket in form, and in nowise related to any particular subject matter, then, material that it may have turned over to the committee could not be properly used for any purpose by any person other than the committee and by the committee only as an aid to legislation and should not be made public, all of which involves the use of discretion which the committee must be depended upon for wise exercise.

It is not every search and seizure that violates the fourth amendment. The search and seizure must be unreasonable, and what may be unreasonable under one set of circumstances may be entirely reasonable under different circumstances.

Amendments 4 and 5 to the Constitution are closely related. That which constitutes unreasonable seizure under the fourth amendment may amount to an unlawful taking and the compelling of a person to give evidence against himself, which is forbidden by the fifth amendment.

Neither Congress, nor any committee of Congress, has any more right to violate the constitutional privileges of the citizen than any other, and yet an act of an investigating committee of Congress may be entirely within the law, while the same act committed by another might be in violation of the law, the question of the reasonableness or unreasonableness, immunity against harm, and attendant circumstances having much to do with the determination of the question. While there is respectable authority for the contention that the right of Congress through committees to investigate and acquire information necessary to the enactment of legislation in the public interest is subordinate to the right of the citizen to be secure in the enjoyment of his constitutional privileges, yet a committee of Congress cannot be hampered in making inquiry by leaving to the citizen to determine for himself as to what is or is not privileged. While the question is that of the reasonableness of a search and seizure, judicial and not legislative, it is a question for the committee to

There is no unlawful search and seizure when a writ, suitably specific and properly limited in its scope, calls for production of documents, which, as against the lawful owners, the party procuring the issuance is entitled to have produced.

The contention made by the plaintiff in the suit referred to that it is not within the power of Congress to legislate with respect to or make any investigation into any matter affecting the press, that such would constitute a violation of the first amendment to the Constitution, is not sound. No one is endeavoring to secure congressional legislation abridging freedom of speech or the press; no one wants such legislation. The press, however, is not above the law and does not want to be. It asks for nothing more than that its freedom be not abridged by congressional action, and that it be protected as guaranteed by the Constitution and supported by public opinion. Freedom of speech and the press are principles of natural justice and had become permanently fixed in English jurisprudence long prior to the adoption of the Constitution.

The paramount question involved is, Have the courts the right to establish judicial control over the proceedings of Congress? By putting the question in this form I do not mean to insinuate that I think the courts want any such control. I assert that they do not.

While it was intended that the legislative should be the dominant department of government, I am not contending that it is more than coequal with the other two departments, but I do insist that it is coequal.

My examination of the question has brought me to the conclusion that it is not within the powers of the courts to interfere in any wise with the proceedings of Congress in the performance of a legislative function, and that the effort in this instance to enjoin a committee of Congress must be unavailing. If the rights of the plaintiff, or any other, have been violated, then their sole forum for redress is the Senate of the United States. It may seem unreasonable that the body called upon to protect a right is the body threatening or violating it, but such is the case, and, as in this instance, necessarily so, for the independence of the legislative body must be maintained and not subjected to judicial or other interference.

I regret that the time at my disposal does not admit of full discussion, but certainly the House will respect this requisition made upon us by the Senate. We will do it because of the respect which the House owes that body and because of our sense of duty to protect and preserve the integrity and independence of the legislative department of the Government.

Much has been said in the press and elsewhere in criticism of the Black committee. Deliberate and studied effort has seemingly been made to put a false face upon its proceedings and to create the impression that it has gone about the performance of its labors in a high-handed and lawless manner. These are not the facts of the case. It may be that in some instances innocent parties have suffered embarrassment. I think they have, and it is to be regretted, but in a widespread campaign against the trickster and wrongdoer, busy in the effort to muddy the stream of public opinion and corruptly influence legislation, this was inevitable. We must look to the general results in judging the work of the committee, and when we do this without prejudice we are obliged to concede that the committee has rendered an invaluable public service and has securely laid the foundation for legislation to combat the evils which everyone knows to exist.

But after all the best and surest protection against wrongful approach and corrupt influences is a well-informed, upstanding, and courageous Congress, which I believe we have. [Applause.]

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that there is no quorum present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. Colmer). The Chair will count. [After counting.] Evidently there is no quorum present.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House.

A call of the House was ordered.

The Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

[Roll No. 65]

Adair Boykin Cannon, Wis. Corning Cary Crosby Andrew, Mass. Brooks Cavicchia Darden Bacon Brown, Mich. Christianson Darrow Barry Buckbee Claiborne Dear Beam Buckley, N. Y. Clark, N. C. Delaney Bell Bulwinkle Cooley Dickstein Berlin Caldwell Cooper, Ohio Dies

Dietrich	Gildea	Lehlbach	Reed, N. Y.
Dingell	Gingery	Lucas	Romjue
Disney	Goodwin	McAndrews	Sabath
Ditter	Granfield	McFarlane	Sanders.La.
Dobbins	Gray, Pa.	McGrath	Schaefer
Doutrich	Greenway	McKeough	Schuetz
Dunn, Miss.	Gregory	McLaughlin	Sirovich
Dunn, Pa.	Hart	McMillan	Smith, Conn.
Eagle	Healey	McReynolds	Somers, N. Y.
Eaton	Higgins, Mass.	Mitchell, Ill.	Starnes
Ekwall	Hill, Knute	Monaghan	Steagall
Faddis	Hoeppel	Montague	Stewart
Farley	Hollister	Montet	Thomas
Fenerty	Imhoff	Moritz	Wallgren
Ferguson	Jenckes, Ind.	Nichols	Werner
Fernandez	Jenkins, Ohio	O'Brien	Wigglesworth
Fiesinger	Kee	O'Day	Wilcox
Fish	Kelly	Oliver	Wilson, La.
Flannagan	Kennedy, N. Y.	Owen	Withrow
Frey	Kerr	Perkins	Young
Fuller	Kocialkowski	Pfeifer	Zioncheck
Gasque	Larrabee	Randolph	and the same of Gavagan	Lea. Calif.	Reed, Ill.

The SPEAKER. Three hundred and six Members are present, a quorum.

On motion by Mr. Bankhead, further proceedings under the call were dispensed with.

Mr. RANSLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to myself. Mr. Speaker, the general law prohibits the payment by any congressional investigation committee of a sum exceeding $3,600 a year to any one individual. This rule, however, brings forward a resolution which, if passed, will make an exception to the so-called Black investigating committee of the Senate, which many on this side of the aisle believe should be opposed most strenuously.

The committee of investigation undoubtedly should know the rules and the law, and be governed accordingly. If anyone claims to be injured in or by the acts of the committee, they undoubtedly have recourse to the law. I believe that no good reason can be advanced for the passage of this rule or the resolution which the rule brings in order. I hope that both the rule and the resolution will be defeated.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. RANSLEY. I have but 30 minutes. I have divided my time, and if I were to take the floor for any length of time it would be unfair to those to whom I have promised time.

Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Mapps] 10 minutes.

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, the right or power of the Black committee or the wisdom or unwisdom of its activities is not involved at all in the consideration of this resolution. It is fair to say, I think, that the same attorney will be retained by that committee to represent it in the proceedings now pending in the courts whether this resolution is passed or not; and I assume that that attorney will exercise the same ability and give the case the same consideration whether this resolution is passed or not.

The only thing involved in this resolution is how much he shall be paid and whether a special exception shall be made in favor of the Black committee. Existing law, as has been pointed out, limits the amount that any investigating committee either of the House or of the Senate can pay to any one person, accountant, attorney, investigator, or any other person to $3,600 per year, or $300 per month.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MAPES. After I have made my statement I shall be glad to yield.

This resolution proposes to repeal that law as far as the Black committee is concerned and to permit it to pay an attorney to represent it in the courts in the case brought against it by William Randolph Hearst any amount fixed by the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

It is well known that other committees of the House and Senate as well as the Black committee are chafing under the restrictions of the existing law. The history of this legislation is interesting. It shows that it was passed in both Houses at the instigation and upon the initiative of the Committees on Appropriation of the respective Houses. A few years ago the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate of its own volition proposed an amendment, which was adopted without debate, putting this restriction upon the expenditure of the contingent fund of the Senate.

On the House side a similar restriction was put on by the Committee on Appropriations. There was no debate on the amendment in the Senate, but in the House the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Buchanan], chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, and the gentleman from New York [Mr. Taber], the ranking Republican member of that committee, supported the resolution. The only other person who participated in the debate at that time was the gentleman from New York [Mr. O'Connor], who questioned the wisdom of the limitation. But it was adopted and has been carried on appropriation bills for the last several years.

The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Cox] made a very interesting statement in opening the discussion on this resolution, but it seems to me he did not get to the point involved. He discussed the question of the independence of the legislative branch from the judicial branch of the Government, but as I see it that is not the question involved in the consideration of this resolution.

The gentleman from Georgia said:

The paramount question involved is, Have the courts the right to establish judicial control over the proceedings of Congress?

I say with great respect I do not think that is the question at all. The case in which the Black committee is involved has already been considered in the lower courts. The attorney to represent the committee has been retained and has appeared in the lower court for the committee, and the lower court has found in favor of the committee. For one, I have no quarrel with that finding of the lower court, and I am not going to discuss that or the merits of the case now in the courts. This resolution has nothing to do with the merits of that case, nor of the independence of Congress. It simply raises the question of how much shall the attorney for the Black committee be paid for representing the committee in the courts? This is the only question involved here.

Every lawyer will concede that the fee the Black committee can pay the attorney under existing law is not very large, but some great investigations have been carried on since this limitation was put upon expenditures from the contingent fund and upon these investigating committees. I can recall several large investigations by important committees of the House, and not so long ago there was a great investigation by the Banking and Currency Committee of the Senate conducted by the distinguished investigator, Mr. Pecora. They were conducted with this limitation in force, and the committees were successful in securing the services of lawyers of outstanding ability.

If we start making exceptions, we shall have a multitude of committees coming into this House asking for exceptions. If we are going to repeal this act so far as this one committee is concerned, then let us repeal it altogether and make it apply to all investigating committees alike. Until it is repealed outright and made to apply to all alike, I, for one, am opposed to giving special consideration to a particular committee because, perchance, it is exceptionally aggressive or exceptionally favored.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. MAPES. I yield.

Mr. RANKIN. The gentleman from Michigan realizes this is not an investigation. This is a lawsuit in which the prerogatives of the Congress are challenged. I want to ask the gentleman—

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, that is as far as I can yield. But the limitation of the Senate put on by the Senate Committee on Appropriations itself and adopted by the Senate specifically makes it apply to professional services; and it was well known when the amendment was adopted in the Senate and in the House that it was to apply to lawyers as well as to investigators, accountants, and others. It was premeditated and adopted deliberately with full knowledge of what the Congress was doing. It was adopted to correct well-known abuses which had grown up, giving large fees to lawyers employed by certain committees.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. MAPES. I yield.

Mr. CELLER. Does the gentleman think it would be appropriate to pay an attorney of distinction and merit but $300 a month to appear before the United States Supreme Court on a question as momentous as the one involved herein, namely, the rights and prerogatives of a legislative investigating committee?

Mr. MAPES. I think the limitation is pretty small but the question involved here is whether we are going to make an exception in favor of this one committee.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question right there?

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my

Mr. RANSLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. Taber].

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, the Senate of the United States, realizing the discredit into which investigating committees had gotten themselves by tremendous expenditures to lawyers, agents, and the like, started this idea of keeping payments to individual employees and lawyers down to $300 a month. The House finally, at the insistence of some of us who felt we ought to be on as good a plane as the Senate, helped to enact the limitation into law.

The present situation is that a resolution was introduced in the Senate and passed by that body on the 23d day of March, and was reported by the Judiciary Committee on the 27th day of March, 3 weeks ago, authorizing the Senate to fix any kind of fee it pleased for a lawyer conducting litigation in behalf of the Black Committee of the Senate.

I do not know whether it is so or not, and I should like to be corrected if it is not, but I understand this lawyer is a partner or a former partner of that Senator.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I have heard a great many rumors with reference to the matter. If the gentleman will accept my statement upon it, and I know the facts, the gentleman who has been employed to conduct this most important litigation for this committee is not Senator Black's former law partner.

He was associated with him a great number of years ago only temporarily, but the partnership then existing has been dissolved for more than 11 years.

Mr. TABER. He was a former partner?

Mr. BANKHEAD. He was a former partner for a few years.

Mr. TABER. Well, that is the situation.

Mr. Speaker, there is authority in here to pay this man as a retainer fee $10,000, and that is not the limit. There is absolutely no limit fixed for the appropriation of money to be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Why does the gentleman make that statement? Where does he get the authority to make that statement?

Mr. TABER. I will read to the gentleman a part of the resolution.

The total compensation for such legal services to be fixed by the Senate Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, and the payment of other expenses necessarily incurred in connection with said litigation to be approved by the said Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, $10,000, to be immediately available from the contingent fund of the Senate under this joint resolution and to remain available until June 30, 1937.

Mr. Speaker, there is absolutely no limitation in there to $10,000, and there is no language herein that may be construed as a limitation. It is simply $10,000 from the start, and there is absolutely no limit whatever.

I wonder if the House of Representatives wants to stultify itself by passing this kind of resolution. I have just as much courtesy toward the other body as has any Member of the House, but I cannot bring myself to the point where I am ready to go hog-wild in an attempt to authorize a committee in the Senate to fix any kind of fee it pleases in a matter of this kind. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. RANSLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Vermont [Mr. Plumley].

Mr. PLUMLEY. Mr. Speaker, I have such strong and impelling convictions with respect to the matters and things involved in this resolution that I find it impossible to register my protest solely by my negative vote. There are compelling reasons why I cannot and shall not vote for this resolution authorizing the employment of counsel to defend the action had and taken by the committee referred to therein. In the first place, I can see no reason why an exception should be made with respect to this particular investigation committee insofar as the amount of its expenses for legal services are involved. In the second place, in my opinion, no matter how much money might be authorized or expended, no one can successfully defend those responsible for the action of the committee either in good conscience, the forum of public opinion, or in the court of last resort.

The committee's action is not only indefensible but is reprehensible and despicable. Its action, with respect to the telegrams involved, was an unwarranted interference with and infringement and violation of personal liberty, freedom of individual action, and the inherent and inalienable right of personal security; that most sacred of all rights which we are supposed to possess, and under the Constitution as American citizens, ought to be permitted and privileged to enjoy.

Under a claim and color of right an alleged power and authority has been grossly abused and a most serious invasion of personal rights has occurred. Such abuse of power and authority should not be tolerated or permitted by the Congress of the United States and will not be by the American people.

I say to you that the more than cautious exercise of such powers by Congress and by others who would use and abuse them, and their strict interpretation by the courts, in view of the constitutional guaranties of life, liberty, and property, afford the only safeguards against the degeneration, by apparently legal methods, of a popular government into the worst of despotisms.

As Members of Congress, it seems to me, we are unfaithful to ourselves and to our obligations and to the citizens whom we represent when we sit by and placidly permit such a disregard and flagrant violation of our inherent and inalienable rights as has been perpetrated by those responsible for the action of the Black investigating committee. The day will come when such wrongs so perpetrated by Congress under a claim of authority will become so serious and will so universally invade and transgress the rights of the citizen that he will be warranted and provoked to exercise the right of revolution as his only means of redress.

I think it was Daniel Webster who in these very Halls was heard to say:

God grants liberty only to those who love it and are always ready to guard and to defend it. Human agency cannot extinguish it. Like the earth's central fire, it may be smothered for a time; the ocean may overwhelm it; mountains may press it down; but its inherent and unconquerable force will heave both the ocean and the land, and at some time or other, in some place or other, the volcano will break out and flame up to heaven.

The individual citizen is entitled to his rights and to complete protection in all his rights at all times, in all places, and at all hazards. Those responsible for such action as the committee has taken are not entitled to any other or different provision for counsel than is now afforded by law, and moreover, as I said at the outset, their action is, in the last analysis, absolutely indefensible.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, the action of the committee which we are now asked to condone, by furnishing the means for its defense, must be denounced, not permitted to go uncensured, or remain unrebuked.

Never, so far as I know or can learn, since the days of the infamous writs of assistance, has there been by a committee or Congress such an outrageous violation of the fundamental rights of American citizens. [Applause.]

Mr. RANSLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield the balance of the time on this side to the gentleman from New York [Mr. SNELL].

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, I listened with much interest, as I always do, to the statement made by our colleague, the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Cox]. Whenever he has anything to say, he says it well. But he used 20 minutes today, and I listened to him very carefully, in defending the work of the Black investigating committee over in the Senate. As a matter of fact, whether that committee is doing its work well or not or whether it is exceeding its authority or not, is not within the province of the House to decide. Personally I am not here to criticize or uphold it. I do not think that question is before the House at the present time; the only question before us is whether we will amend the law and let them pay counsel for the Black committee whatever amount they wish.

Mr. COX. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SNELL. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. COX. Of course, I appreciate any compliment that is paid me by the gentleman, but he made reference to my spending the entire time in defending the Black committee. May I ask the gentleman if he really thinks he has made a fair statement in this regard?

Mr. SNELL. As far as that is concerned, I have no criticism to make whatever.

Mr. COX. I was not concerned in defending the Black committee, but in defending the rights, privileges, and prerogatives of the Congress.

Mr. SNELL. Anything the gentleman said in regard to the privileges and prerogatives of the legislative branch of the Government I am in accord with, but it seems to me that is not the question before the House at the present time, and I have not heard that matter disputed, but the gentleman did not say anything about the real question before the House.

Mr. COX. Does the gentleman not concede that there is a fundamental question involved in this proceeding which affects the rights and prerogatives of the House?

Mr. SNELL. I think there is a fundamental principle involved, but I think the gentleman from Georgia, in presenting this rule and in stating the reasons for the consideration of the resolution, should have addressed himself to the principle contained in the resolution rather than spend his entire time in defending the prerogatives of the House and the Black committee.

Mr. Speaker, what was the reason for the passage of the present law limiting sums to be paid to attorneys? Every man in the House who has been here a reasonable length of time knows that this was done because there had grown up a custom of paying unlimited amounts to various special attorneys in connection with these investigations until Congress and the country were shocked at the amounts paid for attorneys' fees. That was the reason for the present law. Personally I was not so much in favor of limiting it to $3,600, but that was the action of the House and of the Senate. The matter originated over in the Senate, as a matter of fact. The reason this legislation was enacted was to rectify some of the mistakes that had grown out of past performances. If that was good law then, why is it not good law now? Why is it that you gentlemen are so anxious to amend this at the present time? Why are you so anxious to increase the salaries at the present time? Have you some special favorite you want to take care of? Those are questions I should like to have someone answer in the few minutes remaining on the other side.

Mr. RANKIN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SNEIL. I cannot yield because I do not want the gentleman to take up all of my time.

Mr. Speaker, if there is any reason for the passage of this legislation now pending, why are the Members on that side not absolutely fair, and why should they not come out and say they want to repeal the whole law? If it is good to have it repealed as far as the Black investigation committee is concerned, it is good to have it repealed in regard to all investigation committees of the House and Senate. As far as I am concerned, if you are going to repeal it in one case, it should be repealed in all cases.

Mr. RANKIN. Will the gentleman yield?

yield to him a little later, if I have some time remaining.

Mr. Speaker, I notice, in reading the report of the committee, the following statement is made:

It is important that the Senate committee, as representative of the legislative branch of the Government, be adequately represented by counsel and have the case properly presented to the courts.

Is it not a fact they have counsel at the present time, and is it not a fact that the same counsel who took this job at $3,600 a year, or not to exceed that amount, is the same man who will represent the Senate in advocating their position before the courts?

Mr. RANKIN. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. SNELL. Wait until I get through.

Here is another proposition: If the same man was willing to take this job a few months ago, why should we increase his salary at the present time? There are many able lawyers on that Senate committee who are amply able to present this case if they need additional counsel, and, as a matter of fact, they started this whole proceeding. They knew what they were doing at the time and they selected their counsel. I suppose they selected him because he was an able man and competent to meet any issue that may arise. I personally know nothing against him.

Mr. RANKIN. Now, Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SNELL. Not yet.

Now, as far as this resolution is concerned, it opens up the whole proposition just exactly the same as it was before we passed the original law, when you make the exception in one case you must make it the next time.

This resolution does not say, as is generally reported, to pay him $10,000; it simply makes $10,000 immediately available. That is the first retainer. They can put the salary up to any limit that the Committee to Audit and Control may pass in the Senate. There is no limit whatever to the amount they can pay if you pass this resolution today.

Mr. RANKIN and Mr. COX rose.

Mr. SNELL. I yield to the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. RANKIN. The gentleman from New York knows-

Mr. SNELL. Ask your question.

Mr. RANKIN. Does not the gentleman from New York know that instead of this being for an attorney to represent a committee of investigation it is for an attorney to represent the Senate of the United States before the Supreme Court of the United States, when there will be millions on the other side to back up the attorneys who are attacking the prerogatives of the Congress?

Mr. SNELL. If you pass this rule, and I hope you will not, will you permit an amendment of the joint resolution that no person employed at the present time shall receive this

Mr. RANKIN. Will the gentleman-

Mr. SNELL. Answer the question.

Mr. RANKIN. I will answer you with a question.

Mr. SNELL. No; I do not want a question; I want an answer.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, I yield the remainder of my time to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD].

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, I regret that I shall not have a little longer time to undertake to clarify some of the misconceptions that have been created by rumor and otherwise with reference to this proposition.

There is no legitimate reason why there should be any confusion or misunderstanding with reference to the real issue involved in this resolution which has been reported from the Judiciary Committee of the House and which we are seeking to bring up under this rule, and I want to state it very briefly because it is a simple rule, and in my deliberate opinion, Mr. Speaker, it is the most fundamental and profound issue that has been presented to this Congress since I have been in service in this House, for the reason which I shall presently state.

We have a statute limiting the expenditures to any particular individual, legal or otherwise, to $300 a month. This is the law of the land. It is a limitation put upon a general

Mr. SNELL. No; I cannot yield to the gentleman. I will appropriation bill and stands as a controlling factor in the making of these expenditures.

The Senate of the United States in its wisdom set up an investigating committee to inquire into lobbying activities in this country, and say what you please about it, although there have been some personal controversies that may have been unfortunate, that have arisen in this matter, in my opinion, the results of the investigation of the Black committee have been of profound importance to the Congress of the United States and to the country. [Applause.]

Now, they are still pursuing this investigation and in pursuance of it, certain telegrams were seized which the committee, in its wisdom, thought were necessary to a proper investigation of whether or not undue influences were being exercised upon legislation pending in the Congress of the United States, and Mr. William R. Hearst filed an injunction suit in the District courts here against the investigating committee of the Senate, and this, Mr. Speaker, is the proposition that raises the tremendous importance of the issue now presented and that issue is simply this: Whether or not a District Federal court or any other Federal court shall have the power and jurisdiction by decree, injunction or otherwise, to absolutely destroy the legislative powers of the Congress of the United States. [Applause.]

This is the issue involved here. Mr. Hearst in his bill of complaint, filed by this high-powered and, no doubt, highpaid attorney of his, because Mr. Hearst has untold millions at his command to employ the best legal counsel in the country alleges this in direct terms:

That Congress is without authority, under the Constitution of the United States, to regulate, interfere with, restrain, restrict, censor, or inquire into the conduct of the business of the press.

The very developments that have taken place in this litigation show that this Congress ought to have continued in it the power to inquire into the activities of the press, for a few days ago the man who sits in front of me, John Mc-Swain, of South Carolina, received such a demonstration as is rarely, if ever, heard here in this House, because this same power of the press, by insidious personal instructions, sought to degrade and intimidate him as a Member of the Congress of the United States. [Applause.]

I want to say to you there is no intention upon the part of this legislative committee to use any private telegrams or to abuse its power. In the last analysis, the Senate committee is a part of the Senate, and the House investigating committee is a part of the House, under the Constitution; and when you raise the issue that Congress is without power to pursue legislation and to investigate all facts legitimately relating to legislation, and give to a Federal district court, or a Federal supreme court, if you please, the right to say that this constitutional power of the Congress of the United States shall not be exercised in its fullest freedom, then you have remaining in this country, not three branches of our Government but only two-the executive and the judicial. [Applause.]

Now, what is the issue here? The real issue is whether or not this man shall be paid adequate compensation to properly defend this great issue before the Supreme Court of the United States, because Mr. Hearst's counsel, in open court, after this decree was rendered, gave notice that they would appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States.

There is the issue, Mr. Speaker, directly presented, of whether or not the judiciary of this country shall usurp the powers of the Congress. I say, as one who respects the dignity and the constitutional prerogatives of this Government of ours, that a lawyer entrusted with this responsibility should be adequately compensated for the purpose of presenting these issues, and the Senate of the United States, a coordinate branch of our Congress, unanimously, Democrats and Republicans, passed this resolution making this exception to existing law.

I hope you will adopt this rule and vote for the bill. [Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from New York to offer a resolution.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment to

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 1, line 14, insert "It shall be in order, any rule of the House to the contrary notwithstanding, for the chairman of the Committee on Rules to offer an amendment to the Senate joint resolution granting similar authority to the House of Representa-

Mr. SNELL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'CONNOR. I yield.

Mr. SNELL. Does that amendment come from the Committee on Rules?

Mr. O'CONNOR. Only after consideration in the Committee on Rules where it was discussed, and it was thought that if a question arose as to the authority of a committee of Congress, the House would necessarily be interested in protecting its rights in any determination of the question.

I have taken up the matter with the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. Bankhead] and one member of the Committee on the Judiciary, and they agree with my plan to offer an amendment to that effect.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. O'CONNOR. Let me continue. The matter has been thoroughly discussed. When the Senate joint resolution came before the Rules Committee it was apparent that a similar committee of the House was engaged in the same sort of an investigation, and although it might not be necessary, it was thought that it might be well to be prepared to preserve the prerogatives of the House of Representatives, irrespective of any attitude of representatives of the other body.

If the rule is adopted making the bill in order, I propose to offer an amendment to that effect, that the House may protect its own prerogatives independently, if necessary, from another body.

Mr. SNELL. How can the gentleman present an amendment now if it is not a committee amendment?

Mr. O'CONNOR. I am presenting it on my own responsibility, the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Cox], in charge of the rule, having yielded to me for that purpose.

Mr. SNELL. Then the rule is open for amendment.

Mr. O'CONNOR. The gentleman from Georgia yielded to me for this purpose, to offer an amendment.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question. The previous question was ordered.

Mr. HARLAN. A parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker. The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. HARLAN. Is the previous question ordered on the amendment or on the resolution?

The SPEAKER. On both.

Mr. SNELL. How can the previous question apply to both?

The SPEAKER. That was the motion of the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. MICHENER. A parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker. The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MICHENER. May a Member of the House, a member of the Rules Committee, gain the floor to offer an amendment changing the rule that is privileged without the sanction of the Rules Committee? My thought is that the rule is here because it is privileged, and it can only be here because it has come from the Rules Committee.

The SPEAKER. And it cannot be amended unless the House so votes, but it is certainly within the privilege of any Member, whether he be a member of the Committee on Rules or not, in the absence of the previous question, to move to amend the resolution after it once gets before the House.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a point of order. The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. ZIONCHECK. How does it happen that the Chair recognizes the gentleman from New York when the gentleman from New York does not even address the Chair?

The SPEAKER. The Chair understood that he had addressed the Chair, or he certainly would not have recognized

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, I call for the regular order. The SPEAKER. The Chair does not want to be captious about this matter, but the rules provide that a Member who wants to interrupt a Member having the floor shall first address the Chair; and to preserve the dignity of the House. as well as to enforce the rules of the House, the Chair thinks Members should cooperate with the Chair in that respect.

Mr. HARLAN. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. HARLAN. There is considerable confusion among Members here as to whether we are voting for the rule or the amendment.

The SPEAKER. The vote will first come upon the amendment.

Mr. HARLAN. And there will be a separate vote upon the rule?

The SPEAKER. A separate vote upon the adoption of the rule.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, I have always understood that when a rule is presented on the floor and the Member in charge of the rule opens it up for amendment, that it is then open to amendment on the part of anyone who desires to offer an amendment.

The SPEAKER. That is true, until the previous question has been ordered, and the previous question has here been ordered.

Mr. SNELL. It has now, but when I originally asked the question it had not been ordered. I wanted to offer an amendment.

The SPEAKER. The Chair would have been glad to recognize the gentleman at that time, but the previous question which has been ordered prevents that now.

Mr. SNELL. I know that when a rule is opened up for amendment anybody else can offer an amendment.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman's amendment would have been in order if the previous question had not been ordered. provided the amendment were germane.

The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The question now recurs upon the resolution as amended.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. SNELL) there were—ayes 91, noes 93.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, I demand the yeas and

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Doxey

Drewry

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 147, nays 138, answered "present" 2, not voting 142, as follows:

> [Roll No. 66] YEAS-147

> > Lambeth

Amlie Ayers Bankhead Barden Biermann Binderup Bland Boileau Brown, Ga. Buck Buckler, Minn. Burch Burdick Caldwell Cannon, Mo. Carmichael Carpenter Cartwright Castellow Celler Chapman Colden Colmer Cooper, Tenn. Costello Cox Creal Cross, Tex. Crosser, Ohio Crowe Cummings Daly Dobbins

Doughton

Driscoll Driver Duffy, N. Y. Duncan Eckert Edmiston Eicher Ellenbogen Fletcher Frey Fulmer Gassaway Gehrmann Gillette Goldsborough Gray, Ind. Green Greenwood Haines Hancock, N. C. Hennings Hildebrandt Hill, Ala. Hill, Samuel B. Hobbs Houston Huddleston Hull Johnson, Okla. Johnson, Tex. Jones Keller Kloeb

Kvale

Lanham Lee, Okla. Lewis, Colo. Lewis, Md. Ludlow Lundeen McGehee McSwain Mahon Mansfield Marcantonio Martin, Colo. Mason Maverick Miller Mitchell, Tenn. Moran Murdock Nelson O'Connor O'Malley O'Neal Parks Patman Patterson Pearson Pierce Ramsay Ramspeck Rankin Rayburn Reilly Richards

Ryan Sandlin Sauthoff Schneider, Wis. Schulte Scott Sears Secrest Shannon Sisson Sisson Smith, Va Smith Wash. South Spence Stefan Sumners, Tex. Sweeney Thom Thomason Turner Umstead Utterback Vinson, Ga. Vinson, Ky. Wearin Whelchel White Whittington Williams Wood Woodrum

Rogers, N. H. Rogers, Okla.

NAYS-138 Duffey, Ohio Ekwall Andresen Andrews, N. Y. Arends Lord McClellan Engel McGroarty Ashbrook Englebright McLean Bacharach Evans Fitzpatrick McLeod Barry Beiter Focht Main Ford, Miss. Gambrill Mapes Marshall Blackney Blanton Bloom Boehne Gearhart Gifford Martin, Mass. May Mead Gilchrist Bolton Boylan Goodwin Merritt, Conn. Merritt, N. Y. Greever Griswold Brewster Buchanan Michener Burnham Guyer Millard Gwynne Halleck Hancock, N. Y. Carlson Mott O'Connell O'Leary Palmisano Casey Church Hartley Clark, Idaho Parsons Patton Hess Higgins, Conn. Coffee Cole, Md. Cole, N. Y. Cooper, Ohio Crawford Hoffman Holmes Peterson, Ga. Pettengill Hook Hope Johnson, W. Va. Crowther Culkin Plumley Polk Powers Rabaut Kahn Kennedy, Md. Cullen Curley Kenney Ransley Deen Dempsey Dirksen Dockweiler Kinzer Knutson Reece Rich Kramer Lamneck Richardson Dondero Lesinski Risk

Robertson Robinson, Utah Robsion, Ky. Rogers, Mass. Russell Scrugham Seger Shanley Short Smith, W. Va. Stubbs Sullivan Sutphin Taber Taylor, S. C. Taylor, Tenn. Terry Thompson Thurston Tinkham Tobey Tolan Tonry Treadway Turpin Walter Warren Wilson, Pa. Wolcott Wolfenden Wolverton

Woodruff

ANSWERED "PRESENT"-Massingale Cochran

NOT VOTING-141

Jenckes, Ind. Adair Allen Disney Pfeifer Distier Doutrich Quinn Randolph Jenkins, Ohio Andrew, Mass. Kee Dunn, Miss. Dunn, Pa. Reed, Ill. Reed, N. Y. Kelly Kennedy, N. Y. Beam Bell Berlin Eagle Eaton Kerr Kleberg Kocialkowski Romjue Sabath Sadowski Boykin Faddis Kopplemann Lambertson Farley Brennan Fenerty Brooks Brooks Brown, Mich. Buckbee Buckley, N. Y. Bulwinkle Cannon, Wis. Larrabee Lea, Calif. Lehlbach Ferguson Fernandez Schaefer Schuetz Sirovich Fiesinger Lemke Lucas Fish Flannagan Ford, Calif. Fuller McAndrews Cary Cavicchia Starnes Steagall Gasque Gavagan Gildea Chandler McGrath Christianson McKeough McLaughlin Stewart Taylor, Colo. Citron Claiborne Clark, N. C. Gingery Granfield McMillan Thomas McReynolds Wadsworth Wallgren Maloney Mitchell, III. Monaghan Collins Connery Gray, Pa. Greenway Weaver Welch Cooley Corning Gregory Hamlin Harlan Montague Montet Werner Cravens Crosby Darden Hart Moritz Wilcox Wilson, La. Harter Nichols Darrow Delaney Healey Norton Higgins, Mass. Hill, Knute O'Brien O'Day Oliver Withrow Young Zioncheck DeRouen Dickstein Hoeppel Hollister Dietrich Imhoff Perkins Dingell Peterson, Fla.

Sanders, La. Sanders, Tex. Smith, Conn. Snyder, Pa. Somers, N. Y. West Wigglesworth

So the resolution was agreed to. The Clerk announced the following pairs:

On this vote:

Mr. McFarlane (for) with Mr. Corning (against).
Mr. Massingale (for) with Mr. Wadsworth (against).
Mr. Cochran (for) with Mr. Granfield (against).
Mr. Gildea (for) with Mr. Darrow (against).
Mr. Zioncheck (for) with Mr. Allen (against).
Mr. Withrow (for) with Mr. Ditter (against).
Mr. Snyder of Pennsylvania (for) with Mr. Hollister (against).
Mr. O'Day (for) with Mr. Jenkins of Ohio (against).
Mr. Connery (for) with Mr. McAndrews (against).
Mr. Knute Hill (for) with Mr. O'Brien (against).
Mr. Starnes (for) with Mr. Lehlbach (against).
Mr. Feisinger (for) with Mr. Darden (against).
Mr. Eagle (for) with Mr. Bacon (against).
Mr. Dunn of Mississippi (for) with Mr. Kleberg (against).

General pairs:

Mr. Beam with Mr. Christianson.
Mr. Cooley with Mr. Eaton.
Mr. Dingell with Mr. Lemke,
Mr. Flannagan with Mr. Reed of Illinois.
Mr. Kelly with Mr. Stewart.
Mr. McReynolds with Mr. Wigglesworth.

Mr. Lea of California with Mr. Reed of New York.
Mr. Sabath with Mr. Andrew of Massachusetts.
Mr. Fuller with Mr. Cavicchia.
Mr. Gregory with Mr. Fish.
Mr. Kerr with Mr. Lambertson.
Mr. McMillan with Mr. Buckbee.
Mr. Weaver with Mr. Thomas.
Mr. Taylor of Colorado with Mr. Collins.
Mr. Steagall with Mr. Doutrich.
Mr. Wilcox with Mr. Ferkins.
Mr. Taylor of Colorado with Mr. Collins.
Mr. Steagall with Mr. Perkins.
Mr. Bulwinkle with Mr. Welch.
Mr. Wilcox with Mr. Faddis.
Mr. Gavagan with Mr. Mitchell of Illinols.
Mr. Ford of California with Mr. Adair.
Mr. Owen with Mr. Claiborne.
Mr. Gavagan with Mr. McLaughlin.
Mr. Doen with Mr. Pfeifer.
Mr. Schuetz with Mr. McLaughlin.
Mr. Delaney with Mr. Farley.
Mr. McGeough with Mr. Hamlin.
Mr. Disney with Mr. Sadowski.
Mr. Peterson of Florida with Mr. Berlin.
Mr. Gingery with Mr. Sadowski.
Mr. Quinn with Mr. DeRouen.
Mr. Kennedy of New York with Mr. McGrath.
Mr. Werner with Mr. Lucas.
Mr. Fernandez with Mr. Sirovich.
Mr. Brennan with Mr. Sanders of Louisiana.
Mr. Cravens with Mr. Randolph.
Mr. Brooks with Mr. Sanders of Louisiana.
Mr. Cary with Mr. Randolph.
Mr. Brooks with Mr. Schaefer.
Mr. Buckley of New York with Mr. Higgins of Massachusetts.
Mr. Charler with Mr. Koclalkowski.
Mr. Smith of Connecticut with Mr. Higgins of Massachusetts.
Mr. Charler with Mr. Koclalkowski.
Mr. Speaker of Louisiana with Mr. Citron.
Mr. Dissevith Mr. Koclalkowski.
Mr. Speaker of Louisiana with Mr. Higgins of Massachusetts.
Mr. Charler with Mr. Kochaefer.
Mr. Buckley of New York with Mr. Higgins of Massachusetts.
Mr. Charler with Mr. Kochaefer.
Mr. Buckley of Indiana with Mr. Dietrich.
Mr. Ferguson with Mr. Montet.
Mr. Mortow with Mr. Montet.
Mr. Mortow with Mr. Montet.
Mr. Mortow with Mr. Nichols.
Mr. Acord With Mr. Mortet.
Mr. Mortow with Mr. Nichols.
Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask permission to withdraw my vote of "aye" and answer "present", as I am paire Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask permission to withdraw my vote of "aye" and answer "present", as I am paired with the gentleman from Massachusetts, Mr. GRANFIELD.

Mr. MASSINGALE. Mr. Speaker, I am paired with the gentleman from New York, Mr. Wadsworth. I was for the bill and voted for it. I notice the gentleman from New York. Mr. Wadsworth, did not vote. I therefore ask to withdraw my vote and answer "present."

Mr. McREYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, it was impossible for me to get here in time to vote, and therefore I cannot qualify.

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I just came from a conference committee and did not arrive in time to answer to my name. I therefore cannot qualify.

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I was called to the telephone and did not hear my name called.

The SPEAKER. The gentlewoman from New Jersey does not qualify.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded. A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the Senate joint resolution (S. J. Res. 234) authorizing the Senate Special Committee on Investigation of Lobbying Activities to employ counsel. in connection with certain legal proceedings, and for other purposes.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of Senate Joint Resolution 234, with Mr. MERRITT of New York in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate joint resolution.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the first reading of the Senate joint resolution be dispensed with.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, it is so ordered. There was no objection.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 10 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, I realize that there is great concern on the part of some gentlemen with reference to this resolution, but, according to my idea and according to the way I look at the matter, it arises largely because of a misunderstanding of the import of the resolution.

If I may have the attention of the membership, I would like in these few minutes to submit some reasons which, in my opinion, justify the adoption of the resolution.

The resolution in its present form is a special resolution and applicable only to the operation of the Senate committee in the employment of counsel under only one Senate resolution, namely, no. 165. Under the rules the resolution is, of course, subject to amendment, and an amendment will be offered authorizing the House to employ counsel to protect its committees if and when an occasion might arise.

There is this feeling among the membership of the House: First, that there may be excessive fees allowed by the Senate Committee to Audit and Control, if this resolution is adopted. I do not know whether that will be done or not. The fee that may be allowed to the counsel employed for that committee is, under this resolution, subject to being fixed by the Committee of the Senate to Audit and Control, subject, of course, to the appropriation of last year. We have nothing to do with that. Nobody can honestly say what the fee will be unless the House by amendment limits the fee, and I shall at the proper time offer such an amendment. As it now stands, the fee to be paid to the attorney would be fixed by that committee of the Senate.

For my part, I am willing to leave the matter entirely to the Senate, subject to reasonable limitations, to spend the appropriation that is made for its contingent expenses.

There is another matter that has caused some concern to the Members of the House, and that is, some do not approve of the methods adopted by the so-called Black Lobby Investigating Committee. But the question is not whether we approve of the activities of that committee or whether we disapprove of its activities. It is not for me to say whether I condone or whether I disapprove of the activities of that committee. The question that has arisen and the question that is confronting us is, What is the limitation, what is the constitutional limitation of a committee of Congress engaged in investigations for legislative purposes? That is the question which has been raised by the litigation now pending. Some gentlemen have arguedone gentleman from Connecticut, I believe it was, argued that he stood first and foremost for the liberty of the individual citizen. No man wants to see the liberty of an individual infringed. No Member of this House wants to do anything to curtail the liberties of the American people. But we are facing in this litigation these questions—and I say very frankly to you that in my opinion they are the most momentous questions that have confronted Congress in many decades-that is. What is the limitation, what is the constitutional limitation, of a committee of Congress, and when does that limitation come in conflict with the rights of a citizen as guaranteed by the first and fourth amendments to our Constitution? Those are the questions that are involved in this litigation.

The committee, I presume, could obtain counsel at $300 a month to represent it, but the committee does not think it can obtain competent counsel to represent it and properly present these issues to the courts of this country for the sum of $300 per month.

Mr. BANKHEAD and Mr. SNELL rose.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. MILLER. I yield first to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. Bankhead].

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Chairman, one misapprehension about this matter is the impression some gentlemen seem to be under that the attorney employed has been working for the Black committee. He was specially employed for the purpose of defending the committee in this litigation.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. MILLER. I yield.

Mr. SNELL. If he were specially employed for this investigation, he knew at the time he could get only $3,600 a year. Is not this correct?

Mr. MILLER. Under the law that is correct.

Mr. SNELL. If the gentleman took the job with that knowledge, can the gentleman advance any reason why we should increase it at the present time?

Mr. MILLER. I may say in reply to the gentleman from New York that the provision of the present law with regard to expenditures from the contigent fund of the Senate for these purposes reads:

Provided, That no part of this appropriation shall be expended for services, personally, professional, or otherwise, in excess of the rate of $3,600 per year.

The immediately preceding provision deals with employees of investigating committees of the Senate.

I do not know whether the gentleman who has represented the committee in the lower court in the District of Columbia was employed before this upon a monthly basis of $300 to conduct the investigation or whether he was employed to represent the committee in the trial court.

I say to the gentleman from New York, very frankly, that I have serious doubts of any committee of Congress obtaining competent counsel in a suit of this moment, in a suit involving such a great question, at $300 per month. This is my own idea about the matter.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. MILLER. I yield.

Mr. SNELL. I am not going to argue the question with the gentleman, because I was not one of those who was very anxious for the original law, but the situation which confronts us is that this committee has employed a man and he is working for this salary.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman from Arkansas will yield—

Mr. MILLER. I yield.

Mr. BANKHEAD. The gentleman from New York is laboring under a misrepresentation; he was employed to represent the committee in this litigation.

Mr. SNELL. In the trial of this particular litigation?

Mr. MILLER. Yes; that is all; and unless this resolution goes through, the committee will be bound by the limitation. I imagine he then would abandon the case.

Mr. SNELL. Did not the chairman of the committee know the provisions of the law? Does not the gentleman suppose the chairman of the committee told this attorney of the limitation?

Mr. MILLER. Be that as it may, Mr. Chairman, the situation is that a branch of this Congress, the Senate, has adopted this resolution asking authority to expend its own contingent fund. For what purpose? For the purpose of obtaining a decision upon a constitutional question that not only affects the power of Congress but also vitally affects the liberty of American citizens. [Applause.] That is what it does. Do not we, as a matter of fact, owe the Senate the comity of giving it authority to use its own judgment in the employment of counsel, especially when they are undertaking to settle a question of such moment as that involved here? [Applause.] Individual citizens, in the exercise of their constitutional rights, must be protected against unlawful search of their files, papers, and documents. On the other hand, Congress, acting through its committees, must know what its limitations are when acting in good faith and for legislative purposes. If citizens, under the claim of constitutional immunity, can wantonly withhold from Congress information that is essential for the Congress to have in order that it may legislate for the benefit of all the people and protect them from organized wealth, greed, and avarice, then the Constitution has become an instrument of oppression in the hands of the rich and powerful. I believe that the Constitution is still a charter of liberty for us all and especially the average citizen, and for those reasons I want the questions involved in this litigation properly presented to the Supreme Court.

gentlewoman from California [Mrs. Kahn].

Mrs. KAHN. In this 1 minute of time, Mr. Chairman, I wish to ask the gentleman from Arkansas if he knows how much they paid Mr. Pecora, who ranks as one of the greatest investigators in the country?

Mr. MILLER. Answering the gentlewoman from California, he was paid $300 per month. His service was that of an investigator and not of an attorney presenting a case to the court.

Mrs. KAHN. He certainly ranks high as an attorney and as certainly ranks high as an investigator; yet he worked for $300 a month.

Mr. MILLER. I understand he is a very able lawyer; but the Congress ought to be able to match dollars with such men as Mr. Hearst, and this is involved in this question.

Mrs. KAHN. I do not think the question involved is one of personalities.

Mr. MILLER. I do not either.

Mrs. KAHN. It is a question of employing an attorney and what his compensation should be. It will help us in deciding this to know what other lawyers, whose reputation as attorneys and investigators is as great or greater than the reputation of the gentleman in question, were willing to serve for in other cases.

Mr. HANCOCK of New York. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 1 minute to ask the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. MILLER] a question.

Does the gentleman think it is good policy to give this Senate investigating committee a blank check to fill in with any sum it may see fit without any limitation whatever?

Mr. MILLER. I think that any great committee, either of the House or of the Senate, can be trusted to preserve the funds that are appropriated for the special use of that committee.

Mr. HANCOCK of New York. We have had some rather bad experiences in giving blank checks to various executive departments. Personally I do not think we should trust any committee with a blank check, with power to fill in the amount without any limitation, and I do not think the gentleman does, either.

Mr. MILLER. I do not want to do that; but I am not afraid to trust any committee that may be set up by either body.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. HANCOCK of New York. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Blanton].

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, I am one of those who deeply appreciate the work which the Black committee has been doing for the people of the United States in breaking the power of unlawful monopolies.

But I helped to pass a law with my vote which limits the pay of such attorneys to $3,600 a year, both in the House and in the Senate. If this were just a proposition of one exception to the rule, I would consider it favorably. I would go along with my committee and follow the judgment of our majority leader. But this is not merely a question of one exception to the rule and to the law. This is not merely the exception of paying a good attorney in one case what probably he may earn. If you read this resolution, which was read here by the distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER], you will see that it is wide open and as broad as is the contingent fund of the United States Senate, and it might mean a fee of $50,000.

And, to make it worse, the distinguished gentleman from New York, the chairman of the Rules Committee, has caused to be passed an amendment to the rule which will make in order an amendment which he intends to offer, which unwise amendment might pass. His amendment will repeal the law in effect with respect to $3,600, both as to the House and Senate. It will do away with the law which this House in its calm judgment and in a sedate manner passed, and it should have been passed, because when you adopt the O'Connor amendment and when you adopt the resolution you leave it wide open in the Senate and wide open in the House,

Mr. HOLLISTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the | Mark my word, there will be exceptions that will arise. There will be some great big astonishing fees paid to lawyers that you will not approve, all because you have opened the

> Mr. Chairman, I am not going to vote for any more laws that are against my judgment. I am responsible for my vote here to the people who sent me to represent them. The time has come when I am going to quit voting for things that do not appeal to me, and this resolution does not appeal to me. I hate to go against my chairman and my majority leader. I hate to go against those who brought this bill in here for consideration. I hate to be placed in an apparent attitude of preventing the Black committee from paying as much as it deems necessary to pay to a lawyer to fight a proposition against someone that probably ought to have all the instrumentalities of the courts arraigned against his proposal. This is an unwise change. This is a wise law and an unwise effort to repeal it.

> What are we going to do? Just because we are friends of Senator Black, just because we are friends of our good leader the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD], and just because we are friends of the chairman of the Committee on Rules, are we going to vote for something that leaves this matter wide open? Are we going to vote for something that does away with the good judgment and wise action of the House when they put a proper limitation on this amount? I am not going to do it. [Applause.]

> Let me show you something about the vote of this House on the rule. Usually Members do not vote against a rule unless they have some reason for doing so. Did you know this rule passed by only about 8 votes? Is that not astonishing? It shows that deep down in the hearts of the membership of the House they do not believe in opening this thing up and leaving it wide open.

> I have voted for many rules when I did not expect to vote for the resolution that followed and you have done it also. It may be the case that there are Members here who did not see fit to vote against the rule who expect to vote against the resolution. On a close question like that it shows that in the hearts and judgment of the membership there are a great many Members here who do not believe in this proposition and it therefore ought to be defeated.

Mr. WARREN. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. BLANTON. I yield to one of the most valuable Members of this House.

Mr. WARREN. I think the gentleman should emphasize the reason for the passage of the present law. It was passed. as I recall, 3 years ago, and not over 10 or 15 Members of the House voted against it. It was passed because the House was outraged over some of the shocking fees paid by investigating committees to attorneys and employees. [Applause.]

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, I wish all the people of the United States knew what good work the distinguished chairman of our Committee on Accounts [Mr. WARREN] has done since becoming chairman of that committee. He has saved a great amount of money from being wasted. He has saved millions of dollars. There never has been a wiser statement made on this floor than the one which the gentleman has just made. We passed that law because we felt outraged at the great sums of money that had been spent. A newspaper intimated this afternoon that probably another body is going to bring in a verdict of not guilty against a judge who has allowed a great big fee of $75,000.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that the gentleman has no right to attack the Senate of the United States on the floor of the House.

Mr. BLANTON. I am not attacking the Senate.

Mr. RANKIN. The gentleman is attacking the Senate of the United States, and I make the point of order he is out

Mr. BLANTON. I know the rules of the House.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON] will proceed in order.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, it has been stated here that we can depend on the Senate and its committees not so far as the judgment of the committees may be concerned. I to pay enormous fees. If it is even possible that a body upholds a $75,000 fee as a reasonable fee, with part of it going back to the judge who allowed the fee, I do not know whether we could depend absolutely upon the good judgment and the wise provisions of that body in arranging

Now, I am going to vote my honest-to-God judgment in this matter. I am going to vote against this proposition, in spite of the fact I am a friend of every man connected with it, in spite of the fact I am a good friend of Senator Black, in spite of the fact I take off my hat to him and his committee for their splendid work. I am going to vote against it because I am not going to vote to repeal the law we passed fixing $3,600 as the maximum fee either House should pay attorneys.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. CELLER.]

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Chairman, I fear the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Blanton] has given a somewhat erroneous impression. This bill does not take away one iota from the bill we passed several years ago limiting counsel fees to $300 per month. All that it does is to make an exception of this case, and why should we make the exception? We must make it because this is a very momentous question which the Supreme Court will have to pass upon. It is a question that involves the integrity and powers of this House as well as of the other Chamber.

The question to be determined is just this: What are the rights of the investigating committees in either Chamber? I would have wished that the question had not come up. I believe the distinguished chairman of the investigating committee of the Senate, with his colleagues, has done some effective work; but most assuredly some of the actions of these Senators deserve severe rebuke. They are not blameless. The committee's chairman, a worthy, energetic, and sincere gentleman, is guilty, nevertheless, of some grievous wrongs, and had he not conducted himself in the way that he did, subjecting himself to very serious criticism, and justifiable criticism, throughout the length and breadth of the land, this question would have never arisen and we would have been better off for it; but the question having arisen, let us not be penny-wise and pound-foolish. This question will necessitate the employment of the best legal talent in the United States.

Forgive me for saying it, and I am not a crystal gazer, but I believe the question will be determined not in our favor but against us, but nevertheless, in common parlance, we should have a run for our money. We must get the best lawyer in the land to defend our rights, whatever those rights and privileges may be.

I do not know anything about the talent or the ability of the gentleman who may have been the former partner of the distinguished Senator from Alabama. I hope he will rise to necessities of the case and be able to meet squarely and adequately and successfully the momentous issues raised by the very able attorneys on the other side; but I repeat, let us not be penny-wise and pound-foolish and limit counsel fees to the pecunious sum of $300 a month. That amount is ridiculous. I may say to the distinguished gentlewoman from California that it was shockingly indecent, if I may use that term, to pay that ridiculous fee to a distinguished attorney like Ferdinand Pecora, who is now a justice of our Supreme Court of New York. He was worth $100,000 of our money, and we should not be so ridiculously economical when it comes to hiring an attorney in a case as important as this one shall be. This bill calls for a legal fee of $10,000. Let us agree to it.

Mr. HANCOCK of New York. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CELLER. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. HANCOCK of New York. I agree with the gentleman that the attorney employed in this case must prepare a brief and submit an argument, and it must be well done, because the question involved is a very important one; but does the gentleman think that any great amount of work is involved? Can the gentleman give us some estimate of his idea of what I a proper fee would be for preparing such a brief and delivering such an argument?

Mr. CELLER. That is a rather difficult question to answer, and I would be willing to leave it to the distinguished and responsible members of the Senate committee to pay upward of $50,000 to defend this case and defend our rights. Surely, fees are difficult to gage or fix. There is no definite yardstick.

Mr. HANCOCK of New York. The gentleman has the usual ideas of a New York lawyer. We country lawyers think $10,000 is a rather substantial retainer.

Mr. CELLER. No two men could agree as to a proper fee. What is one man's meat is another man's poison.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman

Mr. CELLER. I yield to the gentleman from Alabama.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Some question has been raised about the right of this Senate committee to pay more than $10,000 for this employment. I may say it would be perfectly agreeable to the friends of the bill—and I would suggest that such an amendment be offered—to absolutely limit the maximum amount that may be paid for this purpose to $10,000, as named in the resolution. This is all that was ever intended to

Mr. CELLER. I thank the gentleman. I may say to the Members of the House with reference to what has been done by the chairman of this investigating committee that he has in his zeal to do good committed several indiscretions. He has impinged upon the constitutional rights of citizens. He has interfered with the right of petition and invaded freedom of press. His committee has raised a question which need not have been raised. But the question is now before the country. We cannot shy away from it. We must meet the issue squarely. We must pay for the privilege.

This investigating committee of the other Chamber made intemperate use of the blanket subpena of personal telegrams and demands for personal papers at wholesale, covering 6 months of time, without regard to their sufficiency, competency, or relevancy to the inquiry. Let us not forget the infamous writs of assistance of prerevolutionary days. Wholesale use of the subpena often can be made an instrument of oppression.

It was to cure such arbitrary power that the fourth amendment was adopted protecting the citizen against unwarranted searches and seizures.

It is not the breaking of doors and rummaging of drawers that constitute the essence of offense, but it is the invasion of the citizens, rights of personal security, personal liberty, and private property that is involved in the wholesale seizure of these telegrams.

I care not whether a well-known Chicago lawyer is implicated. It matters not whether a newspaper owner is implicated. I deplore the committee's action, regardless of personalities.

That committee made public some of the telegrams that had nothing, for example, to do with its inquiry. It had no right to do that. Seizure of 5,000,000 telegrams-nearly all private—has created intense feeling. We cannot disregard such action, such resultant feeling. I fervently hope that this Senate committee will not repeat such actions. I am sure it will not.

It has depended on the Judiciary Committee of the House to point out these wrongs and remind those on the other side of the Chamber that we have a fourth amendment and a first amendment to the Constitution guaranteeing privacy in one's papers and documents, and guaranteeing the right of petition.

Mr. TABER. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. CELLER. I yield.

Mr. TABER. Does the gentleman know whether it is true or not that the gentleman in charge of this particular legislation came to Washington to work for a department within the last 2 months at a compensation of $5,000 a year?

Mr. CELLER. Well, that is beside the point. I do not care whether he has done that or not. I would give to the committee on the other side of the House the right to employ adequate counsel for $10,000 a year.

While I am on that subject I want to remind the House of what the Supreme Court said about the fourth amendment, and it could be well applied to this wholesale seizure of papers.

The Supreme Court said, speaking of the fourth amend-

Its principles reach further than the concrete form of any case before the Court. They apply to all invasions on the part of the Government of the sanctity of a man's home and privacies of life.

I emphasize "all invasions." I cannot see any real difference between the Supreme Court standing between a citizen and the President of the United States and the right to have the Supreme Court to stand between the right of the citizen and the legislative branch of the Government. It is my opinion that the Supreme Court must guard not only against excesses of the executive branch but protect against excesses of the legislative branch as well.

As far as the Constitution is concerned, the citizens' rights must be protected and preserved not only as against the administrative officials but as against Members of Congress. Espionage, spying à la Mussolini or George III, must be guarded against no matter what its source.

Commandeering private papers by the ton cannot be excused by the assertion that private wires are no longer private if they refer to public matters.

It is no excuse to say that the Senate may need them for future use. It cannot need 5,000,000 telegrams.

Has the Supreme Court power to review the actions of the Senate committee? I repeat, it has. Thank God for the wisdom of the fathers. The Constitution said it has.

Article III of the Constitution says, "The judicial power shall extend to all cases in law and equity arising under the Constitution." Thus, a court of equity has power to restrain unconstitutional acts of an executive officer. Why not acts of a legislative officer. Otherwise a House or Senate committee would become court and jury, passing upon its own acts. They would always be right. That is how dictators are born. They are always right. [Applause.]

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Chairman, on behalf of the gentleman from New York [Mr. Hancock], I yield myself 5 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, This is an important question. It is especially important because this Congress, after considerate and deliberate action but a few months ago, determined upon a policy. It determined upon that policy because of the abuses of committees in matters of this kind. Very important investigations have been conducted since that policy was determined upon, but never before did the occasion arise when we were asked to make an exception in behalf of any particular lawyer. We are told that we should have able counsel, and that this committee should have able counsel. I agree with that statement, but it seems to me that it might have been better, in view of all that has transpired, had able counsel been employed earlier in the committee proceedings. If that course had been pursued, possibly there would be no proceedings in the courts at this time. I think I am in harmony with a large majority in this body when I emphatically disapprove of the attitude of the Black committee in its unwarranted meddling with private telegrams sent to and from Members of Congress. To inspect telegrams dealing with a certain subject is one thing, but for the committee to wrap around itself the cloak of authority and proceed to take over en masse all telegrams sent by and sent to Members of Congress from all sources during a given period is not only unreasonable and unfair but is tyranny. It seems to me that no liberty-loving individual will approve of that type of investigation, whether it be by a committee of the Senate or a committee of the House. Nevertheless, that is not the question before the Congress at this time.

While the committee may have transgressed all rules of propriety in this particular, and while its activities have been halted by the courts, and while it now wants counsel to defend its action, yet it seems to me that it is entitled to no other or different consideration than like committees doing like inquisitorial work. We should either repeal the provision of the law limiting the amount which can be paid for committee counsel, or we should accept the law as it is. There is no legitimate excuse for making an exception in this particular case.

I do not know whether this lawyer has been employed in the departments for $5,000 a year or not. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. Bankhead] would know that, and what he says will be the truth about the matter. I am pleased to yield to him for a statement in this regard.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Chairman, I think the statement made by the gentleman from New York [Mr. Taber] to that effect is entirely gratuitous and without any foundation in fact, because Senator Black informed me that Mr. Harris was practicing law in Birmingham, Ala., when he was engaged to take care of this particular litigation only a few weeks ago.

Mr. MICHENER. I am glad to hear that, and I know it is so or the gentleman would not say so.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. MICHENER. I do not yield to the gentleman from Mississippi.

The gentleman from Texas [Mr. Blanton], in his speech today, tells us—and I am sure we are all glad to hear it—that, commencing today, he is going to vote his judgment on these matters; that he is not going to be controlled by the leadership or by anyone else in the future, and that from now on he is going to use his judgment and he is not going to stand for anything of this kind. That is a splendid resolution and I am sure that we all look forward to seeing the gentleman from Texas live up to the resolution.

The limitation placed upon the amount of money that might be expended by these investigating committees was determined upon after full debate and careful consideration. The limit was fixed at thirty-six hundred dollars a year, and the Black committee has been proceeding with full knowledge of this limitation. The gentleman who has been employed as counsel by the Black committee for the purpose of handling this matter in question is on the job. He is doing the work, with a full knowledge that his compensation cannot exceed $300 a month. If this man is doing the work and was willing to accept the task under these circumstances, then I know of no reason why the Congress should at this time voluntarily increase his compensation out of all proportion to compensation paid by other committees for like service.

Investigator Pecora did a splendid work in the last Congress. All recognize his ability and accomplishments, as well as the possible monetary sacrifice made by him while he was doing that particular work. Yet he received but $300 a month.

Employment of this type is rewarded in several ways: First, the monetary compensation received; second, the publicity and benefit to future practice; and, third, the satisfaction of rendering a service to one's government. The third factor is the one that usually inspires the best service, and as a rule gets the most capable and patriotic counsel.

In short, the Congress should either abolish the limitation and leave the matter of employment of counsel entirely in the discretion of the committee, or to be determined in each specific case, as the occasion arises. The Black committee is entitled to no more consideration than any other investigating committee at this time.

I do not believe that this resolution will pass the House today. This should not be a partisan question, and this precedent should not be established. If it is established we may fully expect other committees to ask like consideration.

The question of counsel or attorneys for the Government, its agencies, and the committees of Congress, is most important at this particular time. I say this in view of the fact that, as a member of the Judiciary Committee, I know we have had several bills before us of late making exceptions so that former attorneys on the part of the Government might be employed in specific pending cases. That is, attorneys come to Washington, accept appointment on the part of the Government, serve for a time, and possibly until they become way-wise in Washington and familiar with the departments.

Thereupon they resign their positions with the Government, paying possibly $3,600 a year, enter into private practice, and then seek employment as special counsel to carry on cases with which they became familiar while in the Government service. Their services become very valuable when the Government wants to hire them back as special counsel. I am opposed to all of these exceptions and exemptions, and naturally oppose this resolution which is now before us.

In conclusion let me urge upon the House the necessity of pursuing the economy of the present law, and I believe we can do this with the full knowledge that the Black committee or any other committee will not want for proper counsel in these important matters. We are dealing fairly with all of our committees, and if I am correct in this statement, then the Black committee should have every consideration granted to other committees, but no more consideration.

It seems unthinkable that this resolution should make it possible for this committee to pay as much as $50,000 for this special counsel. Yet, under the resolution as it is brought before us today, that is the fact. In saying this I am not reflecting upon the judgment of the Auditing Committee ir. the Senate, but I just want to make it easy for that committee to keep within the bounds of reason and within the scope of the taxpayers' pocketbooks when hiring special counsel and assistants in these inquisitorial matters. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Michigan has expired.

Mr. HANCOCK of New York. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HOFFMAN].

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Chairman, if we assume that everything the Black committee has done is right, and let us assume that if we may, then we might turn our thoughts for a moment to the proposition that is before us, which is a question of whether the legislation heretofore passed to prevent waste and extravagance should be followed or whether we should go back to the old practice of using these appointments of attorneys for political purposes, and paying the attorneys a fee, the amount determined, perhaps, by the political prominence of the appointee rather than by his legal ability. If the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BANK-HEAD], the distinguished leader of the majority, is right as a matter of principle, then there is no reason why we should have an amendment limiting the fee to $10,000, because every lawyer in the House will concede that that fee would not be adequate compensation for properly preparing and presenting the question which we are told is involved. We know that the Supreme Court has been criticized by gentlemen on both sides, only, however, when that decision went contrary to some preconceived notion that the critic held. It is recalled that the gentleman here who has spoken so often in opposition to the power companies came in one day with a smile all over his face and announced with great satisfaction the Supreme Court's decision on the T. V. A., and for 1 day, at least, that Court was, in his opinion, a wonderful body of "grand old men", supreme in their wisdom, sound in their judgment.

We forget sometimes about the Supreme Court. I could not help but think, when the gentleman criticized the Supreme Court so severely, of the Scottsboro case. I do not recall whether it is twice or three times—twice, at least—has that case been to the United States Supreme Court. Each time that Court has held that the defendant—poor, without influential political friends—was entitled to a trial in accordance with the law of the land—upheld the legend over the doorway of that beautiful building: "Equal justice under law."

I do not know of any corporation or any Wall Street or any international bankers or anyone else with money who was interested in that case, but the Court nevertheless protected the constitutional right of those colored men. I have never observed any anxiety or desire on the part of any court to curtail the right of Congress or attempt to take away any of our powers. There are many judges in this body—circuit court judges, judges of the supreme courts of the States. The gentleman from Oregon [Mr. Ekwall], a distinguished jurist, is among those judges who usually decline, very properly, to hold unconstitutional any law when that result can be avoided, always upholding legislation and acts of Congress when it is possible. So in this case, if we submitted this proposition to the Supreme Court, if there is involved a question of the gravity which the gentleman suggests, do you think for a moment that that Court would curtail the rights of Congress or attempt to take any of our powers? There is nothing in its history that indicates that. So, as far as I am concerned, we might trust our case with almost any lawyer; even a lawyer of the House might handle the matter and get by with it. [Laughter.] The Court, that safeguard of our liberties, would protect this Congress from assaults of outsiders, as it has so recently found it necessary to protect us from ourselves. If I understand correctly, this gentleman came here and accepted certain employment. He knew what the fee was. He is not a welcher. Are we not insulting him by intimating that he ought to go back on his bargain? I do not want to talk politics, but I am sure he recognizes an implied contract.

Mr. FULLER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOFFMAN. I yield for a question.

Mr. FULLER. The gentleman is a member of the Townsend Investigating Committee, is he not?

Mr. HOFFMAN. Yes.

Mr. FULLER. And that committee is bound by law to not pay an attorney more than $300 a month?

Mr. HOFFMAN. That is right.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HOFFMAN] has expired.

Mr. HANCOCK of New York. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 3 additional minutes.

Mr. FULLER. As a member of the Real Estate Bond Investigating Committee—

Mr. HOFFMAN. Now, Mr. Chairman, I want to talk. The gentleman from Arkansas can get some time after while and tell us about the King of England.

Mr. FULLER. I am trying to help the gentleman out.

Mr. HOFFMAN. The trouble is I would rather have my friend from Texas [Mr. Blanton] help me out, but I am thankful for the suggestion. This Townsend committee was given something like $50,000.

Mr. FULLER. But I was talking about the Bond Investigation Committee.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Oh, I am talking about the Townsend committee. The first thing I did was to try to limit the expenditure of that money to $10,000. Then we tried to get a plan so that we were not spending more than we knew about as we went along. Now, what have we there? The first thing we have a bunch of investigators out in the field, and what do they want? Are they content to take $300 a month? They all knew when they started that that was the salary. If we change the rule here, they will want more money. The same with the attorneys. That is what I am worrying about.

Let us assume first that the Black committee is all right in every single respect, both in purpose and method. Some of the Members on the Republican side will not agree, but let me be with you Democrats for a few moments and for argument let us assume that to be the fact. If you want to establish this precedent, you will have this Townsend committee and every other committee here asking for more money. You do not want that. So why break the rule here?

Mr. FULLER. I am with the gentleman.

Mr. HOFFMAN. And so are three or four more. You know we are right on this; there should be no political aspect to it. Let us hold to the rule, the law, because if we change it our accountants, our bookkeepers, our reporters, our investigators, all of them, as well as the attorneys, will be wanting more money. Surely, in an administration, in a great party, that believes so much in doing something for the Government, so much for the "under dog", there ought to be a few lawyers scattered along the road who are willing to donate a little of their time and ability to protect even this Congress. I am sure even the Liberty League would furnish a lawyer if there are no real Democrats who want to render this service for the good of the cause. Many attorneys of recognized ability and standing would welcome the occasion, because of the honor conferred and the opportunity to serve. [Applause and laughter.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Michigan has again expired.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. Rankin].

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Michigan, who has just spoken, seems to throw bouquets at the Supreme Court, but at the same time he is opposed to giving the Senate the power to bring this case properly before the Supreme Court. But he is a new man. He does not know the history of Congress, and especially of his own party on such matters.

His colleague from Michigan [Mr. MICHENER] does know. I remember in a former administration when they took lawyers in the Shipping Board who were drawing $2,500 to $3,500 a year and raised their salaries to $35,000 a year, by a roll call. If you desire it, I will insert some of those roll calls in the Record to show you where your side of the House did that very thing over the opposition of Members on the Democratic side.

Now, I want to say a word about the Black committee in the Senate. I believe it has done more for the American people than any other investigating committee I have ever known. It is doing more now. As far as I am individually concerned, I am for the Black committee, and I hope they will continue the splendid work they are now doing.

This is one of the most vital questions that has ever come before the Congress. It is one that goes to the very root of the prerogatives of Congress itself.

Throughout the length and breadth of the land already selfish interests are rushing into court and enjoining the executive departments of this Government. In every State of this Union they are using the courts in an effort to block the will of the Government. But this is the first time they have ever been brazen enough to attempt to enjoin and paralyze the Congress of the United States.

Let us think about this amount of $10,000. How much do you suppose the lawyers on the other side will get? We found in the T. V. A. case one lawyer standing before the courts, misleading the lower court, showing that the money for their fees was contributed by interested stockholders when he knew at the time that $50,000 had been contributed by one holding company and that did not even operate in the States.

The lawyer appearing for the Black committee in this case is representing the American people in one of the most vital issues that has ever come before any court; that is, whether the Congress of the United States shall continue to function as the representatives of the American people or shall be paralyzed by some petty court at the instance of some selfish interest that is prostituting the functions of a public utility.

You say you are going to try to hold this man down, to require him to represent us before the Supreme Court of the United States for $3,600, when on the other side there will be millions of dollars, when on the other side the fees of the attorneys will reach into the hundreds of thousands of dollars, employed for what purpose? Employed in order that they may paralyze the Congress and the Senate of the United States and in this way exercise the powers of government.

You may take your choice; but I tell you now you are voting upon one of the most important questions you will ever face, and one the American people will not forget. It is a question of whether you want to surrender the prerogatives of the House and Senate and capitulate to outside selfish interests, or vote this money for a competent attorney to represent the American people before the Supreme Court of the United States. [Applause.]

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Sumners].

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, I yield the remainder of my time to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. SUMNERS].

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I agree with what has been said, indicating the judgment of the Members that this is a very important matter we are now considering. It is a very simple one, however. As I see the proposition before the Committee today, it is not whether we agree or disagree with the policy of the Black committee; it is not whether we believe or do not believe the Black committee has exceeded the bounds of propriety. We are dealing now with the matter of the contemplated construction of the constitutional powers of the Houses of Congress, the legislative branch of the Government. As I view it, and I believe I have myself properly located in the matter, it would not make any difference to me whether this matter came from a committee with regard to whose work I agreed or did not agree, whether it came from a Democratic or a Republican administration. Those of us now in the House and the Senate are the guardians of the power of the Houses of the Congress.

The question to be decided by the Supreme Court will not deal with the controversy of the Black committee merely; that will fade into insignificance; the decision in this case will have an effect for all time as long as the Government lasts. Let us be candid about it. The question is whether or not we want this question properly presented to the Supreme Court for that body to pass upon. That is all there is in it.

Nobody knows what fate or fortune may bring in the political history of this country; nobody knows who will be in power in the next administration or the administration after that, or what may be future developments; but we all know that if under the Constitution the Houses of Congress possess a power we ought not to surrender by a failure properly to meet the challenge of its existence. Am I not right? The question to be determined is whether under the Constitution the legislative branch of the Government possesses a certain power.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. HOLLISTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 additional minutes to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I shall hurry along. The sole question is whether we want the Supreme Court, by a proper presentation, to be given a full and fair opportunity properly to pass on the question. I think everybody does. In order that this may be done, that the question of the power of the legislative branch of the Government may be properly presented to the Supreme Court, it must be handled by a man of real ability; and I think it is the practical experience of all of us that a $300-a-month man is not the proper man to present the subject to the Supreme Court.

Mr. FULLER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I yield to the gentleman from Arkansas.

Mr. FULLER. Why not restrict this to $5,000 instead of $10,000? We are appropriating money for various uses and allowing them to throw it away.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I agree with the gentleman.

Mr. FULLER. Then why not amend the bill?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Chairman, this other matter should be considered. Here is the Senate, one of the legislative Houses, conducting an investigation. By this bill they send what amounts to a request to the House of Representatives to enable them to hire a man at not exceeding $10,000 a year to present this matter to the Supreme Court. I agree with the gentleman, and we are going to have an amendment offered making it clear that this shall not exceed an allowance of $10,000 a year to an individual and not cover any further ground.

Mr. MILLARD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. MILLARD. There is a momentous question involved here. We have an Attorney General with an able staff. Why should they not intervene to protect our rights?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I do not know.

Mr. BLANTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. BLANTON. Then the clarifying amendment will change this law threefold, and instead of making it $3,600 per annum there will be an increased salary limit of $10,000?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Yes; that is right.

Mr. BLANTON. That is too big a jump in salary raise all at once.

Mr. TOBEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I yield to the gentleman from New Hampshire.

Mr. TOBEY. The gentleman has manifested by his remarks that he is opposed to this restriction in the present statute of $300 a month, and he bases his argument on that fact. Why does not the gentleman bring in a bill to repeal the existing law and present that bill on its merits?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. This is not on ordinary employment; it is a proposal to authorize an appropriation as requested by the Senate of $10,000 to represent the legislative branch of the Government in the presentation of an important matter to the Supreme Court.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. HANCOCK of New York. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER].

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, it seems to me that this resolution and the question involved here is a little different from what has been heretofore discussed. We have before us a resolution that is absolutely wide open and without any limit as to amount. It is absolutely unnecessary, and the proof of that fact is that the man is already working for this committee. He is the man they have picked, and he is already working for the sum which they are authorized to pay. Other able lawyers have accepted work from these committees for what they are authorized to pay. There is no question but what they can go out and present their arguments and get through with this matter without the appropriation of any more money than is presently authorized. But to bring in a resolution here that is wide open, where they can fix the pay at any figure they see fit, is absolutely ridiculous, to my mind, and I do not believe that the Senate joint resolution ought to be passed.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. All time has expired. The Clerk will read the Senate joint resolution for amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the Senate committee acting under Senate Resolution 165 of the Seventy-fourth Congress is hereby authorized to employ counsel to represent the said Senate committee and the Senate in connection with legal proceedings relative to the powers of the Congress of the United States growing out of legal proceedings instituted in the court to restrain actions of the said Senate committee in connection with the performance of its duties, the total compensation for such legal services to be fixed by the Senate Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, and the payment of other expenses necessarily incurred in connection with said litigation to be approved by the said Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, $10,000 to be immediately available from the contingent fund of the Senate under this joint resolution and to remain available until June 30, 1937.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MILLER: On page 2, line 1, after the word "services", insert "not to exceed the total sum of $10,000 for such services."

Also, beginning with the last word "and", in line 2, strike out lines 3, 4, 5, and line 6 to the dollar sign.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the resolution be read as amended by the amendment just offered by the gentleman from Arkansas.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the Senate committee, acting under Senate Resolution 165 of the Seventy-fourth Congress, is hereby authorized to employ counsel to represent the said Senate committee and the Senate in connection with legal proceedings relative to the powers of the Congress of the United States growing out of legal proceedings instituted in the court to restrain actions of the said Senate committee in connection with the performance of its duties, the total compensation for such legal services not to exceed the total sum of $10,000 for such services, to be fixed by the Senate Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, $10,000 to be immediately available from the contingent fund of the Senate under this joint resolution and to remain available until June 30, 1937.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. MILLER] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, the effect of this amendment is to limit the authority of the Senate Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate to the payment of the sum of $10,000 for legal services in representing the committee in the courts in connection with the litigation that grows out of the investigation under Senate Resolution 165. Not to exceed $10,000 may be paid to attorneys to represent that committee in litigation that grows out of its activities under Senate Resolution 165.

This is all the amendment does. You will note we also strike out the rest of the language dealing with contingent expenses. This evidently would restore and leave the $3,600 provision intact for auditors and such other incidental expenses as may be necessary, but so far as the fixing of legal fees or maximum fees may be concerned, it can only be $10,000 for such services in this particular litigation.

Now, the argument has been made, Mr. Chairman, by learned gentlemen that under the resolution as presented it is wide open. I want to call attention to the provision of the original resolution. The only change that is made in existing law is with respect to the operations of the committee under Senate Resolution 165, and it does not apply to the operations of other committees under any other resolution either of the House or of the Senate. It is not a wide-open resolution and never was a wide-open resolution. Its operation is confined strictly to investigations and litigation under that particular resolution, and by this amendment the expenditure that it can make, and the only expenditure it can make, is not to exceed $10,000 for legal services.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. Miller]. It was my intention to vote against this resolution unless such an amendment was adopted. If the amendment is adopted, I intend to vote for it.

I served as chairman of a special committee last year, and we had as our counsel one of the most distinguished men of the country, a former Member of this House, a former United States Senator, and a former Governor of the State of Georgia, the Honorable Thomas W. Hardwick, a very distinguished public official of his day and a very distinguished lawyer and American citizen. We were limited to paying him $300 a month.

I recognize the argument in opposition to this bill. Personally I think $300 a month is too small an amount to impose upon any special committee in the selection of its counsel. On the other hand, we cannot permit unlimited amounts to be paid, because certain abuses occur, which have existed in the past and which were recognized by the imposition of this $300 limitation. Yet eminent counsel must be obtained and they must be reasonably compensated, and, on the other hand, they must recognize they are rendering a public service. We must, on the one hand, try to compensate them adequately, and, on the other hand, they must recognize that in accepting such employment they are in the service of the public and they must give of their services under such circumstances without the expectation of receiving the compensation they would ordinarily receive and would ordinarily expect.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?
Mr. McCORMACK. I will yield to the gentleman in fust a moment.

This is an exception; and I am going to vote for this resolution, if amended, because it is an unusual exception. I am going to vote for it in order to find out not only what is the authority of the legislative committee, but what my rights are under the Constitution. I want to find out what

Mr. Hearst's rights are under the Constitution in his case. I want to find out what his rights are in order that John McCormack and every other American citizen may find out whether or not committees appointed by Congress can do anything they want under the power of subpena. [Applause.] I do not think a committee can. I do not think it should. A committee is subject to the Constitution just the same as anyone else is subject to the provisions of that great document. Mr. Hearst is perfectly within his rights in raising the question that he has.

Mr. MAY and Mr. SNELL rose.

Mr. McCORMACK. I yield first to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. MAY. The gentleman has stated that $300 a month is too small a sum for a capable lawyer representing a congressional committee, and with that statement I very heartly agree. We have a committee now investigating the Townsend old-age-pension question, and when they come in at the next session of the Congress and ask for a like innovation, or exception, is the gentleman going to be for that, or not?

Mr. McCORMACK. I will vote for anything which will repeal the $300 limitation and make it a higher amount, but it should not be unlimited.

I now yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. SNELL. If this matter is so important and if it affects the constitutional rights of individuals and of the House itself, why should not the Attorney General of the United States represent us and present the matter to the Supreme Court?

Mr. McCORMACK. I can see a distinction there, although I realize that the gentleman's inquiry is a very pertinent one. I doubt the advisability of having the Attorney General represent the legislative branch of the Government. He is a member of the executive branch of the Government.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCORMACK. I yield.

Mr. BANKHEAD. One of the very great issues we are seeking to present and to have determined in this litigation is keeping the three branches of our Government separate and distinct, and if we should try to tie-in the Attorney General with the litigation, then we would be violating one of the principles involved in the matter.

Mr. SNELL. I understand that; but we have not been so very fussy about that so far, and if this matter pertains to the constitutional rights of individuals, why should not the Attorney General protect their rights?

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 5 additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield briefly?

Mr. McCORMACK. Briefly; yes.

Mr. CELLER. I agree with the gentleman that the legislative branch of the Government could not, without let or hindrance, conduct investigations that might infringe the constitutional rights of individuals, because if they could do that, then the legislative branch of the Government would be both judge and jury with respect to its own acts. There must be somebody to impose some restraint, and the Supreme Court is the body to do that.

Mr. McCORMACK. Exactly; the gentleman makes a very powerful contribution. We talk about the Constitution. The Constitution would be meaningless unless we had some agency to interpret it. We talk about it in its relationship to Congress. What about its relationship to the individual? What about my rights as an individual if a legislative body should pass an act taking away, or impairing, my constitutional rights? Where am I going to, who would I go to, unless to the Court which has the power to interpret what my rights as a citizen are under the Constitution and to protect them?

Some agency must be the referee as between the executive and the legislative branch. Some agency must be the referee between the statutory law and the fundamental law. Some agency must have the right to determine my constitutional rights. Unless there was some agency to determine whether Congress exceeded its power we would have unrestricted legislative power and could have legislative dictatorship. We would have the Constitution guaranteeing us our rights, stating the powers of government and of the Congress, and if the Congress passed an unconstitutional law, no agency to declare it null and void. Under such conditions, a constitution would be unnecessary. We have that agency. It is the Supreme Court of the United States.

Now, I have my personal opinion about the Black committee. I have my personal opinion about the names of 50 or 60 honorable Members of this body being unwarrantedly brought into its hearings. I have my personal opinion about a committee of Congress disregarding the character and reputation of others, whether Members of this House or humblest citizens of the United States. [Applause.]

But this is a different question. We should appropriate this money, $10,000, not only because Congress wishes to find out what its rights are, but also that we may know what are the rights of the individual under the Constitution when a special committee undertakes to exercise broad and unlimited powers of summoning and examining our papers and effects.

We did not do it in the special committee of which I was chairman. We enumerated what we wanted; we proceeded, as we thought, in accordance with our constitutional powers. What we did was never questioned. Personally I do not think any committee possesses unlimited power to subpena. but we will never know until it is definitely passed upon. I believe in giving to the Senate the ability to employ the counsel they want, so that afterward they cannot say they did not have opportunity to present fully to the Supreme Court the law on the issues involved. I take this course not only for the Black committee, not only that future committees might know their powers, but in order that you and I and all others might know what are our rights when we consider that a committee is acting in violation of our constitutional rights. I want it settled for future committees and for the people of our country. I want to know, so far as the question involved is concerned, what the constitutional powers of a committee are, and equally what the constitutional rights of an individual are. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Massachusetts has expired.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate upon this amendment close in 5 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. AYERS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words. In addressing the Members of the House on this amendment let us just talk it over as an honest program that is going to be a precedent in the future, not only for this House but for the Senate; and let me preface my remarks by saying that the Senate investigation committee is proper and right, but when we pass a resolution saying that this committee can hire counsel without any limit on salary, that is absolutely wrong. It would be preposterous, would it not, to say that there should not be any limit to the hiring of counsel, and it is preposterous to say also that counsel should come into this investigation for $300 a month. That is just too little for this class of work, but there should be a limit

Mr. MAVERICK. There is a direct limit.

Mr. AYERS. There is not a direct limit, and that is what I am arguing for.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman vield?

Mr. AYERS. Yes.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Was the gentleman present when I made the statement that it was our purpose to offer an amendment specifically limiting the amount to $10,000?

Mr. AYERS. Yes, sir; and that is what I am arguing for.

Mr. MILLER. That amendment is now pending before the committee.

Mr. AYERS. And I am talking on that amendment, and I want the amount fixed at $10,000. It is only fair and proper that we should do that. The thought I have and the thought that I know is in the mind of everyone on both sides is to have honest investigations of these matters, but we cannot give a committee authority to hire counsel at an unlimited salary. That would be ridiculous. I am in favor of this amendment to limit it to $10,000. I want the lawyer properly paid, and with that limit he will be properly paid.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Arkansas.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. O'CONNOR: Page 2, after line 8, insert Amendment offered by Mr. O'Connor: Page 2, after line 8, insert the following:

"Sec. 2. Notwithstanding the provisions of any existing law, the Committee on Rules of the House of Representatives may employ and fix the compensation of counsel in representing the House of Representatives or any committee thereof in any legal proceedings relative to the powers of the Congress of the United States or the prerogatives and privileges of the House of Representatives. The payment of compensation and expenses necessarily incurred in connection with such legal proceedings shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the House of Representatives on vouchers authorized by the Committee on Rules, signed by the chairman of the Committee on Rules, and approved by the Committee on Accounts: Provided, however, That such compensation shall in no instance exceed the sum of $10,000."

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order against the amendment on the ground that it is obnoxious to paragraph 7 of rule XVI:

No motion or proposition on a subject different from that under consideration shall be admitted under color of amendment.

Under the specific provision of this rule, under section 795 of the Manual, one individual proposition may not be amended by another individual proposition, even though the two belong to the same class.

A little further down it reads:

To a bill for the relief of one individual an amendment proposing similar relief to another is not in order.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield right there?

Mr. SNELL. I vield.

Mr. O'CONNOR. The rule has been amended making this in order. That was the purpose of my amendment to the rule which was carried, which would make it in order. The gentleman would be correct if the rule had not been amended.

Mr. SNELL. Will the gentleman just explain what he means by that?

Mr. O'CONNOR. An amendment was adopted to the rule. Mr. SNELL. I do not know of any amendment that has been adopted that is broad enough to cover this.

Mr. O'CONNOR. An amendment was adopted to this effect:

It shall be in order, any rule of the House to the contrary notwithstanding, for the chairman of the Committee on Rules to offer an amendment to said Senate joint resolution granting similar authority to the House of Representatives.

Mr. SNELL. I do not think the amendment offered by the chairman of Rules comes within that provision. I think it goes much further and more comprehensive. It has been a specific rule of the House of Representatives for years and years that when we had one specific project before the House we could not amend it by adding another. This rule says specifically that when you have one proposition before the House, even a similar proposition cannot be offered as an amendment. If your amendment just offered had the same limitations as the Senate resolution, it might be protected by the amendment to the rule, but it has no limitations and in effect repeals the whole law and goes so far that in no way does it seem to me to be germane. We have before the House at the present time a bill which pro-

Mr. BANKHEAD. We are going to offer that amendment. Vides that a special investigating committee of the Senate may pay additional compensation to the attorney representing that committee, and to that the chairman of the Rules Committee has offered an amendment, providing that the House may do in the future whatever it desires in regard to counsel to all investigating committees.

In my judgment that has gone far beyond anything provided for in the rule, or even the rule which the chairman of the committee refers to at the time, and is in no way a germane amendment.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SNELL. I yield.

Mr. RANKIN. Let me say to the gentleman from New York that this goes far beyond giving this power to the House of Representatives. It is tantamount to an amendment giving the Rules Committee powers over investigations that are not even in contemplation. It is tantamount to an amendment extending the power of the Rules Committee.

Mr. SNELL. Oh, it goes much further than that. It is much broader than anything that has ever been considered, and I am sure it is not covered under the regular rules of the House or the new amendment.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order. Mr. SNELL. Mr. Chairman, I think I still have the floor.

and if so, I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. COCHRAN. Under the terms of the amendment, does it not take away the power which this House has placed in the Committee on Accounts?

Mr. O'CONNOR. No: that is not so.

Mr. SNELL. I do not know that it goes that far.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Any compensation would still have to be approved by the Committee on Accounts under that resolution.

Mr. SNELL. I am not sure about that. If the Rules Committee gets the power you desire, it can definitely say the amount to be paid for legal services, regardless of any other committee, and is final; and I believe the point of order is good against your all-comprehensive amendment.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, I make an additional point

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BLANTON. I make the point of order that under the amendment to the rule offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. O'CONNOR], which changed the rule, it does not permit of such an amendment as the gentleman from New York now has offered to the Senate joint resolution now under consideration.

In explanation of the point of order, I call the attention of the Chair to the fact that under the Senate joint resolution now before the House the power to fix a fee of $10,000 is in the Auditing Committee of the Senate. Our committee in the House similar to the Auditing Committee of the Senate is the Committee on Accounts. Our distinguished friend from North Carolina [Mr. WARREN] is chairman of that committee. The language of this authorization for this amendment does not permit an amendment that will take away from the Committee on Accounts this right and give it to the Committee on Rules

Mr. O'CONNOR. It does not take it away from the Committee on Accounts.

Mr. BLANTON. Let me read the language. This is the language of the gentleman's amendment that he passed to the rule:

It shall be in order, any rule of the House to the contrary notwithstanding, for the chairman of the Committee on Rules to offer an amendment to said Senate joint resolution granting similar authority-

Not to the Committee on Rules, butgranting similar authority to the House of Representatives.

The Committee on Rules is not the House of Representatives. Now, we passed that amendment, and it gives to the House of Representatives this authority, and not to the Committee on Rules, and under the rules of the House the authority is vested in the Committee on Accounts, of which the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. WARREN] is chairman. By passing the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. O'CONNOR], we did not authorize any amendment that would give this power to the Committee on Rules. It gave it to the House of Representatives. The amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. O'CONNOR] takes it away from the House of Representatives, takes it away from the Committee on Accounts, and gives it to the Committee on Rules. It is clearly out of order, and I make the point of order against it.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from New York care to be heard on the point of order?

Mr. O'CONNOR. No; I do not care to be heard. I have not heard any point of order stated yet.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. MERRITT of New York). The Chair is ready to rule. In the opinion of the Chair, if the special rule providing for the consideration of the Senate joint resolution had not been amended, the point of order made by the gentleman from New York [Mr. Snell] would be well taken, but in view of the fact that the special rule has been amended, the Chair overrules the point of order.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, I would like a ruling on my point of order, that the amendment adopted does not authorize taking it away from the House of Representatives.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is of the opinion that the same rule holds good, and therefore overrules the point of

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Chairman, permit me to say at the outset that neither I nor the Committee on Rules has any interest in gathering to itself any additional duties. I have heard several statements made, during the discussion of the point of order, which were not in accordance with the language of the Senate joint resolution. The gentlemen have read the resolution but have forgotten what it contains.

My purpose in offering this amendment is out of pride in the only body of which I am a Member, the House of Representatives. I, as a Member of this body, do not propose to have another body retain counsel from any part of this country and possibly get a ruling from a court which may bind this body or any committee of this body.

The question which rose in the Rules Committee and which rises here is, Shall a great question go to the Supreme Court of the United States, a question raised by a committee of another body, which body proposes to obtain its own counsel, the decision in which case may bind this House in its rights and prerogatives without the House being represented? In the Rules Committee there was no opposition to the proposal I make today, and from no one occupying a position of leadership in the House have I heard any opposition to this body being represented when that question is raised affecting our prerogatives.

The Committee on Rules is suggested as the repository of this power, not through any desire on the part of its present members to have additional power but solely because the Committee on Rules creates these special committees of the House. Even in standing committees a question often arises which may be so momentous as to require special counsel. For instance, such a question arose in the Committee on Military Affairs the other day. The Rules Committee is not looking for any extra work; it is the busiest committee in the House; but it thought-and it was because of parliamentary advice we received—that the Rules Committee might well be the vehicle through which counsel be retained to represent other committees in a serious question affecting the rights and privileges of the House of Representatives. Any decision of the Rules Committee in the matter of compensation is subject always to the approval of the Committee on Accounts.

To illustrate, if the Rules Committee should retain counsel in this particular case—and I am speaking of a possibility, not a probability, for it is not our present intention to do so-but if it should-no matter what the Rules Committee might fix as compensation for its counsel, the amount would have to be approved by the Committee on Accounts, headed by the distinguished gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. Warren].

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. O'CONNOR. I yield.

Mr. RAYBURN. I ask the gentleman this question for information: The pending Senate resolution deals with one case. Does the gentleman's interpretation of his amendment make it apply to one case or is it a continuing power for the Rules Committee to exercise?

Mr. O'CONNOR. It is a continuing power, of course, vested in the Rules Committee; but I would remind the gentleman that the existence of the Rules Committee, the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, and every other committee expires at the conclusion of the term of the Congress.

I may say further that I am the only Member of the House who opposed the limitation of $3,600 when the matter was brought up on the floor. I debated it with the distinguished gentleman from Texas, the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations [Mr. Buchanan], and the distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER]. It was brought in during the closing days of the last Congress, as I recall the facts. I never believed in the limitation. I did not believe that under it proper lawyers, and especially accountants, the greatest difficulty, could be employed at that salary. The gentleman's question has raised the point that this amendment would apply to other matters than the utility lobby investigation.

Mr. RAYBURN. I simply asked the gentleman for information. I made no contention whatever.

Mr. O'CONNOR. This proposal was recommended by everybody who considered it. We did it deliberately. It was our idea that this power should be possessed by the House. All I ask is that the House of Representatives be represented.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 5 additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'CONNOR. Briefly.

Mr. CELLER. In the interest of the bill and its passage, I think it would be better if the gentleman would limit the application of his amendment to this particular case rather than to make it of general import, because I am quite sure a number of Members will vote against the resolution if it contains an amendment giving this sweeping power.

Mr. O'CONNOR. No sweeping power is given to the Committee on the Rules. Another committee might come in here tomorrow with a special resolution to meet this situation.

The sole issue is whether or not some other body is going to speak for this House in a court; whether or not we are proud of our own prerogatives; whether or not we can take care of ourselves.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'CONNOR. Yes. Mr. O'MALLEY. The objection to the Senate resolution was on the ground that it was open and gave a continuing power. We adopted an amendment making it apply to this specific case. The gentleman's amendment is not in harmony with the other amendment, for the gentleman's amendment creates a continuing authority in the Committee on Rules.

Mr. O'CONNOR. That is not so. The objection to the Senate resolution, as I interpret the debate was that the amount was unlimited.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Would the gentleman's amendment, if adopted, create a continuing authority over this subject in the Rules Committee?

Mr. O'CONNOR. It must be put in some committee. Mr. O'MALLEY. Will the gentleman answer my question "yes" or "no"? Does it contain a continuing authority?

Mr. O'CONNOR. Yes. The gentleman from Texas said the House of Representatives could take care of the situation. Replying, let me state that the House of Representatives, like a corporation or other entity, must act through Individuals or a committee.

The House of Representatives cannot do anything except through an individual or through a committee. The authority has to be lodged somewhere. The first thought was to lodge it in the Judiciary Committee, but that was not deemed satisfactory, because other committees have serious questions raised and the Rules Committee, being the creator of special committees, it was thought wise to lodge the authority there. The Rules Committee has no interest or selfishness about the matter, and we are not looking for extra trouble. We are just trying to protect the prestige of this House and the membership of the House.

Mr. PETTENGILL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'CONNOR. I yield to the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. PETTENGILL. Will the gentleman's amendment continue this authority beyond the expiration of the Seventy-fourth Congress?

Mr. O'CONNOR. Of course, it could not. All our committees expire, and the authority would end within a few

Mr. MILLER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'CONNOR. I yield to the gentleman from Arkansas. Mr. MILLER. I think the question I was going to propound has been answered in the reply to the question submitted by the gentleman from Indiana. The only law I know of that limits the expenditures of the committee is the provision which is carried yearly in these appropriation bills.

Mr. O'CONNOR. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. MILLER. So that it is a question of yearly renewal of this restriction anyway, is it not?

Mr. O'CONNOR. The gentleman is correct. Incidentally, I may say, the legislative appropriation bill has not yet been signed, and if the Members interested in this Senate joint resolution want to protect their rights, they must be sure that the legislative appropriation bill is signed before this Senate joint resolution, otherwise the Senate joint resolution will have no effect because it will have been previously

Mr. KELLER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'CONNOR. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois. Mr. KELLER. I should like to know why the House itself could not retain this power which is sought to be given to the Rules Committee to be used whenever occasion required?

Mr. O'CONNOR. I do not know how the House could act.

Mr. BLANTON. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. O'CONNOR. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. BLANTON. This is not a rule of the House we are changing that expires with each Congress. If this amendment is passed it becomes a part of the law, and it remains the law until repealed by legislative act of Congress.

Mr. O'CONNOR. In the next legislative appropriation bill it will be automatically repealed.

Mr. BLANTON. How does the gentleman know that, when any such legislation would be subject to a point of order? [Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment close in 15 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arkansas? Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, I should like to have 5 minutes to speak in opposition to the amendment. I do not care to prolong the proceedings of the House, but I think this is a very dangerous amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arkansas?

Mr. RANKIN. Why not make it 20 minutes?

Mr. MILLER. There are only three Members who desire

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arkansas?

There was no objection.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, except for the amendment offered to the rule, in no conceivable way could the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York be held to be germane, and it would have promptly been ruled out on a point of order. Now, let us take stock of ourselves here for just a minute, and look at the unheard-of thing that is now being proposed. This amendment says that-

Notwithstanding the provisions of any existing law, the Committee on Rules of the House of Representatives may employ and fix the compensation of any counsel in representing the House of Representatives or any committee thereof in any legal proceedings relative to the powers of the Congress of the United States or the prerogatives and privileges of the House of Representatives.

Taking this power, as the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Kellerl observed, out of the House, where it belongs, and where it should always remain, and delegating it to the Committee on Rules! Why, whoever heard of such an autocratic proposition? Has the House reached the point of abdication?

It further recites, Mr. Chairman:

The payment of compensation and expenses necessarily incurred In payment of compensation and expenses necessarily incurred in connection with such legal proceedings shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the House of Representatives on vouchers authorized by the Committee on Rules, signed by the chairman of the Committee on Rules and approved by the Committee on Accounts: Provided, however, That such compensation shall in no instance exceed the sum of $10,000. instance exceed the sum of $10,000.

Pray tell me why the Committee on Accounts was even mentioned in this amendment? It would be simply a rubberstamp affair for that committee to approve anything that happened under the provisions of this amendment.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WARREN. I yield to the gentleman from New York. Mr. O'CONNOR. That is true, of course, with the Committee on Audit in the Senate as to the $10,000 authorized in the Senate joint resolution?

Mr. WARREN. I do not know anything about the Senate committee. I know the Committee on Accounts has been rested, under the rules of this House, with full control of the contingent fund.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Where it states that the vouchers must be approved by the Committee on Accounts, the gentleman does not say that committee would approve them with a rubber stamp? It would certainly pass upon them, and if that committee did not approve, then the matter would go to the House.

Mr. BLANTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WARREN. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. BLANTON. Is it not a fact that the Committee on Audit in the Senate is exactly identical to the Committee on Accounts in the House?

Mr. WARREN. That is my understanding. Mr. KRAMER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WARREN. I yield to the gentleman from Cali-

Mr. KRAMER. Is it the practice of the Committee on Rules to sign all vouchers approved by the Committee on Accounts?

Mr. WARREN. Of course not. These vouchers are signed by the chairman of the special committees which have already been approved by the House.

Mr. KRAMER. And that has always been the rule? Mr. WARREN. And they are audited by the Committee on Accounts.

Will the gentleman yield? Mr. MAY.

Mr. WARREN. I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky. Mr. MAY. As I understand the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York, it repeals outright the existing statute on the question of lawyers' fees as paid by committees?

Mr. WARREN. Absolutely; and that is the frank purpose

Mr. O'MALLEY. Will the gentleman yield?
Mr. WARREN. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.
Mr. O'MALLEY. If this amendment that the gentleman from New York offers is adopted, it would put all of us who are opposed to opening the thing wide in the position of having to vote against the resolution. I do not say that is the purpose of the amendment, but that is the position it would put us in anyway.

Mr. WARREN. I shall vote against the passage of the resolution regardless, because I think the $3,600 per annum limitation is wise and necessary, but I shall not vote to load the resolution down and thereby make it more unpopular.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, up to this very minute, during the entire history of the Congress, every fee that has ever been authorized to be paid to a committee employee has had to be authorized by the Committee on Accounts. The Committee on Accounts is the committee of the House that passes on these things. They have the record of all such proceedings back as far as the history of the Congress goes. They are familiar with such things, and our distinguished friend from North Carolina [Mr. Warren] is familiar with every single precedent connected with such matters.

Now, I think it is rather unfair for our distinguished chairman of the great Rules Committee, which, after all, is a political committee, an arm of the House, an arm of the administration of the Government, to provide means for the administration to have its program carried out, to take the position which he has taken here in trying to take over jurisdiction from the Committee on Accounts.

Handling all such matters is the exclusive function of the Committee on Accounts, but the Committee on Rules has nothing to do with that. The Committee on Accounts alone has the right to pass on the propriety of spending money out of the contingent fund of the House.

Why, if you pass this amendment of our friend from New York, it is not a mere change of a rule which dies at the close of the Congress; it is permanent law. It will require the legislative act of some Congress to change it.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?
Mr. BLANTON. In just a minute I will yield; and I will ask the gentleman, as a good lawyer—and he is a good lawyer—if it is not a fact that until some legislative committee brings in a proposition here and repeals it, this becomes permanent law and puts this power in the hands of the Committee on Rules throughout all the years; is not that so?

Mr. O'CONNOR. That is so. Now will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. BLANTON. Yes.

Mr. O'CONNOR. My amendment provides that all payments and vouchers be approved by the Committee on Accounts. This is in the amendment, and the gentleman can read it.

Mr. BLANTON. Oh, I want to explain what that means. Mr. O'CONNOR. The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. Warren] did not raise the question that the amendment would take anything away from his committee.

Mr. BLANTON. He said it would make his committee a rubber stamp, and it would, and I will tell the gentleman why.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. BLANTON. In a minute.

I will tell you why. Say we have 15 investigating committees authorized; under present law they engage their own attorneys and arrange their salaries, but under this amendment that right is taken away from them, and the Rules Committee then does the employing, and the Rules Committee fixes the amount they shall pay, and then the Rules Committee will go to Mr. Warren and say, "Lindsay, we have employed this fellow at $10,000. The House authorized us to do it. The House put it in our charge. We are the ones responsible, but you have to O. K. this, and here it is. Please O. K. it." Would not Lindsay be put in a terrible situation? Why, he would become a rubber stamp.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman vield?

Mr. BLANTON. I yield.

Mr. O'CONNOR. The amendment does not apply to employees of committees at all. It applies solely and entirely to legal services in an extraordinary case, such as the present one, and does not apply at all to investigators, accountants, and so forth.

Mr. BLANTON. We are unable to tell how it might be construed. I cannot yield further.

Our House Committee on Rules is one of the most powerful organizations in the Congress. It is more powerful than any committee they have in the Senate. It can in one moment change and set aside every rule of the House. Let us yote down this amendment. The Rules Committee already possesses more power than it can exercise with due safety to the rights of all the other Members of the House.

ILLUSTRATING THE PRESENT POWER OF BULES COMMITTEE

In the last session of Congress we had before us what was known as the Ellenbogen rent bill, which quite a number of us firmly believe was unconstitutional, unsound, wasteful, extravagant, and ineffectual. We fought it and stopped it from passing.

There is just such a bill before the House at this time. A number of us firmly believe that it is unconstitutional, that it is unsound, that it is communistic, that it will raise and increase rents instead of lowering them, and that it will create an army of high-salaried employees, with no limit as to number, and no limit as to salaries, and no limit on the amount of expenses that the newly created rent commission could expend. Naturally, a number of us are against that bill and have been doing everything within our power to stop it and keep it from passing.

SISSON BILL, 10,000 TIMES WORSE, JUST BEHIND IT

The District Committee has favorably reported the Sisson bill, which repeals the law that prevents communism from being taught to the 99,000 school children in the 175 public schools of Washington.

In order to prevent the consideration of the Sisson bill until we could have an opportunity to get before the Members of Congress the result of an investigation made by our Subcommittee on Appropriations handling the District supply bill, which caused our subcommittee to refuse to allow $78,660 for so-called character education, and which hearings show conclusively that the Sisson bill should not pass, several of us having been doing all we could to delay the passage of the Ellenbogen bill, even if we are not able to defeat it, because immediately following its passage the Sisson bill will be called up for passage.

The press today tells us that Chairman Norton announces that she is now assured of the passage of the Ellenbogen bill soon this week, probably Friday, as she has arranged with the Rules Committee to grant her a rule, allowing only an hour and a half for the consideration of all amendments. Under the rules of the House at least 10 hours would be necessary to consider all amendments, as quite a number of Members have numerous amendments they want to debate and want considered. If the Rules Committee grants this rule, it probably means the passage of both the Ellenbogen bill as well as the Sisson bill, for such action of the Rules Committee would be construed and claimed as administration endorsement of the two bills, and probably this caused Chairman Norton to announce with such assurance that the Ellenbogen bill now would be passed.

I HAVE PERFORMED MY FULL DUTY

I have done everything that one man could do to stop the Ellenbogen bill and the Sisson bill from passing. On April 2, 1936, I made a speech in the House explaining fully the position of our Subcommittee on Appropriations, and quoting from our hearings, showing why we refused the $78,660 for so-called "character education", and why the Sisson bill should not pass, and I urge all of our colleagues in both the House and Senate, and all persons who may read this Record, to look in the Record of April 2, 1936, beginning with page 4837, and they will, if they read same with an open mind, see clearly why both the Ellenbogen bill and the Sisson bill should not be passed.

If Rules Committee grants a rule on the Ellenbogen bill, I want it to assume full responsibility for it should the bill pass, for I know without such a rule it would not be passed. And if we are limited to 1½ hours for amendments, I do not intend to make any effort whatever to stop its passage, for effort would be futile with that limited time allowed to present numerous amendments and the chairman controlling most of the time. And I want it to assume responsibility for the Sisson bill.

The above is a clear-cut illustration of the power of Rules Committee. It can change all rules at will. I think that it now possesses enough power, and all the power that it should possess, and I am not in favor of allowing it to take over the jurisdiction of the Committee on Accounts. I urge my colleagues to vote against this amendment, and after we defeat the amendment I am going to vote against the Senate resolution.

Whole.

Coffee

Clark, Idaho

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Chairman, I hope the House will vote this amendment down. I am as strong for this resolution as any man in either House of Congress, but this amendment is entirely unnecessary and is reposing in the Rules Committee additional powers, the like of which no committee of Congress has ever assumed before, or at least since the change of the rules in 1909 or 1910

Why not wait until an occasion arises? Why delegate all this power to the Rules Committee in advance, when there is nobody in the Congress, including those now conducting investigations, asking for it? I presume, as chairman of the Committee on Veterans' Affairs, I am conducting one of the most important investigations that will come before any committee in this Congress. If I should want this authority, I do not want to go to the Rules Committee and have them say whom I shall employ. I want to come to the House of Representatives for my authority and not to the Committee on Rules

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RANKIN. I yield.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. As a matter of fact, if this amendment is adopted, will it not have the effect of adding too heavy a tail to the kite and therefore bring about the defeat of the original resolution?

Mr. RANKIN. I thank the gentleman from New York; I think that will be the result if this amendment is adopted. That may be the object of it.

Now, you gentlemen who are in favor of this resolution who want the Congress of the United States properly represented in this great litigation that is now on its way to the Supreme Court of the United States, if you want to kill the resolution the best way you can do it is to adopt this unnecessary amendment. I, for one, shall oppose its adoption; and I shall demand a roll call upon it if it is put on in the Committee of the Whole. I say vote this amendment down, and then let us vote for the resolution.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. RANKIN. Yes.

Mr. O'CONNOR. I hope the gentleman does not lose sight of the fact that at the present time the Committee on Rules, and every committee, is limited to $3,600 a year. If the Rules Committee conducts a similar investigation and, like the Senate, desires to retain counsel to act in the case in behalf of the House, we would be limited to $3,600 a year, while the counsel for the Senate in similar proceedings would receive $10,000.

Mr. RANKIN. And if the Rules Committee will come to the House and show a legitimate reason, we will give them what money they need and the Senate will concur without a dissenting vote.

Mr. AYERS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. RANKIN. Yes.

Mr. AYERS. Is not the proposition right now, that we are studying a resolution on one particular phase of the

Mr. RANKIN. Yes.

Mr. AYERS. And now they are trying to make it a general law in the House.

Mr. RANKIN. Yes; they are trying to change the rules of the House of Representatives and give this one committee power that no committee ought to have. If the chairman of a committee making an investigation needs counsel, let him come to the floor of the House, as the gentleman from New York [Mr. SNELL] demanded the other day that I do, when we had such a proposition under consideration. The gentleman asked us to come back to the House and get authority if it became necessary to spend any money in conducting our investigation.

He was right. I agreed with that policy then and I agree with it now. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Mississippi has expired. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. Martin of Massachusetts) there were—ayes 48, noes 85. So the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the rule, the Committee will rise. Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. MERRITT of New York, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union. reported that that Committee had had under consideration Senate Joint Resolution 234, and, pursuant to House Resolution 475, he reported the joint resolution back to the House with an amendment adopted in the Committee of the

The SPEAKER. Under the rule, the previous question is ordered. The question is on the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The question now recurs upon the third reading of the Senate joint resolution.

The question was taken; and the joint resolution was ordered to be read a third time, and was read the third time. The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, I demand the yeas and nays The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were-yeas 137, navs 153, answered "present" 4, not voting 134, as follows:

[Roll No. 67] VEAS-137

	4.44	101
Amlie	Duffy, N. Y.	Lewis, Colo.	Sadowski
Ayers	Duncan	Lewis, Md.	Sauthoff
Bankhead	Eckert	Luckey	Schneider, W
Barden	Eicher	Lundeen	Schulte
Biermann	Ellenbogen	McCormack	Scott
Binderup	Fletcher	McGehee	Sears
Boileau	Frey	McReynolds	Shannon
Boland	Gassaway	McSwain	Sisson
Brown, Ga.	Gehrmann	Mahon	Smith, Va.
Buck	Gillette	Mansfield	Smith, Wash.
Buckler, Minn.	Goldsborough	Marcantonio	South
Caldwell	Gray, Ind.	Martin, Colo.	Spence
Cannon, Mo.	Green	Maverick	Stefan
Cartwright	Greenwood	Mead	Sumners, Tex
Celler	Haines	Meeks	Sweeney
Chapman	Hancock, N. C.	Miller	Tarver
Citron	Hildebrandt	Moran	Taylor, Colo.
Colden	Hill, Ala.	Nelson	Thom
Colmer	Hill, Samuel B.	O'Connell	Thomason
Cooper, Tenn.	Hobbs	O'Connor	Turner
Costello	Hook	O'Malley	Umstead
	Huddleston	Patterson	Utterback
Cox Creal	Hull	Pearson
	Jacobsen		Vinson, Ga.
Cross, Tex.		Peterson, Fla.	Vinson, Ky.
Crosser, Ohio	Johnson, Okla.		Wearin
Cummings	Johnson, Tex.	Ramsay	Weaver
Deen	Jones	Ramspeck	Whelchel
Dingell	Keller	Rankin	Whittington
Dobbins	Kloeb	Rayburn	Williams
Dorsey	Kniffin	Reilly	Wilson, La.
Doughton	Kvale	Richards	Wood
Doxey	Lambeth	Richardson	Zimmerman
Driscoll	Lanham	Robinson, Utah
Driver	Lee, Okla.	Rogers, N. H.
Duffey, Ohio	Lesinski	Ryan

Knutson

	NA	YS-153
Andresen	Cole, Md.	Gambrill
Andrew, Mass.	Cole, N. Y.	Gearhart
Andrews, N. Y.	Cooper, Ohio	Gifford
Arends	Crawford	Gilchrist
Bacharach	Crowe	Goodwin
Barry	Crowther	Greenway
Beiter	Culkin	Greever
Blackney	Cullen	Griswold
Bland	Curley	Guyer
Blanton	Darrow	Gwynne
Bloom	Dempsey	Halleck
Bolton	Dirksen	Hancock, N. Y
Boylan	Ditter	Hartley
Brewster	Dockweiler	Hennings
Buchanan	Dondero	Hess
Burch	Drewry	Higgins, Conn
Burnham	Edmiston	Hoffman
Carlson	Ekwall	Holmes
Carpenter	Engel	Hope
Carter	Englebright	Houston
Casey	Evans	Johnson, W. V
Castellow	Fitzpatrick	Kahn
Chandler	Focht	Kennedy, Md.
Church	Ford, Miss.	Kenney
Clark Take	Thallow	Wingor

Fulmer

Kramer Lambertson Lamneck Lemke Lord Ludlow McClellan McGroarty McLeod Maas Main Mapes Marshall Martin, Mass. Martin, Mass. Mason May Merritt, Conn. Merritt, N. Y. Michener Millard Mitchell, Tenn. Mott Norton O'Leary O'Neal fan nners, Tex.

neider. Wis.

Parsons	Rich	Snell	Tonry
Patton	Risk	Stack	Treadway
Peterson, Ga.	Robertson	Stubbs	Turpin
Pettengill	Robsion, Ky.	Sutphin	Walter
Peyser	Rogers, Mass.	Taber	Warren
Pittenger	Rogers, Okla.	Taylor, S. C.	Wilson, Pa.
Plumley	Russell	Taylor, Tenn.	Wolcott
Polk	Scrugham	Terry	Wolfenden
Powers	Secrest	Thompson	Wolverton
Rabaut	Seger	Thurston	Woodruff
Ransley	Shanley	Tinkham
Reece	Short	Tobey
Reed, N. Y.	Smith, W. Va.	Tolan

NOT VOTING 194

ANSWERED "PRESENT"-4 Boehne Cochran Massingale Zioncheck

	TIOT II	DIIII IOI
Adair	Dies	Jenckes, Ind.	Perkins
Allen	Dietrich	Jenkins, Ohio	Pfeifer
Ashbrook	Disney	Kee	Quinn
Bacon	Doutrich	Kelly	Randolph
Beam	Dunn, Miss.	Kennedy, N. Y.	Reed, Ill.
Bell	Dunn, Pa.	Kerr	Romjue
Berlin	Eagle	Kleberg	Sabath
Boykin	Eaton	Kocialkowski	Sanders, La.
Brennan	Faddis	Kopplemann	Sanders, Tex
Brooks	Farley	Larrabee	Sandlin
Brown, Mich.	Fenerty	Lea, Calif.	Schaefer
Buckbee	Ferguson	Lehlbach	Schuetz
Buckley, N. Y.	Fernandez	Lucas	Sirovich
Bulwinkle	Fiesinger	McAndrews	Smith, Conn
Burdick	Fish	McFarlane	Snyder, Pa.
Cannon, Wis.	Flannagan	McGrath	Somers, N. Y
Carmichael	Ford, Calif.	McKeough	Starnes
Cary	Gasque	McLaughlin	Steagall
Cavicchia	Gavagan	McMillan	Stewart
Christianson	Gildea	Maloney	Sullivan
Claiborne	Gingery	Mitchell, Ill.	Thomas
Clark, N. C.	Granfield	Monaghan	Wadsworth
Collins	Gray, Pa.	Montague	Wallgren
Connery	Gregory	Montet	Welch
Cooley	Hamlin	Moritz	Werner
Corning	Harlan	Murdock	West
Cravens	Hart	Nichols	White
Crosby	Harter	O'Brien	Wigglesworth
Daly	Healey	O'Day	Wilcox
Darden	Higgins, Mass.	Oliver	Withrow
Dear	Hill, Knute	Owen	Woodrum

Dickstein Imhoff So the Senate joint resolution was rejected. The Clerk announced the following pairs:

Hoeppel Hollister

On this vote: On this vote:

Mr. McFarlane (for) with Mr. Corning (against).

Mr. Withrow (for) with Mr. Stewart (against).

Mr. Gildea (for) with Mr. Wigglesworth (against).

Mr. Zioncheck (for) with Mr. Allen (against).

Mr. Massingale (for) with Mr. Boehne (against).

Mr. Patman (for) with Mr. Boehne (against).

Mr. Cochran (for) with Mr. Granfield (against).

Mr. Snyder of Pennsylvania (for) with Mr. Hollister (against).

Mr. Sonder of Pennsylvania (for) with Mr. Hollister (against).

Mr. Connery (for) with Mr. Jenkins of Ohio (against).

Mr. Knute Hill (for) with Mr. O'Brien (against).

Mr. Starnes (for) with Mr. Darden (against).

Mr. Flesinger (for) with Mr. Darden (against).

Mr. Eagle (for) with Mr. Bacon (against).

Mr. Crosby (for) with Mr. Sullivan (against).

Mr. Dunn of Mississippi (for) with Mr. Kleberg (against).

Mr. Murdock (for) with Mr. Larrabee (against).

Parks

Patman

Young

Delaney DeRouen

General pairs:

Mr. Sabath with Mr. Perkins.
Mr. Oliver with Mr. Reed of Illinois.
Mr. Steagall with Mr. Welch.
Mr. Gregory with Mr. Thomas.
Mr. Cary with Mr. Fish.
Mr. Bulwinkle with Mr. Eaton.
Mr. Fernandez with Mr. Christianson.
Mr. Maloney with Mr. Covichia.
Mr. Woodrum with Mr. Doutrich.
Mr. Cooley with Mr. Collins.
Mr. Kerr with Mr. Buckbee.
Mr. McMillan with Mr. Burdick.
Mr. Gavagan with Mr. Mitchell of Illinois.
Mr. Gasagan with Mr. Adair.
Mr. Nichols with Mr. Young.
Mr. Ford of California with Mr. Claiborne,
Mr. Sanders of Louisiana with Mr. Hart.
Mr. Beam with Mr. Gingery.
Mr. Palmisano with Mr. Bell.
Mr. Gray of Pennsylvania with Mr. Hamilin.
Mr. Parks with Mr. Flannagan.
Mr. Wilcox with Mr. Montet.
Mr. Wilcox with Mr. Montet.
Mr. Mr. Wite with Mr. Doar.
Mr. Lea of California with Mr. Sirovich.
Mr. Clark of North Carolina with Mr. Harter,
Mr. Cark of North Carolina with Mr. Berlin. General pairs:

Mr. Boykin with Mr. Pfeifer.
Mr. Imhoff with Mr. Romjue.
Mr. Kocialkowski with Mr. Daly.
Mr. Kecugh with Mr. Faddis.
Mr. Werner with Mr. Faddis.
Mr. Disney with Mr. Somers of New York.
Mr. Lucas with Mr. Kee.
Mr. Ferguson with Mr. Delaney.
Mr. McLaughlin with Mr. Smith of Connecticut.
Mr. Kelly with Mr. Quinn.
Mr. DeRouen with Mr. Brennan.
Mr. Carmichael with Mr. Randolph.
Mr. Dickstein with Mr. Sandlin.
Mr. Kennedy of New York with Mr. Dies.
Mr. Schuetz with Mr. Healey.
Mr. Brooks with Mr. Montague.
Mr. Dietrich with Mr. West.
Mr. Wallgren with Mr. Monaghan.
Mr. Brown of Michigan with Mr. Ashbrook.
Mr. Buckley of New York with Mr. Cannon of Wisconsin.
Mr. Kopplemann with Mrs. Jenckes of Indiana.
Mr. Moritz with Mr. Higgins of Massachusetts.
Mr. LUDLOW changed his vote from "ave" to "nav.

Mr. LUDLOW changed his vote from "aye" to "nay."

Mr. LESINSKI changed his vote from "nay" to " aye."

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Mr. Speaker, I had a pair with the gentleman from Illinois, Mr. Allen. I voted "aye" on the passage of the resolution. I wish to withdraw that vote and answer "present."

Mr. WHITE. Mr. Speaker, I desire to vote "aye."

The SPEAKER. Was the gentleman present and listening when his name was called?

Mr. WHITE. I was not.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman does not qualify.

Mr. MASSINGALE. Mr. Speaker, I am paired with the gentleman from New York, Mr. Wapsworth. I was not here when the last roll call was made. If the gentleman from New York was not present, I ask to withdraw my vote on this resolution.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is informed that the gentleman from New York, Mr. Wadsworth, did not vote.

Mr. MASSINGALE. Then I ask to withdraw my vote of "aye" and answer "present."

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Speaker, I desire to vote "aye."

The SPEAKER. Was the gentleman present and listening when his name was called?

Mr. MURDOCK. I was not.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman does not qualify.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

Mr. FULLER. Mr. Speaker, I move to reconsider the vote by which the Senate joint resolution was rejected and lay that on the table

The motion was agreed to.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. LEE of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on Monday next, after the reading of the Journal and the conclusion of business on the Speaker's table, I may have permission to address the House for 30 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

CHAIRMAN OF THE COMMITTEE ON INVALID PENSIONS

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I offer a resolution, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 488

Resolved, That John Lesinski, of Michigan, be, and he is hereby, elected chairman of the standing Committee of the House of Representatives on Invalid Pensions.

The resolution was agreed to.

THE UPRIGHT JUDGE-OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES

Mr. McSWAIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks on the late Associate Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, and to include brief extracts from remarks I made concerning him on this floor, and remarks made yesterday by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Sumners] before the Senate.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered. There was no objection.

Mr. McSWAIN. Mr. Speaker, long before election to Congress in 1920 I had been an ardent admirer of Oliver Wendell Holmes from a distance. As a young lawyer I had carefully read, 25 years ago, his philosophic book entitled "The Common Law." In the same spirit I had read the Lives of the Lord Chancellors of England and the Lives of the Lord Chief Justices of England, by Lord Campbell. It was then I first learned of the rules of conduct laid down by Sir Matthew Hale to govern his conduct as a judge.

I think the best preparation for a judgeship is to read and comprehend the lives of great judges. Sir Matthew Hale, Chief Justice of England, was great not alone in intellect, but he was greater still in character. The wife of John Bunyan, then imprisoned in Bedford jail, appeared before the court of which Judge Hale was a member, and she asked that her husband be released from jail. Under the law as it then was Bunyan was detained by order of the King, as there was no right of release under the writ of habeas corpus from such order of detention; the court could not release the good man John Bunyan, but Judge Hale expressed great sympathy for the poor woman and regretted that he had no power to grant necessary relief.

Mr. Speaker, I never became an intimate of Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes. I never met him but one time, and that was while the celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of the opening of the Cumberland Canal up Potomac River was being held. I introduced myself to him out on the bank of the canal, and we had a very delightful conversation. He was as simple, natural, and unassuming, and as practical as any farmer or businessman. All truly great men are marked by genuine simplicity. My admiration was then intensified into love, and I am as ardently attached to his memory as I was to him before he passed from this earth. I admired his intellect, I greatly respected his public service, I reverenced his judicial qualities, but I loved his character.

BIRTHDAY OF JUSTICE HOLMES

For many years, I spoke upon the floor upon March 8, which was his birthday, about Justice Holmes. I find by reference to the Congressional Record that I thus addressed the House in March 1925, as will appear upon page 5161 of the Congressional Record. At that time I used in part the following language concerning Justice Holmes:

It is fitting, though at first blush incongruous, that a son of South Carolina and a son and a grandson and near relative of Confederate soldiers should go out of his way to utter words of commendation for a son of Massachusetts, who served in the Union Armies throughout the entire war period of '61 and '65, and was wounded at Ball's Bluff, Antietam, and Fredericksburg. The passions of that time have passed. The prejudices growing out of that conflict have practically all gone. The sons and grandsons of those engaged in that civil strife have since joined their efforts, mingled their joys and hardships, commingled their blood, and consecrated their lives in two great wars for the common country.

But I am especially persuaded to speak of Mr. Justice Holmes, because it seems to me that his services as a member of the Supreme Court have been conspicuously devoted to the preservation of the old original and true ideals of our confederated Republic. These efforts have been directed to maintaining unimpaired the powers and duties of the States to govern their own people by such laws as shall seem to the majority of the people of the respective States best calculated to promote their respective social, economic, and moral well-being. Mr. Justice Holmes has stood for those principles of State autonomy popularly described by the words "State rights." He has had the vision to understand the philosophy back of our dual system of government. He has understood that there was and is a profound reason for a sharp line of division between the powers of the Federal Government and those of the several States. He can truthfully maintain that he offered his young life and gave much of his youthful strength and energy and some of his blood to preserve the Union indissoluble. In like manner he can truthfully declare that the mature and ripened judgment of his manhood has been devoted, wherever the opportunity of the cases coming before the Court offered to preserve with vigor and energy the States of the Union as indestructible foundations upon which the whole Federal superstructure must rest and without which the same superstructure must fall.

Whether we contemplate Mr. Justice Holmes as the product of a home of great culture and character as a sign of one whose name will live in the hearts of men so long as the English language survives, or as the student of America's oldest and most powerful educational institution, or as the young soldier winning promotion after promotion by his own bravery and performances of duty and rising grade by grade from second lieutenant to colonel, or as the wise counselor and clean advocate at the bar, or as the learned and inspiring teacher of law students, or as the justice or chief justice of the highest court in Massachusetts, or as an Associate Justice of the great tribunal that commands the respect of this Nation and the admiration of the whole world, we are made to marvel at his achievements and to stand with reverence in contemplation of his character and intellectual accomplishments.

THE QUALITY OF A GREAT JUDGE

Again on March 8, 1926, on page 5222 of the Congressional Record, I addressed the House on the subject of Mr. Justice Holmes

Again on March 8, 1928, on page 4343 of the Congressional Record, I spoke with reference to Mr. Justice Holmes, and used, in part, the following language:

I rejoice to bear testimony as a South Carolinian to the magnificent public services of this distinguished son of Massachusetts. The example of Mr. Justice Holmes illustrates the obvious truth that you cannot fix an arbitrary point in the life of the individual when his usefulness shall end. Both the Army and the Navy have an arbitrary age of 64 fixed by a statute for the retirement of their officers. Some men are younger at 64 than others are at 54, and yet some men are older at 64 than others are at 74. If a man has been temperate in his habits, if his emotions have not from time to time overwhelmed him, it is entirely reasonable to expect from him useful service after he passes the age of 64.

him useful service after he passes the age of 64.

For this reason I have advocated the repeal of the existing law requiring Army and naval officers to retire at 64, and have urged instead the enactment of a provision requiring all officers above 60 years of age to appear annually before a medical board for thorough and careful examination as to their physical and mental strength. If deterioration be found, then let the board recommend retirement. But if the officer be found vigorous and hale, physically and mentally, let him continue to serve the Government just so long as he is able to render full service. Surely wisdom and knowledge come with experience. Certainly calmness and understanding should accompany age. Surely both the Army and the Navy need a certain percentage of the officer personnel composed of men of well-balanced judgment, of seasoned understanding, and of ripened wisdom.

standing, and of ripened wisdom.

Furthermore, it will be better for the officer himself. If he loves his profession he will be saddened by being separated from the service, if he be still in sound health and sufficient strength. Too old to take up a new business or profession, he must drag out a discontented existence of idleness. If Marshal Foch had been retired at 64 he never would have commanded 5,000,000 men on the western front. If Marshal Von Hindenburg had been retired at 64 he would never have driven the Russian armies into the Masurian Lakes, and he never would have held, in 1917 and until November 11, 1918, his western lines against the almost irresistible onrushing of allied soldiery.

But to return to Mr. Justice Holmes. I call attention to the

But to return to Mr. Justice Holmes. I call attention to the fact that his case demonstrates that age and experience do not necessarily bring on a reactionary and ultraconservative attitude of mind. His decisions show the greatest degree of mental hospitality. His mind is receptive to new ideas and to the impulses of progress. It is remarkable how often Mr. Justice Holmes concurs in some separate opinion by Mr. Justice Brandeis and how often Mr. Justice Brandeis adopts the opinion of Mr. Justice Holmes as his own.

It will be recalled that when Mr. Justice Brandeis was nominated for the Supreme Court he was attacked by certain groups as so progressive as to be almost radical; he was regarded as so forward-looking that he never looked back. Since the Anglo-Saxon system of jurisprudence is based upon precedent, it is necessary that a judge should be looking backward most of the time. But it is well that any judge should look forward half the time at least. He must look backward to study the trend and tendency of decisions, to catch the current of opinion, and to discern the underlying philosophy of the law. But having done this much he should turn his eye to the future, and, following the course and direction set by the backward glance, should shape decisions and opinions to fit facts and conditions and circumstances as they are about us and as they certainly will be about us in the immediate future.

A PHILOSOPHIC JUDGE

Again on March 7, 1930, at page 4989 of the Congressional Record, I spoke concerning the life and services of Mr. Justice Holmes, and used in part the following language:

By this test Mr. Justice Holmes is a philosopher. Such a philosopher must understand history, not the history merely of a period nor of one nation, nor of a race only, but all history. Such knowledge drives out dogmatism; such knowledge sets the mind free; such knowledge reflects itself in the living and the thinking of a man. Every human being is to a limited extent a philosopher, and certainly sufficiently to recognize another person who possesses philosophy to a preeminent degree. For this reason all classes, educated and uneducated, rich and poor, socially prominent and socially obscure, recognize that Mr. Justice Holmes is in the highest and truest sense a philosopher. They believe that no extraneous dust interferes with his judicial eyes; they feel that justice is safe in his hands. They have had repeated proofs of his toleration and broadmindedness.

proofs of his toleration and broadmindedness.

They know that he believes in freedom—freedom of speech, freedom of action, freedom of competition, freedom for individual development. They know that he has the strength and courage to defend freedom of speech, even when he does not agree with the opinions uttered by the speaker. Our people may not all know what Voltaire said when he wrote, "I do not agree with what you say, but I would give my life to protect your right to say it", but in the heart of every free man this sentiment lies implicit and rises to respond to its every utterance.

Mr. Justice Holmes certainly comprehends the true philosophy of the American Federal system. He is a genuine defender of the

Mr. Justice Holmes certainly comprehends the true philosophy of the American Federal system. He is a genuine defender of the Anglo-Saxon doctrine of local self-government. The preservation of that doctrine as applied to the practical administration of government is essential to the perpetuity of free America. Consequently we find Mr. Justice Holmes insisting that the fourteenth amendment should not be used to shut off the right of experimentation in legislative matter in the several States. Wisely he insists that each State must be permitted to determine its own policies as to domestic matters. Though one or more or many of the States may enact internal legislation repugnant to their individual conception of what is best, he refuses to exercise his power as a part of the Supreme Court of the United States to deny the right of the several States to adopt governmental practices, novel and unusual, and perhaps radical, though they are.

TWO KINDS OF JUDGES

Again on page 4991 of the Congressional Record you will find that I used the following language:

These are two classes of judges; the first made up of the states-man-lawyer type, who takes a broad and liberal view of his obliga-tions, not only as to the litigants in the case before the court but also to society generally, and especially to future generations. John Marshall was an outstanding example of this type of judge. Fortu-nately for our Nation, we have had many such judges on our State supreme courts and on the United States Supreme Court. Outstanding among all such is Mr. Justice Holmes. He does not Outstanding among all such is Mr. Justice Holmes. He does not regard the Constitution as a strait jacket, setting up a multitude of inhibitions to prevent States and the Federal Government from of inhibitions to prevent States and the Federal Government from discharging obligations to the day and generation in which we live. The other group of judges may be described generally as mere lawyer type. With ample knowledge of the doctrines and decisions of the law, with highly trained and discriminating minds, they never exactly get out of the habit of advocacy. It is so natural to form a conclusion of how a case ought to be decided and then to bend all energies by searching the face of the earth for decisions and commentaries to establish the particular thesis prematurely arrived at. These judges are just as honest and just as patriotic as the first class mentioned, but, not possessing the true philosophical spirit, they cannot throw off the restraints of intellectual habits and cannot forget the impressions acquired during a long, successful practice.

But we need more judges of the type first mentioned on both our State supreme courts and the United States Supreme Court. State constitutions and the Federal Constitution ought to be construed in the light of common sense and with the understanding that their makers used general language wherever possible, and where particular language was used they generally intended that such particular language should have a general interpretation so that such constitutions may continue as a framework of government from one generation to another and be so elastic as to meet the changing conditions of society and to apply to the changing instrumentalities of economical life.

Mr. Speaker, it is a liberal education for anyone to follow the judicial career of Mr. Justice Holmes. He was a great seeker after truth. It is even said that he was a liberal. If he was, it was because he lived to exemplify what Jesus of Nazareth meant when he said, "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." A liberal is one who is free from the restraints of tradition, of prejudice, of false ideals, and of self-interest. One who seeks the truth and follows the truth, when found, is a "liberal." I especially call attention to that compilation of the dissenting opinions of Mr. Justice Holmes, collected and arranged by Alfred Lief and published by the Vanguard Press, of New York. The soundness of the legal philosophy of Mr. Justice Holmes rings in his dissents as much as it does in the decisions where he voiced the views of the majority of the Court.

IMPEACHMENT OF JUDGES

Mr. Speaker, the office of judge is the greatest office with which a human being may be vested. The office of President is a truly great office, but circumscribed in jurisdiction and limited as to time of tenure. The same is true of a Senator and of a Representative in the Congress of the United States. But a Federal judge, appointed for life, or, at least, during good behavior, possesses a power and prestige and an opportunity to render service to his fellow men of all ranks and stations of life, unmatched by any other office. The Honorable Hatton W. Sumners, chairman of the Judiciary Committee of the House of Representatives, in addressing the Senate of the United States, sitting as a Court of Impeachment in the trial of Federal Judge Ritter, of Florida, offered some grand thoughts in his address on April 14, 1936, found at page 5469 of the Congressional Record, and in order to emphasize these marvelous views, so aptly and lucidly expressed, I am quoting them at this point:

The respondent must be protected against those who would make him afraid. But we take the position that when a judge on the bench, by his own conduct, does that which makes an ordi-

The respondent must be protected against those who would make him afraid. But we take the position that when a judge on the bench, by his own conduct, does that which makes an ordinary person doubt his integrity, doubt whether his court is a fair place to go, doubt whether he, that ordinary person, will get a square deal there; doubt whether the judge will be influenced by something other than the sworn testimony, that judge must go. This august body writes the code of judicial ethics. This Court fixes the standard of permissible judicial conduct. It will not be, it cannot be, that someone on the street corner will destroy the confidence of the American people in the courts of this country. That cannot happen if the courts are kept clean. If confidence in the courts of this country is destroyed, it is going to be destroyed from within by the judges themselves. I declare to you, standing in my place of responsibility, that that is one thing which neither the House nor the Senate can permit to be tampered with or which they can be easy about.

Now let us see what are the facts in this case. We are sorry to go into a case like this. It is not a pleasant matter to stand here and ask that an incumbent of the Federal bench be separated from his responsibilities. The Government has been very good to this respondent a position for life, subject to but one condition. He does not have to undertake any campaign. When he grows old he continues to draw his salary. What does the Government ask? It imposes just one condition, and that is that the judge shall behave himself, that his conduct shall be good. Is that too much to ask? Destroy the confidence of the people in those who occupy judicial positions, and you destroy the confidence of the people in the courts. That is a high crime.

He takes "the veil"; he cuts himself loose. That is the plan of the Constitution; it is the plan and the philosophy of any government of a free people. He does not have to bother about his income. His office, his place of business, his help, e

In my address to the John Randolph Neal College of Law, Knoxville, Tenn., January 8, 1936, and inserted in the Con-GRESSIONAL RECORD, January 13, 1936, I used this language as to our Federal Constitution, considered as a "living, growing organism":

TALK OF AMENDMENT IS NOT TREASON

TALK OF AMENDMENT IS NOT TREASON

To talk of amending the Constitution by no means implies irreverence for that great instrument, nor for its great framers. It is true they themselves doubted the adoption and the permanency of their proposal. Fortunately, as often happens in human affairs, "they builded better than they knew." Amendment is the very life principle of the Constitution. It was itself an amendment to, in the form of a substitution for, the Articles of Confederacy. The Declaration of Independence had said, among other things, that "when any government becomes destructive of these ends (life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness) it is the right, it is the duty, of the people to after or to abolish it, and to institute in its stead a new government."

Edmond Randolph, of Virginia, author of the Virginia plan, said: "Provision ought to be made for the amendment of the Articles of Union." Charles Pinckney, of South Carolina, credited by many as being the originator of the peculiar idea of dual sovereignty over the same people at the same time, had a provision for amendment in his plan.

George Mason, of Virginia, author of the first Bill of Rights, said:

George Mason, of Virginia, author of the first Bill of Rights, said: "Amendments will be necessary, and it will be better to provide for them in an easy, regular, and constitutional way than to trust to chance and violence." In this sentiment Edmond Randolph concurred.

James Madison, commonly called the Father of the Constitution, in the Federalist, No. 41, said: "It is in vain to oppose constitutional barriers to the impulse of self-preservation", and again James Madison, in the Federalist, No. 43, said: "Useful alterations will be suggested by experience that could not be foreseen."

George Washington in his Farewell Address of September 17, 1796, said: "The basis of our political system is the right of the people to make and to alter their Constitution which at any time exists; until change by an explicit and authentic act of the whole people, it is sacredly obligatory upon all." Again Washington in speaking of the benefits of the new system of government which he was commending with fatherly solicitude to his fellow citizens and their posterity, called attention to the fact that the Constitution contains "within itself a provision for its own amendment."

Thomas Jefferson in a letter written September 7, 1803, said: "Our peculiar security is in the possession of a written Constitution. Let us not make it a blank paper by construction."

The courts and, therefore, judges, are absolutely necessary, because even honest disputes are inevitable. Again I quote from my remarks, printed in Congressional Record of January 13, 1936, as follows:

All lawsuits must be finally decided by somebody. Even athletic contests, sports, and games require umpires. In a baseball game, where the ball reaches the home plate when the forced runner is halfway between bases, no one questions that he is out, and in such case no umpire is necessary. All players on both sides readily acquiesce in the obvious result. But where the runner is sliding to the home plate just as the ball reaches the hands of the catcher, and where movements are so quick that it is difficult for the other players to do their duty, and yet decide the question of out or safe. and where movements are so quick that it is difficult for the other players to do their duty, and yet decide the question of out or safe, then the function of the umpire begins, and his decision, right or wrong, must stand. He must be assumed to be honest, conscientious, and competent. It is the same way with the courts. They umpire all cases, and nobody questions the rightness of their decisions except in a few border-line cases.

Again I quote from my remarks of January 13, 1936, as follows:

GOVERNMENT MUST REFLECT NEEDS AND WISHES OF THE PEOPLE

That any government in these modern times must ultimately respond to the demands of people is testified to by Elihu Root, respond to the demands of people is testified to by Elihu Root, speaking in 1906, as follows:

"The governmental control which they (the people) deem just and necessary they will have. It may be that such control would better be exercised in particular instances by the governments of the States, but the people will have the control they need either from the States or from the National Government; and if the States fail to furnish it in due measure, sooner or later constructions of the Constitution will be found to vest the power where it will be exercised—in the National Government. The true and only way to preserve State authority is to be found in the awakened conscience of the States, their broadened views and higher standard of responsibility to the general public; in effective legislation by the States in conformity to the general moral sense of the country; and in the vigorous exercise for the general public good of that State authority which is to be preserved."

ard of responsibility to the general public; in effective legislation by the States in conformity to the general moral sense of the country; and in the vigorous exercise for the general public good of that State authority which is to be preserved."

But until the great change is made to conform to the solemn will of the people, I feel we should heed the warning of John Fiske, who wrote in The Critical Period of American History, published nearly 50 years ago, as follows:

"If the day should ever arrive (which God forbid) when the people of the different parts of our country shall allow their local affairs to be administered by prefects sent from Washington, and when the self-government of the States shall have been so far lost as that of the Departments of France, or even so far as that of the counties of England—on that day the progressive political career of the American people will have come to an end, and the hopes that have been built upon it for the future happiness and prosperity of mankind will be wrecked forever."

But above the bony structure of the human body, above flesh and blood, even above nerve and nerve centers, is the spirit of man. Nations have something analogous to the individual spirit. It must be the composite of all the spiritual forces of a people. It is difficult to define in words this spirit of a nation. Of course, it is many-sided and multiform. But I think Julian Hawthorne expressed it well, writing in the introduction of his History of the United States in 1898, as follows:

"In these volumes I have taken the view that the American Nation is the embodiment and vehicle of a divine purpose to emancipate and enlighten the human race. Man is entering upon a new career of spiritual freedom; he is to enjoy a hitherto unprecedented condition of political, social, and moral liberty, as distinguished from license, which in truth is slavery. The stage for this grand evolution was fixed in the Western Continent, and the ploneers who went thither were inspired with the desire to escape from t that any given individual is unconscious of the spirit that moves within him, for it is the way of that spirit to subordinate its manifestations to its ends, knowing the frailty of humanity. But it is there, and its gradual and cumulative results are seen in the retrospect, and it may perhaps be divined as to the outline of some of its future developments.

Some sort of recognition of the American idea and of the American destiny affords the only proper ground for American patriotism.

We talk of the size of our country, of its wealth and prosperity, of its physical power, of its enlightenment; but if these things be all that we have to be proud of we have little. They are in truth but outward signs of a far more precious possession within. We are the pioneers of the new day or we are nothing worth talking about. We are at the threshold of our career. Our record thus far is full of faults and presents not a few deformities due to our human frailties and limitations, but our general direction has been onward and upward.

and upward.

The poet epitomizes the whole idea in a few words:

"America hath a mission all her own, to preach and practice before the world the dignity and divinity of man, the glorious claims of human brotherhood, and the soul's allegiance to none but God."

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members who spoke on the Senate joint resolution and the rule may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their own remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arkansas?

There was no objection.

RENT COMMISSION FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Mr. O'CONNOR, from the Committee on Rules, submitted the following resolution (H. Res. 489, Rept. No. 2414), for printing in the RECORD:

House Resolution 489

House Resolution 489

Resolved, That immediately upon the adoption of this resolution the House shall resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of H. R. 11563, a bill "declaring an emergency in the housing condition in the District of Columbia; creating a rent commission for the District of Columbia; prescribing powers and duties of the commission, and for other purposes", and all points of order against said bill are hereby waived. General debate on said bill shall be considered as closed, and the bill shall be considered as having been read the second time. Amendments may be offered to any section of the bill, but debate under the 5-minute rule shall be closed within one hour and a half. At the conclusion of the consideration of the bill for amendment the Committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted, and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and the amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit with or without instructions. mit with or without instructions.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. LORD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on tomorrow morning, after the reading of the Journal, disposition of matters on the Speaker's table, and the special order, that I may address the House for 5 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as

To Mr. Dunn of Pennsylvania, for a few days, on account of illness.

To Mr. Boykin (at the request of Mr. Hill of Alabama), indefinitely, on account of important business.

To Mr. Mott, until April 16, on account of absence from the

IRELAND'S CONTRIBUTION TO AMERICA

Mr. BOLAND. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the Record and insert therein a speech made by a former Congressman recently in the city of Scranton.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. BOLAND. Mr. Speaker, under the leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I include the following address of His Excellency James M. Curley, Governor of Massachusetts, at a banquet of the Irish-American Association of Lackawanna County, Hotel Casey, Scranton, Pa., March 17, 1936:

The poet priest of the Southland, Father Ryan, spoke with a voice of prophecy when he wrote the poem—

"A LAND WITHOUT RUINS

"A land without ruins is a land without memoriesout memories is a land without history. A land that wears a laurel crown may be fair to see; but twine a few sad cypress leaves around the brow of any land, and be that land barren, beautiless, and bleak, it becomes lovely in its consecrated coronet of sorrow, and it wins the sympathy of the heart and of history. Crowns of roses fade, crowns of thorns endure; Calvaries and crucifixions take deepest hold of humanity, the triumphs of might are transient, they pass and are forgotten, the sufferings of right are graven deepest on the chronicle of nations.

"Yes, give me the land where the ruins are spread And the living tread light on the hearts of the dead; Yes, give me a land that is blest by the dust, And bright with the deeds of the downtrodden just.

"Yes, give me the land where the battle's red blast, Has flashed to the future the fame of the past; Yes, give me the land that hath legends and lays. That tell of the memories of long vanished days; Yes, give me the land that hath story and song, Enshrine the strife of the right with the wrong.

"Yes, give me a land with a grave in each spot,
And names in the graves that shall not be forgot;
Yes, give me the land of the wreck and the tomb,
There is grandeur in graves—there is glory in gloom;
For out of the gloom future brightness is born,
As after the night comes the sunrise of morn;
And the graves of the dead with the grass overgrown
May yet form the footstool of liberty's throne,
And each single wreck in the war path of might Shall yet be a rock in the temple of right."

The futility of persecution and oppression is perhaps more abundantly proved in the case of Ireland and its people than in the case of any other country or people in the history of the world. Notwithstanding a program of savagery that would shame the wild Indian of the western plain of early days, the people of Ireland have remained faithful to the teaching of St. Patrick and loyal to the principles of liberty. No darker page has ever been written in the history of the world than that which was written by Oliver Cromwell, whose sole purpose apparently was the extermination of the Irish race. The atrocious and horrible character of his infamy is forcibly brought home to a traveler who has occasion to visit the island of Haiti. With a view to the destruction of the race, Cromwell shipped 50,000 boys and girls destruction of the race, Cromwell shipped 50,000 boys and girls between the ages of 12 and 18 to the island of Haiti. Those who survived the voyage and the climate were required in the course survived the voyage and the climate were required in the course of time to marry Negroes, constituting the population of Haiti, and a visitor even at the present day will find Negroes with skin as black as any African Negro speaking with a brogue and bearing the names Murphy, O'Brien, McCarthy, and Sullivan, and other names prominent among persons of Irish extraction.

Not content with persecution of such atrocious character as to put to shame either Nero or Herod, the Irish people were subjected to engineered famines, with the result that a population at one time in excess of 12,000,000 is today less than 3,000,000. The singular feature has been that regardless of persecution or oppression, nearly every generation has contributed to the list of martyrs and every decade has produced its group of intellectuals, not swash-bucklers, but courageous, gallant men who, like their forebears, were not afraid to die in the sacred name of liberty and for the honor and glory of the land of their fathers. The list is exceedhonor and glory of the land of their fathers. The list is exceedingly large, but on an occasion of this character we would be remiss in an obligation and duty if we failed to direct attention to those who have made luminous the pages of Ireland's history, preserving by their courage and leadership, faith, and principle.

We have Rory O'Moore, 1576, and in 1641 his namesake, Roger O'Moore; and 1778 Henry Grattan, in 1798 the valiant Wolfe Tone, and 1803 the martyred Robert Emmett, followed by that great leader through whose genius, without the firing of a shot, Catholic emancipation was secured for the people of Ireland—Daniel O'Connell; the brilliant John Mitchell in 1848, and the talented James Stewart in 1865, the mailtread was recovered for the people of Ireland—Daniel O'Connell; the brilliant John Mitchell in 1848, and the talented James Stewart in 1865, the mailtread was recovered for the people of Ireland—Daniel O'Connell; the Daniel O'Connell; the Daniel O'Connell of the Post of nell; the brilliant John Mitchell in 1848, and the talented James Stevens in 1865; the parliamentary genius, Charles Stewart Parnell, in 1881, and the more recent martyrs to Irish independence on Easter Sunday in 1916—Shoeby Skeffington, Thomas McDonough, Patrick Pearce, James Connelly, Sir Roger Casement, and others. The persecution and oppression and war of extermination against Ireland by the British Empire has been the most potential factor to the development of liberty and free government in the world. The wild-geese followers of Sarsfield scattered throughout the world by a decree of Cromwell shed luster and made luminous the pages of the history of every land which they graced with their presence and their sword. Every pledge and every promise made to the Irish people through seven centuries of control by Great Britain has been callously violated.

When the American Revolution broke out the restrictions upon Ireland were removed and Grattan, at the head of 80,000 men in

When the American Revolution broke out the restrictions upon Ireland were removed and Grattan, at the head of 80,000 men in open revolt, was lulled into the belief that Ireland's wrongs were to be righted, but, the war over, witnessed the return of the jailer and the enactment of laws even more oppressive than those which formerly existed. During the Napoleonic wars Ireland was again promised home rule, and permitted to enlist to save the Empire, and at Waterloo the Iron Duke of Wellington, an Irishman, defeated Napoleon, and again the Irish were rewarded by the restoration of the shackles and return to their accustomed place—Ireland.

Yes; from Waterloo to the Crimean Peninsula; from the cotton bales of New Orleans under the Irish Andrew Jackson; from Cedar Creek, under the Irishman Sheridan, to the field of Appomattox, under Grant; from Kjartoum to Pekin; from India to South Africa; from the dust of the unnumbered dead there arises like incense a demand for the absolute independence of Ireland.

There were many Americans of Irish extraction who were loud in their condemnation and protest of the insurrection in Dublin in 1916, but personally I do not believe there was justification for protest upon the part of any right-thinking American, since the insurrection in Dublin in 1916 did not differ either in purpose or principle from the insurrection in America on April 19, 1775, and principle from the insurrection in America on April 19, 1775, and men with Irish blood in their veins might well hold their heads in shame were it not for the fidelity and the courage of the group of intellectuals responsible for the revolt of 1916, which compelled the granting by the British Government of the autonomous form of government now enjoyed by Ireland.

It has been my privilege recently to visit Ireland for the first time and to marvel at the progress that has been made in a short period of 15 years. The one- and two-room houses are disappearing, giving way to modern, healthful places of habitation, and more schoolhouses have been erected in 15 years under the Free State Government than during the seven centuries of British misrule. The men constituting the Dail in Ireland are the equal if not the peers in intelligence of any legislative group to be found in the peers in intelligence of any legislative group to be found in the world. They are sincere, unselfish, patriotic, devoting time, energy, and talent to the welfare of the people and the land which they have been chosen to govern. They are making genuine progress and are still idealists.

and are still idealists.

We have been accustomed to regard Ireland in the past as the land of saints and of scholars. Perhaps a little might be said of the artistic side of the race. It has been my privilege to visit both Trinity College and Dublin Museum and to gaze upon the Book of Kells, the most beautiful example of book illuminating ever produced in the history of the world, and produced eight centuries before the Pilgrims landed at Plymouth Rock. To gaze upon the chalice of Ardagh, the cross of Clon Mac Noise, and the Bell of Patrick, the most wonderful examples of the art of the silversmith ever produced, and turned out in the seventh century. Yes, when the rest of the world was wandering down a blind alley in despair, Ireland was keeping alive the torch of Christianity, and civilization and culture of which we in America have been the beneficiaries.

The constructive character of Ireland's contribution to Amer-

The constructive character of Ireland's contribution to Amerthe constructive character of freights contribution to America's progress and prosperity has unquestionably been greater than that of any other race, but unfortunately, too little attention has been given this phase of Irish progress, and too much attention has been bestowed upon other phases.

We have been prone to take such pride in the martial achievements of the Irish as to cause the impression to become deepments of the Irish as to cause the impression to become deep-rooted that in their prowess as a fighting people alone have they been of value. It is not my purpose to detract from the tremendous contribution to American history by gallant men of Irish blood, but, if possible, to clear the atmosphere of the impression blood, but, if possible, to clear the atmosphere of the impression that they have been purely a one-sided people. As soldiers, statesmen, poets, inventors, and orators they have been a contributing factor to human progress. As soldiers, even prior to the conception of liberty in the Colonies, they had achieved fame, and it is pleasing for us, in the month which marks the anniversary of Ireland's patron saint, to assemble as American citizens of Irish blood and rejoice in those achievements which make luminous the pages of the Republic's history.

It is gratifying to know that the ember igniting liberty's torch emanated from that distinguished Irishman, whose fiery utterances furnished the text which resulted in the Republic's birth, when, as a member of the Virginia House of Burgesses, those prophetic as a member of the Virginia House of Burgesses, those prophetic words were uttered, "As for me, give me liberty or give me death", as a member of the Virginia House of Burgesses, those prophetic words were uttered, "As for me, give me liberty or give me death", Patrick Henry.

The evacuation of Boston by the British and armed resistance at Bunker Hill was in a large measure due to the ammunition and arms secured through the daring of Capt. John Sullivan in consequence of the capture of Fort William and Mary, December 11, 1774, more than 4 months before the shot was fired at Lexington and "heard 'round the world."

As Americans of Irish blood visiting our northern neighbor, Canada, it is most interesting to gaze at those rugged heights, rising almost perpendicularly from the St. Lawrence, and there find inserted a bronze tablet sacred to the memory of the first general who died in the struggle for liberty, and but for whose untimely death, in all probability, Canada would today be under the American flag, General Montgomery.

Ships were necessary to combat the mighty power of England, and it remained for Michael O'Brien, of Machias, Maine, with his six sons, to capture an English convoy, and, in return for their signal act of gallantry, for the Continental Congress to christen the first ship of the American Navy Liberty and the second ship Hibernia, the first in command of Jack O'Brien, the second in command of his brother, Jerry O'Brien, and the Navy in command of that dauntless hero, whose service to America has only recently received due recognition at the Capitol in Washington, the first commodore of the American Navy, John Barry.

It is pleasing to us as men of Irish blood, proud of our American citizenship, to know that the great Father of his Country, Gen. George Washington, on the eve of St. Patrick's Day, 1776, placed in command of the Continental forces at Dorchester Heights Gen. John Sullivan, and the password on that memorable occasion which marked the departure of vested British tyranny and oppression from these shores was "St. Patrick."

It is refreshing to recall that when the army of Washington encamped at Valley Forge in th

It is refreshing to recall that when the army of Washington encamped at Valley Forge in the dread winter of 1778, after surviving reverse after reverse for a period of nearly 2 years, when, as historians tell us, the trail of the army could be traced for hundreds of miles by the blood left on the snow and ice by those who had neither shoes nor stockings; when rumors of desertion were rife, and when the cause of liberty was apparently to be lost, an assemblage of Irishmen in Philadelphia raised the princely sum of $515,000 that the war might continue; that the troops might be supplied with food, raiment, shelter, and munitions of war, and that the gloom of a Valley Forge might be dispelled by the radiant suppurst of a triumphant victory at Yorktown and war, and that the gloom of a Valley Forge might be dispelled by the radiant sunburst of a triumphant victory at Yorktown and the liberty of the American people assured for all time.

Much stress has been laid for nearly a century upon the contribution of the French people to American liberty, and it was, indeed, a tremendous contribution, and one worthy of a great people, but let it not be forgotten that the Irish regiments in the service of France pleaded that they might be selected, because of a hereditary hatred of the English, to serve under Washington, and that prominent among the regiments were the regiment de Dillon, the regiment de Walsh, and the regiment de Lacey, made up wholly of the descendants of that Spartan-like band known as the wild geese, who, rather than serve under the conquering Cromwell, took service under the colors of France.

The most courageous document ever known in the world's his-conquering Cromwell, took service under the colors of France.

The most courageous document ever known in the world's history was the Declaration of Independence, and it is pleasing for us to know that Charles Thompson, an Irishman, was secretary at the first meeting of the Continental Congress and continued in that capacity until, at the close of the war, Washington tendered him his sword when liberty had been secured; that among those men who signed the Declaration of Independence 10 were of Irish blood; that 142 of the Minute Men who fought at Lexington and Concord were Irish, and of those who participated in the Battle of Bunker Hill, 228 were of Irish blood; that the White House at Washington was designed by William Hogan and is an ington and Concord were Irish, and of those who participated in the Battle of Bunker Hill, 228 were of Irish blood; that the White House at Washington was designed by William Hogan and is an exact reproduction of the home seat of the Duke of Leinster, near Dublin, Ireland; that the seat of our National Government was originally the farm of Daniel Carroll, brother of Charles Carroll, signer of the Declaration of Independence, who, at the conclusion of the war, tendered his farm as a seat for the American Government; that the figure of Liberty which surmounts the National Capitol was designed by the Irishman, Crawford, and that the Congressional Library, with its matchless mosaics, its fairylike colorings, its incomparable marble staircase, stands as a monument to the ability, the honesty, and the honor of its designer, an Army engineer named Casey.

Every great privation visited upon the Irish people has proved a blessing in disguise for America. Persecution and oppression in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries furnished America with valiant sons and pure daughters, inured to poverty, born to privation, and eminently fitted for the blazing of a broad highway to progress and liberty in a new and strange land.

The famine of '48 marked the beginning of a stream of immigration such as has seldom been witnessed in the history of any land. From 1848 to 1870 more than two and one-half million Irish men and women came to these shores, not the infirm and the decrepit but the staunch and sturdy manhood and the wholesome and nurse womenbood the flower of Ireland; and these were the decrepit but the staunch and sturdy manhood and the wholesome and pure womanhood, the flower of Ireland; and these were the men that aided in making possible Grant's campaign in the Wilderness, Sherman's march from Atlanta to the sea, and Sheridan's master stroke at Cedar Creek. They were lovers of liberty first and Ireland second.

What a wonderful heritage is ours when we contemplate the character, the courage, and the manhood of these mighty men!

Picture the gallant Gen. Michael Corcoran on the occasion of the visit of Prince Albert to America in 1860, ordered by the Governor of New York to do escort duty with his regiment, and the manly Corcoran dashing his sword to the ground, stating: "I refuse to do honor to the representative of a government that for seven centuries has persecuted and oppressed my race"; and for this utterance the Sixty-ninth Regiment disbanded by order of the Governor of New

Then picture Fort Sumpter fired upon and the gallant American general, Corcoran, tendering the Governor of New York the services of the Sixty-ninth Regiment in defense of the Union, and this regiment later welded into that fighting machine of imperishable memory, the Irish Brigade, first under Corcoran and later under the immortal general, Thomas Francis Meagher, adding fresh laurels on every bloody field to the Stars and Stripes of our country until in 1864, when the fighting was most severe, historians tell us the Irish Brigade in that year captured more flags and standards than the remainder of the Union Army combined and never lost one flag or standard.

We may well say with him who honored both the land of his birth and the land of his adoption, the lamented O'Reilly:

"No treason we bring from Erin—nor bring we shame or guilt, The sword we hold may be broken, but we have not dropped the hilt.

The wreath we bear to Columbia is twisted of thorns, not bays; And the songs we sing are saddened by thoughts of desolate days.

But the hearts we bring for Freedom are washed in the surge of tears;

And we claim our rights by a people's fight, outliving a thousand years."

The chaste, humble, and Christlike life of St. Patrick and his teachings are the most treasured heritage of the Irish people. They have proved an adamantlike force in the pathway of materialism, atheism, and chaos in the life of this Republic. They stand for the purity of womanhood and for the sanctity of American home life, and there is no method by which their benefit and blessing to this Republic may be gaged. What shall be said of the blessing to this Republic may be gaged. material contribution?

material contribution?

The first Iron furnace in America was conducted by George Taylor, a signer of the Declaration of Independence, born in Ireland, and whose establishment during the Revolutionary War turned out shot and shell for the Continental forces. America today leads the world in the manufacture of steel and iron products, and this great industry, through whose existence prosperity and happiness is made possible for thousands of American families, at its birth had an Irish father.

The railroads of the United States furnish means of communication, development, and prosperity for the American people, and

The railroads of the United States furnish means of communication, development, and prosperity for the American people, and are in all probability even a larger contributing force to national prosperity than any other single institution.

The first spike driven to hold in place the first rail of our great railroad system was driven by Charles Carroll of Carrollton, Md., in 1809, and the first steam engine built in the United States was the work of Christopher Colles, who was born in Ireland in 1738. It would be an utter impossibility for this Nation to develop in the short space of years necessary for our present commercial greatness were it not for the inventive genius of the Irishman, Robert Fulton. who built the first steamboat.

ert Fulton, who built the first steamboat.

Dean Swift said that the real benefactor of the human race is Dean Swift said that the real benefactor of the human race is the man who can make two blades of grass grow where only on grew before. What shall we say of the great McCormack family, whose harvesting and reaping machinery is today found in every portion of the world, and through the use of which millions of bushels of corn, wheat, rye, and oats are today grown where only stubble, stones, and weeds previously existed? The backbone of this and of any other nation is agricultural prosperity, and this prosperity annually trickling down the avenues and arteries of trade and endeavor, whose reflex is happy homes, educated citizenship, and healthy children, has been rendered possible through the inventive genius of the McCormack family.

America is proud of her great candy industry, the manufacture of which annually adds millions of dollars to the wealth of the people, and this great industry had its birth in the genius of the Irishman John Hannon, first manufacturer of chocolate in America.

In our hours of leisure we enjoy companionship with music,

In our hours of leisure we enjoy companionship with music, thanks to Thomas Crehore, first manufacturer of the piano in

The prosperity of America is in a large measure due to our leadership in textile industries, and the first to introduce the manufacture of cotton in America was Patrick Tracy Jackson, while the Irish colonists in 1718, emigrating to America, were the first to introduce the manufacture of linen.

A recognized world institution today is the daily newspaper, and the first daily newspaper in this land was published by John Dunlap, of Strabane, Ireland.

I believe it needless to refer to Ireland's contribution to America in the field of statesmanship. Eleven Presidents of the United States gloried in the Irish blood which coursed through their veins. It has been truly said of the Irish race:

"We have run the gamut of want and woe, Of hunger and pain and dearth; The century's flood of our tears and blood Has deluged the plains of the earth.

There was never a wine press in all the world
By those of our race untrod;

Now we claim the price of our sacrifice
From the bar of the watching God."

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED

Mr. PARSONS, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that that committee had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the House of the following titles, which were thereupon signed by the Speaker:

H. R. 3806. An act to establish a commercial airport for the District of Columbia;

H. R. 4387. An act conferring jurisdiction upon the United States District Court for the Western District of Michigan to hear, determine, and render judgment upon the claim of Barbara Blackstrom;

H. R. 11691. An act making appropriations for the legislative branch of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1937, and for other purposes; and

H. R. 11968. An act relating to the authority of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to make rehabilitation loans for the repair of damages caused by floods or other catastrophes, and for other purposes.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 50 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until tomorrow, Thursday, April 16, 1936, at 12 o'clock noon.

COMMITTEE HEARING

COMMITTEE ON THE PUBLIC LANDS

The Committee on the Public Lands will meet Thursday, April 16, 1936, at 10:30 a.m., in room 328, House Office Building, to consider, in executive session, H. R. 10357, and other matters.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

778. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a letter from the Chief of Engineers, United States Army, dated April 14, 1936, submitting a report, together with accompanying papers, on a preliminary examination of Rock Harbor, Mass., authorized by the River and Harbor Act approved August 30, 1935; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

779. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a letter from the Chief of Engineers, United States Army, dated April 13, 1936, submitting a report, together with accompanying papers, on a preliminary examination of Bayou St. John, La., authorized by the River and Harbor Act approved August 30, 1935; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

780. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a letter from the Chief of Engineers, United States Army, dated April 13, 1936, submitting a report, together with accompanying papers, on a preliminary examination and survey of Olcott Harbor, N. Y., authorized by the River and Harbor Act approved August 30, 1935; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

781. A letter from the Chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, transmitting an interim report of the Federal Trade Commission with respect to the sale and distribution of milk products (H. Doc. No. 451); to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce and ordered to be printed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII,

Mr. WALTER: Committee on the Judiciary. S. 3434. An act to provide for the appointment of one additional judge for the district of Kansas; without amendment (Rept. No. 2405). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. BLAND: Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries. H. R. 8525. A bill prescribing regulations for carrying on the business of lighter service from any of the ports of the United States to stationary ships or barges located offshore, and for the purpose of promoting the safety of navigation; with amendment (Rept. No. 2407). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. STUBBS: Committee on Indian Affairs. S. 2047. An act to promote the general welfare of the Indians of the State of Oklahoma, and for other purposes; with amendment (Rept. No. 2408). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. PALMISANO: Committee on the District of Columbia. H. R. 12242. A bill to provide for lunacy proceedings in the District of Columbia; without amendment (Rept. No. 2409). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. IMHOFF: Committee on Foreign Affairs. Senate Joint Resolution 233. Joint resolution providing for the participation of the United States in the Great Lakes Exposition to be held in the State of Ohio during the year 1936, and authorizing the President to invite the Dominion of Canada to participate therein, and for other purpose; with amendment (Rept. No. 2411). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. McREYNOLDS: Committee on Foreign Affairs. Senate Joint Resolution 248. Joint resolution to provide for participation by the United States in an inter-American conference to be held at Buenos Aires, Argentina, or at the capital of another American republic, in 1936; with amendment (Rept. No. 2412). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union,

Mr. KELLER: Committee on the Library. H. R. 10544. A bill authorizing the erection of a memorial to those who met their death in the wreck of the dirigible Shenandoah; without amendment (Rept. No. 2413). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. GEHRMANN: Committee on Indian Affairs. S. 2715. An act conferring jurisdiction on the Court of Claims to hear and determine the claims of the Choctaw Indians of the State of Mississippi; with amendment (Rept. No. 2415). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII.

Mr. BEITER: Committee on War Claims. H. R. 785. A bill for the relief of Bertram Lee Schoonmaker; with amendment (Rept. No. 2410). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. KNIFFIN: A bill (H. R. 12294) to promote the conservation and profitable use of agricultural land resources by Federal aid to farmers, and to reestablish farmers' purchasing power by making payments in connection with the increase in domestic consumption of agricultural commodities, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, a bill (H. R. 12295) to protect domestic producers of sugar beets and sugar cane and to encourage the domestic production thereof by the regulation of foreign and interstate commerce in sugar; to provide for the fixing and revision of yearly quotas of sugar that may be imported into, transported to, or received in continental United States; to maintain a continuous and stable supply of sugar in continental United States for the benefit of both producers and consumers; and for other purposes; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. BARRY: A bill (H. R. 12296) to provide for the local-delivery rate on certain first-class mail matter; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

By Mr. CELLER: A bill (H. R. 12297) to establish a United States Administrative Court to expedite the hearing and determination of controversies with the United States, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. DEMPSEY: A bill (H. R. 12298) to provide a civil government for the Virgin Islands of the United States; to the Committee on Insular Affairs.

By Mr. POWERS: A bill (H. R. 12299) to authorize a preliminary examination of the Delaware River with a view to the control of its floods; to the Committee on Flood Control.

By Mr. SMITH of Washington: A bill (H. R. 12300) to provide a uniform rate of pension for single Spanish-American War veterans without dependents while hospitalized, to extend hospitalization to persons recognized as veterans of the Spanish-American War under laws in effect prior to March 20, 1933, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Pensions

By Mr. THOMASON: A bill (H. R. 12301) to authorize an appropriation for the purpose of establishing a national cemetery at Fort Bliss, Tex.; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. WHELCHEL: A bill (H. R. 12302) to provide annuities for widows of retired civil-service employees of the United States and District of Columbia; to the Committee on the Civil Service.

By Mr. RAMSPECK: A bill (H. R. 12303) to amend section 11 of the act of March 1, 1919 (40 Stat. 1270); to the Committee on Printing.

By Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky: A bill (H. R. 12304) amending the Federal Trade Commission Act to give the Federal Trade Commission jurisdiction where unfair acts of competition or unfair practices are involved in the importation and sale of articles from abroad; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. BLAND: A bill (H. R. 12305) to extend the jurisdiction of the Coast Guard; to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. KING: A bill (H. R. 12306) to add certain lands on the island of Hawaii to the Hawaii National Park, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. DRISCOLL: A bill (H. R. 12307) to amend section 3 of the act entitled "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes", approved October 15, 1914, as amended (U.S.C., title 15, sec. 14); to the Comittee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. GEHRMANN: A bill (H. R. 12308) to enable farmers who are unable to pay emergency seed and feed loans in full when due, to work out the amounts due thereon; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. WEARIN: A bill (H. R. 12309) to amend the Federal Farm Loan Act, as amended, to provide for an interest rate not in excess of 3 percent in the case of installments payable during the period of 2 years commencing July 1, 1936; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. WIGGLESWORTH: A bill (H. R. 12310) for the protection of laborers and mechanics on public buildings or public works of the United States; to the Committee on Labor

By Mr. BUCHANAN: Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 568) to provide an additional appropriation for fees of jurors and witnesses, United States courts, for the fiscal year 1936; to the Committee on Appropriations.

By Mr. McREYNOLDS: Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 569) to authorize an appropriation for the expenses of participation by the United States in a conference at Brussels to revise the Convention for the Protection of Literary and Artistic Works concluded at Bern, September 9, 1886, and revised at Rome June 2, 1928; to the Committee on Foreign

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. BARRY: A bill (H. R. 12311) for the relief of the P. L. Andrews Corporation; to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. DITTER: A bill (H. R. 12312) granting a pension to Katherine Myers; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. JOHNSON of West Virginia: A bill (H. R. 12313) for the relief of James L. Barnett; to the Committee on the Civil Service.

Also, a bill (H. R. 12314) granting an increase of pension to Hannah Gibbs; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. KRAMER: A bill (H. R. 12315) for the relief of George W. Jeffords; to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 12316) for the relief of Victor Bert Smith; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. PATTERSON: A bill (H. R. 12317) granting a pension to Isabel Bennett; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SMITH of Washington: A bill (H. R. 12318) for the relief of George T. Heppenstall; to the Committee on Claims. By Mr. THOM: A bill (H. R. 12319) granting a pension to

James A. Lenhart; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions. By Mr. TONRY: A bill (H. R. 12320) for the relief of Mendel Leibick: to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. WERNER: A bill (H. R. 12321) granting an increase of pension to Charles Face; to the Committee on Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

10729. By Mr. ROGERS of New Hampshire: Petition of the Mayor and Board of Aldermen of the City of Manchester, N. H., requesting and urging that a full-time Weather Bureau station be established in New Hampshire; to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

10730. Also, petition of the Mayor and Board of Aldermen of the City of Manchester, N. H., requesting and urging that Federal authorities take steps to prevent floods in the Merrimack River watershed; to the Committee on Flood Control.

10731. By Mr. SADOWSKI: Petition of the Yugoslav Workers' Club Oreski, of Detroit, Mich., protesting against the Kramer sedition bill; to the Committee on Military 10732. Also, petition of the Yugoslav Workers' Club Oreski, protesting against the Tydings-McCormack disaffection bill; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

10733. Also, petition of the board of directors of the Wayne County Federal Savings & Loan Association, protesting against Senate bill 2914; to the Committee on the 10734. By the SPEAKER: Petition of the Cragin State Bank Depositors Justice Committee; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

SENATE

THURSDAY, APRIL 16, 1936

(Legislative day of Monday, Feb. 24, 1936)

IMPEACHMENT OF HALSTED L. RITTER

The Senate, sitting for the trial of the articles of impeachment against Halsted L. Ritter, judge of the United States District Court for the Southern District of Florida, met at 12 o'clock meridian for deliberation with closed doors.

At 5 o'clock and 48 minutes p. m. the doors were reopened. Mr. ASHURST. I send to the desk an order, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BACHMAN in the chair). The clerk will read the order submitted by the Senator from Arizona

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Ordered, That upon the final vote in the pending impeachment of Halsted L. Ritter each Senator may, within 4 days after the final vote, file his opinion in writing, to be published in the printed proceedings in the case.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the order is agreed to.

Mr. ASHURST. I present another order and ask for its consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Ordered, That upon the final vote in the pending impeachment of Halsted L. Ritter, the Secretary shall read the articles of impeachment separately and successively, and when the reading of each article shall have been concluded the Presiding Officer shall each article shall have been concluded the Presiding Omcer shall state the question thereon as follows:

"Senators, how say you? Is the respondent, Halsted L. Ritter, guilty or not guilty?"

Thereupon the roll of the Senate shall be called, and each Senator as his name is called, unless excused, shall arise in his place and answer "guilty" or "not guilty."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the order? The Chair hears none, and the order is agreed to.

Mr. VAN NUYS. I submit an order and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The proposed order will be read.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Ordered, That the Secretary be, and he is hereby, directed to return to A. L. Rankin, a witness on the part of the United States, the two documents showing the lists of cases, pending and closed, in the law office of said A. L. Rankin, introduced in evidence during the trial of the impeachment of Halsted L. Ritter, United States district judge for the southern district of Florida

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the order is agreed to.

Mr. ASHURST. I submit a further order, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The order proposed by the Senator from Arizona will be read.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Ordered, That the Secretary of the Senate be, and he is hereby, directed to return to the clerk of the United States District Court for the Southern District of Florida and the clerk of the circuit court, Palm Beach County, Fla., sitting in chancery, the original papers filed in said courts which were offered in evidence during the proceedings of the Senate sitting for the trial of the impeachment of Halsted L. Ritter, United States district judge for the southern district of Florida.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the order is agreed to.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, that concludes all the orders requisite to the procedure at this time. I assume the Senate may want to go into legislative session.

Mr. ROBINSON. Let me say that the Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNary], who left the Chamber a few moments ago, asked that no legislative session be held this evening, and I shall not, therefore, move a legislative session.

NOTICE OF MOTION TO SUSPEND RULE XL

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that, as in legislative session, I be permitted to file notice of a motion to suspend the rule for the consideration of an amendment of House bill 12098, being the appropriation bill for the Departments of State, Justice, Commerce, and Labor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I inquire if the matter presented by the Senator from South Carolina calls for action this afternoon.

Mr. BYRNES. No; simply under the rule I must file notice of a motion a day previous to the consideration of the appropriation bill.

Mr. AUSTIN. Very well.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from South Carolina? The Chair hears none, and permission to file the notice is granted.

The notice filed by Mr. Byrnes is as follows:

Pursuant to the provisions of rule XL of the Standing Rules of the Senate, I hereby give notice in writing that I shall hereafter move to suspend paragraph 4 of rule XVI, for the purpose of proposing to the bill (H. R. 12098) making appropriations for the Departments of State and Justice and for the judiciary, and for the Departments of Commerce and Labor, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1937, and for other purposes, the following amendment, viz:

At the end of the bill insert the following:

"That in passing upon applications made for compensation under the provisions of the item for 'Payment to cotton ginners' contained in title I of the Supplemental Appropriation Act, fiscal year 1936 (Public Law No. 440, 74th Cong.), and in making payments pursuant to such applications, the Secretary of Agriculture is authorized and directed, in the interest of saving as much administrative expense as possible and in order to avoid delay in passing upon such applications, to accept as sufficient proof in connection with any such application, proof of the number of bales ginned by the applicant during the period June 1, 1935, to February 10, 1936, inclusive: Provided, That no payment shall be made on any application for such compensation unless the application is filed prior to September 1, 1936."

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. ROBINSON. I move that the Senate, sitting for the trial of the articles of impeachment, stand adjourned until 12 o'clock noon tomorrow.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock and 55 minutes p. m.) the Senate, sitting for the trial of the articles of impeachment, adjourned, the adjournment being, under the order heretofore entered, until tomorrow, Friday, April 17, 1936, at 12 o'clock meridian.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

THURSDAY, APRIL 16, 1936

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Our Father in Heaven, we pray that the word of the prophet may be our guide and inspiration: "He hath showed thee, O man, what is good; and what doth Jehovah require of thee but to deal justly and to love mercy and to walk humbly with thy God." In life and in thought let these words be held in all reverence. We pray that Thy will may be our law, our strength, and our influence. Let it be a life. Almighty God, just let this teaching run through our daily conduct, giving it power, purpose, and giving to others the inspiration of a fine example. O burst our bonds and set us free; touch our souls and heal them; speak, and the clashing between our lives and Thine will be no more. As thanksgiving and praise is the language of heaven, we join with the Psalmist: "Oh, praise the Lord, all ye nations; praise Him all ye peoples." In our Savior's name. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Horne, its enrolling clerk, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment a bill of the House of the following title:

H. R. 11327. An act to exempt from taxation receipts from the operation of Olympic Games if donated to the State of California, the city of Los Angeles, and the county of Los Angeles.

MONUMENT SITE COMMEMORATING FIRST ENTRANCE INTO THE CITY OF WASHINGTON OF A STEAM BAILROAD

Mr. LEWIS of Maryland. Mr. Speaker, I rise to propound a unanimous-consent request which concerns House Joint Resolution 362, providing for the selection of a site and the erection thereon of a suitable monument to the first entry of a railroad into the District of Columbia. This joint resolution has been taken off the Consent Calendar on account of repeated objections. The gentlemen who made these objections were under a misapprehension as to the cost involved, it being their thought that the Government would have to bear the expense. This is not a correct view of the situation.

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that House Joint Resolution 362, to authorize the selection of a site and the erection thereon of a suitable monument indicating the historical significance of the first entrance into the city of Washington of a steam railroad, and for other purposes, be restored to the Consent Calendar, and when the Consent Calendar is again considered these gentlemen will have an opportunity to explain to the House their motives in making the objections,

The Clerk read the title of the joint resolution.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Maryland asks unanimous consent that House Joint Resolution 362 be restored to the Consent Calendar. Is there objection?

Mr. ZIONCHECK. Mr. Speaker, I object.

The SPEAKER. Under the special order for today the Chair recognizes the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. Mas-SINGALE] for 20 minutes.

Mr. MASSINGALE. Mr. Speaker, I am going to devote the time allotted to me this morning in trying to bring to you the feeling that the people of my section of the country entertain in regard to the situation which confronts the Nation at the present time. I share the sentiments that my people have; in fact, I believe as strongly as they do in regard to the matters about which I am going to talk.

Newspaper accounts of prosperity are appearing every morning. These accounts evidently reflect what is happening among the big industries in certain sections of the country. Probably all sections of the country have felt the stimulus given to business by the outpouring of billions of Government money in the nature of aid. Personal observation, visiting among the people, talking with them, and innumerable letters received from them make me bold to assert that things lack much of being what the papers claim they are. The sources of newspaper information are too much localized—car loadings, ship tonnage, and stock markets may be unerring indices for big business transactions, but they fail to sound out the little fellow not engaged in such businesses. His condition, I would say, is some little better but not much. Though his group comprises approximately 100,000,000 of our population, he is not enumerated nor considered in making estimates in our race to outrun and overtake prosperity. Living among that large percent of our unenumerated and having firsthand information of their economic plight and of their mental attitude, I am here to say to you that the newspapers are wrong and our beloved challenge to our obligation to live a good, wholesome, honest | President is wrong in stating that we are all happy because prosperity is just the same as already here. If the President | should go in person to the Midwest farm area, drive the section lines in any direction, take a look into every home he might come to on his journey, look into the faces of the children, talk for a short while with the small-town folks, including the country doctor and school teacher, he would not find it necessary to prolong his journey beyond one day before he would be ready to return to Washington with the determination to kick out of the way the real barrier that makes recovery impossible. When newspapers telling about recovery and return of happy days are read by those people they doubtless think of the advice they got several years ago to go buy at least two new automobiles. If it should be suggested to them that it would be glorious to take their families up to New York for a fortnight at the new Waldorf-Astoria, they would be equally enthused as by reading about their present happiness and prosperity. The time has arrived when the people can no longer be fooled. Congress has the power to wield the ax; it remains to be seen if we have the courage to do the cutting.

Since coming to Congress I have made it my daily routine to attend the sessions. I have failed to respond to but one roll call. My purpose for staying on the floor was to learn what was going on in different parts of America and what was of greatest concern to the people. Naturally, a real recovery from economic woes was uppermost in thought. If I have correctly judged the sentiment of the Members on recovery there is perfect unanimity in the conclusion that the people should have restored to them a purchasing power sufficient to enable them to acquire, and if needful to consume, all the products of industry; that when purchasing power is high and liberally diffused among the people, buying of goods will be brisk; that when this purchasing power is low and confined to a comparatively few people there is a lessening in demand for goods; and that when the demand for goods lessens, production is curtailed and unemployment results. It is important, therefore, that a sane, sensible, and living balance be established between consumer or purchaser and producer. When one of these is throttled down the other cannot regularly function and the machine will jump or run irregularly. Man power has so far exceeded the demands for production that millions are out of employment and the Nation is dissatisfied and unhappy. Many attribute this condition of unemployment largely to invention and use of machinery and equipment that replaces labor. That this does contribute to some extent there is no doubt, for machines are in daily use as evidence of the fact that they are substituting for man power. We may expect further invention of machines to cheapen and expedite production, and there will result a corresponding further unemployment unless there is a reduction in the hours constituting a day's work, these hours to be adjusted to changing conditions due to further labor-saving machines.

Illustrative of the ravages of invention on employment it is estimated that the completion of the Norris Dam, and similar projects, will furnish sufficient power to take the place of the equivalent of all the labor performed by every slave set free by Abraham Lincoln. Science and invention are together apparently making their greatest effort to relieve man from toil. The greatest incentive in the field of endeavor is to do something that adds to man's comfort, happiness, and general welfare, and we may depend upon the genius of America to continue to invent, supply, and use every kind of device that will tend to relieve life of as many burdens as it can suggest. Knowing this, we are bound to admit that unemployment, as we now use the word, is going to increase. Unemployment is a great social problem that projects itself so largely into our economic affairs as to dwarf economy, measured in money terms, and make it subservient to sociology, the science of human society. This means, according to my view, that we are face to face with the fact that America must be more concerned with human welfare as a whole than with giving financial primacy to a comparatively few business tycoons.

The people of this country are, of course, aware of the fact that for years there has been an unequal distribution of the products of industry, and they are likewise aware that under the present money machinery a few people are reaping all the profiting while many millions are destitute. They realize that that property which is the product of industry is lawful property and that any property which is the product of law is unlawful, and is unfair property, and is a discrimination against all who are not its beneficiaries. They know that when Congress relinquished to the bankers of the country its right to coin money and fix its value it thereby gave the bankers the power of life and death over them. They know that these bankers by a stroke of the pen can raise or lower the prices of their products. They have seen the mere pronouncement of these bankers sweep away every vestige of property that frugal families and good husbandmen have worked for a lifetime to accumulate. Without warrant Congress delegated this right to bankers, and bankers have exercised it. Bankers deal in money, and it is from its interest-bearing qualities and its manipulation that profit comes to them. It ought to be obvious that of all classes they should not be given the right to coin it and to fix its value. In fact, no private person or corporation should be given that right. It is a Government right. There should be no speculative incentive in its issuance. It should be sound and of stable and unchanging value. The bushel, the yardstick, the pound, and other measures do not change. Money, being a measure or standard of value, should not change. Stabilizing the dollar will prevent manipulation. and no agency will be able to precipitate a panic by increasing its value or by causing its value to be lowered to an inflationary point. Changing the value of the dollar has pauperized the common people of this country. With knowledge of such operations, and in the light of present conditions in America, it is but natural that people might be expected to grow restive. The poor people of this country are rich in faith, and they are looking hopefully to this Congress to enact some law that will help them find jobs. They are grateful to our President and to you for public benefactions in the last 3 years, without which they would have died, but they know that with all the billions spent on direct and work relief there is as yet little hope for them, and they are wondering if there is no end to the misery and suffering which they have endured for the past 6 years. Surcease from want of food and clothing, added to the fear that their children may become detached from home influence and cast out as driftwood into an unsympathetic world has perhaps had a marked effect on their mental attitude and recast their entire psychology. I am not surprised that many movements, or thought waves, along lines of relief have originated among the people and that some of them have found fertile soil in their hearts. Such movements may not stand the test of criticism of the leading economists and university professors, but an impoverished and exhausted hope has no time to wait on the support of logic and experience. Remember the old adage that a drowning man will grasp at a straw.

I live among and represent in this House a large number of fine but financially distressed people. They are as loyal to the Government of the United States as is any Member of this Congress. They know they can no longer afford to raise families; they are afraid to embark in such an undertaking. The bitter experience of farm life has transformed them. Many of them see in the Townsend plan a rift in the enveloping clouds of despair. They have read of a plan emanating from Washington to take their young daughters from them and have them trained at Government expense to become domestics, servant girls, and maids for the rich. The Government is to pay these girls $1 a week for carfare while in training to learn how to carry tea trays at bridge parties. Think of the once proud and honorable American family forced to the dole by an archaic economic set-up and then barbarously drag out of that home what used to be the jewels in it, the little girls, so they may be trained for menial service to the rich! I do not believe that anyone is so bereft of the natural virtues as to think that law-made poverty carries a virus that kills mother love. Have we worshiped at mammon's altar so long that Americans will tolerate a condition of this sort and vouchsafe its growth and continuance without courage to attempt to correct it? The Members of Congress may prefer further to endure what we have in an economic way, for it is an easy thing for a Congressman to get along. It does not require any effort to have a credit of $10,000 entered up in his name by the Sergeant at Arms, but this is not the case with but few other Americans. Something, some force, some power, works to starve and impoverish 70,000,000 of the people of our country, and we are either unwilling or unable to grapple with it. Are we going to permit 70,000,000 of our people to continue in poverty and despair or 10,000,000 old people suffer for the bare comforts of life when plenty abounds but not a bite to eat or a garment to wear? Will we see untold millions of our school children go undernourished to school, clad only in rags, sleeping in hovels and faltering in step, simply because no economist has figured out an approved plan for their betterment? Why waste our time in abusing or making an effort to belittle any new thought suggested for the relief of the poor?

Would it not be the wiser course to take an inventory of what we have, and is it not more becoming in the Congress to make a fair and sane and frank approach to the principle of any proposed measure for, or supposedly for, the general welfare? I should think that all differences of economic thought, inherited or acquired, should be dissolved in favor of bringing to our people release from the stark specter of starvation and want. This era of crime and surly unrest and the enforced humiliation that comes from the dole are all due to unemployment. Such problems are haunting us today, and they loom larger perhaps than we want to admit, but they loom nevertheless. The more clearly we permit ourselves to see the better we can do the job.

Why does it become necessary for the economists, and even Members of Congress, to call a man a buzzard or a demagogue or a charlatan or an idiot simply because, forsooth, he may be groping around in the dark hoping to find a way out? It surely is more constructive to point out his error than to unlimber all the batteries of billingsgate against him. Do not mistake the fact that the approaching storm has been seen and heard by every Member in this House. We cannot play the ostrich by sticking our heads in the sand so we may not see the lightning's flash, nor can we become permanently deaf to the thunder's roar by sticking cotton in our ears. Whether right or wrong, millions of people are earnestly asking this body to recognize them for a hearing on their demands for what they regard an adequate social security. I concede that if the demand is recognized there must be an upheaval in our economic program, and this leads to the question: Is not the present economic set-up equal to the task of guaranteeing to our people a fair and equitable division of all the products of industry? Let us see what this system has done, is doing now, and will continue to do, confining the scope of inquiry largely to the past 6 years, thus placing the facts as we find them under 3 years of Republican and 3 years of Democratic rule.

WHAT IS THE STATE OF THE UNION?

The year 1929 was the peak year for all kinds of business. The national income for that year was $83,000,000,000. This dropped to the low of $39,400,000,000 in 1932, and in 1934 was $47,600,000,000. This income represents all money received by all kinds of business in a given year and is the jackpot out of which must come the distributive part of every person or corporation engaged in business. It is the purchasing power of the people of the United States. From this national income every laborer must get his pay, every merchant must get his pay for goods sold, every farmer must get his pay for his crops and farm produce, and every person must depend upon the size of the income as to whether prices shall be high or low.

If this income is kept big and the distribution of it not unfair, people will be prosperous and there will be no losses. The average yearly loss in purchasing power to our people in every year since 1929 has been $40,000,000,000. Remember, this is an economic loss, actual and direct. It can never be recovered. It is money gone from us by reason of the operation of our economic system. From 1920 to 1935 values of dependent on others for support. To illustrate his thought farm lands declined $45,000,000,000. These losses may be recouped if we have the wisdom and courage to enact legislation that will do it. The loss in urban real-estate values during the same time is estimated to be $30,000,000,000. It is conservative to say that since 1929 the average number of unemployed has been 10,000,000. Allowing them a minimum of $2 per day, their loss in 1 year would be $7,200,000,000 and for the 6 years $43,000,000,000, and this is a permanent loss that had better be forgotten. The only hope for this class, as well as for society, is to provide jobs for those who want to work. There have been other losses due to bank failures, suspension of mercantile firms, and the like that are directly chargeable to our break-down in economics, and staggering amounts have been lost through foreclosures on both city and country real estate. Some writer has made the statement that the loss in money values sustained during this panic is in excess of the cost to the United States of all wars in which this country has been engaged and in excess of all the property damage inflicted by cyclones, floods, earthquakes, and other disasters since the beginning of the Government. In addition to direct losses mentioned, we are facing constantly increasing indirect losses. The John Price Jones Corporation reports show that private philanthropies in 1935 increased 40 percent over 1934. Grace Abbott, the United States delegate to the International Labor Conference, is authority for the statement that between three and four million young men and women graduates of secondary colleges and of universities cannot find work and most of them have never had a job. In addition to that there are 8,000,000 boys and girls between the ages of 19 and 26 who are unemployed, and the list of unemployed in the country is stated to be at this time 12,500,000.

The annual interest bill of the Government of the United States is $1,000,000,000. The annual tax bill of the Nation is $12,000,000,000. According to J. Edgar Hoover and his associates, the crime bill in America is $15,000,000,000 annually. I have not been able to obtain statistics on our cost for caring for the poor in almshouses or supported by private charity, but it is an enormous amount. From February 1932 to July 1936 it is estimated that the Government will have spent in relief $20,000,000,000, not more than half of which, such as loans to banks and railroads, is subject to repayment. In addition to the above, the annual interest rate on all debts is $15,000,000,000. This interest, however, is not chargeable to governmental functions and should be attributed to bad business judgment.

HOW DO OUR PEOPLE LIVE?

According to Harry Hopkins there are 21,000,000 people on the dole. There are on the Federal pay rolls 3,000,000; on other Government pay rolls, 6,000,000; on C. C. C. pay rolls, 500,000; on W. P. A. pay rolls, estimated, 3,000,000; those receiving A. A. A. benefits, 15,000,000. Thus we see there are nearly 50,000,000 people drawing salaries from the Government, receiving Government benefits, and on the dole. In addition to this 50,000,000 people there are large numbers of others who are dependent either wholly or in part upon other individuals for a living. Faced with this appalling situation there has sprung up a large group of earnest men and women who are protesting its continuance. They advocate the Townsend plan-the plan embodied in H. R. 7154, known as the McGroarty bill. Its advocates believe they are presenting a proposal for Government finance that will so augment the flow of money as to approach stabilization in prices, and that it will not only bring security to the aged but that it will end unemployment, destroy incentive for crime, and meet the demand of youth for opportunity to work. Though the hands of youth are idle its mind is active, it is irrepressible, it quickly discerns, is impatient at delay, and is not afraid of new thought. I am in favor of joining hands with youth and pulling America out.

CRITICISM OF THE M'GROARTY BILL

Perhaps the most illuminating speech in criticism of the McGroarty bill was made by a distinguished member of the California delegation, Congressman Lea. He states that 70,000,000 people in the United States are wholly or partially of the vast amount of money estimated as necessary to be collected each year-$24,000,000,000-to pay the pensioners under the McGroarty bill, he says if this money should be collected in $1 bills, and these bills laid end to end they would make a highway around the world 18 feet wide. I am assuming he is correct about the number of dependents in the United States and about the width of the money-covered highway circling the earth. In the one item of loss to Americans by reason of the shrinkage of the National income from the good year 1929 to date we find that that amount is 10 times the amount of money that would be required to pay this pension for 1 year, for we have lost in those 6 years on this item alone $240,000,000,000. It is not material whether we take 1929 as a basis or not, we may take 1926; and figured from that year the loss per year in the national income due to our economic condition will be near $40,000,000,000.

This loss of $240,000,000,000 would make a highway 180 feet wide instead of 18 feet wide, so if we consider this loss alone, Congressman Lea's money-paved highway would look like a sidewalk compared to this loss item. Just the loss in decreased value of farm lands would make this 18-foot highway almost 33 feet wide. If all the losses sustained in the last 6 years, and which must be attributable to the present economic set-up, were paid in $1 bills, it would require the services of all expert economists on the pay roll of the Liberty League to figure the width of the world-encircling highway that these bills would cover. The saddest part of the Congressman's argument is that we have the 70,000,000 people in distress.

The usual argument made by the economists is that if the McGroarty bill should be enacted into law it would absolutely destroy the bond market in America, and to them that is the ultima Thule beyond which nothing further should or could be said. If the American people were satisfied that they could get rid of the burden that comes from the sale of Government bonds, the people would flock to the Townsend plan or any other plan that would stop such traffic. One of the strange things among the critics is that no one has offered any remedy for the relief of conditions, which means that they are all satisfied with what we have. The fact remains, however, that the poor are getting poorer and the rich are getting richer. Corporations are piling up larger dividends, but the 70,000,000 cannot make a living. Such being the condition confronting us, what message are we to leave to our successors? Do we expect to hand the mess over to our children, and thus confess our incompetency to deal with it? Their future is dark enough with no jobs for 6 years past, and they are poverty choked to the point that such noble sentiments as used to inspire us to higher citizenship are denied

I am one who prefers to make an effort to find jobs for 12,500,000 out of work by proving unorthodox to the present system rather than to sit supinely by and let our children become pariahs because I want to be regular and conventional. I know it is more economical to provide the 12,500,000 with jobs than it is to continue to tax the Nation to support its 70,000,000 dependents.

IS IT NOT TIME TO TRY SOMETHING ELSE?

It must be borne in mind that while the amount of the national income declined per year in the enormous sums above shown, there has been a corresponding increase in the amount of this income that has gone to people engaged in distributing it. Stuart Chase—Government in Business—says that in 1917 people got $1 for making or producing goods and dealers and other overhead people got $1 for distributing goods to the consumer; that in 1932 for every dollar the producer received, people in overhead positions received $2.30; and the distributing class now get about twice as much for their services as the producer gets. The same system permits 500 rich men to have an income in one year of better than $1,000,000,000,000, an average of $2,000,000 each, while the average per-capita farm income is $273, and the average per-capita income of the rest of the population is $908.

The system under which we are operating shows that the net farm income shrank $3,500,000,000 from 1919 to 1929, while the incomes to other occupations rose in the same period $20,000,000,000. The shrinkage in farm incomes doubtless contributed to some extent to swelling the incomes of those engaged in other occupations. It is evidence of the fact that some manipulation is being done.

It may be good economy to disregard the 130,000,000 and to think in terms of the 500 rich, but I do not think so. Someone has said:

A state can be laid low just as effectively by wrong ideas as by an invading army; and there is no agency of destruction known to chemists that is half as formidable as the TNT of bad economics.

If, as suggested by some of the economists, the McGroarty bill would operate as an entering wedge to destroy the power of the money manipulators, it certainly would not serve a bad purpose, for the coinage and value fixing of money is essentially and positively a constitutional legislative grant to Congress, and is not a power conferred on bankers.

CARE FOR THE DISTRESSED IS A GREATER OBLIGATION THAN BALANCING THE BUDGET

As things now stand, the only method of taking care of the distressed people is by appropriation of public money, because they cannot get work. The President is in sympathy with our distressed, and on his initiative billions of dollars have been poured out for their relief. Attempts have been made to thwart his efforts in this direction by the big business interests of the country. About a year ago, from White Sulphur Springs, they sent him this significant note:

It is folly to continue relief so extravagant that it undermines the morale of those who receive it.

This was accompanied with a threat that if their views were not heeded they would desert him, and many of them have said an affectionate good-bye to him. In the Washington Herald of March 26, 1936, Big Business issued a statement saying that so long as the New Deal places social reform ahead of recovery it will continue to refuse to allow from fifty to eighty billion dollars of money under its control to be used by industry for reemployment. This is a challenge from the cold-blooded and heartless money-control crowd to the President of the United States daring him to further try to help the distressed, and a warning that any program or formula must first be approved by Big Business. It means that the destitute must be left to suffer and that the President must give his immediate attention to business. There is no doubt that the President is going to further carry on with his policy of bringing them relief, but every Member of Congress, and in fact all people, must be aware of the fact that this policy of making appropriations for the support of our people cannot go on indefinitely.

All of us are proud of our Nation, which is the greatest, the richest, and the most powerful in resources of farm and factory on earth, and until a few years ago was a land of almost unlimited opportunity. The load of favoritism we have carried has told on our good nature and we are not happy and cheerful like we used to be. Well might we ponder on the very recent observation of the new King of England. In Glasgow, a few days ago, after inspecting the new big and costly ship, the Queen Mary, he visited among the poor of that city. He found them living in miserable surroundings with scant food and clothing, and with undernourished and anemic children. He was so impressed with the contrast that he asked one of his officers how they could reconcile the building of such a ship in the midst of such surroundings, and stated in effect that the British Empire could not be expected to go forward until the condition of her wretched poor was first corrected.

I am wondering if we in this country are going to blindly follow in the way we have gone, or do we have the courage to do as the King of England did, take a look into the homes of our poor. True, what is revealed to us may not make any impression, for we seem to be wedded to the past and inclined to follow the advice of the few rugged individualists who seem to dictate to America. However, we should not forget that only 3 years ago these rugged ones were themselves suppliants for Government aid and assistance. They have become haughty since they got theirs. Congressman Amlie [Wisconsin] very cleverly expressed the situation of relief clients by saying the only difference between the big boys and the little fellows was that the big boys were invited in at the front door of the Treasury and told to help themselves, while the little fellows were ordered to stand in line at the relief stations and wait for theirs. I am sure that no man, economist, or Congressman, may be able to prophesy just what a reversal of our economic program might bring about. The Townsend plan may be a phantasy and the delirium of the people may not be of long duration, but we must remember that the unfortunate condition of our Nation will justify most any imaginable proposal for betterment. There is assuredly nothing in our present economic condition, as revealed by the above statistical facts, that would tend to make us feel satisfied with what we have.

There is something in the proposal made by Dr. Townsend that appeals with a religious fervor to its many adherents. If the plan is as wild and impractical and as visionary as most economists assert, then the only excuse for the extent of its almost universal appeal must lie in the conscious knowledge of the people that the present economic program has failed this Nation and has left them without jobs, without money, without food, without clothing, and without anything except a fast fading hope that Congress may act favorably in their behalf. If a Congressman regards the plan as unworkable, he at least must take it as such a tremendous protest against economic conditions as to cause him to want to make a very careful inventory of the state of the Union. The people who elect us are of far greater value to this Nation than we are. Some make the statement that further and protracted continuance of our present money set-up will lead to revolution. I do not believe that, for there is no need of revolution where we have an honest exercise of the ballot. True the economists threaten revolution by the big taxpayers if the Townsend plan of taxation should be imposed upon them. These economists must be in error. I cannot believe the big taxpayers are about to revolt the Government of the United States. The last account I saw about their activities was a full newspaper column of very distinguished names in American finance who had given away, or pretended that they had given away, billions of dollars worth of their stocks and bonds to escape paying their part of the tax authorized by this Congress for operation of the security bill. This is a revolution of a modern American turn. These revolters start on a run for the tall timbers. The only danger from them is that they may permanently hide out from the Government and no taxes be collected from them. The economists must have meant that the big shots are going to retreat instead of revolt. In nearly every attack made on the Townsend plan the economists were uneasy lest our big taxpayers should be driven to lying and tax dodging to escape their part of the burden. Had they read the papers of less than 2 months ago this fear of theirs would have been allayed, for the big ones were publishing to the world that they had already been dodging taxes. This probably was done in order that the prophecy of the economists might be fulfilled.

The Townsend plan contains several noteworthy thoughts that may mean restoration to America: (1) The primary duty of Congress to provide an adequate pension for the aged, regardless of State participation; (2) the pension to be in the nature of an annuity insurance removing its beneficiaries from the competitive field of labor and making more room for the expansion of the ambitions of youth; (3) a proposal for increasing the volume of credit by use of more money. The mechanics of the bill embodying the plan are for Congress to make. If I could amend the bill, I would entirely eliminate the provision imposing any tax on the laborer's wage, make the tax inoperative on any transaction of less than $500, and increase the tax on gifts and inheritance.

As it now is expressed in the McGroarty bill I shall support it, for in it is a leaven of hope. There is no hope for the common man or his family in the present money economics of the country. If the plan becomes law, it is sure to take some millions from the ranks of the unemployed. It surely cannot exact in taxes and cost any more than is now being filched from the people. It will help to deplete the dole; for if 10,000,000 of our old are going to get the benefits of a pension, it must be admitted that a large percent of these are on the dole. If sociologists had not all gone awry in former days, and are not now cockeyed, it will materially cut the annual $15,000,000,000 crime cost; for they have been and now are in agreement on the statement that unemployment or idleness is the breeding ground of crime. Work to do and ability to obtain bread and meat and other essentials of ordinary living will largely destroy crime incentive.

Mr. Speaker, there is no doubt in your mind that every Member who has the honor of serving under you loves America. Each of us has, perhaps, just a little different slant on economics, and while trying for the same goal we feel justified in holding to honest conviction. In this crisis-for it is a great crisis-it seems meet to me that we implore the highest source of wisdom and strength that we may have the will and the courage to do that thing which will abolish such shameful poverty and such unnecessary distress from the confines of our beloved country. Personally, the joy and thrill that should come to me by virtue of citizenship is drowned by the voices of children crying for bread and by the sight of our pitiable old. Membership in this honorable body will be a reproach to all of us if we fail to respond to the unmistakable summons of the great body of our citizenship. There is no proffered plan that will help to break away from the thralldom of the power that enslaves us except the plan embraced in the McGroarty bill. If the plan should prove so utterly fantastic, ridiculous, and unworkable as its critics claim, there would be nothing to prevent Congress from repealing it, for my observation is that only those laws benefiting the powerful are difficult to repeal. The people are tired of favoritism. They want laws that will restore equality of opportunity. They want their just part of what they produce. Congress can make the McGroarty bill respond to the demand of the people. The basic principles upon which to build a decent old-age-pension law are in this bill. The tax rate and method of taxation are subjects for Congress to determine. Half of the unemployed of the entire world are living in the United States. I fear we cannot long continue to pay the price.

FAILURE OF RELIEF AND UNEMPLOYMENT PROGRAM

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a radio address delivered by my colleague [Mr. Arends] over WJBC, on April 12.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Speaker, under the leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I include the following address delivered over the radio by Hon. L. C. ARENDS, of Illinois, on April 12, 1936:

To my friends and listeners I wish to review to some extent, if I may, the condition of our country as I now view it, with its acute manifold problems directly before our eyes. The two foremost questions, confronting us 3 years ago, still remain unsolved, namely, relief and unemployment. Does it surprise you to know that even manifold problems within the last 14 months we have not gained a foot in the solution of relief; if anything, we have lost ground? According to the American Federation of Labor, in figures released in January 1936, we now have over 20,000,000 people on relief and 12,600,000 unemployed. That means 1,229,000 more unemployed now than in January 1935. uary 1935. You might well ask, Why such results when we are literally spending billions to alleviate this condition? The quesliterally spending billions to alleviate this condition? The question might also be asked, Did the present administration attack this problem from the wrong angle? My answer to that is "yes." In the first place, you cannot spend your way into prosperity. You should remember that "the greatest danger of bad times is bad remedies and bad laws." Money properly directed and spent for useful and permanent good might have kept us from the chaos we still find confronting us.

It is hard to expect beneficial results from using money as follows:

There has been allocated $25,000 of W. P. A. money to build a dog pound in Memphis, Tenn. The artist's sketch of this project shows us that the dogs will have individual pens, with fresh bedding every day, exercise and runways, shower baths, and every other imaginable comfort of home, which reminds us of the poem on the dog house we noticed the other day, starting like this:

Fido, what a break for you, Under the red, white, and blue. No more days of storm and strife; Yours the more abundant life.

Another startling example of unexcusable waste of money is the Passamaquoddy project in Maine. There the administration (because Maine votes early, and as Maine goes so goes the Nation) wants to spend $36,000,000 in the construction of a dam to impound the tidal waters in the bay, so its ebb and flow may be used to create hydroelectric power. Foremost engineers in the used to create hydroelectric power. Foremost engineers in the country all agree that the plan is not feasible in that the cost of the dam would make the cost of the power so created prohibitive for commercial use. It is interesting to note the present work carried on there in the building of settlement houses for relief workers. Recently the Government advertised for bids to furnish these homes. The furnishings are to be in colonial style. They must be of dull, old-fashioned maple, and the all-wool blankets on the beds must be pastel green in color, with a wide taffeta binding. In each reception room there must be two grandfather clocks that strike chimes on the quarter, half, and on the hour. Love seats, davenports, coffee and card tables must be in colonial style. Floor lamps must match. As a public servant and charged with a responsibility as to how the taxpayers' money is spent, I feel that I would be untrue to the trust you have imposed in me if I did not raise my voice in protest to such a program.

Another instance worthy of note is the Florida ship canal, 200 miles long from the east to west coast, originally started by the President as a relief measure by the allotment of $5,000,000. Later $400,000 more of relief money was used in furthering the work. All this without asking Congress that they study the matter and come to some decision thereon. Now, your Government is being asked to foot the bill at a cost of $200,000,000. Happily, both the Senate and House of Representatives as of recent date have turned thumbs down on this scheme. What future action will take place a promains to be seen. will take place remains to be seen.

will take place remains to be seen.

So we go on and on, recklessly and extravagantly wasting money and not getting anywhere. Whose money is it? Not your Uncle Sam's, for he does not have any money. Listen, friends, it is your money and mine. Recently someone told me that only about 1 percent of the people either knew or cared to know more about this Government of ours. I trust that statement is incorrect. The time is here when we as good citizens must take an active interest in our Government and what it is doing.

It may shock you to know that your Government 3 years ago this Government of ours. I trust that statement is incorrect. The time is here when we as good citizens must take an active interest in our Government and what it is doing.

It may shock you to know that your Government 3 years ago had a debt of approximately $20,000,000,000; today it is near thirty-one billion, and may reach thirty-six billion at the close of this year, with a possible $40,000,000,000 deficit in sight by the end of next year. Some folks say, "What of it; we can stand such a debt", thinking, of course, that the so-called rich will have to pay the bill. That fallacy must be corrected, for just as sure as day follows the dawn the plain, everyday, average American citizen is the one who must eventually pay the price. Not only that, but your children and your children's children will be called on to help carry this burden. And speaking of children, how are these youngsters ever to help pay the burden of these heavy taxes unless they are able to find steady, good-paying positions? From a recent survey made in this country I read that we now have approximately 8,000,000 boys and girls between the ages of 17 and 24 who are unable to find work of any kind. I cannot swear to the accuracy of that statement; but, assuming it to be fairly authentic, I ask you. What are we going to do about the youth of today who tomorrow must rise to their place of responsibility and carry on where the older folk leave off? They will carry on if we give them a chance. But we must refrain from placing millstone after millstone around their necks, in the form of taxes and huge deficits, which tends to hinder the return of confidence and prosperity, which return alone can make possible the employment of these young folks.

You will be surprised to learn that, while you may not think you are paying anything in taxes, let me impress this thought indelibly upon your mind: It is estimated that the average American family pays an annual indirect tax of $400 which he at the moment does not see or feel. This indirect or hidden tax w which no rent is charged. The merit system in Government service has been discarded to a large extent. At the close of the previous administration 80 percent of Government employees were under civil service. The figure today would astound you. All of which makes for decreased efficiency with an attendant increased cost to the taxpayer.

So I restate that today we still find ourselves confronted with the same problems that were with us in 1932, many of them not solved and some more serious than before the so-called New Deal became effective. With unemployment and relief costs mounting, we can come to but one conclusion—that, regardless of the often repeated plea for the forgotten man, the following out of the pleaned seconomy and utorian experiments of the favorish minds planned-economy and utopian experiments of the feverish minds of the "brain trust", we find the rich getting richer and the poor getting poorer.

We oftentimes criticize, which is supposed to be our right as free-born American citizens. The few brief examples of what is going on, and there are many more that I could give, if time permitted, are given with the sincere hope that in my calling your attention to them I would be doing you a service. I want to approach our many problems from the viewpoint of an interested American citizen rather than from a political angle. I firmly believe that we should get head, to earth and the third its firmly American citizen rather than from a political angle. I firmly believe that we should get back to earth and to the faith of our fathers. Hard work and self-denial will be necessary, but it can and will be done. As a Republican candidate for Congress, I think the best interests of our country dictate that we balance our Budget, that we encourage private enterprises, rigid government economies must be initiated, useless bureaus and commissions must be abolished, development of new domestic uses for our surplus farm products, establishment of a coordinated land policy, not spending millions bringing arid lands into production until we have an absolute need for it, adequate tariff protection of all our products, the development of foreign markets, proper enforcement of our antitrust laws, and the return to local supervision of our relief problems. I have told you some of the remedies I would propose, I wonder what you have to suggest. It is your problem as well as mine.

To the Republican Party let me say this: The Democratic Party, your problem as well as mine.

To the Republican Party let me say this: The Democratic Party, at bat, has hit the ball. It is up to us to catch this ball for the third and final out. We dare not fail. We dare not go back to where we left off in 1932. We must start fresh from here and should develop a new leadership if we are to succeed in a time like this. We all want to see ample relief available where honestly needed, but we must take politics out of relief and move forward under the American system of free enterprise, free thought, free speech, and free press, remaining steadfast to the principles laid down in our Constitution, that ours is a government by law, not men.

down in our Constitution, that ours is a government by law, not men.

It is remembered that Professor Tugwell, brain truster no. 1, has written "I shall roll up my sleeves and make America over." I for one am not willing to entrust that sacred and all-important duty to him. This afternoon, I ask you, who wants it made over? I think we have the best nation on the face of the globe and am willing to live in it a little while longer with a sense of security in my person and property, and feel that with the leadership and management of honest, clear-thinking, common-sense Americans, whose motives are actuated by love of country and not party, that we can continue to say ours is the best system of government ever devised by the mind of man. Our people are tired of the trial and error system of government. They find that there is no short cut to normal times. We are not yet doomed to go over the dam, but we must act before it is too late. I have unbounding faith in the good judgement of our people and I am sure that when once awakened and they come face to face with the dangers and pitfalls with which we are now confronted that they will take a hand to see to it that their Government is managed by the right and proper officials, and that the waste, destruction, and utter disregard of the rights of others, the setting of class against class and mass against mass, the usurpation of power, and the using of human suffering for personal or party gain has no place in our American system of government. can system of government.

LAYING CORNERSTONE, DEPARTMENT OF INTERIOR BUILDING, APRIL 16, 1936, WITH ADDRESSES OF PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, SECRETARY ICKES, AND MR. DELANO

Mr. MAVERICK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include therein the order of exercises this morning in placing the cornerstone of the Department of the Interior Building, including an address delivered by the President and one also delivered by the Secretary of the Interior, Mr. Ickes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MAVERICK. Mr. Speaker, this morning I attended the ceremony of the laying of the cornerstone, Department of the Interior Building, here in Washington, this April 16. It was a colorful proceeding, attended by President Roosevelt; Secretary Ickes; the Honorable Frederic A. Delano, Chairman of the National Resources Committee; most of the diplomatic staff in Washington; Government officials. Among the Representatives present was the distinguished assistant leader of the majority, Hon. EDWARD T. TAYLOR, of Colorado, father of the Taylor Grazing Act, and many other Members of both branches of Congress. There were seats inside an enclosure near the building where the ceremony was held, and sitting close to the front were a group of Hopi Indians, and high above the cornerstone of the building was a balcony of stone, where the Marine Band, under the leadership of Capt. Taylor Branson, played several pieces of beautiful music. They made a striking picture in their brilliant red uniforms. As the President approached, the Marine Band gave four flourishes and ruffles with trumpets and drums, and then, as the President took his seat, the band played Hail to the Chief and the Franklin D. Roosevelt March.

The weather was perfect and somewhat cool, and the sky was blue and clear. The President looked healthier than at any time since his inauguration, with a full sun tan gotten on his vacation in southern waters. Gus Gennerich, his guard and friend, was with him, and the President sat while Mr. Delano and Mr. Ickes spoke.

Thereafter, as the President concluded his address, the band played The Star-Spangled Banner, and high on the top of the building I saw a member of the Washington police force, who stood silhouetted against the sky at right-hand salute. It made a striking picture.

This building is one of the finest examples of modern architecture. The architect is Hon. Waddy Wood, a resident of the District, and formerly of Charlottesville, Va. It is one of the greatest buildings ever erected in America, and is about the first big building erected in Washington by anyone who came from south of the Mason and Dixon's line.

The program was as follows:

The trowel used in this ceremony was used by President Washington in laying the cornerstone of the United States Capitol on September 18, 1793. It was loaned by courtesy of Alexandria-Washington Lodge, No. 22, A. F. and A. M., of Virginia.

ORDER OF EXERCISES

Music, United States Marine Band.

Music, United States Marine Band.
Invocation, Rev. Dr. Joseph R. Sizoo.
Introductory remarks, Hon. Frederic A. Delano, Chairman, National Capital Park and Planning Commission. (See I.)
Address, Hon. Harold L. Ickes, Secretary of the Interior. (See II.)
Music, United States Marine Band.
Address, the President of the United States. (See III.)

PLACING OF THE STONE BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES

The national anthem, United States Marine Band.

Benediction, Rt. Rev. Patrick J. McCormick, acting rector, the Catholic University of America.

Music, United States Marine Band.

MUSICAL PROGRAM-MARINE BAND

The musical program, from 10:30 to 11, presented by the Marine Band, under Capt. Taylor Branson, was as follows:

American Patrol, Bagley. Favorites, Victor Herbert Song of the Marching Men, Hadley.
Grand march, Pomp and Circumstance, Elgar.
Mine Own United States, Edwards.
Hail to the Spirit of Liberty, Sousa.

INVOCATION BY REV. JOSEPH R. SIZOO

Invocation pronounced by Rev. Joseph R. Sizoo, D. D., pastor of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, was Everlasting, ever-living God, who hath set Thy glory upon this day, in whom our fathers trusted and were not put to shame, we thank Thee that in times of crises, when the resources of men shrivel, the resources of God unfold. Hold our faces with ever-increasing purpose to the assurance that that nation alone is great whose God is the Lord. Hallow with Thy presence what we do here this day. May this building bear witness to an ever-increasing concern of the Nation for its people and an ever-enlarging service of Government to its citizens.

May Thy grace rest upon all who labor here. Prosper them in their undertaking; preserve them by Thy providence unto the end of their work. Shield them from danger and accident. May all who begin the task rejoice at last in the fulfillment of their purposes.

God bless our country. Give us to know that Thy love falls across the busy tideways of our lives. Grant to all who lead the Nation toward the more abundant living the vision of One whose hand no panic can shorten, whose light no darkness can dim.

And unto Thy illimitable love, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, shall we give all the praise, world without end. Amen.

ADDRESS BY HON. FREDERIC A. DELANO

Hon. Frederic A. Delano, Chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, spoke as follows:

It should go without saying that I feel greatly honored at pre-It should go without saying that I feel greatly honored at presiding at this meeting on the occasion of laying the cornerstone of the new Interior Department Building. However, I must admit that I have had only a very small part in a very big project, and yet I am glad to record my interest in it. My contact with the project was all in its initial stages when the Secretary of the Interior asked me as Chairman of the Park and Planning Commission to suggest a suitable site for a building of large capacity. A number of sites were investigated and the site chosen, occupying two city blocks between Eighteenth and Nineteenth Streets, was recommended. It was recommended, first, because there are not many sites where two large city blocks can be found where an intervening street could be abandoned. Secondly, the site was located in a rectangle where it will become an important element in a larger composition, and where it will for all time have ample light, air, rectangie where it will become an important element in a large composition, and where it will for all time have ample light, air, and open space about it.

I claim no credit for the architecture of this building—that credit goes to the architect. However, it was with the Secretary's permission that I was able to secure from Mr. Waddy B. Wood preliminary drawings and estimates showing the type of building which would be advantageous in this location; and on the strength of these preliminary sketches, Mr. Wood was designated as the architect for the building, and details of the plan were worked out by him in conjunction with the staff of the Procurement Division of the Treasury Department.

One feature of the plan to which I would particularly call attention is the economy and efficiency of the plan as a whole. Whereas it has been the custom of Government buildings in the past to occupy the entire area with large interior courts, I fully concurred with Mr. Wood's idea that the building should have no closed courts. As now being constructed, the building has no interior courts—no office above the ground floor which does not have light, sun, and air, and, in many cases, a fine view. By this type courts—no office above the ground floor which does not have light, sun, and air, and, in many cases, a fine view. By this type of construction Mr. Wood has secured many other incidental economies. In passing, I may say that I know an important Government building not so far from here occupying only one city block which frequently requires one to walk two and three city blocks to call on another office, whereas in Mr. Wood's plan the maximum distance from one office to another will average far less in proportion to its size. This is brought about by a central main corridor which enables every office to be reached with the minimum distance. Furthermore, this central-corridor plan takes care of the elevators in the most economical way, so that I venture to predict that an efficient elevator service will be secured with the minimum of expense. minimum of expense.

I would not like to give the impression here that I am indifferent to the appearance of Government buildings. I have many friends among the architects, and I am an admirer of good architecture, but I am quite hostile to those architects who design buildings with little regard to the requirements of the building or the functions it is to perform.

Not long ago I had occasion to visit a very beautiful hotel in Florida built in the Spanish style of architecture. I have rarely seen a more beautiful building, but the manager of the hotel told Florida built in the Spanish style of architecture. I have rarely seen a more beautiful building, but the manager of the hotel told me that after encountering heavy deficits in operation, it had been necessary to spend a large sum of money in rearranging the facilities so that breakfast could be served in the rooms of guests without excessive delays, rehandling costs, and expenses. There are ample data in the possession of the Bureau of Public Buildings to illustrate the great disparity that there is between the cost of operating and maintaining our great public buildings. Those, for example, having excessive height of ceilings are far more expensive to maintain and keep clean than buildings of moderate heights. That is one of the reasons why the ordinary commercial office buildings are often far more economical to operate and maintain than the more monumental buildings built by the Government; and while I would not like to see the Government lower its standards to those of most commercial office buildings, there is at least a golden mean between the extremes one finds. As the matter stands, I do not hesitate to say that this building will be a notable advance in Federal office-building design, and while it will maintain the standards of architecture for which Washington is so renowned, it will also prove to be in every sense a practical building, reasonable in cost, considering what it furnishes, and economical both in operation and in maintenance.

[Applause.]

п

ADDRESS BY HON. HAROLD L. ICKES, SECRETARY OF INTERIOR

Hon. Harold L. Ickes, Secretary of the Interior and Administrator of Public Works, spoke as follows:

The Treasury Department in 1849 came to feel that, with its other heavy duties, it could no longer administer the vast public domain that still constituted, so far as national revenues and acreage went, the richest part of the United States. So the Department of the Interior came lato being. The chief function of this newest of the departments was to administer the public domain, and implicit in the mandate to do this was the obligation to see to it that new lands should be taken up by settlers as soon as possible and the resources of the public domain minted into the coin of the realm at a rapid rate. into the coin of the realm at a rapid rate.

ICKES RECITES HISTORY OF WANTON DESTRUCTION OF RESOURCES

Frankly, the Department of the Interior was set up-to use language with which today we are so familiar—to be the "exploiting" Department of the Government. If anyone sounded a note of caution as to the rate at which exploitation was to take note of caution as to the rate at which exploitation was to take place; if anyone expressed a belief in the principle of conservation of our natural resources, his voice was not heard above the general refrain. We were still a race of eager, restless, pushing pioneers. A land-hungry people to begin with, our appetite for land grew on what it fed upon. Only in the rarest instances did it ever occur to anyone to attempt to abate this consuming hunger. Nor was this surprising. So far as our ancestors could see, there never could be any question that there would be enough land to go around; the only problem was what we could do with all that

We saw the vast domain that stretched ever westward, not only We saw the vast domain that stretched ever westward, not only limitless wealth for America but the means of adding to our human resources so as to make the United States at the same time the richest and most powerful nation in the world. We encouraged the settlement of these lands by soldiers who had fought in our wars, by immigrants from foreign lands, and by farmers from farther east who were looking for new lands in place of those the fertility of which had become exhausted as a result of their careless husbandry.

It might be said that the Department of the Interior was the It might be said that the Department of the Interior was the sales agency of a Government so rich in lands and natural resources that it was willing to sell them for only a fraction of their real value, willing to give them away on the slightest pretext, willing even to close its eyes in order that it might not see that some of the most rugged of our rugged individualists were literally stealing large sections of the rich heritage of the American people.

The confession that I am making is not a pleasant one for one who holds the views that I do on the subject of conservation, and yet it seems fitting that frank statement should be made in order that we may understand the record and thereby chart the course for a more statesmanlike policy for the future.

When the conscience of the country began to appraise through slowly opening eyes the wanton destruction, the insistent exploitation of the patural riches with which God had and owned this slowly opening eyes the wanton destruction, the insistent exploitation of the natural riches with which God had endowed this country, we began to look about, in true American fashion, for a victim who could be held up to contempt and scorn for that exploitation. The Department of the Interior supplied the need, and citizens came to criticize its policies without comprehending the reason for or the origin of those policies.

Even today self-righteous critics, some of them with an ulterior representation of the Interior cannot be approximated that the Department of the Interior cannot be purpose, insist that the Department of the Interior cannot be intrusted with any of the natural resources of America because of the national policy in the past, and particularly because of the misdeeds of one or two men.

CONGRESS GUIDES POLICY OF DEPARTMENT

After all, it was the Congress that guided the policy of this Department and enacted the laws to which it must conform. It partment and enacted the laws to which it must comform. It was the Congress that decreed how and when and in what manner the public domain should be exploited. Nor should all the blame rest upon Congress, for it was but carrying out the will of the sovereign people. So far as I know, that great President, John Quincy Adams, whose luster as a statesman will grow in brightness as people come to study his career and thus to form a more just appraisement of his unusual qualities, was the only national leader until comparatively recent times who, as the result of quiet, de-tached, far-visioned thinking, evolved a policy which, if it had been adopted by the Nation, would probably have meant less flush wealth for present easy dissipation, but more solid, more enduring, and, in the aggregate, greater wealth for the people as a whole in the long run.

and, in the aggregate, greater wealth for the people as a whole in the long run.

Accepting the fact, as the record clearly establishes, that the Department of the Interior was created in the beginning to exploit the resources of America, what is the most effective step that can be taken to put an end to a policy that has become suicidal? The answer is plain. Let the Congress decree a final end to the era of reckless exploitation and announce adherence to the policy of conservation of our national resources which, as I understand conservation, means the prudent use of those resources. And as an effective means of declaring this change of policy so that all may clearly understand it, let the Congress enact the bill that is now pending, changing the name of this Department to that of Department of Conservation.

The mere passage of this bill would be declaratory of the intention of the United States Government henceforth to go forward with a policy of conservation of our natural resources. It stands to reason that until we consciously and deliberately, with our eyes on the future, make some such affirmative declaration the stupid waste of those resources will continue.

waste of those resources will continue.

WE NEED ORDERLY AND LOGICAL ARRANGEMENT OF CONSERVATION ACTIVITIES

From the point of view of the future, I can see nothing more worth while that America could do at this time than to charge a great department of the Government with responsibility for such development and use of our natural resources as is consistent with development and use of our natural resources as is consistent with their preservation for the benefit and continued use of future generations. Not only should there be such a declaration of purpose, there should also be an orderly and logical arrangement of conservation activities. There is grave doubt in my mind that conservation will ever become the major policy of government that it should be until some such action is taken.

If I were one of those interested in the continued exploitation of our comparatively few remaining riches of mine and forest and extreme and multip domain I would resist with all my might any our comparatively few remaining riches of mine and forest and stream and public domain I would resist with all my might any mandate by Congress that conservation should be made a principal function of government under the charge of a responsible Cabinet officer. I would be satisfied with the irresponsible policy of division and spoliation that has prevailed in the past. I would want activities relating to conservation to remain scattered. I would encourage the misunderstandings, the jealousies, the overlappings, and the wasteful expenditures of public funds that have grown up in the past and which were the inheritance of this administration. We conservatives are like a posse comitatus, following each other with fitful lanterns while the thief that we were sent out to apprehend slips away to safety. hend slips away to safety.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT HINTED NEW NATIONAL POLICY

THEODORE ROOSEVELT HINTED NEW NATIONAL POLICY
We in the Department know that a definite stop to ill-advised exploitation has been too long deferred. The first faint flickering of a belief that perhaps after all we had not been altogether wise in putting all of our natural resources on the table and yelling in a voice that could be heard around the world, "Come and get it", began to manifest itself somewhat less than two generations ago. Theodore Roosevelt hinted that a new national policy might be necessary, and while it was only a hint it expressed a sentiment much more advanced than the current one of the period. As a matter of fact, opinion favoring the prudent management of our natural resources was almost nonexistent. There were still forests much more advanced than the current one of the period. As a matter of fact, opinion favoring the prudent management of our natural resources was almost nonexistent. There were still forests to be fed into the sawmills; there was still a public domain to be destroyed by overgrazing; there was still oil for flush production while billions of cubic feet of natural gas were allowed to be wasted into the air; there were still rivers and lesser streams to be polluted by the effluent from our sewers and by the refuse from our mills and factories; there were still apparently countless game birds and wildlife with which to fill the bags of the game hogs; there was still arable land to be homesteaded, to have its soil fertility exhausted and then to be deserted.

Notwithstanding the widespread hunger for more land and selfish greediness for more wealth at whatever cost to the Nation, there grew into a steady blaze the spark that was struck by the flint of far-seeing statesmanship in the hand of Theodore Roosevelt from the tinder of hard fact that the way we were headed led toward the eventual impoverishment of our people. More and more people began to recognize the wisdom and the foresight of the early conservationists who had firmly stood their ground, despite the ridicule and contumely that were heaped upon them. The new cause gained friends not only among the rank and file of the people but among the statemen of the New York and the control the statemen of the New York and the control the statemen of the New York and the foresight of the people but among the statemen of the New York and the control the statemen of the New York and the foresight of the people but among the statemen of the New York and the control the statemen of the New York and the York and Y

The new cause gained friends not only among the rank and file of the people but among the statesmen of the Nation, until it came to pass that the principle of conservation began to find expression in the platforms of political parties.

I am afraid, however, that in many instances this was merely lip service. There has been observed no concentrated effort, resulting from a burning zeal for conservation, to make it, as it should have been mede long ago, a major policy of our forms. have been made long ago, a major policy of our Government. We have done quite a lot of wishful thinking about conservation, but so far active foes from without and muddle-headed friends within the ranks have formed an unnatural but powerful opposition that has been of benefit only to the exploiter.

DEPARTMENT OF CONSERVATION

Yet it is heartening that the sentiment to prevent further waste is growing and there is reason to hope that before a great while the Congress will respond to that sentiment by setting up a department of conservation and thus reverse the policy of exploitation that has existed heretofore. More and more the real statesmen of the country have come to believe in the preservation of what is left of the natural wealth of America. Nothing could be more encouraging than to realize that the present Chief Executive of the Nation not only believes as ardently as any conservationist could possibly believe in this theory, he himself has actually practically practically and the sentence of the country here. could possibly believe in this theory, he himself has actually practiced conservation. He has practiced it on his own extensive farm lands in New York State. As a member of the New York State Senate he was one of the leaders in the fight for conservation legislation. As Assistant Secretary of the Navy he helped to protect and preserve the naval oil reserves. He made it a major policy as Governor of the State of New York. During his administration as Governor of the State of New York. During his administration of the affairs of that State he did more for conservation than had all of his predecessors combined.

Naturally when he came to Washington as President he brought with him his belief in the principle of conservation. As a result, more has been done during the slightly more than 3 years of the present administration in the direction of preserving and rebuilding the natural resources of America than has been done in any comparable time in our history. As a matter of fact, I am well within the bounds in saying that more has been done under this administration in this regard than during all preceding administrations.

EIGHTY MILLION ACRES PUBLIC DOMAIN; SOIL CONSERVATION SERVICE Vast additions have been made to the areas of the national forests. New reclamation districts have been organized and additional water provided for others already in existence. Under the Taylor grazing law signed by President Roosevelt, 80,000,000 acres of the public domain that are useful chiefly for grazing have been set up into grazing districts under Federal regulations. This does not mean the taking out of use of these lands, which are indispensable to the stockmen of the West, but it does mean the prevention of overgrazing with its threatened destruction of the range. It means also that, wherever possible, not only will deterioration of the range be stopped, it will actually be rebuilded so that our grazing area may be preserved and enlarged.

Under this administration the Soil Conservation Service was set up in this Department but later was transferred to the Depart-Vast additions have been made to the areas of the national up in this Department but later was transferred to the Department of Agriculture. This Service, by actual demonstration, is making it clear to the farmers of America that their own economic welfare, as well as the happiness and well-being of their children, depend upon using their lands so that they will not be washed or blown away.

Proof is being made that soil erosion, which has taken such a heavy toll of our fertile lands, can be prevented or counteracted. Large sums of money have been spent under this administration in flood-prevention work. Under the Petroleum Code of the National Industrial Recovery Act and under the Connally Act, at least, a beginning has been made toward stopping the reckless overproduction and consequent waste of petroleum and its products, which are exhaustible and irreplaceable resources upon which not only the prosperity but the very life of the Nation depends.

FLOOD CONTROL; CONSERVATION; WATER POWER

As a byproduct of the work this administration has obligated itself to do for the control of floods and to aid navigation, great water-power projects, such as Boulder Dam and the Tennessee Valley undertaking, have been completed or are being developed, the energy from which is available to the people at a cost within the means of all. Reforestation and afforestation have made tremendous strides. The Guffey Coal Act represents an effort to conserve our coal supply and protect our miners. Realizing the important place of wildlife, not only in our domestic economy but as related to the health and general welfare of the people, wildlife and bird refuges have been set up under this administration to an extent never before known. A notable start has been made toward solving the almost overwhelming problem of stream pollution. Submarginal lands from which farmers have struggled in vain to make a decent living are being purchased by the Government and taken out of agricultural use. Additional areas have been added to old national parks and new national parks have been brought into the system. into the system.

And to implement his conservation policies in an effective and hitherto unthought-of way President Roosevelt conceived the brilliant idea of setting up C. C. C. camps, so that hundreds of thousands of the youth of the land, who otherwise would not be employed, might have the chance of building up their own bodies while grafting new skin to cover the scars and the burns from which our land has suffered at the hands of man and the forces of nature.

PRESIDENT F. D. ROOSEVELT GREATEST CONSERVATIONIST IN AMERICAN HISTORY

This bare recital of actual achievements is ample proof of the statement that this administration has done more to advance the cause of conservation than all preceding administrations put together. Where others have torn down, Franklin D. Roosevelt has built up; where others have closed their eyes to reckless and oftenbuilt up; where others have closed their eyes to reckless and often-times illegal exploitation, he has been alert in the public interest; where others have done lip service to the principle of conserving our national wealth, while expressing regret that nothing could be done about it, President Roosevelt has not only found a way, he has insisted that it be taken. Having already fairly won the right to be ranked as the greatest conservationist in American history, President Roosevelt will continue to give ample proof not only of his theoretical interest in this policy but of his practical ability to give effect to it.

his theoretical interest in this policy but of his practical ability to give effect to it.

Years ago I joined the ranks of the conservationists. That was during the administration of President Theodore Roosevelt. When the present President of that name did me the honor to invite me to Washington as head of the Department of the Interior I came as a convinced and steadfast believer in the proposition that our natural resources should be carefully conserved and prudently used in the interest, not only of every American of this generation but of every American of the generations to come. No opportunity to advance the cause of conservation has been overlooked by the Department of the Interior under this administration. While the laws of the land have been conscientiously adhered to, all questions of doubt have been resolved in favor of the public as against any selfish private interest.

COMING GENERATIONS MUST BE CONSIDERED

It always has been, and it probably always will be true, that those who stand vigilant guard over our treasures of forest and land and stream in order to protect them from the predators will be openly condemned and cunningly attacked. Notwithstanding, we must bear in mind that the true function of Government is to see beyond the current month or the present year. Casting our eyes into the future, we must think of the coming generations, remembering that the imprecations that are hurled today at those who would protect our national wealth tomorrow will reecho as the plaudits of a grateful Nation.

SECRETARY ICKES CONCLUDES WITH HOPES OF DEPARTMENT

Mr. President, whether the Department that is to occupy this splendid new building, which in itself represents an outstanding accomplishment of your administration, is to be christened with the name that we would be so proud to bear, that of the Department of Conservation, or whether it is to continue to be known as the Department of the Interior, as the head of the Department, I pledge to you our active support and unwavering loyalty in advancing the cause that is as dear to our hearts as it is to your own. Under your leadership and with your encouragement every member of the staff has come to realize that all problems brought to us for solution must be considered, so far as may be possible under the law, from the point of view of the interests of the people as a whole and all doubts resolved in that same interest. same interest.

same interest.

As is well known, most of the major activities of the Department of the Interior at this moment are touched with a conservation interest. This new building represents much more to us than merely better and more desirable office space; it means something besides relieving the overcrowded conditions in our present building; it is to us a symbol of a new day; a turning in the long road that we have traveled since the time when the Treasury Department, with its blessing, sent us forth to do a work that was already cluttering up that Department in a manner that could no longer be tolerated. Let us hope that a great new adventure lies ahead of us at a significant time in the internal affairs of the United States; that a definite and final reternal affairs of the United States; that a definite and final reversal of our course of heedless exploitation of our national assets is at hand, to be followed by the adoption of a policy of prudent use of those same assets, which is true conservation. To this new policy, in grateful recognition of its adoption, belated though it may be, let us then dedicate this new building. And, more importantly still, let those of us who, as members of the Department of the Interior, have the great privilege of serving the people, rededicate ourselves anew to that service. In doing so may we ever have in mind that our supreme duty is to do all that we possibly can to advance the welfare of mankind.

[Applause.]

III

ADDRESS BY FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT, PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES The President spoke as follows:

Mr. Chairman, Mr. Secretary, and all of you who are present at this dedication of the first large monumental building that was started in this administration and is being completed in this started in this administration:

PRESIDENT PRAISES WADDY WOOD AND ADMIRAL PEOPLES

On behalf of the Government, I want to extend my thanks and extend my appreciation to those who have taken part in the actual construction of the new Interior Department Building—my old friend, Waddy Wood, architect; my old friend, Admiral Peoples, head of the Procurement Division [applause]; and also to those who have been in charge of procuring material and undertaking the contract, and especially to the workmen who have done the job.

[Applause.]
I think that every American who loves his country ought to take to heart the earnest and sensible plea of the Secretary of the Interior for a vigorous, continuing national policy of conservation. As for myself, I am dedicated to the cause. And the Department of Interior, as now constituted, is fully alive to the imperative necessity of protecting and preserving all of our natural resources. A nation less bountifully endowed than ours without a national policy of conservation would have ceased to exist a long time ago. The remarkable thing was that the people of the United States were so complacent for so long in the face of exploitation and waste and mismanagement, yes, and even largeny of the national waste and mismanagement, yes, and even larceny of the national wealth that belongs to all the people.

PRESIDENT URGES CONSERVATION OF OUR GOD-GIVEN WEALTH

But not everybody remained insensible to what was happening. On occasion there came, as cries from the wilderness, warnings against the ravaging of our forests, the waste of our topsoil and our water supplies, and the dissipation of our oil reserves and mineral deposits. Theodore Roosevelt, when I was a very young man, rose up and battled against this squandering of our patrimony. He, for the first time, made the people as a whole conscious that the vast national domain and the natural resources of the country were the property of the Nation itself and not the property of any the vast national domain and the natural resources of the country were the property of the Nation itself and not the property of any class, regardless of its privileged status.

Supported by an awakened country, which we find now is beginning to realize the truth of the old warnings, we in our later days have devoted our thoughts and energies to the conservation of our God-given wealth. Employing every agency of Government at hand to protect our birthright, we have in the past several years made advances far beyond the hopes of earlier-day conservationists. But the battle goes on, and, as in the case of other battles, it is a battle against the law of opposition. That battle must be carried forward with renewed vigor if future generations are to receive the full benefits that are their due.

full benefits that are their due.

COMPARES WAR AND CONSERVATION

This Department, the Department of the Interior, was first known as the Home Department, and it was a pretty good name. It was established fourscore and seven years ago, and since that time its activities have been intertwined with the internal development of the Nation itself. I found a few days ago the report of the committee of the House of Representatives which favored creation of the Department. Nearly a century ago that report was made, and it gives us an interesting picture of the times. The report said this:

"The general fact remains unaffected that war and preparations for war have been practically regarded as the chief duty and end of this Government, while the arts of peace and production, whereby nations are subsisted, civilization advanced, and happiness secured, have been esteemed unworthy the attention or foreign to the subjects of this Government. It seems to us that this should not always continue, but that we should as a wise people reorganize the Government so far as to fulfill these duties also, which are suggested by the next results and wants of our which are suggested by the nature, aspirations, and wants of our race as physical, moral, and intellectual beings; that it should do something toward protecting the people against those internal enemies, ignorance, destitution, and vice, as well as against those foreign foes who may invade or who it is apprehended may assail us." That was written nearly 100 years ago. Think of the progress since those days!

And so the Department of the Interior, Secretary Ickes, came into being with a Secretary in the President's Cabinet, with jurisdiction over four people—the Commissioner of the General Land Office, the Commissioner of Patents, the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, and the Commissioner of Pensions. I am wrong; he had jurisdiction over one other person, the only employee, a chief clerk at $2,000 a year. Secretary Ickes, you have more than five people under you today. [Laughter and applause.]

GROWTH OF INTERIOR DEPARTMENT

As the country expanded and the needs of the people grew, the activities of the Interior Department broadened to new fields of endeavor. I like to think that this speaks for the progress that we are making—the design for this building—architects have been guided by sound principles of utility and economy. Without sacrificing any of the dignity deserving of a great department of the Federal Government, they have conceived a useful building of practical simplicity. They have been sparing in the application of rich ornament, but convenience, comfort, and sunlight have not been sacrificed been sacrificed

I think that we have acted wisely in erecting this new building at this time. We have incorporated it in our public-works program that was established as a means of providing sorely needed employment in the building trades and the industries that supplied them, and which has already been successful in aiding the return of the Nation to better times. This building rising above return of the Nation to better times. This building rising above us is but one unit of our great public-works program—a program which is erecting thousands of schoolhouses, hospitals, and other public buildings in every city of the Union.

Other factors in addition to the problem of relieving unemployment influenced our decision to erect this building without further delay. This great Federal family of ours in Washington, like other large families, has its own serious housing problem. We have grown over a long period of years until governmental buildings have been taxed to capacity, and every available square foot of space put to necessary use.

Government departments have been forced to seek space in Government departments have been forced to seek space in buildings other than those owned by the Federal Government, and, as you know, we are now leasing several million square feet of office space in over 100 privately owned office buildings, and have been obliged in a few cases even to find quarters in residences and apartment houses. So we are eager to complete this building for a practical purpose—to reduce the rent bill of the family. When it is used, many Government workers will be gathered back in a building under a roof owned by the Government of the United

So, as I view this serviceable new structure, I like to think of it as symbolical of the Nation's vast resources that we are sworn to protect, and this stone that I am about to lay, as the cornerstone of a conservation policy that will guarantee to future Americans the richness of their heritage. [Extended applause.]

The President then proceeded in the laying of the cornerstone. Turning to the crowd, and holding a trowel above his head, the President said:

It may interest you to know that this same trowel was used by the first President of the United States in 1793 in laying the Capitol cornerstone itself. I think it is a good augury. [Continued extended applause.]

BENEDICTION BY RT. REV. P. J. M'CORMICK

Benediction pronounced by Rt. Rev. P. J. McCormick, acting rector of the Catholic University of America:

Almighty and eternal Father, who dost not despise the least of the undertakings of Thy children here on earth nor deny Thy of the undertakings of Thy children here on earth nor deny Thy favor to any efforts for human betterment and welfare, we beseech Thee to bless us today as we solemnly proceed under Thy auspices to erect an edifice the better to enable us as a people to conserve and to use the resources which Thou hast confided to our keeping. May we, with Thy light and grace, rightly estimate them in their spiritual and material values and, through a faithful stewardship of them, promote the ends for which our Nation was founded and which, with Thy assistance and favor, it must attain. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

Mr. Speaker, the Department of the Interior issued a statement for the press previous to the laying of the cornerstone. The memorandum is as follows:

President Roosevelt is expected to lay the cornerstone of the new Interior Department Building Thursday, April 16, at 11 a. m., in the presence of a distinguished audience. He will use the trowel wielded by President George Washington in laying the cornerstone of the Capitol of the United States in 1793. The President will make a brief address, as will Secretary Ickes. Hon. Frederic A. Delano, Chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, will act as master of ceremonies. Rev. Joseph R. Sizoo, D. D., pastor of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, will offer the invocation; Rt. Rev. Patrick J. McCormick, acting rector of Catholic University of America, will pronounce the benediction. Music will be furnished by the United States Marine Corps Band and C. C. C. enrollees will serve as ushers. and C. C. C. enrollees will serve as ushers.

Fifteen Hopi Indians, in tribal costume, will give a colorful touch

Fifteen Hopf Indians, in tribal costume, will give a colorful touch to the dedicatory ceremonies.

Erected as a P. W. A. project, the new Interior Building represents the first major Federal Government structure in Washington authorized, designed, and built under the present administration. Its cost was estimated at $12,000,000. Excavation was started August 12, 1935. The contract calling for completion on December 17, 1936—16 months—will constitute a record for a building of this size and type. size and type.

Two city blocks of 5½ acres, extending from C to E Streets, and from Eighteenth to Nineteenth Streets NW., are covered by the structure, which is 575 feet long by 383 feet wide. It will be seven floors in height, with an eighth floor above the central unit, and a basement. Utility and maximum comfort for the personnel are expressed in the plan of the building. It consists of a center wing, two blocks long, extending from C to E Streets, with six wings on each side, extending through from Eighteenth to Nineteenth Streets. Every room is an outside room, the courts between the wings opening them. teenth Streets. Every room is an outside room, the courts between the wings opening upon Eighteenth and Nineteenth Streets and providing maximum light and air. There are 2 miles of corridors altogether. Twenty high-speed large capacity elevators, opening from the main or center corridor, and two escalators operating from basement to second floor, provide for the traffic between floors. On the roof will be modern broadcasting studios with the most modern of equipment.

Exclusive of corridors, toilet rooms, elevators, stairways, machinery space, and the like, the net usable area is approximately 700,000 square feet. The gross area is 1,050,000. Features that will be especially appreciated by the personnel are the cafeteria, one of the largest in the National Capital, and the large basement parking space

In a specially constructed copper box, to be placed in the cornerstone of the new Interior Department Building, will repose a file of documents sufficiently varied to give archeologists of the future a comprehensive close-up of official duties and civic accomplishments carried on in the year 1936 by one of the largest departments of the Federal Government.

ments of the Federal Government.

Approximately 3 feet long by 1¾ feet wide, and 7 inches deep, the box will have as contents a Bible; a silk American flag; a pamphlet on the Constitution of the United States; a bronze medallion of President Franklin D. Roosevelt; an autographed photolion of President Franklin D. Roosevelt; an autographed photograph of Secretary Ickes; miniature drawings of the new building showing the architectural, structural, and mechanical details; service monographs of the Bureau of Mines, Office of Education, Reclamation Service, National Park Service, and Office of Indian Affairs; a historical outline of the public-land system; copy of the Congressional Directory for the Second Session, Seventy-fourth Congress; laws relating to the National Park Service; Glimpses of Our National Parks, a publication of current information; current newspapers and coins. Also enclosed will be copies of the act approved June 16, 1933, under which funds for the building were authorized; of the latest annual report and telephone directory of the Department of the Interior; of the 1892 hearings before a House Committee on Appropriations for the Department of the House Committee on Appropriations for the Department of the Interior and of the hearings on the Department of the Interior appropriation bill for 1937; of the publication The Department of the Interior, Its History and Proper Functions; of the invitation to the cornerstone ceremony and program; and a photograph and short history of the present Interior Department Building.

Twelve departmental units, numbering some 5,000 persons, will be housed in this structure, into which will move the Office of the Secretary of the Interior, the General Land Office, Office of Indian Affairs, Office of Education, Bureau of Reclamation, National Park Service, Division of Territories, Division of Grazing, Division of Geographic Names, Bureau of Mines, National Capital Park and Planning Commission, and the Commission of Fine Arts.

Planning Commission, and the Commission of Fine Arts.

The old Interior Building, however, will continue in use. The Geological Survey, one of the principal bureaus of the Department of the Interior, will be maintained in the old Interior Building, where its many laboratories and operating facilities will find expanded space when the above units have been evacuated.

Cut limestone over a granite base, finished with classic detail, yet modernized in design, is the material utilized for the new building, which will be a serviceable structure. Its architectural massing and proportions will fully accord with the group of Government buildings and formal parks planned for the new triangle area now taking shape between E Street, Constitution Avenue, Eighteenth Street NW., and the Potomac River. New buildings for the War and Navy Departments have been proposed for this group.

The erection of the new Interior Building, on its mammoth scale, was found advisable in view of the fact that at least 15 Federal buildings scattered through the District of Columbia now house the Department's various bureaus.

Altogether the Federal Government now is renting for its own use a total of 2,723,000 square feet of private building space in the District of Columbia—in 121 different buildings. When the new building is occupied it will be possible to reduce the Federal monthly rent roll in the District of Columbia.

THEY KEPT THE FAITH

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Speaker, under permission kindly granted me by the House, I herewith insert in the Con-GRESSIONAL RECORD a copy of some remarks made by me in Statuary Hall, Capitol, on April 6, same being the nine-teenth anniversary of America's entrance into the World

It is entirely fitting that we should gather before the statue of the late Senator Robert M. La Follette upon this occasion. He was one of the six Senators who had the courage to vote against our entrance into the war 19 years ago today. There are but three men now in Congress who voted against our entrance into | the war—Senator Norris, Mr. Lundeen, and myself.

I well recall that occasion. We were told that it was a war to make the world "safe for democracy"; also that it was "a war to end all wars." Now, we know that these were empty and meaningless phrases. Democracy is in a more precarious condition today than ever before. Dictators rule with an iron hand, and we have war and threats of war.

I well recall the tremendous pressure that was applied to an unwilling Congress to vote as the international bankers and munitions makers dictated. We were deluged with bushels of telegrams demanding that we "stand by the President." As a matter of fact, we are going through a similar hysteria in our country at the present time, only now the very foundation of constitutional government is threatened.

My friends, I hope that we may have one more amendment to our Constitution, and I refer to the Ludlow resolution, which would submit to a vote of the people all proposals for war, save when our country is actually being invaded. Had we had such a provision in the Constitution back in 1917, the American people would have overwhelmingly repudiated the proposal that we enter a provision in the Constitution back in 1917, the American people would have overwhelmingly repudiated the proposal that we enter the World War, and we would have been spared all the suffering and anguish that has resulted from our participation in that great conflict. If a vote on war could be submitted to those who made the supreme sacrifice, or who came home blinded and maimed, the result would be the same and equally decisive.

Wars settle nothing. They are futile, stupid, and expensive, and of all the wars of which there is record in history, the World War was the most stupid and indefensible. I hope that not in your time or mine we will commit or repeat that colossal blunder of April 6, 1917.

It is to promote a better understanding of what war implies and the sufferings and misery that follow all wars that we assemble today to honor those 56 who had the foresight and courage to vote "no" on that fateful day, 19 years ago. May their memory never grow dim.

THE NEW DEAL

The SPEAKER. Under a special order the Chair recognizes the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Gifford] for 25 minutes.

Mr. GIFFORD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that my time be extended 5 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. GIFFORD. Mr. Speaker, in his address at Baltimore, on the evening of April 13, the President made the following somewhat startling statements:

We shall press ahead with new experiments; the period of social pioneering is just beginning; retire all over the age of 65; forbid those under 18 to undertake employment.

He did not tell those young people assembled there to hear him that his administration has already mortgaged them and their children to an amount which must necessarily carry the Nation's indebtedness up to $40,000,000,000. A beautiful example of how easy it is to make glowing promises and carry on costly experiment with no regard for how the cost thereof is to be met. He declared that industry had really reached the high point formerly attained by it, but that now only 80 percent as many human beings are necessary to achieve the same amount of production.

He declared:

That we do something and when we have done something, if it works, do it some more; and if it does not work do something else.

In other words, he keeps on experimenting and experimenting. Keep up trial by error; submit the people further as guinea pigs for the "brain trusters" to operate upon; continue the wild and impractical schemes now so prolific under the encouragement of this administration. Hardly could we be surprised if we should find him endorsing the Townsend plan, social credit insurance, and many of the other panaceas now prevalent. He ridicules those accustomed to sound reasoning when they urge that we put the Federal finances in order and return to those principles of government which made us the greatest nation on earth. He did not tell these young people that but a few years ago only 1 dollar out of 13 was needed for taxes, while now 1 dollar out of every 4 is taken forcibly for that purpose. He did not encourage debate, that these young people might have a right to see whether they are willing to bear the heavy burden fastened upon them in the future to carry out his own particular ideas of social planning.

ficiaries" of kindred so-called cultural boondoggling schemes now parading over the country in the guise of made-work relief. It is estimated that nearly one-quarter of our population is the recipient of some form of Government relief and largesses. It may be that the other three-fourths of our population who pay the bills will suddenly become actively interested in these proceedings. We know that the President has recognized the failures of the relief set-ups as the years have gone by. We recall the P. W. A. in 1933 and, because of its slowness in getting into operation, the mad attempts of the C. W. A. to distribute Federal funds as fast and widely as possible, at least to prove to the country that we could really get rid of money hurriedly. We recall the vast sums allocated to municipalities, without any reference whatever as to their need, and the daily wage paid in large sections of the country amounting to three times the accustomed prevailing wage in such sections. The next step was the F. E. R. A., which was more sensible but resulted in the carrying on of many wild and fantastic schemes of no permanent value whatever. Finally there was evolved the W. P. A., which, after the previous experiences, for a while seemed to be a material improvement. Under this plan many worth-while projects have been undertaken by the municipalities. Nevertheless, a great many of these have been undertaken by communities financially unable to carry them on but held to the temptation of the 55-percent grant by the Federal Government.

However, under the W. P. A. it seems that it has been possible to knit together a vast and powerful political machine, the existence of which no one will have the temerity to deny. The loud protestations of those in charge of relief funds that politics will not enter into the question of relief sounds but a hollow mockery in the ears of those over the entire Nation who are now made familiar with its workings. It would, indeed, be silly to believe that the thousands directly in charge in the different municipalities could not have been instructed by those higher up before they would even dare to pursue the present political methods. A recent instance in my own State serves but as one small illustration of what must be now prevalent over the entire country. A member of the Governor's council of my own State made public the text of a letter written to an applicant for employment and signed by the president of a county Democratic league. It read as follows:

I have sent your name through for highway work. If you are not a registered Democrat, kindly visit the town clerk before 5 p. m., March 18, and have your party designation changed to Such action by these small Democratic organizations makes it a fair assumption that the approval of those above them had been secured. It is to be expected that the spoilsman will have his due when it comes to the distribution of patronage, even under the protection of the civil-service laws, but it is nothing short of a damnable outrage when relief money is used for political purposes. Thus far only denials and whitewashing have been the answer by those in power. It is peculiarly within my province as the ranking Republican on the Expenditures Committee to make protest. You will recall that I did so in no uncertain manner while the wasteful and absurd practices of the C. W. A. were in operation. The Committee on Expenditures has failed to function. I have a high regard and real affection for its chairman, who, if allowed to do so, would make a most excellent investigator. Surely he has these extravagant and wasteful expenditures much on his mind. He has amply proved this by his devotion to his work and the attention he has paid and the fights he has made on the floor to prevent improper expenditures carried in bills on the Consent and Private Calendars. He has greatly desired that Government activities be coordinated, even though his committee dismissed-with but little attention-the recommendations made to it by the outgoing President in 1932.

We have recently noted the attempts to investigate relief activities by the Senate. It seems to be well understood at They might well be consulted as to whether they really the moment that this is not at all desired by the administra-desire to become a nation of tap dancers and the "bene- tion, and that the composition of the committee does not lead us to expect anything except another dose of white-

Let us see for a moment what the President has had to say on the subject of relief:

[Excerpts from the President's annual message to the Congress, Jan. 4, 1935]

Jan. 4, 1935]

More than $2,000,000,000 have been expended in direct relief to the destitute. Local agencies of necessity determined the recipients of this form of relief. With inevitable exceptions, the funds were spent by them with reasonable efficiency * * *; but the stark fact before us is that great numbers still remain unemployed. * * * To dole out relief in this way is to administer a narcotic, a subtle destroyer of the human spirit. * * * Work must be found for able-bodied but destitude workers. The Federal Government must and shall quit this business of relief.

It is my thought that * * * all emergency public works shall be united * * * in a new system to supersede the Federal Emergency Relief Administration with coordinated authority which will be charged with the orderly liquidation of our present relief activities * * * and to be governed by a number of practical principles practical principles.

The first two which the President enumerated were:

(1) All work undertaken should be useful, not just for a day or a year-

And-

(2) compensation should be in the form of security payments, larger than relief dole, but not so large as to encourage the rejection of opportunities for private employment.

The following excerpt is taken from a radio address delivered by the President April 28, 1935:

I call upon my fellow citizens everywhere to cooperate with me in making this the most effective and cleanest example of public enterprise the world has ever seen. If you will help, this can be done. Feel free to criticize.

We all know that criticism is not truly desired. Most of us know how rash it is to make any criticisms of relief measures. I can only hope that my own constituents who have known me for a lifetime will realize that my temperament makes me eager to assist those in need of assistance and that my criticisms are not captious ones.

But it is now high time, after the experience of the past and in view of the three billion or more dollars now made available for relief, that a more sensible and honest expenditure of these funds be made. In spite of the President's opinion, and that of Administrator Hopkins, real consideration must be given to the opinion of the businessmen of the country, to whom we must look to bring us out of the depression. Again I refer you to the meeting at White Sulphur Springs some 2 years ago of the great industrialists of the Nation, and supposedly having met at the President's request, and who practically unanimously recommended the system of direct relief. I invite your attention to a timely editorial in the last issue of the Saturday Evening Post which referred to the survey of the problem by Mr. Howard Bruce, banker and industrialist, and for 8 years a member of the Democratic National Committee. He says:

If I were undertaking to write a formula for the next 12 months, work relief of the W. P. A. type would play but a small part, and the formula would provide that the Federal Government should supply a portion of the funds for direct relief, and that each State and its political subdivisions would supply the remainder.

He points out

That relief should be given according to the individual need and that made work does not add to the self-respect of the individual; he knows he is on relief and his effort will be to obtain a meager security wage with a minimum effort.

It is well known that the social-security bill, which is supposed to be the President's brain child, aims at unemployment insurance. Yells of "Dole" will probably emanate from the throats of those who now favor boondoggling. But, if it can be called insurance later on, it can be called insurance now. See that this fund is used according to the need of the individual. It can be reasonably expected that the citizen so helped will use the time released to himself for material and cultural benefits of his own choosing and add vastly more to the permanent material and spiritual welfare of the Nation.

Somehow all too many of our citizens seem to believe that the Federal Government has money in limitless supply. They understand that when aid is granted locally it must be paid for by direct taxes. However, the Federal Government is so far removed from them and Federal income taxes fall directly on so few, relatively speaking, that the realization that it, too, must eventually be repaid for all it expends by way of relief does not prevail. There is not even the realization that they are now paying, through the medium of indirect or hidden taxes. Likewise, certain legislators advocate issuing additional printed money, and this gives the impression to many that all the Government at Washington need to do is set the printing presses into faster operation.

But we really have no money. The power to raise it by taxation has been exercised almost to the breaking point. We have borrowed and must continue to borrow to an extent that may bring disaster even in the immediate future. May I quote from a statement recently made before a committee by Mr. Morgenthau? He said:

What I might say, if it became public property, might have a very adverse effect on the Government's credit. Now, that whole question of Government credit is such a delicate thing. One day there is confidence, and the people who buy bonds are with you. Then overnight something happens and they won't buy. * * * The minute I cannot raise the money to finance the Government, that minute you will have complete chaos.

Under questioning he conceded that the Treasury now faces the problem of raising around $12,000,000,000 within the next year and a half.

Are not the arguments of Lew Douglas persuasive? In the light of what he said months ago, Mr. Douglas would appear to see only repudiation ahead. Is there to be another dose of coin clipping?

It is estimated that direct relief would cost not much more than one-half of the sum contemplated for expenditure under the present wasteful system. Among many Members there is a strong sentiment for the earmarking of most of these measures for P. W. A. projects to assure their being of at least some permanent value. But such projects could not wholly take care of the vast army now in need of relief. Many people are unfitted, or for various reasons unable, to work on such projects. Moreover, not a few of them-such as Passamaquoddy and the Florida canal—are themselves of doubtful merit or worse.

May we not well take a lesson from England? She some time ago abandoned such schemes for relief and for the fourth successive year has achieved a balanced budget, all under a system of direct relief. We, on the other hand, have registered failure. Why not, then, adopt a method which has worked successfully there? The answer would seem to be, simply because it is not compatible with the highly socialized aims, experiments, and notions fostered by this administration.

Subsistence homesteads! Resettlement vagaries! Satellite cities! Tree belts stretching from Canada to the Gulf, and many, many other grandiose but impractical schemes. Slum-clearance projects like those condemned on the floor recently by New York City Democrats. Boondoggling monstrosities too numerous to enumerate.

Does not the colossal failure to solve the unemployment question by such methods, tried over a period of 3 years, move you to demand a return to good old-fashioned ideas?

Blind, indeed, are they who do not realize that the one thing that is still lacking to assure true recovery is confidence. Well, it is small wonder that such confidence is lacking—that in the light of what has happened during the past 3 years business and finance hesitates and actually shudders at what may be done by this President of ours and the advisers to whom he has clung so tenaciously. Or who have clung so tenaciously to him.

Those who have will invest only in commodities of present value and will not invest in the future of the Nation for fear that their money will not return because of the possibility of further devaluation and more taxes and stifling legislation which continue to threaten the very existence of corporate business.

Conditions were indeed desperate early in 1933. However, nothing could keep America from forging ahead toward eventual recovery from the world-wide depression, and it has done so despite the retarding effects of many of the legislative acts which have been written on the statute books. Our recuperative power is truly great. I personally recovered from a very severe sore throat a short time ago, although, contrary to the advice of my physician, I smoked constantly. Nearly always the inherent power of recuperation overcomes even retarding actions; and there is a ray of hope for a return to sanity. I venture to suggest that the coming political race may be exceedingly interesting, even though it is run on a rather "muddy" track. Certainly the President, as such, has been treated most considerately by the opposite party. As "Candidate Roosevelt", however, it will be different; but, if he is attacked with some vigor, please remember the days when the cry was, "Smear Hoover!" Reread the Democratic speeches made on the floors of Congress during the days preceding the Tugwellian socialistic era. Let us hope that you Democrats can "take it" as well as hand it out.

In one thing the Republicans are indeed fortunate. Exceedingly effective fire is being directed at you by the most able of your own former leaders. Such Democrats as the great Senator from Virginia, who are faced with the necessity of seeking reelection, will again climb on the donkey's back and join the parade for the sake of the party and their own political interests, of course. However, even if the present administration should be returned to power, you may anticipate from such Democrats an insistent demand that the President finally depart from his costly experiments and pursue a saner and safer course.

Let me quote to you from remarks made by Senator Carter Glass:

The New Deal, taken all in all, is not only a mistake; it is a disgrace to the Nation. The time is not far distant when we shall be ashamed of having wandered so far from the dictates of common sense and common honesty. I would rather have died than live to see the disgrace of this era. Perhaps it would be better to drop the expression "brain trust" and substitute a word more apt. As for the New Deal, thousands of struggling industries are being driven out of business. * * I have not had anything to do with it, nor have I permitted it to have anything to do with my business.

Are not the rebukes which have been administered by Glass, Byrd, Douglas, Johnson, Al Smith, Jim Reed, Bainbridge Colby, John W. Davis, Ritchie, Tydings, Ely, Raskob, Shouse, and even Moley—and many other nationally known Democratic heroes of other days—still ringing in your ears?

O people of this Nation, return to the faith of your fathers. There has often been a sharp cleavage between the two major parties but never before has a party been willing to put in jeopardy the very liberties of our people, so dearly bought for us by those forefathers. Mark well the state of many of the other nations of the world, already beneath the iron heel of dictatorships. Let us rather endure a little longer these temporary ills and hardships than embark on the kind of craft, no matter how attractively it may be painted, which has borne those other countries to the shores of communism, nazi-ism, and fascism. Spurn the future guidance of men whose names were better known in red Russia than they were here before they were placed in charge of some of the branches of our Government. If your Presidential candidate must be Roosevelt, do not again write an appealing platform and pledge him to it, as you did 4 years ago, and then-should he be reelected-permit him not only to break the promises which he may personally make but repudiate and make a mockery of the party platform by which the votes of a misguided and trusting electorate shall have been secured.

To me it is almost beyond comprehension that the present Democratic Party believes that it can successfully go again to the people, in view of the great betrayal which has occurred. Let us rather hope and believe that the withering fire of criticism, condemnation, and ridicule that has already been poured in upon this administration from true Democrats, as well as Republicans, will at least force the abandonment of the weird and unworkable plans of those leaders who have set as their prime object the making over of America.

How tenderly, indeed, have we to date treated this President of ours! It has thus far been only his advisers who have been castigated. Tugwell, Wallace, Hopkins have felt the lash of an aroused public opinion, but thus far the only suggestion made is the semiapologetic statement that these things cannot have reached certain ears.

The people must now be made to realize who is the master mind that appoints these chosen vassals and approves their un-American policies and performances. I am not a lawyer, but I understand that one legal axiom is that the principal is responsible for the acts of his agents performed in the course of their employment. And that even if an act was not specifically authorized in advance, its consequences are just as binding on that principal if later ratified. Failure to disaffirm and fire the offender may be such ratification. The President must assume all responsibility. He cannot escape it; and now that the facts of these repeated wild and wasteful experiments and repeated failures are being brought home to the consciousness of the people, it may not this time be so easy for you to build up a personality which shall remain sacrosanct.

Relief has indeed been distributed. But not only has far too much of the money failed to reach its intended beneficiaries and the waste and inefficiency been deplorable, but very soon the tax collector will start coming around with his demands that the money all be repaid and interest added. Our children and our children's children will hear his knock on their doors.

Moreover, the realization that the surrender of a goodly portion of our liberties has been the price which we have had to pay for this governmental assistance in our time of need will bring its rude awakening. Even the farmer will rebel against being told just how much, or how little, he may sow and reap.

Even a majority of the people can be blinded for a time by dazzling promises of immediate and personal benefits. But the realization must eventually come that those who dance must pay the piper. And then loyal Americans of all political faiths will join the chorus of protest until its volume reaches those ears that now hear only the pleasing tones of flattery and adulation.

Self-interest is, indeed, a mighty motivating power and it may sway a great many for a little while longer, but sooner or later the revulsion must come. And a prominent Democrat has stated that, after being reelected, large numbers of them would desert such an administration like rats leaving a sinking ship.

In concluding I wish to remind you that the remarks which I have made have not been partisan in the sense that they were uttered by a Republican assailing Democratic policies and performances. They have been strictly in line with what innumerable Democrats have likewise said—sincere Democrats who have become seriously disturbed by the present trends of our Government and greatly fear for the future well-being and liberties of our States and citizens alike. They, too, abhor the subtle persuasive methods which have been and are being employed to subvert the people and by the granting of largesses under the cloak of relief—a mess of pottage—to induce them to surrender their birthright of individual liberty granted and guaranteed under the Constitution. I quote ex-Senator Reed, "Destroy the Constitution and liberty is dead."

FLORIDA SHIP CANAL

The SPEAKER. Under special order, the Chair recognizes the gentleman from Florida [Mr. Green] for 10 minutes.

Mr. GREEN. Mr. Speaker, the subject of the canal across Florida is one of great importance and to thoroughly discuss it would take far more time than has been allotted to me this morning. Therefore, I shall not attempt to make a general discussion of it in this limited time, but I ask unanimous consent that in my time the Clerk may read a letter which I have today received on this subject and which is of vital interest, I am sure, to all Members of the House. At a later date, when more time is available, it is my purpose to discuss at length this subject.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the Clerk reading the letter referred to?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the letter, as follows:

THE SHIP CANAL AUTHORITY OF THE STATE OF FLORIDA, Washington, D. C., April 15, 1936.

Member of Congress, House of Representatives.

MY DEAR MR. GREEN: I note from today's press dispatches that the President has intimated that, in the absence of a specific appropriation for the Florida ship canal by the Congress, he feels that he will be unable to make further allotments to this project from relief funds.

from relief funds.

If this is true, it serves to emphasize the desirability of congressional action on this matter during the present session. This is not a proposed project or one which is being contemplated, but a work which is well under way. The enormous excavations which have been made by the Army engineers in charge represent a ditch comparable in size with the Panama Canal and nearly 16 miles in length. Approximately 12,000,000 cubic yards of earth have been removed, and excavation is going on at the rate of 100,000 cubic yards per day. There are more than 6,000 men employed on this work, substantially all of whom come from the relief rolls. It cannot be the intention of Congress to fail to provide for this enterprise which was undertaken pursuant to policy laid down by it, nor does it seem possible that the Congress will permit the throwing out of work of this great amount of labor and the distress and chaos which would result.

I am satisfied that if the facts relating to the Florida Canal were known to the Members of Congress, the project would long since have been provided for by adequate appropriation. It has were known to the Members of Congress, the project would long since have been provided for by adequate appropriation. It has been the object of vicious attack by interests which are opposed to the economies which the canal would bring about, and it has been subject to a barrage of misleading propaganda which has probably been unequalled since the attempt to defeat the Panama Canal. Even the official acts of record of the Congress and the Canal. Even the official acts of record of the Congress and the Federal agencies have been misquoted and given a warped inter-pretation with a view to misleading Members of Congress and the

You will recall that this project was exhaustively examined by the War Department, through the Corps of Engineers, pursuant to act of Congress. The national benefits which will result from the canal have been determined and reported by the special board of survey of the Corps of Engineers, and the cost estimate of $140,-000,000 has been approved by the Chief of Engineers. The Engineering Division of the Public Works Administration approved the project and recommended its construction. A special board of review appointed by the President, composed of Army engineers and engineers of the Public Works Administration, has unanimously approved the project and recommended its construction. The Congress, acting through the Emergency Appropriation Act of 1935, has authorized the project. Its construction is well under way. The Chief of Engineers has recommended, the Director of the Budget has approved, and the President has transmitted to Congress an appropriation item of $12,000,000 for prosecution of the work during the fiscal year ending June 1937. canal have been determined and reported by the special board of work during the fiscal year ending June 1937.

When the House acted upon the War Department appropriation bill it did not see fit to include at that time the specific items of bill it did not see in to include at that time the specinc items of appropriation for this and a number of other projects, although the chairman of the subcommittee in charge of the bill, in entire fairness and frankness, stated: "I think it has been held that any project that actually has been begun and on which money has been expended, stands on the same level with projects authorized by Congress. Of course, that does not mean that we have to do it, but so far as the authorization is concerned it is there." and again he pointed out in his report to the House that the omission of these projects from the bill was without prejudice to their merits. The Senate decided by a majority of 10 votes that these projects were duly authorized and were appropriate items for appropriation should the Congress see fit to include them in an appropriation measure. The Senate by a majority of only one vote failed to amend the War Department appropriation bill passed by the House to include the specific budgetary item for the Florida Canal.

The above is the brief history of legislation on this project to date. The plain facts of the matter are that Congress has authorized the project, but has not yet seen fit to make specific appropriations for it. Any attempts by individuals to construe the legislative history of the canal to mean that it has been the legislative history of the canal to mean that it has been disapproved by Congress are gratuitous and contrary to the record. In view of the above, I trust that you will make every effort to bring to the attention of the House the true facts in this case and to remove from it the vell of false propaganda which has undoubtedly confused the issue in the minds of so many of the Members. If you can succeed in doing this, I am satisfied that appropriate provision will be made to prevent the disastrous results to labor and industry which will inevitably follow failure to provide funds for the prosecution of what is undoubtedly the greatest and most worth-while project which the Congress has authorized in this generation. Very truly yours,

H. H. BUCKMAN, Engineering Counsel, The Ship Canal Authority of the State of Florida.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry. The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. RICH. Would it be appropriate to congratulate the President at this time on discontinuing the Florida ship

The SPEAKER. That is not a parliamentary inquiry.

FLOOD CONTROL

The SPEAKER. Under the special order of the House the Chair recognizes the gentleman from New York [Mr. LORD]

Mr. LORD. Mr. Speaker, I want to call attention of the House at this time to the results of the flood condition in New York, Pennsylvania, and other sections of the country that have suffered so greatly. I traveled through Pennsylvania to my home in New York during the last days of last week. I could see the results of that flood standing out very clearly. Many houses have been washed away. In others the underpinning is washed out, and those houses are lying in the cellars, totally destroyed, all as the result of high waters.

In New York State last July we had terrible floods which cost the lives of some 50 people and caused property damage of some $30,000,000. Again, in November we had a terrible flood and again this spring. As a result of the floods we prevailed on the President of this Nation to have the Army Engineers make a survey of that section and propose some plan to prevent floods of this kind in the future. The survey has been made. The plans are about completed, and the appropriation for the work is the next step.

There has been before the Senate for some time a bill proposing flood control, but that bill has been loaded up with other than emergency projects until I fear it stands some chance of being defeated. But, in fact, there has been very little activity on this legislation. In 1927 there were terrible floods in the State of Vermont. After that time they erected flood-control dams, as they propose to erect them in New York, Pennsylvania, and other States.

During the recent floods, while there was a great fall of water, even greater than in 1927, those dams held the water, and there was very little damage done. We believe if we could get these retaining dams erected in the State of New York and in the other States which need them we could prevent floods like the recent one. If we could hold back the water in New York State that comes down and overflows Wilkes-Barre, Harrisburg, and those other cities, a great deal of that damage, if not all of it, could be prevented. What we need now is action in this case.

I notice in the morning press a quotation, said to be from the President, where he said "he was not acquainted with any special flood-control appropriation bills on Capitol Hill." I think it is time that somebody did acquaint themselves with the flood-control situation. I think it is time the President of the United States interested himself in this legislation. I believe it is of enough importance to the sections that have been flooded that it should be one of the all-important measures, and that we should have relief at the present time. It is time the work was started, for we do not know when these floods will recur. If we can have the protection we should have, we believe that floods in the future will be eliminated.

Mr. KOPPLEMANN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LORD. I am sorry, but I do not have time.

I want to urge upon the Members of Congress who come from these flooded areas, especially those from New York, Pennsylvania, the New England States, and other States that have been affected, to take some action upon this subject. I am going to ask those Members to meet in the well of the House at the close of the session today that we may formulate some plan that we may encourage and hurry on this control, which I believe is so important to all of us, and especially so in the East. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

FEDERAL DEPOSIT INSURANCE CORPORATION

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, I call up House Resolution 485.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 485

Resolved, That upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of Senate Joint Resolution 230, a Senate joint resolution amending paragraph (4) of subsection (n) of section 12B of the Federal Reserve Act, as amended. That after general debate, which shall be confined to the joint resolution and continue not to exceed 1 hour, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Reserve and Committee on chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Banking and Currency, the joint resolution shall be read for amendment under the 5-minute rule. At the conclusion of the reading of the joint resolution for amendment the Committee shall rise and report the same to the House with such amend-ments as may have been adopted, and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the joint resolution and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit, with or without instructions.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the adoption of an amendment which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. O'Connor: On page 1, in line 6, after the word "amended", insert a comma and "and all points of order against said joint resolution are hereby waived:"

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, what is the purpose of the amendment?

Mr. O'CONNOR. The Senate passed Senate Joint Resolution 230. The House reported H. R. 11844, an identical bill. The Rules Committee was asked to report out Senate Joint Resolution 230, but there is no report accompanying that particular resolution. The report accompanying the House bill furnishes the information. They are identical bills.

Mr. MICHENER. It was just a clerical error in the committee?

Mr. O'CONNOR. Not in the Rules Committee. [Laugh-

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, this is an open rule for the consideration of a Senate joint resolution to extend the time of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation to take over the assets of defunct banks.

Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the resolution

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of Senate Joint Resolution 230, amending paragraph (4) of subsection (n) of section 12B of the Federal Reserve Act, as amended.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the Senate Joint Resolution 230, with Mr. Crowe in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the joint resolution.

By unanimous consent, the first reading of the joint resolution was dispensed with.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 5

Mr. Chairman, under the provisions of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation has the right to buy up the assets of closed banks when by so doing it thinks it can save itself a loss and effect a consolidation with another institution. This power expires on July 1, 1936. This resolution extends the time to July 1, 1938.

Unless there are some questions, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. I yield.

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. To what extent are deposits in national banks guaranteed at the present time?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Up to $5,000.

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. When does it become $10,000? Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. The $5,000 is permanent law.

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. I yield.

Mr. MICHENER. I notice the form of the resolution is incorrect, in that it states the procedure to be followed in the House to bring about what the gentleman attempts to do. The resolution states simply that paragraph (4) of subsection (n) of section 12B of the Federal Reserve Act, as amended, is amended by striking out "July 1, 1936" and inserting in lieu thereof "July 1, 1938."

The gentleman realizes, of course, that if this becomes law in this form, no one will know what the law is, and that there will be no law until the court gets the two enactments of Congress together and codifies them and does the mechanics which the House is presumed to do when it enacts legislation.

I would suggest to the gentleman that he offer as an amendment to the resolution language like this:

That section 4 of the Federal Reserve Act be amended to read as follows.

Then the gentleman will find in the Ramseyer rule in the report just what should appear in the new statute. All the gentleman needs to do is to strike out that which is in the parenthesis, or "July 1, 1930" of the Ramseyer report, and he will have a properly drafted statute. Is there any objection?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. I do not know that there is any objection, but I think the joint resolution is all right as it is.

Mr. MICHENER. Yes; any statute may be said to be all

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. I think it means what we intend it to mean.

Mr. MICHENER. Yes; but if you just offer a statute to amend the law by saying that after a certain comma you strike out a word and insert a semicolon, then you go down four or five lines and strike out something else, then insert another semicolon, the court on the bench when asked to pass upon the law must do all this mechanical work before he knows what the law is. No member of the drafting service prepared this resolution, did they?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Yes; the drafting service of the Senate drew the resolution. As far as I am concerned, it is all right. I think the gentleman's criticism is without

Mr. MICHENER. I will offer the amendment. The gentleman having charge of the bill thinks my suggestion is without merit. This is the first time I have ever heard that what I have just suggested is not the correct procedure.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. The gentleman insisted upon my answering. I did not want to say that, but the gentleman made me say it.

Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. COLDEN.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. I yield.

Mr. COLDEN. Has the gentleman any information as to the success of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation in salvaging the assets of defunct banks?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. It has salvaged something like 47

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. I yield.

Mr. CRAWFORD. To what extent can the F. D. I. C. salvage these banks? As an illustration, in my home town there are two closed banks now in the hands of receivers. Can the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation buy up the assets of these banks and take them out of the receivership?

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. I am sorry, my time has expired. Mr. CRAWFORD. Perhaps the gentleman may be able to answer me later.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. Spence].

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks and to insert a statement of Hon. Leo C. Crowley, chairman of the board, Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, prepared for the Committee on Banking and Currency of the United States Senate on Senate Joint Resolution 230. This statement has never been printed

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

There was no objection.

The statement referred to follows:

Statement of Leo T. Crowley, chairman of the board, Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, prepared for the Committee on Banking and Currency of the United States Senate on Senate Joint Resolution 230

The pending resolution provides for extending for a period of 2 years the loaning powers of the Corporation under paragraph (4) of subsection (n) of the deposit insurance law (sec. 12B of the Federal Reserve Act, as amended).

Under this provision, the Corporation may make loans to an insured bank provision first the loan will reduce the risk or exert

Under this provision, the Corporation may make loans to an insured bank, provided, first, the loan will reduce the risk or avert a threatened loss to the Corporation; and second, the loan will facilitate a merger or consolidation of the borrowing bank with another insured bank, or the sale of its assets and the assumption of its liabilities by another insured bank. Under like conditions, the Corporation may purchase assets from an insured bank or guarantee one insured bank against loss by reason of its assuming the liabilities and taking over the assets of another insured bank.

As advances by the Corporation under this section and accounts the section and the s

As advances by the Corporation under this section ordinarily will be in the form of loans, its powers under this section are referred to as its loaning powers. However, the power to pur-chase assets is of equal importance with its power to make loans. Assets may be purchased in cases where, by limitations imposed by State law or by charter, the bank is prevented from borrowing money or pledging assets beyond a specified amount, or where the existence of mortgage moratoria laws embodying restrictions on foreclosure make it impracticable to loan money on such security.

security.

In the course of hearings before this committee last year on title I of the Banking Act of 1935, the Corporation recommended that it be given these powers. At that time we recommended that the powers be granted only for a temporary period to expire on July I, 1936. Our purpose in suggesting this time limit was, first, to induce prompt action by insured banks and supervising authorities in formulating plans for rehabilitating banks needing these loans; and second, to furnish the Corporation a trial period for testing the results of these loans.

for testing the results of these loans.

When the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation was created,
Congress provided that all national banks and State banks mem-When the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation was created, Congress provided that all national banks and State banks members of the Federal Reserve System should automatically be admitted to insurance. Congress also provided that any solvent State bank not a member of the Federal Reserve System should be admitted to insurance after examination and approval by the Corporation. Under this provision a bank found by examination to have assets with sufficient value to cover all liabilities to depositors and other creditors was admitted to insurance even though the capital of the bank might be impaired or exhausted. During the year 1934 and the first half of 1935 the Corporation concentrated its energies upon improving the capital structure of insured banks, and many of those which had been admitted with impaired capital corrected this condition. In other cases their capital had been strengthened by an increase in the value of their investments. However, on August 22, 1935, when the temporary Federal deposit-insurance fund terminated, there still remained a number of insured banks with a deficient capital; and there were also a number of insured institutions which because of basic economic weaknesses are destined to fall eventually unless mergers or consolidations can be effected. Some of these institutions are the residue of the large number of uneconomic banks indiscriminately chartered during the years preceding and immediately following 1920.

The problem of making the banking structure sound in com-

1920.

The problem of making the banking structure sound in communities where there are now more banks than can be supported can be met only by the ultimate liquidation of some of these institutions or by programs for consolidation. As time passes the condition of some of these banks tends to grow progressively worse. By periodic contributions to capital or reductions in capital and other makeshift remedies, these institutions may be able to forestall liquidation proceedings but are unable to remedy their basic weaknesses. Because of the inability of the supervising authorities to close them as long as they maintain the minimum standards required by law, banks in this category continue in weak condition. If the Corporation adopts a passive attitude toward these banks, they will be permitted to operate until they are forced to suspend and larger losses will be sustained than if the situation is rectified at the present time.

By aid of loans from the Corporation communities with banks aid of loans from the Corporation communities in this condition can be given at least one sound bank. This procedure also enables the Corporation to take its losses currently instead of permitting them to accumulate and to fall heavily upon its reserves during a period of financial stress.

Use of the loaning powers of the Corporation also averts the deflationary effects on local values and the disturbance to the locality which result from the receivership and liquidation of a locality which result from the receivership and liquidation of a suspended bank. Sound assets are taken over by the purchasing bank at going bank values rather than at forced sale values. Only the unacceptable assets, taken as collateral on the Corporation's loan, are placed in liquidation. The percentage of recovery of the bank's total resources is substantially increased. The business affairs of depositors and borrowers are not subject to the interruption which follows the closing of any bank, even an insured institution.

The formulation of plans for using the loaning powers of the Corporation has entailed surveys and analyses which have required more time than was anticipated when the limit for making these loans—July 1, 1936—was first suggested to the committee. The Corporation has exercised these powers in six cases. It has made six loans, aggregating $7,289,492 and in three of these cases $436,139 has also been expended in the purchase of assets. The deposits in these banks approximated $17,300,000. Six other loans, aggregating $273,000, have been approved by the board of directors but have not yet been disbursed. In addition, the Corporation has made commitments to supervising State authorities, or has proposals under consideration, involving the making of loans to about 100

It will not be possible before July 1, when the loaning power expires under the law as now written, to prepare plans and carry them out in many of the cases where we believe this procedure should be followed. It seems desirable, therefore, that the time limit be extended.

We do, however, again recommend that a time limit be fixed for the exercise of this power. There may be a question as to the desirability of the Corporation having permanent loaning powers, and the suggested period of extension will provide further opportunity for testing the effects of these powers. A time limit will serve as an incentive to the weak banks to work out their problems promptly rather than to postpone them indefinitely in the helief promptly rather than to postpone them indefinitely in the belief that the Corporation will always make a loan as a last resort.

For these reasons, it is recommended by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation that the time limit on its loaning power be extended for an additional 2 years from July 1, 1936, as provided in the joint resolution under consideration. in the joint resolution under consideration.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I know there will be no opposition to the Senate resolution that is being considered at this time. It is my own thought that of all the constructive legislation passed by the Congress, none has had such a farreaching effect as that creating the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. It has restored the confidence of the people of America in their financial institutions, and the effect of that confidence has been felt every day since the passage of the act.

I want to read a significant statement as to the deposits in the banks and how they have increased since this bill was

The total assets of insured banks were approximately as

On June 30, 1934, forty-three and one-half billion dollars. December 31, 1934, forty-six and one-half billion dollars. June 29, 1935, forty-seven and one-fourth billion dollars.

December 31, 1935, $51,000,000,000.

Now, referring to demand deposits, they were as follows: June 30, 1934, $14,000,000,000.

December 31, 1934, sixteen and three-fourths billion dol-

June 29, 1935, $18,000,000,000.

The time deposits were as follows:

June 30, 1934, eleven and one-fourth billion dollars. December 31, 1934, eleven and one-half billion dollars. June 29, 1935, twelve and one-fourth billion dollars.

On December 31, 1935, the total assets of insured commercial banks approximated $51,000,000,000. The total deposits of insured banks exceeded $44,000,000,000-more than had ever been deposited in the banks of America.

Mr. Chairman, I think this is largely the result of the confidence that the passage of this bill brought to the people of America, and as long as we are on the subject, it seems to me it is not inappropriate to speak with reference as to where the credit for the passage of this bill should be placed. It certainly should not be placed to the credit of the bankers.

In his statement before the Committee on Banking, Mr. O'Connor, Comptroller of the Currency, stated:

With reference to the attitude of the bankers, both from the standpoint, as I see it, of the office of the Comptroller of the Currency and as a member of this board, the American Bankers Assorency and as a member of this board, the American Bankers Association held their convention in Chicago in September of 1933, 4 months before the law was to take effect; and I believe only about 5 percent of the bankers in that meeting approved the law. A resolution was passed with an overwhelming majority denouncing the law and asking the President of the United States to delay its taking effect.

Mr. Chairman, we saved the bankers of America, notwithstanding their protests. While I do not want to indulge in partisanship, and while I give full credit to our colleagues on the other side of the aisle who supported the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation law, certainly the Republican Party deserves no credit for the passage of this law, because in their platform of 1932 we find the following:

In contrast with the Republican policies and record we contrast those of the Democratic Party as evidenced by the action of the House of Representatives under Democratic leadership and control, which includes the guaranty of bank deposits.

Mr. COLDEN. Will the gentleman yield?
Mr. SPENCE. I yield to the gentleman from California. Mr. COLDEN. Does not the gentleman believe that William Jennings Bryan, as an exponent of that doctrine, should receive some credit for this measure?

Mr. SPENCE. Yes; I remember Mr. Bryan advocated the insurance by the National Government of bank deposits. any event, I simply want to say that for the passage of this particular act the Democratic Party should receive full and exclusive credit. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. HOLLISTER. Mr. Chairman, there is not very much to add to what has already been said by the gentlemen in connection with this bill. I merely want to take a minute to point out to the members of the Committee exactly what this bill does and quote some of the language in it, so you will see that it only covers certain particular kinds of contingencies.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation is, of course, in the business of insuring deposits up to $5,000, but, naturally, is trying to do this job in as cheap a way as possible and to avert losses as far as possible. It was realized after the original deposit-insurance law was adopted that there might be times when, by proper and judicious intervention by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, prior to the time of making payment of the insured accounts in a bank in difficulties, the necessity of making these payments might cease, and therefore the deposit-insurance fund, which was available to pay insured deposits, might be held intact and might not have any loss whatsoever, or at least not as great a loss as it would have had in the event all the insured deposits of that particular bank had to be paid.

It was for this reason that paragraph 4 of subsection (n) of section 12B of the Federal Reserve Act, which is the section dealing with deposit insurance, was passed, and those of you who have the report before you will note that the paragraph in question gives the right to the board of directors of the Corporation to take this action whenever, in their opinion, the risk will be reduced or a threatened loss will be averted. They may make loans secured by the assets of closed or open banks, they may purchase those assets, or they may guarantee the value of those assets to another bank, which gives a certain flexibility to the Corporation.

When the Corporation sees that a loss is very liable to be incurred because of the situation of some insured bank, knowing that certain insured deposits must be paid, the act gives the Corporation the right to make some kind of a deal, perhaps to advance money on the strength of the assets, perhaps to purchase those assets outright and hold them for liquidation by the Corporation itself or through another bank, or perhaps to guarantee them to some other bank which may take over the business of the bank which has been in difficulties.

All this bill asks is that this right, which has been of considerable value and which is now in the law, be extended for another 2 years from July 1, 1936.

Mr. KOPPLEMANN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman

Mr. HOLLISTER. I yield to the gentleman from Connecticut.

Mr. KOPPLEMANN. I understand the gentleman is in favor of this joint resolution?

Mr. HOLLISTER. Absolutely.

Mr. KOPPLEMANN. May I offer this comment: There are two States in the Union, one of them, unfortunately, the State of Connecticut, where the State banks do not subscribe to this measure and have not joined the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. In view of the fact that the gentleman is in favor of this joint resolution and was in favor of the original bill, and undoubtedly knows of the great benefits that have accrued to the depositors of America, and to the banks as well, I wonder if the gentleman would state why it is that any bank in any State would object to becoming a member of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

Mr. HOLLISTER. The gentleman, as a good citizen of Connecticut, would certainly not ask me, as a citizen of Ohio, to say why certain institutions in the State of Connecticut do or do not subscribe to a certain act, would he?

Mr. KOPPLEMANN. Then, I take it, the gentleman knows of no reason why they should not?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I would be the last person in the world to try to deal with a Connecticut matter, on which the gentleman must be better informed than I.

Mr. KOPPLEMANN. May I ask, further, whether the gentleman knows of any reason why any bank in the Nation should stay out?

Mr. HOLLISTER. Oh, a great many reasons. I could talk for half an hour or an hour on that subject. There are reasons both for and against deposit insurance. It is a very highly controversial subject, and I am not prepared to give all the arguments against it to the gentleman, because there are a great many of them. There are also a great many arguments in favor of deposit insurance, and, as the gentleman will recall, the present act is a kind of compromise between those who objected to any insurance at all and those who wanted 100-percent insurance with full liability on the Government. The gentleman knows that the present bill is a compromise, and certainly I cannot answer his question without going into considerable more detail with respect to the whole proposition.

Mr. KOPPLEMANN. And yet the gentleman is in favor of this measure and was in favor of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act.

Mr. HOLLISTER. As to the measure now before the committee, I am decidedly in favor of it.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman vield?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I yield.

Mr. CRAWFORD. In view of the fact that this section of the act expires on July 1, 1938, do we understand that if, say, on August 31, 1938, a bank, the deposits of which are insured by the F. D. I. C., gets into trouble or is closed, we will say, or becomes insolvent, the F. D. I. C. will then not have an opportunity or be authorized by law to take over the assets of that bank in order to reduce the losses that might occur?

Mr. HOLLISTER. It would not be able to proceed under this section, but let me say to the gentleman that he knows, of course, as well as I do, that there will be two sessions of Congress before July 1, 1938. I personally would have preferred to have this extension made only to July 1, 1937, as it is still in the experimental stage, perhaps, but 2 years is certainly sufficient, and much better than making it permanent, because making it permanent would make it very hard to change the law.

Mr. CRAWFORD. The thing I was trying to clear up in my own mind is that this is not what we might call emergency legislation, but is something to go along with Federal deposit insurance as time indicates the way it should travel.

Mr. HOLLISTER. It has worked out very satisfactorily so far as to this particular section, and the directors have asked that it be extended for a certain length of time. I see no need to extend it beyond that time, because there will be two sessions of the Congress in the meanwhile.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from New York [Mr. WADSWORTH].

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include therein a speech delivered by me before the John Marshall Club in St. Louis on April 4.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, it is so ordered.

THE BOAD WE ARE TRAVELING

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. Chairman, under the leave to extend my remarks in the Record, I include the following speech which I delivered on April 4, 1936, before the John Marshall Club of St. Louis, Mo.:

When one looks back to March 4, 1933, and attempts to review the events which have transpired since that day—and it is a terrific job—one cannot help being impressed by one fact, and that is that not once during this hectic period have the President or any of his principal lieutenants used the word "thrift." I submit that the omission of that simple word from the New Deal vocabulary is significant. It denotes a habit of thought; it helps to identify a philosophy. Let us look into it for a moment. For generations the average American has lived in the belief that the best measure of security he could achieve for himself and his family must come from his own efforts. If he were wise and provident, he tried to put away savings against a rainy day. He preferred to depend upon himself rather than upon government, and in doing so he enjoyed a degree of satisfaction which in itself became a spiritual asset of great value. It is fair to say that the American conception of life has, generally speaking, been built upon such a foundation. The New Deal offers no encouragement to such a conception. Directly, or by implication, it preaches the doctrine that security from the cradle to the grave should be conferred upon the individual largely by an all-wise and all-powerful Government. The Government's function in this respect is implied in several phrases which have come to our ears during the last 3 years. I shall mention but two of them. The President uses the term "planned economy." His chief lieutenant, Dr. Tugwell, mentions a "disciplined democracy." These two phrases, together with others of a like nature used frequently by the President and his principal supporters, indicate very clearly what they are driving at. And, moreover, a long succession of legislative enactments, many of them contrived to plan the economy of the people and to discipline them under governmental control, completes the vivid picture. The element of thrift does not appear in that picture at all, whether it be governmental thrift or thrift exercised by the individual.

You may think that I am placing too much importance upon this matter and that I am allowing myself to reach an unwarranted conclusion. Nevertheless, I entertain the belief that, through the omission of any appeal for thrift, it is expected that the individual will the more easily drift into a state of dependence upon government and acquiesce finally into becoming its disciplined subject. You may doubt that there is any such intention in the mind of the President and the new dealers, but make no mistake about it—that is the road along which the American people are traveling today. Whether we think it wise or unwise to pursue such a course, it must be conceded that it is not the American way; that it closely parallels the modern European way—the way of Hitler and Mussolini. The public appeals, the lingo, the phrases, the signposts are all alike. A comparison of Fascist, Nazi, and, indeed, Communist writers with the utterances and writings of the apostles of the New Deal in America exposes a startling similarity. I want to call your attention to an element ever present in the European picture. It is the element of force—force applied against the individual in order to compel his obedience to the plans of government—and to remind you that we have already encountered that same element here in the United States. In fact, it threatened to dominate our lives until of a sudden it was wiped out, for the time being at least, by the Supreme Court of the United States. What do I mean by this? Obviously, if the Government is to plan the way in which people are to earn their living, it cannot permit any individual or group of people to deviate from the path marked out for them lest the whole plan of the Government break down. To save the plan obedience is demanded, and if obedience is lacking then force must be employed. That is inevitable. In other words, our democracy must be disciplined and a bureaucratic Government at Washington must perform the functions of a policeman. Some people will say,

Lewis' recent book.

The answer is, it has already happened here in several different ways—this employment of force against the individual who declines to earn his living in a way prescribed. We found it in the famous N. R. A. codes as expounded and applied in the thunderings of Gen. Hugh Johnson. Those pseudo laws contained provisions to the effect that if the people engaged in a certain industry or in the performance of a certain service charged a price for their goods or services different from that fixed in the code, or, in some cases, if they produced and sold more than the quantity fixed in the code, they were to be punished through prosecution, finally, in the Federal courts with fines, and, if they proved obstinate, with imprisonment. Some unsuspecting individuals were actually thus punished, and a large number of prosecutions were pending in the Federal courts when the Supreme Court, in the case of Schechter, the Brooklyn chicken merchant, stepped in and reminded the administration and the country that under the supreme law of the land—the law which is above Presidents and Congresses—the Federal Government has no power to do such things. Thus, in one field, the field of industry, the element of force was withdrawn for the moment. This unanimous decision of the Court tended to clarify the hitherto confused thinking of a great many people and to bring them to a better realization of what this movement really means. It did not, however, deter the President from his determination to go ahead with it. Indeed, he protested against the decision and made perfectly clear his intention to establish his kind of government in America even though he resort to roundabout paths. As an example of this continued effort, I cite a measure now pending in the House of Representatives known as the Walsh bill, a bill which has already passed the Senate. It provides, in effect, that every contractor furnishing material or supplies to the Government must, as a condition of his contract, conduct his business in accordance with codes prescribed by the Government. More than that, this obligation to comply with Government-made codes extends to all subcontractors and to their subcontractors in turn.

In fact, under this proposed law an N.R. A code system would

In fact, under this proposed law an N. R. A. code system would extend through all processes of production from raw material to finished product. Consider the ramifications of this thing. The Government purchases thousands and thousands of different articles and enters into contracts for the erection of scores of different sorts of structures. Take an Army post, for example. It is like a small town. To build it, stone, cement, brick, steel, lumber, and plaster are needed. The codes will apply to the people supplying those materials and to the subcontractors from whom they are obtained. To equip the post, heating plants, power plants, plumbing fixtures, electric lights, telephone, and other installations are required. The men who furnish them must all be under the code. Among the necessary expendable articles are sheets and pillow slips, mattresses, blankets, and towels. Thus practically the whole textile industry is involved. The soldiers must be clothed with underwear, outer uniforms, shoes, overcoats, and hats. The soldiers must be fed bread, beef, butter, fruits, vegetables, coffee, tea, sugar, and other articles of food. The kitchens must be equipped with ranges and kitchen utensils. The messroom tables must be set with china and glass and tin. The hospital must be supplied with medicines, surgical instruments, and appliances. Under this Walsh bill every person who furnishes any one of these articles (and I have scarcely scratched the surface) and every person from whom he purchases them in semimanufactured form or in the form of raw material must bow to the will of the code authority established in Washington. One could tell a similar story about the building and equipment and maintenance of a battleship. Suffice it to say that if the Walsh bill should be passed you would find for all practical purposes N. R. A. reestablished, despite the decision of the Supreme Court. And, mark my words, if this administration is given another 4 years to work its will, the Walsh bill will pass and "crack-down" tactics will

Following the collapse of N. R. A., the famous Triple A attracted more and more attention. It was the companion piece to N. R. A. and potentially affected all agriculture. Under that extraordinary law the Government resorted to two weapons to secure obedience. With one hand it sought to purchase obedience by the payment of money to farmers as a reward for running their farms in the way the Government wanted them run. And it taxed another part of the people in order to pay the bill. With the other hand it employed force to compel obedience in certain branches of agriculture. For example, if a cotton farmer presumed to raise and sell more bales of cotton than the Secretary of Agriculture allowed, and did so without paying the prohibitive tax sought to be imposed upon him, he could be prosecuted, and, upon conviction, fined or sent to jail. Next door to the cotton farmer is the tobacco farmer. Idle cotton acres were transferred to the raising of tobacco, with a resultant increase in the supply and decrease in the price. So the Tobacco Control Act was passed, and in it we found again the element of force imposed in just the same way. Idle cotton lands and idle tobacco lands were transferred to the raising of potatoes, with the inevitable result that potatoes flooded the market and the price per bushel reached a pitiably low figure. Then came the famous Potato Control Act, under which it was actually provided that no person in the United States should raise and sell in the crop year of 1936 more than five bushels of potatoes without the permission of the Secretary of Agriculture. That laughable law clothed the Secretary with power to tell everybody just how many bushels he might sell, and if a grower presumed to sell more potatoes than his permit provided for and failed to pay the prohibitive tax, he could be fined for the first offense and sent to jail for a year for the second offense. And then to make assurance doubly sure, the law provided that the purchaser of illegal potatoes, whether individual housewife or w

It is all about.

Now, one would suppose that with the collapse of the old Triple A, with the failure of this particular attempt to regiment all industry and all agriculture, the President and his advisers would desist. Not so. They are today just as intent upon putting their theories into practice as they ever were. In the field of agriculture they have dressed up the old Triple A in a new suit of clothes labeled "Soil Conservation and Prevention Erosion." The new act has reached the statute books. Concededly it will involve the expenditure of $500,000,000 during this crop year—just in time for the elections. The money is to be spent to purchase compliance with the Government's plan to regulate agriculture. And please remember that the Secretary of Agriculture can do anything he pleases in pouring out this money. Call it what you will, it is merely another attempt to control the production of the soil by artificial means. Sooner or later the whole thing will break down.

Perhaps I can illustrate the reason. Let us visualize the agricultural production of the country as confined in the form of gas within a toy balloon. The surface of the balloon is marked out and divided into a number of areas, each labeled with the name of a certain crop. Along comes a professor and says we have too much cotton, and he takes his thumb and presses inward on that portion of the surface labeled "cotton." He makes a dent in it and sighs with satisfaction. Strange to say, the balloon bulges out at another point on its surface labeled, we will say, "tobacco." So the professor takes his other thumb and pushes in at that point. He makes another dent. The two indentations result in an extension of the balloon at the point marked "potatoes." That is disconcerting, but it must be stopped; so he summons another professor and gets him to push his thumb in at the potato point. Each indentation produces another swelling. It may be cabbages or fruits or onions. Who can tell? Whatever it is it is inevitable that once you start such a process and are determined to adhere to it you must follow it to its bitter end, at which point the pressures upon the balloon, each of them representing the employment of force, become so numerous that finally the balloon bursts. It may take years, but we will learn the lesson eventually. In the meantime, it will cost billions of the taxpayers' money.

may take years, but we will learn the lesson eventually. In the meantime, it will cost billions of the taxpayers' money.

The most precious things in life are the things of the spirit. Such is liberty. Men have struggled for it for centuries. In its best sense it is enjoyed here in America today to a degree never before equaled in all history. You and I know that the laborer, the clerk, the shopkeeper, the merchant, the small-business man cherishes liberty in his heart, for he knows that only through freedom from oppression may he work his way upward. And there is no man on God's footstool who loves liberty as does the farmer. Farming is more than a mere business; it is a habit of life. A good farmer reads and studies that he may be the better prepared to do battle with the elements, to understand the soil, the seed, the crops as they grow, the animals as they develop. He plans his work months ahead and lives with it day and night. He loves it and refuses to abandon it except under dire compulsion. Take away his independence and you have reduced him to the status of serfdom and have destroyed his very soul. Many of them today have little left except that independence. If they would preserve it as a spiritual asset let them beware of becoming the habitual recipients of governmental subsidy, and, finally, the victims of force. I shall be entirely frank about the farm problem. I do not believe that the Congress, or any other power, can circumvent economic law. I do not believe that agriculture can be placed upon a stable and prosperous basis by the employment of artificial devices. As to four or five crops we produce more than we consume. True, a great expansion in some crops resulted from the World War with its insistent demand for more and more food and its resultant high prices. I admit that to readjust the structure following the collapse of prices after the war is difficult at best, but I insist that that readjustment can be brought about the more quickly by reopening the doors of foreign trade. Only through

I can understand how desperate people may resort to the weapons of economic nationalism, but I am convinced that in the long, long run those weapons cannot prevail against the stern insistence of economic law. The thing has been overdone. Perhaps we ourselves are guilty somewhat. At any rate, the whole world is suffering as a result, and among the sufferers is the American farmer. The situation is made more acute by reason of the fact that we have become the great creditor nation of the world, as contrasted with our aforetime position as a debtor nation. As a creditor we may not expect the payment of debts due to us unless we permit the debtor to do business with us to a reasonable extent at least. A protective-tariff system is the legitimate weapon of a debtor nation. We employed it and as a result have built up a marvelous industrial structure and a standard of living never approached in the history of the world. I would not lower that standard of living nor undermine that industrial structure. I still believe in a protective tariff, but I would adjust it to meet our changed conditions, provided—and this is vital—other nations make similar adjustments along with us and thus enable us to preserve our standards. Let us remember that those standards are not to be measured by the number of 59-cent dollars contained in the pay envelope but rather by what those dollars will purchase. Obviously, no such thing as this can be done overnight nor should it be done with an axe. If done at all, it must be done slowly and patiently and in cooperation with others of like mind. Furthermore, it must be done by acts of Congress, out in the open where everybody can see what is going on. The present administration has not had the courage, despite its huge majorities in both Houses, to tackle the thing, and has preferred to nibble at it in the dark, behind closed doors, without giving either the farmer or the industrialist a decent hearing. As a matter of fact, in the trade agreements thus far reached through the star-chamber pro

While we are trying to look ahead let us give consideration to another element in the future. The Government is going on with its spending program. Something like 60 cents out of every dollar it spends is borrowed. By the end of this calendar year the national debt will have reached the neighborhood of $35,000,000,000.

Not a word is being said about thrift. If our present generation is to acquiesce in this financial debauch which involves, inevitably, the continued piling up of debt and the increasing of taxes, what of the next generation? Should we not concern ourselves about the youth of today, those young men and young women who, a few years from now, will be carrying the burden and who, in the ordinary course of nature, will carry it for something like 40 working years of their lives? Already the sum total of taxes in this country exceeds 25 percent of the total income of the country. Already the national tax bill equals the national food bill. Actually we are paying as much for government as we are paying for our daily bread. What will the percentage be if this orgy goes on for another 4 years? Those of us who have passed the half-century mark can probably stagger along for the rest of our journey, but what of the men and women of tomorrow? Is it not inevitable that taxes will absorb all their savings? Do not pending tax proposals relative to the taxation of the surplus of corporations lead in that very direction? Of what avail is thrift if the possessor of that quality, the truly forgotten man, is to be destroyed? I venture the assertion that if this present program of Europeanizing the United States and this orgy of expenditure were abandoned this very night, even then the burden which must be borne by the next generation will be well-nigh unbearable. How any young person just coming out of high school or college can view the future with anything but concern approaching dismay passes my comprehension.

It may be that the idea prevails here and there that these debts just coming out of high school or college can view the future with anything but concern approaching dismay passes my comprehension. It may be that the idea prevails here and there that these debts need never be paid; that they can be repudiated in whole or in part; that by some device other than the imposition of more taxes the Government can find a way to pay them. Repudiation is dishonor and brings economic and spiritual collapse to the people that indulges in it. The device is currency inflation, another form of repudiation, which, once started, drags the whole population over the precipice. And, gentlemen, we have only to observe what has happened in Europe in the last 15 years in order to learn that the complete collapse of an economic system, with all its distress and desperation, inevitably results in a similar collapse of political institutions. If one goes the others go. Thus democracy is perishing in Europe. I appeal to the young people of today to understand that this dollars-and-cents side of government may become of vast importance, not only with respect to the material things of life but actually with respect to the preservation of their very libertles. Indeed, I make my first and last appeal to youth, and I ask, "Are you going to stand for this?" If not, then you must use the only political instrument that lies ready to your hand—the Republican Party. Go to its leaders, go to its elderly members, if you please, and insist that the party face this situation bravely; that it meet all these issues out in the open without evasion, without pussy-footing; that it put aside considerations of merely local political advantage and devote itself to national service. In a word, that it fight to save this country. Only in this way shall we continue our journey along the American road.

The Clerk, proceeding with the reading of the bill, read as follows:

Resolved, etc., That paragraph (4) of subsection (n) of section 12B of the Federal Reserve Act, as amended, is amended by striking out "July 1, 1936" and inserting in lieu thereof "July 1, 1938."

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 1, line 2, after the comma on line 2, strike out the remainder of the resolution and insert in lieu thereof the following:

institute of the resolution and hiself in het altered are following:

"That paragraph (4) of subsection (n) of section 12B of the Federal Reserve Act, as amended, be amended to read as follows:

"(4) Until July 1, 1938, whenever in the judgment of the board of directors such action will reduce the risk or avert a threatened loss to the corporation and will facilitate a merger or consolidation of an insured bank, or will facilitate the sale of the assets of an open or closed insured bank to and assumption of its liabilities by another insured bank, the Corporation may, upon such terms and conditions as it may determine, make loans secured in whole or in part by assets of an open or closed insured bank, which loans may be in subordination to the rights to the depositors and other creditors, or the Corporation may purchase any such assets or may guarantee any other insured bank against loss by reason of its assuming the liabilities and purchasing the assets of an open or closed insured bank. Any insured national bank or district bank, or, with the approval of the Comptroller of the Currency, any receiver thereof, is authorized to contract for such sales or loans and to pledge any assets of the bank to secure such loans."

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Chairman, the amendment I have offered simply carries out the mandate set forth in the resolution presented by the committee. The resolution provides that something be done to the statute, to wit, that it be amended by doing certain things. The resolution which I have offered carries out the desire of the committee as expressed in the resolution which they have brought to the floor of the House.

No new language is added to paragraph (4) of subsection (n) of section 138 of the Federal Reserve Act other than to substitute "July 1, 1938" for "July 1, 1936." I offer the amendment and hope it will be accepted.

For the last couple of years it has been the custom of certain departments to send legislation drawn in this manner to the committees of Congress. Some committees apparently are afraid to change the form, and this custom is liable to become a fixed habit and should be stopped now. No draftsman or other person familiar with the matter will take any other view.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Mr. Chairman, the amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan conveys exactly the same meaning as the joint resolution which has passed the Senate and is now under consideration in this body. The Senate Committee on Banking and Currency saw fit to use the language employed in the resolution, which serves every conceivable purpose. There is absolutely no difference between this resolution and the amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan except that he uses more words. The resolution is in the usual form of resolutions of this kind offered by the Committee on Banking and Currency of the Senate and the Committee on Banking and Currency of the House. The language is entirely satisfactory to both committees. Both committees feel that they are fully competent to pass upon the meaning of a simple resolution, and we ask that the amendment be voted down. If the amendment should be adopted, the bill would have to go back to the Senate.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan.

The amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the rule the Committee will rise. Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. Crowe, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that Committee had had under consideration Senate Joint Resolution 230, and, pursuant to House Resolution 485, he reported the joint resolution back to the House.

The SPEAKER. Under the rule the previous question is ordered. The question is on the third reading of the Senate joint resolution.

The Senate joint resolution was ordered to be read a third time, and was read the third time.

The SPEAKER. The question now is on agreeing to the Senate joint resolution.

The Senate joint resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider the vote by which the joint resolution was agreed to was laid on the table.

A similar House bill was laid on the table.

AMENDING THE FEDERAL HIGHWAY ACT

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, I call up House Resolution 484, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of H. R. 11687, a bill to amend the Federal Highway Act, approved July 11, 1916, as amended and supplemented, and for other purposes. That after general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and continue not to exceed 2 hours, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Roads, the bill shall be read for amendment under the 5-minute rule. At the conclusion of the reading of the bill for amendment, the Committee shall rise and report the same to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted, and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit, with or without instructions.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. O'CONNOR: Page 1, line 8, strike out the word "two" and insert "one."

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Ransley] does not desire any time, I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resoution.

The resolution was agreed to.

Mr. CARTWRIGHT. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 11687) to amend the Federal Aid Highway Act, approved July 11, 1916, as amended and supplemented, and for other purposes.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill H. R. 11687, with Mr. Scrugham in the chair.

The Clerk reported the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the first reading of the bill will be dispensed with.

There was no objection.

Mr. CARTWRIGHT. Mr. Chairman, the action that is taken by the present Congress upon the bill now under consideration—H. R. 11687—will determine whether the national-highway program for the next 3 years will be progressive and of the greatest possible benefit or whether an uncertain, hand-to-mouth policy must be pursued by the various State highway departments.

It is true that the highway program for the next fiscal year is not directly involved in this bill, but the sound, economical planning of road building is a long-range task. Construction programs for 1937 will be affected by action on this bill, because this action will tell the States whether they can operate under a stabilized 3-year program or whether they must lay out their construction schedules on a 1-year basis.

For the purpose of emphasizing the fundamental necessity of giving immediate and favorable consideration to H. R. 11687, I remind you that the American system of developing highways is a Federal-State road-building partnership. The Federal Government sets the pace by authorizing and allocating Federal-aid funds that are matched by the States. In order to make their highway program function most efficiently, the States must know in advance what the Federal Government intends to do.

Forty-four of the State legislatures will convene next January, and 40 of these legislatures will not meet again in regular session for 2 years. Hence, unless Federal aid is authorized as provided in the bill now before us, these 40 States will not be able to make provisions for continued highway programs with confidence that they are in step with the Federal Government.

The present bill does not make an appropriation. It is simply an authorization, providing the legal framework for a continued Federal-State highway program, but leaving the State provisions and supervision up to the various States themselves. The history of road building in America since the enactment of the first Federal-aid act in 1916 proves that the States are diligent in matching Federal funds.

In considering the necessity for a continued highway program we should keep in mind three major features of road-building operations: (1) The imperative need for more and better roads to accommodate the Nation's ever-increasing motor-vehicle traffic; (2) the absolute necessity of providing maximum employment at the present time; and (3) the fact that highway users themselves more than pay for all road construction and maintenance.

Information presented by the most competent highway authorities at committee hearings on this bill supplied conclusive evidence that interruption of an adequate highway program would be an outright menace to motor-vehicle transportation in America.

The latest official figures show that there are approximately 3,068,000 miles of rural roads in America. Of this total, State systems, including Federal-aid systems, compose approximately 324,000 miles at the beginning of 1935. An additional 170,244 miles of secondary roads were under State control in 14 States. Only slightly more than 160,000 miles of highways outside of municipalities are hard-surfaced. Approximately 900,000 miles have received low-cost improvement of some kind. From these figures it is evident that approximately 2,000,000 miles of rural roads in America have received no improvement whatsoever other than the handmethod, makeshift type of work that is done by individuals and communities directly concerned. With these facts before you, it is plain to be seen that highway improvement in America is in its infancy, and no person familiar with mudroad conditions that prevail in most rural communities would take the position that there can be any interruption of the national highway program.

Hon. Thomas H. MacDonald, Chief of the United States Bureau of Public Roads, has furnished me a report showing that, of the $125,000,000 approved under the 1936 Federal-aid program, the States had, as of April 13, submitted and received approval of programs totaling $102,840,000, of which $74,512,000 was obligated or under contract. Corresponding progress is being made with works program highway funds, and favorable progress also being made with works program grade-crossing funds. I am submitting for the Record a tabulation showing the status by States of these various highway appropriations, together with a summary of the program for the last 3 years.

Summary status of Federal highway funds as of Mar. 31, 1936

Appropriation	Number of projects	Estimated total cost	Federal funds allotted	Miles
Plans and estimates approved: Regular Federal aid Public works, 1934 and 1935	244	$21, 940, 685	$11, 005, 495	966. 6
	110	4, 468, 139	3, 625, 804	144. 0
Works program: HighwaysGrade crossings	871	29, 574, 423	28, 686, 885	2, 246. 9
	311	26, 445, 358	25, 122, 619	178. 7
Total	1, 536	82, 428, 605	68, 440, 803	3, 536. 2

control in 14 States. Only slightly more than 160,000 miles | Summary status of Federal highway funds as of Mar. 31, 1936—
of highways outside of municipalities are hard-surfaced | Continued

Appropriation	Number of projects	Estimated total cost	Federal funds allotted	Miles
Contracts awarded not yet under con- struction:	vetfix
Regular Federal aid.	296	$22, 354, 004	$11, 232, 920	903. 8
Public works, 1934 and 1935 Works program:	214	4, 744, 265	3, 996, 935	146. 9
Highways	938	25, 005, 234	24, 029, 159	2, 284. 8
Grade crossings	242	15, 841, 412	15, 160, 057	214.1
Total	1,690	67, 944, 915	54, 419, 071	3, 549. 1
Under construction: Regular Federal aid Public works, 1934 and 1935 Works program:	883 943	84, 966, 516 59, 593, 111	44, 585, 941 55, 084, 689	3, 689. 2 1, 678. 7
HighwaysGrade crossings	1, 576 500	77, 957, 558 47, 018, 811	75, 907, 907 46, 196, 527	5, 146. 3 390. 6
Total	3, 902	269, 535, 996	221, 775, 064	10, 904. 8
Completed: Regular Federal aid Public works, 1934 and 1935 Works program:	246 12, 744	10, 645, 760 569, 158, 957	5, 678, 463 520, 417, 724	1, 065. 8 33, 259. 6
Highways. Grade crossings	88 8	1, 603, 972 369, 023	1, 590, 144 368, 719	283. 1 24. 9
Total	13, 086	581, 777, 712	528, 055, 050	34, 633. 4

SUMMAR

	anaa.
Appropriation	Amount	Unprogrammed balance	Unobligated balance
Regular Federal aid. Public works, 1934 and 1935	$125, 000, 000 600, 000, 000	$19, 035, 452 415, 000	$49, 372, 181 10, 874, 848
HighwaysGrade crossings	200, 000, 000 200, 000, 000	17, 810, 268 17, 269, 359	64, 785, 905 109, 152, 078
Total	1, 125, 000, 000	54, 530, 079	234, 185, 012

Summary of funds apportioned to all States-Status as of Apr. 1, 1986

	Emergency relief high- way funds		Emergency relief grade- crossing funds		1936 Feder	1936 Federal-aid funds		funds Public-works funds (1935)		Public- works funds
	Not programmed	Balance of funds available for new projects	Not programmed	Balance of funds available for new projects	Not programmed	Balance of funds available for new projects	Not programmed	Balance of funds available for new projects	(1934): Balance of funds available for new projects	Not programmed	Balance of funds available for new projects
Alabama	$216,815	$488, 589		$360, 820	$2,604,320	$2, 604, 320		$264, 541	$36, 488	$2, 821, 135	$3, 754, 758
Arizona		543, 984		543, 872	96, 931	211, 957			8, 031	96, 931	1, 356, 441
Arkansas		580, 778		1, 522, 902	2, 142, 723	2, 142, 723			104, 377	2, 142, 723	4, 407, 578
California	1,800,350	2, 240, 034	-2:-000-105	1, 712, 181	602, 757	1, 594, 107			5, 522	2, 403, 107	5, 583, 830
Colorado		1, 622, 340	$1,393,167	1, 536, 024	527, 326	943, 182 228, 104		33, 421	43, 099	1, 920, 493	4, 178, 066
Colorado. Connecticut Delaware. Florida		1, 123, 931	015 014	1, 712, 684	2,854			86, 551	40, 661	2,854	3, 191, 931
Delaware	- 11,009	330, 227 460, 998	315, 014	418, 239 1, 169, 862	335, 179	369, 179 1, 138, 923		91, 702	40 405	721, 702	1, 117, 645 2, 904, 920
Georgia	9 250 767	4, 252, 277	1, 843, 510	4, 540, 510		1, 135, 925	$415,000	1, 160, 864	43, 435 289, 481	4, 618, 277	12, 206, 358
Idaho	- 4,009,101	824, 868	1,040,010	822, 388		382, 362	$410,000	61, 215	24, 023	4, 010, 211	2, 114, 856
Illinois		1, 925, 173		5, 466, 223		1, 613, 379		288, 938	111, 891		9, 405, 604
Indiana		142, 059	322, 670	1, 854, 671		45, 100			126, 367	322, 670	2, 229, 467
Iowa	664	2, 443, 865		3, 407, 429		289, 900			2, 101	664	6, 188, 143
Iowa Kansas Kentucky	534, 601	534, 601		728, 299	660, 553	1, 389, 153			15, 589	1, 195, 154	2, 685, 189
Kentucky	501, 171	1, 059, 648	298, 862	1, 505, 133	160, 553	548, 243		88, 899	48, 269	960, 586	2, 685, 189 3, 250, 192
Louisiana		2, 139, 293		2, 158, 265	130, 802				61, 504	130, 802	5, 005, 741
Maine		199, 243	112, 389	820, 573	113, 861	203, 638		57, 218	29, 786	226, 250	1, 310, 458
Maryland Massachusetts Michigan	794, 753	1, 296, 353	193, 973	1, 058, 973		1, 025, 870		498, 782	65, 166	988, 726	3, 945, 144
Massachusetts	_ 298, 885	3, 145, 285		3, 254, 595		1, 574, 909		340, 250	113, 198	298, 885	8, 428, 237
Michigan		138, 773		1, 529, 445		286, 188			29, 511		2, 022, 548 7, 122, 430
Minnesota		1,757,743	58, 950	3, 968, 575		1,009,950		260, 583	125, 579	58, 950	7, 122, 430
Mississippi Missouri		535, 672		1, 446, 909	2, 196, 524	2, 196, 524			121, 836	2, 196, 524	4, 367, 813
Missouri		1, 912, 833		1, 867, 423	47, 121	1, 464, 152		29, 505	102, 986	47, 121	5, 376, 899 758, 867
Montana	991 705	253, 334	005 049	115, 424	36, 543	165, 668			100, 457	36, 543	758, 867
Nebraska Nevada	- 331, 780	1, 045, 648 620, 868	225, 043	1, 426, 685 505, 292	1, 130, 173 1, 435	1, 681, 173 541, 662			33, 056 29, 481	1, 687, 001	1 720 601
New Hempshire	EQ 000	463, 577	34, 469	599, 953	147, 030	164, 530			396	233, 519	1, 702, 091
New Hampshire New Jersey	100 040	1, 403, 686	685, 057	2, 926, 790	147,000	42, 514		185, 774	168, 421	791, 097	4, 195, 432 1, 732, 691 1, 260, 176 4, 727, 185
New Mexico	100,010	574, 853	174, 753	1, 046, 760	31, 116	471, 024			160, 389	205, 869	2 244 650
New York	187 458	2, 377, 379	1, 331, 189	6, 916, 194	44, 202	1, 168, 034			54, 421	1, 562, 849	2, 344, 650 10, 586, 568
North Carolina	1.830.832	1, 830, 832	1, 729, 162	3, 426, 989	402, 362	1, 827, 562		79,000	316, 815	3, 962, 356	7, 481, 196
North Dakota	_ 1, 348, 036	1,842,772	2, 407, 057	2, 784, 557	1, 960, 162	1, 960, 162			121, 863	5, 715, 255	7, 323, 573
Ohio	1.028.414	3, 598, 159	96, 799	7, 611, 349	102, 289	1, 898, 478			47, 051	1, 227, 502	7, 481, 198 7, 323, 578 13, 320, 568
Oklahoma	31, 311	1, 523, 043		3, 246, 101	102, 519	1, 706, 870		240, 629	9, 034	133, 830	6, 725, 677
Oregon Pennsylvania Rhode Island		730, 046		789, 982		164, 051			66, 377		1, 841, 181 18, 921, 772
Pennsylvania	_ 1, 907, 461	7, 517, 529	895, 359	9, 127, 890	108, 045	1, 627, 945			262, 716	2, 910, 865	18, 921, 772
Rhode Island		190, 261		43, 122	609, 375	609, 375		26,050		609, 375	868, 808
South Carolina	676 034	1, 222, 034	1, 468, 598	1, 985, 598	1, 667, 503	1, 667, 503		423, 529	175, 126	3, 812, 135	5, 473, 790
South Dakota Tennessee	- 313, 621	1, 356, 621	412, 729	2, 664, 829	784, 142	1, 444, 072		103, 259	163, 579	1, 510, 492	5, 732, 360 7, 421, 707
Tennessee	- 2, 133, 032	2, 133, 032	2, 513, 632	3, 294, 647	1, 765, 893	1, 853, 393		139, 310	1, 325	6, 412, 557	7, 421, 707
Texas		1, 541, 183		6, 206, 774	51, 870	2, 176, 393		112, 003	61, 024	51, 870	10, 097, 377
Utah		847, 252		709, 762		171, 814			32, 291		1, 763, 200
Vermont Virginia	1 100 517	120, 444 1, 198, 517		218, 892 2, 442, 082 1, 341, 585	2, 532 422, 791	8, 625 1, 007, 861		4, 456	121	2, 532 1, 621, 308	352, 538
Washington	-1 1, 100, 01/	542, 242		2, 332, 082	12, 638	1,007,001		238, 588 31, 350	73, 633 17, 333	210, 458	4, 960, 681 2, 322, 948

Summary of funds apportioned to all States-Status as of Apr. 1, 1936-Continued

	Emergency relief high- way funds		Emergency relief grade- crossing funds		1936 Federal-aid funds		Public-works funds (1935)		Public- works funds	Total
	Not programmed	Balance of funds available for new projects	Not programmed	Balance of funds available for new projects	Not programmed	Balance of funds available for new projects	Not programmed	Balance of funds available for new projects	(1934): Balance of funds available for new projects	Not programmed	Balance of funds available for new projects
West Virginia	$65,001	$887, 473 660, 220	$160, 350 87, 883	$2, 483, 396 2, 612, 883		$880, 908 1, 558, 997		$116, 845 67, 422	$43, 902 40, 052	$225, 351 87, 883	$4, 412, 524 4, 939, 574
Wyoming	22, 191	319, 852 10, 660	237, 750	1, 059, 179 5, 491	$3, 101 28, 227	18, 695 476, 493		35, 773 35, 904	20, 745 8, 885	263, 042	1, 454, 244 60, 940
Total	17, 810, 268	275, 821 64, 785, 905	73, 174	153, 877	19, 035, 452	49, 372, 181	$415,000	35, 607 7, 308, 715	8, 740 3, 566, 133	101, 4Q1 54, 530, 079	950, 538 234, 185, 012

Mr. MacDonald stated that all present available funds are being taken up by approved plans and the awarding of contracts at a rate which will exhaust them, or largely exhaust them, within the coming year, being now allocated at the rate of about $1,000,000 a day. The authorization for $125,000,000 of regular Federal aid is the same amount that is now in force. This bill does not increase the authorization, although the needs might justify such a course of action on the part of the Congress.

I think it timely that I repeat to you one very significant statement made by Mr. MacDonald. He said:

The reasonable limit I suggest for Federal-aid appropriations is the amount necessary to give direction and to keep on a uniform basis the methods of utilization of the funds that are coming to the Public Treasury, both State and Federal, from the road users.

The bill now under consideration is squarely in line with the recommendation thus made by the Chief of the Bureau of Public Roads. It does not propose to authorize more Federal funds than the States will match from revenues derived from gasoline taxes and motor-vehicle license fees. In fact, as I shall show presently, these taxes and fees greatly exceed the amount now being expended for highway construction and maintenance.

There are approximately 26,000,000 motor vehicles in use in America today. The number is increasing at a recordbreaking rate. A press report from Detroit on April 13 stated that new passenger-car sales during the month of March totaled 300,000 units, the highest figure for March in all history, with the exception of 1929. Trucks and commercial cars for the month totaled 52,000 units, according to this same report, exceeding any previous March figure.

I cite this information to show that the trend in America is toward more motor vehicles, with the direct resulting demand for more and better highways.

Safety of the American motoring public makes a continued highway program necessary. The traffic toll is nothing short of alarming. Modern automobiles are safe when operated by careful drivers over safe roads. Safety has been built into the automobile. It must be built into more and better roads.

From the standpoint of adequacy or safety of highways, it is essential that I quote to you another statement made by Chief MacDonald. He said:

In the States that are commonly referred to as having completed their roads, there are some of the most difficult and expensive problems ahead that we have anywhere in the United States. Many miles of the roads in the Eastern States, or in the States east of the Mississippi River, were completed 10, 15, or 20 years ago. Many of them are still horse-and-buggy roads. In those States a large mileage of main roads are just as far from being complete as in the new State systems.

You will observe that the present bill authorizes $25,-000,000 for 1938 and a similar sum for 1939 for secondary or feeder roads, these sums to be matched by the States. This is the first time such a proposal has been incorporated into a Federal-aid bill. It is true that Federal funds are being applied to secondary roads under rules and regulations governing the expenditure of the current works program highway funds, but that was under a temporary legislative enactment applying only to the emergency fund. There is a widespread and well-founded demand for extension of Federal aid to the secondary or farm-to-market road system. It is apparent that improvement of secondary roads cannot await completion of the primary highway system for the reason that the primary system never will be completed. Highway improvement is a permanent, ever-continuing task. Roads that are adequate today will have become obsolete before enough mileage is completed to serve present and future demands. Hence, it is necessary that organized Federal-State improvement must be extended to secondary roads simultaneously with development of the primary system.

For the first time in regular Federal-aid legislation provision is made in this bill for a separate and definite amount for grade-crossing elimination and protection. Out of the emergency funds now available there was an amount of $200,000,000 set aside for this purpose. These funds will be entirely exhausted in 1937, hence this bill makes provision for 1938 and 1939, although for a greatly reduced amount.

The State highway departments informed us at the hearing held on this bill that during the past year they eliminated 480 railroad crossings in the various States, but they also informed us that there still remained 17,879 railroad crossings on the State highway systems and 120,670 crossings on the county and township systems. While it is realized that all of these crossings will not be eliminated, at least not for many years to come, the task before us is quite evident, and the seriousness of the situation demonstrates to us that the task is large and must be met. These funds need not be matched by the States.

Before passing to other phases of this subject, permit me to mention a few of the accomplishments of Federal aid as it has been operated in conjunction with the States.

The administration of Federal aid for highways has provided the instrument through which the country has benefited far more than by the actual roads and bridges constructed. It has provided the engineering and administrative backbone about which all of our progressive highway policies for almost two decades have been developed. Without the incentive for definite planning set up by Federal aid working through the United States Bureau of Public Roads, we as a nation should have wasted many years and much money in trying to get our highway systems on a rational basis.

Prior to the advent of Federal aid we were working in an aimless, hit-or-miss fashion. Roads were improved, or not, at the dictates of local expedience with no thought of their relationship to the broad problem of supplying an integrated system of highway arteries. This was true even within the local units such as townships and counties and was much more true with respect to the States. No other move of any kind had been made to provide such a system on a national basis

In appraising the cost of Federal aid it is well to remember that the operation of Federal aid control in road building has resulted in actual savings on construction work of sums far in excess of the portion set aside from year to year to assist the States. Policies governing design, construction material, bidding, award of contracts, all worked out jointly by the several States and the United States Bureau of Public Roads, have put road building on a basis comparable with the best business methods and the best business practice.

As a factor in employment the highway industry, including all allied operations, holds first place among American industries. The latest statistics on this subject show that 1 person out of every 10 employed in the United States is employed in some phase of highway construction, highway transportation, or occupations directly relating to them. When we consider that the gigantic automotive industry, petroleum industry, and a multitude of other industries are directly or indirectly dependent upon highway development, we can readily see that any interruption of the highway program would prove disastrous to millions of workers.

From 85 percent to 90 percent of every dollar used in high-way construction goes into pay rolls, either directly on the construction job or in the production of equipment and materials, and the transportation of these products to points where they are needed. Direct employment provided by highway construction exceeds the number of jobs provided by any other form of public works, and it is the most popular form of public works, and the number of workers indirectly employed exceeds the number directly engaged on the highway construction job. The most severe blow that could be delivered to American industry today would be the failure of the bill now before us.

Furthermore, and of vast importance to the American public, is the fact that highway users pay for all highway development. Let us consider the figures on Federal-aid highway expenditures for the last 3 years and the Federal tax income from motor vehicles and gasoline for the same period. Federal-aid expenditures for 1933 totaled $165,-868,106, while Federal revenue derived from motor vehicles and gasoline totaled $173,967,660; expenditures for 1934 were $224,488,814, while revenue from the above-mentioned sources was $298,731,067; for 1935 expenditures were $277,-788,551, with revenue of $266,587,597; for the current fiscal year up to January 31 expenditures totaled $137,352,803, with revenue of $174,704,723. The grand total of expenditures for the 3 years and up to the end of the last January was $805,498,274, with gasoline and motor-vehicle revenue of $913,991,047. Thus highway users paid $108,492,773 more than they received as benefits from Federal aid.

I shall not recite the figures at this time, but I should like to have the Record show the comparison of Federal-aid highway expenditures and Federal-tax income from motor vehicles, gasoline, and so forth, from 1917 to the early part of 1936, and for this purpose I am submitting the appropriate table of figures.

This excess of highway revenue over highway expenditures is duplicated in practically every State. The most tragic phase of State highway financing is that approximately $150,000,000 a year is being diverted from gasoline tax and motor-vehicle license fees to purposes totally unrelated to highway construction or maintenance. This diversion of highway funds was "frozen" by the Hayden-Cartwright Act of 1934 at the level then prevailing, but every effort should be made to discourage all diversion of highway funds for any purpose other than road building.

Comparison of Federal-aid highway expenditures and Federal-tax income from motor vehicles, gasoline, etc.

[Cumulative figures for expenditures and receipts]

June 30, 1918 June 30, 1919 June 30, 1920 June 30, 1921 St. 3	eral an	mergency d public works	Total	on motor vehicles, gasoline, etc.	come greater (+) or less (-) than expend- iture
June 30, 1918 June 30, 1919 June 30, 1920 June 30, 1921 3, 5 23, 8 June 30, 1921 81, 3	34, 338
June 30, 1923. 242, 8 June 30, 1924. 323, 3 June 30, 1925. 420, 7 June 30, 1926. 510, 1 June 30, 1927. 593, 1 June 30, 1927. 593, 1 June 30, 1929. 759, 6 June 30, 1930. 837, 5	09, 154 24, 437 65, 211 274, 583 79, 292 27, 115 99, 622 61, 732 39, 298 39, 298 59, 751 51, 943		$34, 338 609, 154 3, 524, 437 23, 865, 211 81, 327, 979 171, 274, 553 242, 879, 292 323, 327, 115 420, 799, 622 510, 161, 732 563, 139, 298 675, 653, 139, 278 759, 659, 751 837, 551, 943 903, 439, 582	$23, 981, 268 72, 815, 540 216, 738, 332 332, 284, 581 436, 718, 344 581, 008, 834 739, 023, 544 863, 710, 289 1, 001, 865, 484 1, 068, 303, 365 1, 119, 931, 631 1, 119, 931, 631 1, 119, 931, 631	+69, 291, 103 +192, 873, 121 +250, 956, 602 +265, 443, 761 +338, 129, 542 +415, 696, 429 +442, 910, 667 +491, 703, 752 +475, 164, 067 +444, 278, 499 +360, 271, 880 +282, 379, 688

Comparison of Federal-aid highway expenditures and Federal-iax income from motor vehicles, gasoline, etc.—Continued

		ral-aid highves to date sh	vay expendi- own	Federal tax	Amount in-
Date	Regular Federal aid	Emergency and public works		on motor vehicles, gasoline, etc.	(+) or less (-) than expend- iture
June 30, 1932 June 30, 1933 June 30, 1934 June 30, 1935 Jan. 31, 1936	$1,102,948,504 1,206,689,629 1,250,159,050 1,263,448,665 1,273,164,422	141, 335, 680 322, 355, 073 586, 854, 009	1, 572, 514, 123 1, 850, 302, 674	1, 293, 899, 291 1, 592, 630, 358 1, 859, 217, 955

Our committee received from the American Association of State Highway Officials, the American Road Builders' Association, and other responsible organizations, an abundance of evidence showing that the present prosperous condition of industries directly dependent upon a continued highway program is directly attributable to the fact that the Hayden-Cartwright Act of 1934 provided for a 3-year program, just as the present bill would operate as the supplement to legislation now in effect. Scores of industrial plants that produce highway equipment and materials were prostrate at the time the 1934 act became operative. Today practically all of these organizations are operating at full speed, employing thousands of workers, and contributing to national recovery.

Of primary importance, of course, is the fact that highways are being improved so as to provide avenues of travel for motor vehicles and to get the farmers out of the mud, but the employment phase also is of great importance. Immediate enactment of this bill is necessary in order to avert the major calamity that would result from a demoralization of the highway industry. I have not discussed all the provisions of the bill, but the report takes the bill up by sections and explains it in a concise manner. [Applause.]

Mr. TURPIN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Blanton].

IMPORTANCE OF ALL-WEATHER SECONDARY HIGHWAYS TO FARMERS

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, I am proud of what the Congress of the United States has accomplished during the last 20 years in the construction of splendid highways in each and all of the 48 States. In all of such work I have had a deep interest and have actively supported every measure providing funds used in building highways.

CONGRESS HAS PROVIDED $200,000,000 FOR SECONDARY ROADS

It is the secondary or rural roads that farmers must use in going from farm to market. In the days of bad roads I can remember when it would require an entire day, and once in a while 2 days, for a farmer living not more than 10 miles from his county seat to go to town. And then part of the day before would be used in making preparations. Now, where accessible to modern highways, which Congress has provided, a farmer in bad weather can go to town and return in less than 2 hours.

THIS BILL ASSURES COMPLETION OF RURAL HIGHWAYS

I am proud of the work of this committee in getting this secondary-highway bill before the House for passage. It will make possible the completion of good rural roads for farmers everywhere. It will facilitate and better furnish to farmers more expeditious means of marketing their produce with greater convenience and less cost and trouble.

JUNKET TO WASHINGTON BY SOME COUNTY JUDGES

There is a county judge of Eastland County named Clyde L. Garrett, who several months ago announced against me for Congress, presumably running upon the Townsend platform, he being the president of the County Judges' Association, W. R. Nelson, of Carthage, being its secretary. During the last days of February they, with a few others, came on a junket trip to Washington. Shortly after his arrival here Clyde Garrett had his picture taken walking down the front outside steps of the House of Representatives, bareheaded, with his hat in his hand, and his overcoat off, braving the cold weather. I knew immediately that his trip was political, and that his real mission was to gather campaign material, although he claimed they were here to urge good roads, and to try to get relief from Harry Hopkins' W. P. A. rulings. Nevertheless, and notwithstanding he was my opponent, I invited him to have lunch with our Texas delegation, and I cordially introduced him to all of our Texas Members, and he was my guest at such luncheon.

HIGHWAY APPROPRIATION THEN ALREADY IN BILL

I called their attention to the fact that while they would not be able to accomplish anything by their visit, we were glad to see them and would be glad to show them every courtesy and do all we could to entertain them.

At that time the hearings had been concluded on the Agricultural Appropriation bill in charge of Chairman CLARENCE CANNON, of Missouri, which bill embraced the appropriation for highways, and the bill and report had been prepared and were ready to be passed by Congress.

I also told them at said luncheon that the Members of the Texas delegation had been doing everything within their power to get both Harry Hopkins, and President Franklin D. Roosevelt, to modify the order which prevented a man from being employed on W. P. A. works unless he had been on relief, and that while we had succeeded in getting slight modifications, it was impossible to get Harry Hopkins to change his ruling. I reminded them I had made a speech on the subject February 3, 1936.

Neither Clyde Garrett nor Secretary Nelson ever saw Harry Hopkins or Chairman Cannon while they were in Washington, and aside from having an enjoyable junket and seeing Walter Johnson throw a dollar across the Rappahannock, Clyde Garrett accomplished absolutely nothing, but wasted the money of whoever was paying the junket expenses.

CAMPAIGN MATERIAL IMMEDIATELY FORTHCOMING

The home papers were asked to carry the large picture of Clyde Garrett walking down the House of Representatives steps, with a glowing write-up of their trip, and stating that he was a candidate for the House seat now held by Representative Tom Blanton, but wholly failed to mention that he had been my guest at the luncheon, or any courtesies shown them by the Texas delegation.

FLUENT AND EFFUSIVE PUBLICITY AGENT

Someone signing himself Julien Capers, Jr., sent to my district papers from Austin a fancy write-up of Garrett's accomplishments (?) in Washington, stating:

A favorable report from the House Ways and Means Committee on an appropriation for $125,000,000 to State highway programs marked a victory for the Texas Association of County Judges, headed by Judge Garrett. They appealed directly to Congressman

My secretary, Mrs. Marx, immediately checked up on the matter, and the following is what was said about it by Chairman Cannon, who had charge of the roads appropriation, and who framed and passed the bill:

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 16, 1936.

Dear Mrs. Marx: The article Julien Capers, Jr., sent your Texas newspapers is so absurd it is ridiculous. The Ways and Means Committee made no report whatever on the road provision in my recent bill passed by the House, and has nothing whatever to do with appropriations. Neither Clyde Garrett, nor any other county judge from Texas, had anything whatever to do with the appropriation for public roads carried in my bill, and in no way influenced any item in it. any item in it.

During the years Judge BLANTON has been on the Appropriations Committee he has heartily supported the appropriation made each year for improved highways in Texas, and he helped me to pass our bill in the House. The appropriation for public roads in Texas would have been in the bill if Clyde Garrett had never been born. CLARENCE CANNON, Chairman.

INVITING STATEMENT FOR LATER USE

These county judges went home. I heard nothing from Clyde Garrett. To my surprise I received a letter from N. R. Nelson, undoubtedly written inviting an answer and a design to use both later. I didn't answer it. Then I got a second letter from Nelson, stating he had mislaid my first one (there being none) and asking that I send him a copy. Anyone could see through his scheme.

DENIAL ENTERED BEFORE COCK CREW ONCE

As the people in my district understood Clyde Garrett was running on the Townsend platform, during our luncheon Congressman Milton West asked Clyde Garrett the pointed question whether he was supporting the Townsend plan, and Clyde Garrett answered very emphatically that he was not. My secretary sent Chairman Cannon's statement to my home papers and called attention to the above, which was a proper correction of the unwarranted Capers article.

CONFESSION AND AVOIDANCE

Entering a plea of "guilty" and admitting that they in no way influenced the appropriation for roads, but offering excuses, T. R. Nelson got a few papers last week to publish a long letter he wrote to and published in the Cisco Daily Press, stating that he-

Was at a loss to understand just why Congressman Blanton is so excited over who receives credit for the road appropriation, unless it is due to the fact that he and Garrett are seeking the same office.

BLANTON was not at all excited over anything. But he did have the right, when he is busy here 2,000 miles from his district attending to the people's business, not to allow Nelson and Garrett to publish false articles stating that "Garrett was running against Blanton for Congress", and that "Garrett had gotten a $125,000,000 appropriation for public roads". when Garrett had not had one thing to do with it.

SOME OF THEIR FUNNY EXCUSES

In trying to render excuses of why they had not done anything, Nelson said:

Congressman Cannon's office was called in regard to the sub-committee's report on the highway bill but the Congressman was committee's report on the highway bill but the Congressman was not in. Congressman Sandlin's office was also called, but he was in Louisiana at that time. Congressman Tarver's office was also called but he too was not in at that time. A short time later the same day, I met Congressman Tarver in the subway between the Capitol and the new House Office Building and there Congressman Tarver told me of the proposed report which the subcommittee would make would make.

Thus, Campaign Manager Nelson by the above clearly shows that he had absolutely nothing whatever to do with the roads appropriation which was already in Chairman Cannon's bill, at the time they reached Washington.

MY SPEECH AGAINST HARRY HOPKINS

The RECORD for February 3, 1936, on page 1367, shows my speech then made against the ridiculous ruling Harry Hopkins had made, denying work to all Americans who had not been on relief rolls. I then asked how much longer is the Congress of the United States going to stand for an un-American, inexcusable, intolerable situation? I then called attention to the fact that many Americans, through no fault of their own, had been compelled to accept relief from their Government. And for them, I said, every American had deep sympathy and understanding.

BUT MANY SACRIFICED, STINTED, DENIED THEMSELVES, AND EVEN STARVED TO KEEP OFF OF RELIEF

I then called attention to the fact that their wives and children wore shabby clothes and went barefooted; that they denied themselves the ordinary pleasures of life: that they ate cheap food and not enough of that; that they even went hungry, and did all of the above to keep off of relief; and that now Harry Hopkins was punishing them for making sacrifices and holding they were not entitled to be given work, simply because they had kept off of relief rolls.

ABOVE WORK BEING DONE BEFORE JUDGES THOUGHT OF WASHINGTON

We Members of the Texas delegation had been doing everything within our power to get Harry Hopkins to change his foolish ruling, long before Clyde Garrett and his county judges ever thought of their junket trip to Washington.

In conclusion, I want to thank my friend from Oklahoma, Mr. Cartwright, and his committee for their untiring work on this measure, and I am glad of the opportunity of helping them to pass it.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Blanton] has expired.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, it is so ordered. There was no objection.

Mr. CARTWRIGHT. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. WHITTINGTON].

Mr. TURPIN. Mr. Chairman, I yield an additional 5 minutes to my colleague from Mississippi [Mr. WHITTINGTON].

FEDERAL AID FOR HIGHWAYS CONSTRUCTIVE AND BENEFICIAL

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Chairman, the first Federal Aid Highway Act was passed on July 11, 1916; it provided for authorizations for 5 years ranging from $5,000,000 the first year to $25,000,000 the fifth year. The Federal aid highway system, however, was perfected and the highways of the Nation coordinated by the Federal Highway Act of November 9, 1921. The authorization for 1921 was increased from $25,000,000 to $100,000,000.

Authorizations for periods of 2 years, with two exceptions, have been passed for the last 14 years. The existing authorization will expire with the close of the fiscal year 1937.

The bill under consideration provides primarily for the same authorizations that were contained in the act approved June 18, 1934, for the fiscal years 1936 and 1937; the amount of the authorizations is the same; there is substantially no difference in the other material provisions of the bill from existing law.

The legislatures of 40 of the 48 States will meet in January 1937. The legislatures of 4 States meet annually, and the legislatures of only 4 States met during the year 1936. In many cases legislatures do not remain in session longer than 60 days. It is imperative that the legislatures know in advance as to Federal aid so that adequate provision may be made for matching Federal aid; moreover, the States as well as highway builders should know in advance what they may expect. It takes time to project and perfect plans; surveys are necessary; definite commitments are imperative.

Again, in 1934 and in 1935, when there was no Federal aid, all Federal road work being done under emergency appropriations, the gasoline taxes were diverted in many States. Highway builders sought other work; highways were neglected; there was a setback in the Federal highway program.

The bill contains an authorization which appears for the first time in regular aid legislation for feeder or secondary roads and for the elimination of railroad grade crossings.

PROGRESS

Prior to the Federal Highway Act there was no system of interstate highways. No standard type of construction obtained; each State and each district adopted its own methods; construction was often wasteful and extravagant.

Under Federal control and supervision the Federal Highway Act resulted in the formulation and coordination of a Federal highway system; national highways were fostered; citizens can now reach practically every part of the country over the highways.

Highway construction has contributed to American progress during the past 25 years more greatly than almost any other factor. Without a correlated and coordinated system of Federal roads, national highways would be impossible.

Federal aid, while not the only factor, has contributed to the development of the country. Additional highway mileage is but a part of the development.

Prior to 1916, when the Federal program was initiated, only a few of the States had well-organized highway departments. There was no connected system; road designs varied; road location building was largely a matter of "pork barrel." With the advent of Federal aid marked improvement took place; roads were established for the benefit of the greatest number; contracts were awarded to the lowest competitive bidder; better engineering standards were adopted; types of highways were improved; accounting systems were installed; highways were connected; main thoroughfares were built. The citizenship of the Nation has profited; rural life has been made more attractive; commerce and agriculture have been promoted.

THE NEED

Twenty-five million automobiles and trucks are today using the highways of the Nation. Highways present a continuous problem. The need for Federal aid is really greater than it has ever been; traffic is increasing; the problems of traffic are multiplying.

There are 226,000 miles in the Federal-aid program; 21,000 miles have not been surfaced. About half of the entire mileage is of high-type construction; 88,000 miles are of inferior or of low-type construction, have been in use from 11 to 20 years and must be replaced. Machinery in the factory becomes obsolete; it must be replaced, so highways must be replaced. Many roads are too narrow; others are worn out. In motoring from Washington to New York one recent week end, I passed over one of the roughest stretches I have observed in the country.

A few years ago it was said that some States had completed their program. On investigation the assertion was found to be without foundation. The larger and more populous States really have greater needs than the States with smaller population; they are among the first to match Federal aid.

Then again, under the emergency appropriation by virtue of the Emergency and Relief Act of 1935, the highway funds were used primarily to provide for employment. The question of labor was foremost. Because of the restrictions the emergency funds were largely used in constructing grades and in building foundations. The roads remain to be surfaced. The larger and more populous of the States are really in greater need of Federal aid now than formerly. Grades that have been constructed must be topped. It will be remembered that the restrictions governing the expenditure of emergency road funds do not apply to Federal-aid funds and that Federal-aid funds can be used for surfacing.

Political problems are constantly changing, so are highway problems. Highway problems have changed materially in the past 20 years.

There are many needs. I mention but a few. Substantially one-half of the main roads must be completed or rebuilt; a sound policy for the development and expansion of secondary roads is imperative; careful surveys, studies, and traffic investigations must be made; conditions that are dangerous and that lead to highway accidents must be removed; improved administrative policies and practices must be continued; investigations and research with testing and experiment respecting design, construction, and administration are greatly needed. The interests of the taxpayers will be promoted by the continuation of Federal aid which provides for Federal control and Federal supervision in the construction of the main highways of the country.

Normal employment will be given to contractors. Economy of construction will thus be aided. When deficits in the States obtain, the temptation to divert gasoline taxes and motor taxes is great.

There is, therefore, vital need for Federal aid to prevent the diversion of gasoline taxes. The advancement of standards of living in the rural areas is being promoted by highways. The people of the United States are more and more becoming neighbors.

I have already emphasized that highways are not local institutions. The main thoroughfares are used by the people of the whole country; they should be expanded, enlarged, and improved. I have emphasized the need for replacing the low-cost roads on our thoroughfares.

The Department of Agriculture reports that the improvement of rural roads is scarcely beyond the pioneer stage. The main roads have been constructed, but the initial improvements must be replaced; much remains to be done on the main highways.

The Department further reports that improved roads constitute less than one-third of the country's total highways and that the remaining two-thirds, including a large mileage of vitally useful secondary roads, are either wholly unimproved or without surfacing.

The work of highway improvement must be continued; the demands of traffic have become more exacting. The Federal Government must take an increasing part in highway construction.

MILEAGE

The total road mileage in the United States is estimated at 3,068,919 miles. The States system, including Federal-aid roads, consists of 382,688 miles; the mileage of county roads is 1,071,530 miles and local or township roads aggregate 879,630 miles. The total States system is 432,282 miles, but only 382,688 miles of the system, which includes the Federal-aid roads, have been improved.

I have already pointed out that of the system of 226,000 miles in the Federal-aid high program, approximately one-half is of high-type construction.

In 1921 there were approximately 185,000 miles in the Federal-aid system. The mileage has increased. Under the act of 1932, when 90 percent of the original 7 percent of the total highway mileage in any State has been completed, an additional 1 percent of the State mileage may be added to the system. The addition of 1 percent may be repeated as circumstances require.

PAYS ITS WAY

From June 30, 1917, following the Highway Act of 1916, up to and including January 31, 1936, the Federal Government had collected taxes on gasoline and excise taxes on motor vehicles to the amount of $2,033,922,678. During the same period the United States expended for regular Federal aid and for emergency and public-works highway construction a total of $1,986,655,477; in other words, the people who used the roads—the motorists of the country—paid $46,-267,201 more than Congress appropriated for highway construction.

The bill under consideration involves an authorization of approximately $220,000,000. The anticipated revenues from gas and motor vehicles for the fiscal year 1936 will exceed $300,000,000. In this connection, during the emergency period for the fiscal years 1933, 1934, 1935, and for the fiscal year 1936, to January 31, 1936, the Federal Government had expended for Federal aid, emergency, and public-works highway projects a total of $805,498,274 against which the Federal Government collected in gasoline and motor taxes, $913,991,047. If all of the programs of the Federal Government paid their way as does the Federal-aid program there would be fewer deficits. Federal-aid highways pay their own way.

UNEXPENDED FUNDS

Generally more progress was made in the expenditure of emergency highway funds than in other permanent improvement funds. As of March 1, 1936, there remained available for new projects out of all emergency Federal-aid and public-works funds for highway construction, $272,-679,066. It takes time to make surveys, prepare plans, and acquire rights-of-way. The elimination of grade crossings is especially difficult and the progress is rather slow. Since March 1 contracts for highways and crossings have been made at the rate of $1,000,000 per day.

There remained unobligated of the 1936 Federal-aid funds in the sum of $125,000,000, as of March 1, 1936, $56,791,032; of the $200,000,000 for Works Progress highway funds, there remained unobligated $81,989,263; of the road grade crossing $200,000,000 fund there remained unobligated $122,019,-410; of the 1934 and 1935 public-works funds there remained $11,879,361

It will be remembered that $80,000,000 were appropriated for emergency funds in 1930; $125,000,000 in 1932; $400,000,000 in 1933; $200,000,000 in 1934; and that under the Emergency and Relief Act of 1935, $400,000,000 were allocated out of an authorization of $800,000,000, for highways and railway grade crossings.

EXTENSIONS

Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks generally and to revise and extend my remarks to include therein a statement furnished me by Thomas H. MacDonald, Director of the Bureau of Public Roads, covering paragraph (b) of section 1 of the bill; a statement showing State gas taxes for 1935; a statement showing State per-vehicle taxes for 1934; a statement showing the apportionment of the $125,000,000 Federal-aid authorization; a statement showing the apportionment of the $25,000,000 authorization for secondary roads; a statement showing the estimate of the number of grade-separation projects under the $200,000,000 allocated under the act of 1935; a statement showing the approximate apportionment of the $50,000,000 for elimination of railroad grade crossings; and excerpts from the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of the Nashville, Chattanooga &

St. Louis Railway v. Herbert S. Walters (294 U. S. 405, 55 S. C. T. 486).

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, it is so ordered. There was no objection.

Mr. SHORT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?
Mr. WHITTINGTON. I will yield as soon as I have analyzed the bill.

ANALYSIS

Section 1 of the bill is in reality a continuation of the authorizations in the act of June 18, 1934. The amount of the authorization is the same, as I have already indicated.

Paragraph (a) is a continuation of existing law.

Paragraph (b) is in reality a continuation of the act of 1915 as it has been interpreted by the Bureau of Public Roads. In this connection I include the following statement furnished me by Thomas H. MacDonald, Director, Bureau of Public Roads, respecting paragraph (b), to wit:

Paragraph (b) of section 1 provides for the apportionment of the funds authorized for any fiscal year not later than January 1 next preceding the beginning of such fiscal year. It also directs the Secretary of Agriculture to act upon projects submitted to him under his apportionment of the authorization, and provides that his approval of any project shall become a contractual obligation of the Federal Government for the payment of its share of the cost.

The Federal Government boxing on July 1, which comes in the

The Federal fiscal year begins on July 1, which comes in the middle of the construction season, and if the authorization for any fiscal year were not available for obligation through approval of projects until the beginning of the fiscal year, the construction season, particularly in the Northern States, would be approaching its close before the program could be well started. Section (b), by authorizing the approval of projects and the starting of construction during the 6-month period prior to the beginning of the fiscal year, makes it possible to take full advantage of the construction season. While this paragraph would permit the approval of projects and the starting of construction, the last provise limits the payments to any State on account of all projects that have been placed under construction to the total of all apportionments, excluding the one for the ensuing fiscal year. It may be further explained by stating that before July 1, 1936, projects could be approved and construction started under the 1937 authorization, but total payments to any State before July 1, 1936, on account of all projects under construction under both the 1936 and 1937 authorizations would be limited to the total of the 1936 apportionment. This permits both a sound construction program and a sound financial procedure. The construction of many of the 1936 projects will extend into the fiscal year 1937.

The committee amended section 1 by striking out paragraph (c). In all Federal-aid and emergency highway legislation a definite yardstick has been fixed for allocation among the several States. The proposed paragraph would eliminate this requirement. The result would be discriminations. If one State received Federal aid without matching it, other States would adopt measures that would result in their not being required to match. The program would thus be endangered; funds would be diverted; waste and extravagance would be condoned; the very purposes of the legislation would be defeated.

I include herewith a statement showing the State motorfuel taxes for the calendar year 1935 and the reported and estimated receipts furnished by Thomas H. MacDonald, of the Bureau of Public Roads, and I also include statement showing the State per-vehicle taxes for 1934, as follows:

State motor-fuel taxes, calendar year 1935 1

State	Motor-fue per g		Net receipts (reported) $10, 269, 421 3, 278, 598 8, 193, 789	Net receipts
	Jan. 1	Dec. 31		(estimated)
Alabama	Cents 6 5 6 2 3 4 2 3 7 6 5 3 4 3 3 5 5	Cents 6 5 6 4 3 4 7 6 5 3 4 3 3 3 5 5	3, 278, 598	$5, 230, 00

¹ From Automotive Industries, Feb. 22, 1936.

State motor-fuel taxes, calendar year 1935-Continued

State				Net receipts (estimated)
	Jan. 1	Dec. 31	(topoliou)	Committee
Louisiana Maine Maryland Maryland Massachusetts Michigan Missouri Missouri Missouri Montana Nebraska New Hampshire New Jersey New Mexico New York North Carolina North Dakota Ohio Ooklahoma Oregon Pennsylvania Rhode Island South Carolina South Carolina South Dakota Tennessee Texas Utah Vermont Virginia Washington Westingina Westingina Wisconsin Wyoming District of Columbia	Cents 4 4 3 3 6 2 5 4 4 4 3 5 3 6 6 6 7 4 4 4 5 5 4 4 4 4 4 4 4 4	Cents 5 4 4 3 3 6 2 5 5 4 4 3 3 4 4 5 4 4 5 4 4 4 4 4 4 2	$9, 345, 922 4, 572, 827 8, 278, 025 17, 334, 090 22, 790, 51 11, 241, 029 3, 844, 542 962, 040 2, 868, 166 2, 877, 605 56, 311, 245 2, 373, 316 39, 004, 488 11, 877, 151 7, 942, 853 40, 708, 840 4, 200, 994 14, 966, 016 33, 606, 085 2, 714, 341 12, 568, 379 6, 102, 941 16, 236, 347 1, 897, 790	$7,000,000 9,974,000 9,500,000 17,953,000 18,373,000 2,130,000 8,598,000 2,046,000 13,238,000
	11111111	- 2 - 10	510, 190, 740	106, 093, 000
Total			$616,2	83,740

Per vehicle taxes, calendar year 1934 [Property taxes on automobiles not included]

	State gas tax	Registra- tion fee	Total State tax
	A41 00	A14.10	Arr 20
Alabama	$41. 20	$14.12	$55.32
Arizona	31. 35	7.86	39. 21
Arkansas	39.70	11.02	50.72
California	17.93	5.05	22.98
Colorado	23.61	7.91	31, 52
Connecticut.	13. 90	22. 21	35. 11
Delaware	21.85	16. 27	38, 12
District of Columbia	12, 65	4. 15	16.80
Florida	49. 22	13. 18	62.40
Georgia	38.11	3.17	41. 28
Idabo	26.38	14.32	40.70
Illinois	20.00	12.52	32. 52
Indiana	21.85	9.05	30, 90
Iowa	16.88	15, 05	31.93
Kansas.	16.11	6, 20	22.31
Kentucky	27.75	9.06	36, 81
Louisiana	36. 57	18.32	54. 89
Maine	25. 06	17.70	42.76
Maryland		10.59	34. 05
	21, 65	8.44	30.09
Massachusetts		13. 85	32.11
Michigan	18. 26
Minnesota.	15. 55	9.85	25. 40
Mississippi	39.38	11. 17	50. 55
Missouri	12.94	9.92	22.86
Montana	28. 55	8.41	36.96
Nebraska	21.08	4.78	25, 86
Nevada	27.74	7.70	35. 44
New Hampshire	24. 27	21, 82	46.09
New Jersey	19.70	18.06	37.76
New Mexico	30.85	10.18	41.03
New York	19, 36	18.39	37.75
North Carolina	37.52	15, 80	53, 32
North Dakota	14.48	8, 26	22.74
Ohio.	23, 32	12, 36	35, 68
Oklahoma	22, 66	6, 81	29, 47
Oregon	26, 46	14.82	41.28
Pennsylvania	19.87	18, 35	38, 22
Rhode Island	14. 45	16, 22	30, 67
South Carolina.	38.06	13. 93	51. 99
South Dakota	22. 15	7.74	29.89
	41.97	9, 90	51.87
Tennessee	24. 11
Texas		11.38	35. 49
Utah	24. 67	9.48	34.15
Vermont	24. 92	27. 68	52.60
Virginia	33.37	12.96	46, 33
Washington	28. 32	6. 46	34. 78
West Virginia	29. 28	10. 21	39.49
Wisconsin	21.71	14.17	35.88
Wyoming	27.15	6.73	33.88
National	22.66	12. 23	34.89

This table shows that the average of both gasoline tax and registration fee per vehicle for all States and the District of Columbia was $34.89 in 1934. Twenty States were below to forest highways.

this average. They are listed in the following table, and the amount by which they were below the average is also given:

California	$11.91
Colorado	3.37
District of Columbia	18. 09
Illinois	2.37
Indiana	3.99
Iowa	2.96
Kansas
Maryland
Massachusetts
Michigan	2. 78
Minnesota	9.49
Missouri
	9.03
Nebraska	See
North Dakota
Oklahoma	5. 42
Rhode Island	4. 22
South Dakota
Utah
Washington	. 11
Wyoming	1.01
Amount below average	34. 89

Paragraph (d) is a reenactment of a similar provision in the act of 1934. The approximate apportionment of the $125,000,000 authorization among the States is as follows:

Approximate apportionment of $125,000,000 regular Federal aid (sec. 1, H. R. 11687)

(sec. 1, H. R. 11687)
	Amount
Alabama	$2,600,000
Arizona	1, 780, 000
Arkansas	2, 130, 000
California	4, 750, 000
Colorado	2, 290, 000
Connecticut	790,000
Delaware	610,000
Florida	1,660,000
Georgia	3, 170, 000
Idaho	1,530,000
Illinois	5, 170, 000
Indiana	3, 100, 000
Iowa	3, 230, 000
Kansas	3, 310, 000
Kentucky	2, 310, 000
Louisiana	1, 780, 000
Maine	1,090,000
Maryland	1,030,000
Massachusetts	1, 740, 000
Michigan	3, 830, 000
Minnesota	3, 430, 000
Mississippi	2, 190, 000
Missouri	3, 800, 000
Montana	2, 560, 000
Nebraska	2, 590, 000
Nevada	1, 590, 000
New Hampshire	610, 000
New Hampshire	1, 680, 000
New Jersey	1, 990, 000
New Mexico
New York	6, 160, 000
North Carolina	2,940,000
North Dakota	1,960,000
Ohio	4, 570, 000
Oklahoma	2,940,000
Oregon	2,050,000
Pennsylvania	5, 350, 000
Rhode Island	610,000
South Carolina	1,690,000
South Dakota	2, 040, 000
Tennessee	2, 630, 000
Texas	7, 770, 000
Utah	1,420,000
Vermont	610,000
Virginia	2, 280, 000
Washington	1,950,000
West Virginia	1,360,000
Wisconsin	3,040,000
Wyoming	1,560,000
Hawaii	610,000

Section 2, as amended by the committee, is a continuation of previous appropriations in the sum of $10,000,000 for forest traffs and highways.

Section 3 is a continuation of the authorization heretofore made for roads through unappropriated or unreserved public lands, Indian lands, and other Federal reservations other than forest reservations.

Section 4 is a continuation of the existing authorization for national parks, monuments, and other areas administered by the National Park Service. The program is about 50 percent complete so far as roads and trails in national parks are concerned, and the same situation obtains with respect to forest highways.

Connections

The committee eliminated section 5 of the bill. Personally, I favored its retention. It had not obtained in previous authorizations, and the committee undertook to restrict its recommendations, as far as possible, to previously approved legislation. I trust that section 5, insofar as national parkways are concerned, will be restored.

Section 6 was eliminated, inasmuch as the committee thought there was no occasion for such an authorization, although it was contained in the Authorization Act of 1934. The act of May 26, 1928, is an authorization and without limit; moreover, it is continuing.

Section 7 is new legislation. It obtains for the first time in a Federal highway appropriation authorization act. It provides for secondary or feeder roads; the funds are to be matched just as Federal highway funds must be matched. The following is the approximate apportionment of the funds among the several States, to wit:

Approximate apportionment of $25,000,000 for secondary or feeder roads (sec. 5, H. R. 11687)

	Amount
Alabama	$520,000
Arizona	360,000
Arkansas	430,000
California	950,000
Colorado	460,000
Connecticut	160,000
Delaware	120,000
Florida	330, 000
Georgia	630, 000
Idaho	310,000
Illinois	1,030,000
Indiana	620,000
Iowa	650, 000
Kansas	660,000
	460,000
Kentucky
Louisiana	360,000
Maine	220,000
Maryland	200,000
Massachusetts	350, 000
Michigan	770,000
Minnesota	680,000
Mississippi	440,000
Missouri	760,000
Montana	510,000
Nebraska	520, 000
Nevada	320,000
New Hampshire	120,000
New Jersey	330,000
New Mexico	400,000
New York	1, 230, 000
North Carolina	590,000
North Dakota	390,000
Ohio	910,000
Oklahoma	590,000
Oregon.	410,000
Pennsylvania	1,070,000
Rhode Island	120,000
South Carolina	340,000
South Dakota	410,000
Tennessee	530,000
Texas	1,560,000
Utah	280, 000
Vermont	120,000
Virginia	460,000
Washington	390,000
West Virginia	270,000
Wisconsin	610,000
Wyoming	310,000
Hawaii	120,000

Section 8 of the bill is also new legislation. It provides for an authorization of $50,000,000 for each of the fiscal years 1938 and 1939 to eliminate railroad crossings, and the funds are not to be matched. This is a departure from Federal aid; it stands somewhat on the same footing as the authorizations for forest highways, national parks, and public lands. Such authorizations do not have to be matched.

Under the $200,000,000 allocated for grade separation projects in 1935, a total of 2,307 crossings in all of the States will be eliminated. I enclose the following estimate, by States, furnished to me by the Bureau of Public Roads, to wit:

Estimate of the total number of highway railroad grade separation projects to be financed from the $200,000,000 allocated by the President under the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1935

Albert School School
45
1:
58
40
20

Estimate of the total number of highway railroad grade separation projects to be financed from the $200,000,000 allocated by the President under the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1935—Continued

Connecticut	11
Delaware	2
Florida	33
Georgia	98
Idaho	24
Illinois	83
Indiana	45
Iowa	113
Kansas	54
Kentucky	36
Louisiana	42
Maine	19
Maryland	19
Massachusetts	27
Michigan	44
Minnesota	145
Mississippi
Missouri	49
Montana	49
Nobrocko	84
Nebraska
Nevada	11
New Hampshire	13
New Jersey	31
New Mexico
New York	97
North Carolina	77
North Dakota	72
Ohio	53
Oklahoma	88
Oregon	22
Pennsylvania	86
Rhode Island	5
South Carolina	70
South Dakota	56
Tennessee	51
Texas	154
Utah	13
Vermont	17
Virginia	71
Washington	32
West Virginia	29
Wisconsin	40
Wyoming	13
District of Columbia	2
Hawaii	5
Total	9 907

Grade crossings contribute to the hazards of highway travel, and, especially on the trunk-line railways, should be eliminated. These railways are frequently paralleled by main highways. The railways, in many cases, have been taxed to construct the highways. Again, in many instances, grade crossings can be eliminated by continuing the highways parallel with the railways. There is thus indirect elimination that is within the terms of the act.

On the State highway systems there remained as of January 1, 1935, according to the best estimates obtainable, 17,879 railroad crossings that have not been eliminated; on the county and township systems there remained 120,670. The 2,307 crossings eliminated under the Emergency Relief Act of 1935 are but a small part of the total crossings, but their elimination is most helpful.

Again, the need for the elimination of grade crossings is probably greater in the more populous States. While Federal aid is allocated upon the basis of one-third area, one-third population, and one-third mileage, the authorization for the elimination of crossings will be allocated upon a more favorable basis to the more populous States. The apportionment will be on a basis of one-half population, one-fourth highway mileage, and one-fourth railroad mileage.

Formerly in many of the States the railroads were required to pay one-half the costs of the elimination of railroad crossings. The authorization is really an emergency one and is made necessary in the program of grade eliminations under the recent case of the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis Railway v. Herbert S. Walters (294 U. S. 405, 55 S. C. T. 486).

This was a case involving a grade crossing in Lexington, Tenn. Justice Brandeis, of the Supreme Court, rendered the opinion. It was held in that case that railroads could not be arbitrarily forced to contribute one-half of the cost of the elimination of grade crossings. The opinion of Justice Brandeis is most interesting and very illuminating. The comparative progress of railroads and highways is vividly traced and described. I quote from the said decision as follows:

parative progress of railroads and highways is vividly traced and described. I quote from the said decision as follows:

Federal-aid highways are designed so that motor vehicles may move thereon at a speed commonly much greater than that of railroad trains. The main purpose of grade separation, therefore, is now the furtherance of uninterrupted, rapid movement by motor vehicles. In this respect grade separation is a desirable engineering feature comparable to removal of grades and curves, to widening the highway, to strengthening and draining it, to shortening distance, to setting up guardrails, and to bridging streams. The railroad has ceased to be the prime instrument of danger and the main cause of accidents. It is the railroad which now requires protection from dangers incident to motor transportation. Prior to the establishment of the Federal-aid system, Tennessee highways were built under the direction of the county courts and paid for out of funds raised locally by taxation or otherwise. They served, in the main, local traffic. The long-distance traffic was served almost wholly by the railroads and the water lines. Under those conditions the occasion for separation of grades was mainly the danger incident to rail operations; and the promotion of safety was then the main purpose of grade separation. Then, it was reasonable to impose upon the railroad a large part of the cost of eliminating grade crossings; and the imposition was rarely a hardship. For the need for eliminating existing crossings, and the need of new highways free from grade crossings, arose usually from the growth of the community in which the grade separation was made; this growth was mainly the result of the transportation facilities offered through the railroad; the separation of grade crossings was a normal incident of the growth of rail operations; and as the highways were then feeders of rail traffic, the community's growth and every improvement of highway facilities benefited the railroad. The effect upon the railroad of constructin

Again I quote:

Unless the evidence and the special facts relied upon were of such a nature that they could not conceivably establish that the action of the State in imposing upon the railway one-half of the cost of the underpass was arbitrary and unreasonable, the Supreme Court obviously erred in refusing to consider them. The charge of arbitrariness is based primarily upon the revolutionary changes incident to transportation wrought in recent years by the wideincident to transportation wrought in recent years by the wide-spread introduction of motor vehicles; the assumption by the Fed-eral Government of the functions of road builder; the resulting depletion of rail revenues; the change in the character, the con-struction, and the use of highways; the change in the occasion for elimination of grade crossings, in the purpose of such elimination, and in the chief beneficiaries thereof; and the change in the rela-tive responsibility of the railroads and vehicles moving on the highways as elements of danger and causes of accidents.

I quote further:

The Supreme Court of Tennessee erred in refusing to consider whether the facts relied upon by the railway established as arbitrary and unreasonable the imposition upon it of one-half the cost of the underpass. The promotion of public convenience will not justify requiring of a railroad, any more than of others, the expenditure of money, unless it can be shown that a duty to provide penditure of money, unless it can be shown that a duty to provide the particular convenience rests upon it (Missouri Pacific Ry. v. Nebraska, 164 U. S. 403; Missouri Pacific Ry. v. Nebraska, 217 U. S. 196; Great Northern Ry. v. Minnesota, 238 U. S. 340; Great Northern Ry. v. Cahill, 253 U. S. 71). These were the authorities relied upon by this court in Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha Ry. v. Holmberg (282 U. S. 162, 167), where it held that to require a railroad to provide, at its own expense, an underpass, not primarily as a safety measure but for private convenience, was a denial of the process.

of due process.

The Supreme Court of Tennessee did not consider whether, in The Supreme Court of Tennessee did not consider whether, in view of the facts relied upon, it was arbitrary and unreasonable to impose upon the railway one-half the cost of the underpass. It assumed that the State action was valid because it found that the action was taken "to promote the safety of persons traveling the highways at grade crossings as well as to promote the safety of persons traveling the railroads at such crossings by eliminating dangerous grade crossings"; and added: "Admitting the insistence of complainant that the primary object of highway construction and the object of Federal contribution to highways is to invite and stimulate interstate traffic or travel upon the highways, it does not follow that the State roads are not primarily designed to serve the people of the State."

We have also no occasion to consider whether the railway should

We have also no occasion to consider whether the railway should We have also no occasion to consider whether the railway should bear a proportion of the cost of the underpass less than one-half. The propriety of a lesser charge was not, and could not have been, considered by the Commission; and it was not considered by either of the lower courts. It was conceded by counsel for the State that the only questions now reviewable are the validity of the statute which compelled the State highway commission to impose upon the railway one-half of the cost, and the validity of the order made thereunder. Compare Norwood v. Baker (172 U. S.

269, 290-294); Schneider Granite Co. v. Gast Realty Co. (245 U. S. 288); Thomas v. Kansas City Southern Ry. (261 U. S. 481); Road Imp. District No. 1 v. Missouri Pacific Railroad Co. (274 U. S. 188); Rowley v. Chicago & Northwestern Ry. (293 U. S. 102, 112).

The judgment of the Supreme Court of Tennessee is reversed, and the cause is remanded to it for further proceedings not inconsistent with this contains.

sistent with this opinion.

The following is an apportionment of the $50,000,000 among the several States covering hazards at grade crossings,

Approximate apportionment of $50,000,000 for elimination of hazards at railroad grade crossings (sec. 6, H. R. 11687)

the author 2 new 1 propried to the Santuculo	Amount
Alabama	$1,010,000
Arizona	310,000
Arkansas	890,000
California	1,870,000
Colorado	660,000
Connecticut	430,000
Delaware	100,000
Florida	710,000
Georgia	1, 220, 000
Idaho	420,000
Illinois	2, 580, 000
Indiana	1, 280, 000
Iowa	1, 400, 000
Kansas	1, 310, 000
Kentucky	920,000
Louisiana	800,000
Maine	360,000
Maryland	520,000
Massachusetts	1, 050, 000
Michigan	1, 690, 000
Minnesota	1, 350, 000
Mississippi
	810,000
Missouri	1,540,000
Montana	680,000
Nebraska	890,000
Nevada	220,000
New Hampshire	210,000
New Jersey	1,000,000
New Mexico	430,000
New York	3, 390, 000
North Carolina	1, 210, 000
North Dakota	800,000
Ohio	2, 110, 000
Oklahoma	1, 250, 000
Oregon	580,000
Pennsylvania	2,870,000
Rhode Island	180,000
South Carolina	770,000
South Dakota	810,000
Tennessee	980,000
Texas	2,710,000
Utah	310,000
Vermont	180,000
Virginia	940,000
Washington	770, 000
West Virginia	670,000
Wisconsin	1, 260, 000
Wyoming	340,000
District of Columbia	100,000
Hawaii
110 A OTT	110,000

The final section in the act is really a continuation of existing law. It provides for investigations of Federal-aid highways and secondary or feeder roads. In this connection, the committee inserted a proviso in section 7 of the original bill for the establishment of a section of rural roads in the Bureau of Public Roads. I do not think that this proviso was wise; moreover, I think it was unnecessary. The Bureau has established divisions whenever and wherever needed; there are divisions of design, construction, bridges, highway laws and contracts, control, information, tests, high-way transport, and management. While personally I think the matter of the establishment of a division of rural roads was unnecessary, the insertion will not require an additional appropriation. The divisions of construction and design are able to cope with the problems. Inasmuch as the objection is not material, the committee recommended the insertion of the amendment providing for the establishment of a section or division of rural roads.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TURPIN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 additional minute to the gentleman from Mississippi.

CONCLUSION

Mr. WHITTINGTON. The Federal Government promoted the progress and advancement of the country in initiating the Federal highway system; national highways have resulted; agriculture and industry have benefited; rural conditions have improved; country life is becoming more and more attractive; travel has been encouraged. But there is a further obligation on the Federal Government. The program should be extended; the needs are multiplying; traffic is increasing; the development must be continued; the policy must be expanded. The national responsibility can be met by the prompt passage of the authorizations in the pending bill. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. CARTWRIGHT. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Utah [Mr. Robinson].

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. Mr. Chairman, I appreciate that we cannot discuss a bill such as we now have under consideration in 5 minutes, but I will take sufficient time to assure the committee that we have gone into the matter contained in this bill in great detail. We have had long and extensive hearings, and if you will read the hearings that were had on this bill you will understand that a great deal of work has been done in committee. I think you will appreciate this fact when you compare the original bill with the bill finally reported by the committee.

Mr. Chairman, it seems to me that a reasonable limit in Federal-aid appropriation is the amount of funds that are coming to the Public Treasury, both State and Federal, from the road users themselves.

The bill under consideration authorizes the expenditures of $220,000,000 per annum for the years 1938–39. During the year 1935 there was collected directly from automotive taxes by the Federal Government the sum of $296,086,984; therefore, based upon the above principle, we are still within our limit in this bill.

In my opinion, there is no money expended by the Federal Government that has accomplished better results than the money expended by the Bureau of Public Roads. This Department has not only been extremely careful and wise in its own expenditures, but it has also set up organizations throughout the United States which have cooperated with the various State organizations in such a way that the whole road program of the United States has become correlated. People can now travel almost any place in the United States on a fairly reasonable road and under fair conditions. It is true that the highways of our Nation are not all that we would desire them to be, but the passage of such bill as this has for its purpose the bringing about of better roads in every State in the Union; also of placing the road-building program throughout the United States, not only so far as the Federal Government is concerned, but also so far as the States are concerned, on a more permanent basis. When this bill is passed, each State will know exactly what contributions it will receive from the Federal Government for its roadbuilding program covering the time specified in the bill.

From the beginning of the Federal-aid program until 1933 the money allocated for Federal highways was distributed to the States on the basis of one-third in the ratio which the area of each State bears to the total area of all the States; one-third in the ratio which the population of each State bears to the total population of all the States, as shown by the latest available Federal census; one-third in the ratio which the mileage of rural delivery routes and star routes in each State bears to the total mileage of rural delivery and star routes in all the States at the close of the next preceding fiscal year. During the Seventy-third Congress this allocation was changed so that seven-eighths of the money is appropriated under this plan, while one-eighth is based entirely upon population. This, of course gives the populous States an advantage they did not have under the previous appropriations. However, due to the fact that it was thought that unemployment existed to a larger extent in the more populous district, that this apportionment was fair to all of the States. Therefore the large item in this bill of $125,-000,000 will be apportioned under the law as amended in the Seventy-third Congress.

The bill also carries an appropriation of $10,000,000 for forest highways. In my opinion, this sum is wholly inadequate for this particular purpose and should be at least $15,000,000, as provided in the bill when it was first introduced. However, the committe took the position that inasmuch as $10,000,000 was the amount previously allocated, that due to the financial condition of the Government at the present time it would be unwise to increase this sum.

There are at least three types of roads in the forest: First, gravel and macadam roads, on which there is a large amount of travel; second, truck roads, on which travel is limited, but which roads are reasonably safe for automobile travel at 15 miles per hour; and, third, forest trails, used for horses and foot travel.

There are 53,000 miles of roads in the forest which have already been built and which it is necessary to maintain. It is estimated that there are 121,000 miles of roads planned in the forests. This leaves 68,000 miles of roads in the forest yet to be constructed. There are 121,000 miles of trails completed which need to be maintained and 32,000 miles of trails which should be built. During the depression more than ever before the forests have come to be a camping or picnicking grounds. Last year 17,000,000 people camped in the national forests. It is necessary to construct new and better roads in order to make the present camps accessible and to distribute the great group of people who use the forests for this purpose,

The money authorized for this particular work is different from the regular Federal highway authorization in that the roads constructed in the forest must be maintained largely at the expense of the Government, and, since we are constantly building more roads, the maintenance naturally is increasing. It is estimated that it will cost at least $3,500,000 annually to maintain the roads and trails that are now constructed; therefore, if only $10,000,000 is appropriated, it will leave but six and one-half million dollars which can be utilized for new construction.

I think it will help us to visualize this immense tract of land if we consider the gross area of the national forest as about one-tenth of the area of continental United States. Combined this would equal the area of Texas and Oklahoma. Or starting from Maine, along the Atlantic seaboard, the forests would run down the coast through North Carolina and take in West Virginia, Pennsylvania, and Ohio, and including all of New England.

These forest roads have two very important purposes: In the first place, many of these roads are very helpful to the people locally; in the next place, they are essential as a fire protection. We have vast areas of timber to protect from fires. When these fires start it is necessary that they be reached with dispatch. In order to do this, a reasonably safe and fast road to the various areas is necessary. A large amount of the money appropriated for this purpose is used in construction of truck roads, which are made available and used primarily when there are fire hazards. Through this method fire hazards are greatly reduced, and the saving that has been made in preventing fires amounts to many times more than these roads cost.

I was of the opinion in the committee, and am of the opinion now, that $15,000,000 should be appropriated annually for this purpose. I hope that when the bill goes to the Senate that this amount will be put in by that body or will be put in in conference.

The bill also carries an appropriation of $7,500,000 annually for the construction and improvement of roads and trails in national parks. This is the same amount that has been authorized for the past 2 years.

There are two items in this appropriation bill which are new and which have not heretofore appeared in the regular road appropriation bill, namely, $25,000,000 for the year 1938 and $25,000,000 for the year 1939 for feeder roads, including rural-free-delivery and farm-to-market roads. This sum will be apportioned among the States the same as other Federal highways appropriations, and it will be necessary for the State to match this sum in order to receive the benefit of this money. However, it is thought that the time has come when the Federal Government should aid in establishing suitable roads for farm-to-market roads, which roads are not on the regular "through highway" system. Most of these roads, of course, are rural mail roads, and the expenditure of this money can be justified from the fact that the mails should be delivered with less cost to the Government and with greater dispatch.

The other item which is not in the regular appropriation bill is $50,000,000 for 1938 and $50,000,000 for the year 1939 for grade crossings. This appropriation is made to the States on the basis of one-half on population, as shown by the latest decennial census; one-fourth on the mileage of the Federalaid highway system; and one-fourth on the railroad mileage, as determined by the Interstate Commerce Commission. This appropriation gives a very decided advantage to the populous States. There was $200,000,000 allocated for this purpose in the emergency act, most of which is now under contract; and while it will take many years to complete this program, it was thought by the committee that at least $50,000,000 annually should be used for this purpose. This money is not matched by the States nor by the railroads. It is really a grant from the United States to the various States to aid in eliminating railroad crossing hazards. [Applause.]

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks and to include as part of my remarks some excerpts from the opinion of the Supreme Court of the United States holding a State statute requiring the railroads to contribute 50 percent invalid.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

Mr. CARTWRIGHT. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all Members who have spoken on this bill may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

Mr. TURPIN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. REED].

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Chairman, when the bill was before the House appropriating $4,800,000,000 to be turned over to the President to spend as he saw fit, I endeavored at that time, as did some others, to have the fund earmarked so that we could take care of grade crossings; in fact, carry out the program that had been formulated by our State engineers. We were unsuccessful in having the funds earmarked.

Mr. Chairman, I am very much interested in this bill for two reasons.

The committee report in reference to section 7 reads as follows:

Section 7 of the bill provides an authorization of $50,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1938, and the sum of $50,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, for the elimination of railroad grade crossings. These funds need not be matched by the States and are distributed to the States according to the method adopted in connection with the emergency highway funds now in operation.

Of course, I am also interested in the question of highways and country roads which the farmers need in order to carry their products to market.

Mr. Chairman, I have another interest in this bill. I am particularly interested in it because it does earmark funds for the elimination of grade crossings. The Members of the House will remember that after a very tragic bus accident on a grade crossing out here at Rockville, Md., the President made the statement to the country that he was prepared to allocate funds to eliminate all grade crossings where the communities were ready to proceed. On the very day that the President made that announcement I wrote this letter:

APRIL 13, 1935.

The President of the United States,

The White House. My Dear Mr. President: The appalling and tragic disaster at the Rockville, Md., grade grossing has focused the attention of the country on the menace of grade crossings to public safety.

This brings vividly to my mind the situation that exists in the city of Dunkirk, N. Y. The grade crossings in my home city have taken a long toll of lives, among them my law partner, Hon. Rollin W. Snow, his wife, and aunt, and many of my other friends.

I believe that the city of Dunkirk, the railroads, and the State are now prepared to take immediate action, with the assistance of the Federal Government, to eliminate the grade crossings, or at least the more dangerous ones. I am prompted to place this situation before you because of the announcement that money will be made available to communities from the public-works funds to remove these hazards to human life.

The mayor of the city, Hon. W. L. Roberts, the chamber of commerce, the service clubs—in fact, every organization and the citizens generally—are vitally interested and are supporting this request. I respectfully request and urge your cooperation.

Respectfully yours,

DANIEL A. REED.

I received a reply from the Secretary to the President dated April 17, 1935, as follows:

My Dear Congressman: The President asks me to acknowledge receipt of your letter of April 13 and to assure you that your request with respect to the grade crossing at Dunkirk, N. Y., will be given consideration.

Sincerely yours,

M. H. MCINTYRE Assistant Secretary to the President.

Up to date this matter has received no further consideration, except that the President shortly thereafter reduced the grade-crossing allotment by half and transferred the money to other projects.

I think it is a very wise provision to have the funds definitely earmarked.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REED of New York. I yield to the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. May I call the gentleman's attention to the fact that there is a change in the distribution of these grade-crossing funds, so that instead of being based on the matter of Federal aid, 50 percent of these funds are allocated on the basis of population, the purpose being to eliminate the grade crossings in the more populous States of the Union.

Mr. REED of New York. I do not have the figures showing the number of people that have been ruthlessly killed at grade crossings in my home city, but they show a very tragic history in this respect based on population, and the worst, I believe, of any city in the State of New York: therefore I shall support this bill in an effort to protect my home city and other communities similarly situated from further tragedies.

The elimination of grade crossings in my home community and in other communities throughout my district has become of vital interest to almost every family where grade crossings are a constant menace to the life of the people. Every workman who goes to and from his work over grade crossings, over which passenger trains travel at terrific speed, endangers his life. There is not a mother who does not feel deep concern when her children leave for school in the morning and return in the afternoon if they reside where it is necessary for the children to cross the railroad at grade.

I have been urging action for the elimination of these hazards to human life with all the vigor at my command. I hope that this bill providing funds for this purpose will make it possible to protect the people of my communities from the risk to life and limb to which they are now subjected.

Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks and to include some very brief letters from officials with reference to this situation.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. CARTWRIGHT. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Secrest]

Mr. SECREST. Mr. Chairman, the need of road construction arose with the general advancement in the automotive trade. In the beginning of the road program the landowners adjoining the proposed road paid practically all the cost. This old system was abolished several years ago when the States and the Federal Government levied gasoline taxes and used the money in the construction of State and Federal roads.

Any road program has a number of advantages. In the first place, you make a permanent improvement, in the second place you furnish direct labor, and in the third place you furnish indirect labor to thousands and thousands of people in the cement industry, the brick industry, and in other allied industries affecting road building.

The pending bill provides in one section for the main Federal roads. It also provides a $50,000,000 appropriation for the elimination of grade crossings, both of which I subscribe

The bill also provides for the first time in a regular Federal appropriation bill, in one of its sections, $25,000,000 for rural farm-to-market roads, including school-bus routes and other rural roads.

We have provided in this section that there shall be established in the Bureau of Public Roads a section of rural roads, and I want to make it clear that it is not the intention of the committee, and I want the RECORD to show that it is not the intention of the House, that these people shall be new employees. It is the intention of the committee that certain engineers now employed by the Bureau of Public Roads shall be designated or assigned the task of handling rural-road problems.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman vield?

Mr. SECREST. I yield.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Nor will it increase the cost of administration or the cost of this bill.

Mr. SECREST. Certainly not.

The Bureau of Public Roads for the past year has been making in the States throughout the Union a survey of rural roads to determine the number of homes on these roads, to determine the amount of improvement necessary to determine by a traffic count what rural roads in the country are the more important, and in every county of my district this survey has been practically completed. We now know when we attack our rural-road problem exactly which roads are deserving of primary consideration from the standpoint of lending assistance to the farmers and the general public using these roads. It is intended by this provision that this material shall be established in the Bureau of Public Roads in a division or branch to be known as the section on rural roads. This will render to the people of the Nation interested in rural roads an invaluable opportunity.

The 50,000 letter carriers in America, when they have any rural-roads problem, can then direct their inquiries or present their needs to this one focal point. The Members of Congress interested in the rural roads in their districts can go to this one branch on rural roads, which will have the sole task of carrying out this program and expending this $25,-000,000 assigned for this purpose. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TURPIN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to my colleague the gentleman from New York [Mr. LORD].

Mr. LORD. Mr. Chairman, the bill before us has been well explained by the chairman of our committee and I do not need to go further into the details of the measure.

I simply want to say that we had a discussion of this bill in committee during sessions which consumed about 3 days, completing it and getting it in its present form. I believe the bill is now in as good shape as such legislation can be.

We are providing the regular appropriation to the States for the State highways and for the other highways through the forests, and so forth. We are also providing for gradecrossing eliminations and we have provided for farm-tomarket roads. To my mind, this is one of the most important parts of this bill.

It has been a lifetime work with me to "get the farmer out of the mud." We have made a start in setting up a special fund for farm-to-market roads.

Last year a number of us were interested in allotting some of the W. P. A. money for farm-to-market roads and we went to the President and to Harry Hopkins and others and secured their cooperation, and in the past year we have spent, perhaps, $150,000,000 on farm-to-market roads. We feel that this was money well expended, because any money that went into roads benefited the farmer, benefited the worker, and resulted in a lasting benefit.

If we can only build roads to every back farm in the coun-be within half an hour or so of some village. The farmers, with their automobiles, can get to town very easily, and it will not matter whether they are 10 or 20 miles from town or 2 miles away, because they can reach their town or village in a short space of time. So what we have set up in this bill is the beginning of what is going to be a great success in the end.

It is going to be a great relief to the farmers of this section when they know that they are on the way to good roads.

Mr. PEARSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LORD. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. PEARSON. The gentleman knows that his State and my State and most of the States have a satisfactory system of primary roads. What we are interested in now is what is referred to as secondary roads. Will the gentleman explain what the term "secondary roads" embraces?

Mr. LORD. Mr. Chairman, I understand that secondary roads are roads of importance but not as important as the main thoroughfares, but I do not think they reach back to what is called the real back roads.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LORD. I yield.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Section 5 provides for $25,000,000 for 1938 and a like sum for 1939, and it is conditioned that there shall be established a Bureau of Public Roads and a section of rural roads subject to the direction of the Chief of the Bureau of Public Roads. Has it been discussed or have you any concrete idea of how this fund will be distributed among the different States?

Mr. LORD. It will be distributed on the same basis as is the $125,000,000—area, population, and mileage.

Mr. HAINES. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LORD. I yield.

Mr. HAINES. I know the gentleman is an expert road builder. I wish to ask him if the sum authorized in the bill is $220,000,000 or $125,000,000.

Mr. LORD. It is $220,000,000 altogether. before, I think we have started on the right track. We have started out to recognize and help the farmer who lives on the back roads in the country. While we have been building the main thoroughfares, we have not included but have neglected the back roads. This legislation makes a start to help get the rural mail carrier, the school bus, and the farmer "out of the mud." [Applause.]

Mr. TURPIN. Mr. Chairman, how much time is left on

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman has 7 minutes.

Mr. TURPIN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Idaho [Mr. WHITE].

Mr. WHITE. Mr. Chairman and members of the Committee, I am particularly interested in the provisions of this bill. A great deal has been said about the importance of road construction connecting the sections of the country, and I want to remind the Committee that in the early days of our history, in connecting the East with the West with a road across the mountains into the Pacific coast, the Government gave away an empire just to get a railroad through the Northwestern States. It gave the Northern Pacific Railroad every other section in a strip 20 miles wide on each side. No one can compute the value of that land and its undeveloped resources that was donated to this company just to get one railroad across the United States. The building of roads is one of the most important things we have to do, and I want to talk to the Committee for a minute about the importance of opening up the resources and utilizing them in the great areas of the country that have been set aside in the national forests. When all this land that was in the rugged sections of the country covered by timber, unappropriated public domain, was withdrawn by the Government and placed in the national forest, where we permitted miners to locate mining claims, land rich in mining resources and mineral deposits, the Government by that act assumed the responsibility to build roads into that country to afford transportation for the development of those great resources; and out in the Northwest, in the Mountain States of the Rocky Mountains, we have great areas of country that are closed, absotry there will not be any back farms. Every farm will then lutely inaccessible, in a primitive state, where the miners and prospectors have penetrated and located mining claims, and there is no opportunity to develop them. The State cannot go into these national forests there and build roads, nor can the county; and if the Federal Government does not come to the assistance of the miners and prospectors and build the necessary roads within that country, then the country is simply locked up. In the district that I represent in Idaho we have one of the greatest undeveloped gold fields in the United States. We have a country out there in those mountains, in the forest, that has produced $300,000,000 in placer gold. If that had been on the Canadian side of the line, the Canadian Government would have built roads there. because they have a law that when a prospector or a miner makes application to the Minister of Mines and examination is had, and then, if the development warrants it, the Canadian Government will build a road in, and most of that country is far less populated and developed than the country on our side of the line.

In Idaho, and in Utah and Colorado and those Western States, we need the development of the country, and at the proper time I propose to offer an amendment to put back this section that authorizes the appropriation of $15,000,000 a year for constructing and maintaining forest roads and trails, because the committee has stricken that provision out of the bill which permits the development of new roads. The $10,000,000 in that item will not maintain the roads that are built through the forests, because it must be remembered that in the national forest many of the arterial trunk highways cross them and must be maintained by the Forest Service.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Chairman, the hearings disclose that the Director of Parks stated that not exceeding one-third, not exceeding $5,000,000, would be needed.

Mr. WHITE. Oh, the national forest and the national parks are entirely two different functions. Seventy-two percent of Idaho is owned by the Federal Government, most of it embraced in the national forest, and the miners up in that country are dependent on the Federal Government for assistance in building roads. The committee has struck out that provision, and by not permitting the development of new roads they are tying up the resources of the country.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Idaho has expired.

Mr. CARTWRIGHT. Mr. Chairman, I yield the remainder of my time to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. ZIMMER-MAN].

Mr. TURPIN. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 1 minute remaining to me.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Missouri is recognized for 2 minutes.

Mr. ZIMMERMAN. Mr. Chairman, as a member of the Committee on Roads, I am very much interested in the passage of this bill. It not only provides for the continuation of Federal aid in our road-building program among the States but provides for the inauguration of a program which will in fact lift the farms of our country out of the mud where we have left them up to this time.

I desire to especially call your attention to section 5 in the bill, which provides, among other things, as follows:

Provided further, That there shall be established in the Bureau of Public Roads a section of Rural Roads, subject to the direction of the Chief of the Bureau of Public Roads.

Up to this time the Bureau of Public Roads has been concerned with the building of through or main highways connecting centers of population and designed to accommodate the tourist and through traffic. Under this provision the Bureau of Public Roads will study the farm-to-market road problem, the proper mode of construction of such type of road, and cooperate with local agencies in the building of the same.

This section further provides for the authorization of the expenditure of $25,000,000 for the fiscal years ending June 30, 1938 and 1939, respectively, for the construction of "secondary or leader roads, rural free-delivery mail roads, and public-school bus routes." I am sorry the amount provided for this purpose is not larger, but it is the beginning of a program which will lift our rural inhabitants out of the mud and enable them to reach in comfort and safety the principal highways now established in most States. Nothing affects the comfort and happiness of the farmer, and even his prosperity, more than his ability to receive his daily mail on time, have his children transported safely to school, and to transport his products conveniently to the market. In this age of the automobile and motor truck the distance of a few miles from a main highway means, for many weeks during the year, seclusion and inability to get off of the farm. We have built all the main highways we need for the present. We should now give our attention to the building of rural, farm-to-market roads and really help that large class of our population—the farmer—which has been paying taxes all these years for road improvement and which has received few benefits.

There are other provisions of this bill which I would like to discuss, but lack of time forbids. I sincerely hope we pass this bill and that it becomes a law.

The CHAIRMAN. The time for general debate is exhausted, and the Clerk will read the bill for amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Cierk read as ionows:

Be it enacted, etc., That for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of the act entitled "An act to provide that the United States shall aid the States in the construction of rural post roads, and for other purposes", approved July 11, 1916, and all acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto, there is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the following sums, to be expended according to the provisions of such act as amended: The sum of $125,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1938, and the sum of $125,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939.

(a) All sums authorized in this section and apportioned to the States shall be available for expenditure for 1 year after the close of the fiscal year for which said sums, respectively, are authorized, of the fiscal year for which said sums, respectively, are authorized, and any sum remaining unexpended at the end of the period during which it is available for expenditure shall be reapportioned among the States as provided in section 21 of the Federal Highway Act of 1921 (42 Stat. 212).

of 1921 (42 Stat. 212).

(b) On or before January 1 of each year the Secretary of Agriculture shall apportion among the several States, as provided in section 21 of the Federal Highway Act of 1921, the sums authorized for the fiscal year immediately following. When said apportionment has been made for any fiscal year, the State highway departments may submit projects to the Secretary of Agriculture for his approval. The Secretary of Agriculture shall act upon projects submitted to him under any such apportionment and his approval of any such project shall be deemed a contractual obligation of the Federal Government for the payment of its proportional contribution thereto: Provided, That projects approved under any apportionment before the beginning of the fiscal year for which such apportionment has been made may be contracted for by the States and construction thereon may be begun, but the total reimbursements to any State or Territory before the beginning of such fiscal year shall not exceed the total of all previous apportionments to such State or Territory.

not exceed the total of all previous apportunities.

(c) If within any fiscal year the Secretary of Agriculture shall find with respect to any State that the laws of such State provide that the proceeds of all taxes on motor-vehicle transportation, as referred to in section 12 of the act of June 18, 1934 (48 Stat. 993), shall be applied to highway purposes, as defined in said section, and that the average of all such taxes per motor vehicle registered in such State is at least equal to the average of all such taxes per motor vehicle registered in all of the States, and shall further find that after having so applied such proceeds to such highway purposes other than construction there will be insufficient balance poses other than construction there will be insufficient balance remaining for construction with which to match all or any part of the regular Federal-aid road funds apportioned to such State for such fiscal year in accordance with the provisions of the Federal Highway Act of 1921, as amended and supplemented, all or such portion of such apportionment as the State is unable to match shall be available for expenditure in such State in accordance with said Federal Highway Act without being metabod by the State with State Federal Highway Act without being matched by the State with State funds.

(d) The term "highway" as defined in the Federal Highway Act, approved November 9, 1921, as amended and supplemented, shall be deemed to include such main parkways as may be designated by the State and approved by the Secretary of Agriculture as part of the Federal-aid highway system.

With the following committee amendment:

Beginning in line 6, on page 3, strike all of subsection (c), and on line 1, page 4, strike out "(b)" and insert "(c)".

Mr. McCLELLAN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the committee amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I certainly favor the passage of this bill. There is no greater evidence of or index to the progress of any community than the building and construction of good roads. This is, in most respects, a good bill and one that should have the unanimous vote of the membership of this House.

I am opposed, however, to the committee amendment. I object to striking out and eliminating subsection (c) of section 1 of this bill, which has for its purpose to make available to those States that are not in position to match Federal aid, their proportionate share of the Federal-aid funds for the construction of highways. There are but few States that are not any longer in position to match Federal aid, but there are a few that cannot. My State cannot. It has not been able to for the past 2 years. Under the present program it will probably be 5 or 10 years before it can again match Federal aid. But it is not due, primarily to the lack of effort of the State. It is not the fault of the State. In the past we inaugurated a program of road construction, and as a result we have many good roads; but we have taxed ourselves to the point where we cannot now raise additional revenue to match Federal aid. I say that to you with the record to support it. We today pay on each automobile an average of more than $50 per annum in license fees and taxes on gasoline and oil, whereas the general average for the United States is only $32 and a few cents per year. Therefore, we have taxed ourselves 44 percent more than the average tax paid by the other States of the Union. May I say to you that all of these revenues are pledged for the payment of indebtedness that has been incurred in the construction of the present system of roads which we have.

It will be argued, I assume, by some member of the committee in support of this amendment, desiring to strike out this section, that this provision would be giving an advantage to some of the States that cannot match Federal aid. This section has the endorsement of the Chief of the Bureau of Public Roads, as you will observe by reading his testimony in the published hearings on the bill.

My answer to this argument is that we have taxed ourselves to the limit in order that we might provide you and others of the traveling public throughout the Nation with good roads so that you may pass through our State. Having gone our limit, no longer able to match Federal funds, the highway system in no State being completed, neither in Arkansas nor in any of these other States, which are unable to match Federal aid, if this money were expended now we would be able to carry on the work. Otherwise it must stop.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. McClellan] has expired.

Mr. McCLELLAN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 2 additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Reserving the right to object, are these bonds that the gentleman referred to retired? Are they bonds for carrying on other projects than road building, and are they retired?

Mr. McCLEILAN. No. I would like to answer the gentleman. I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 5 additional minutes, Mr. Chairman, in order that I may answer these questions.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I have asked my question under a reservation of objection so that it would not come out of the gentleman's time.

Mr. McCLELLAN. Yes. We have $145,000,000 worth of bonds, the proceeds of which have all been expended for highway purposes. All of it went into highways. We have had to refund this indebtedness, and therefore all of the money that we are able to raise with this excessive taxation is pledged to the retirement of that debt and maintenance of the highways, and we are unable to provide any additional funds to carry on new construction.

Mr. WOLCOTT. My point was that the bonds of which the gentleman spoke are not bonds for institutions or for carrying on any other work?

Mr. McCLELLAN. None whatever. All are road bonds, and spent for road construction.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arkansas?

There was no objection.

Mr. McCLELLAN. I have just explained to the gentleman the condition that obtains. In our expansion program, our road-building program, we probably overbuilt, and when the depression came and those bonds became due we made default and had to refinance them, and in doing so we have raised our gasoline tax to 6½ cents a gallon and pledged all of that revenue to the liquidation of this refunded indebtedness, all of which went for the construction of roads.

It may be argued that this would be unfair. Let me call this to your attention: This section should be left in that bill. Any money that is subject to allocation to a State like Arkansas, which cannot match Federal aid, will go back into the Treasury and be reallocated to other States. It will not amount to a saving to the Federal Government. All these funds will be expended. I believe it is a better policy to spend Government money through an established agency of the Government, like the Bureau of Federal Roads, than it is to allocate it out to emergency agencies and have it spent for projects that are not worthy of the expenditure. If you will place this money at the disposal of States like Arkansas, under the supervision and direction of the Bureau of Public Roads, when it is expended we will be getting something for the Government's money. It will not be spent on boondoggling projects, as they are often referred to. May I say to you every dollar you spend down there through the Bureau of Federal Roads, as far as labor is concerned, and most of it will be for labor, will be spent in the employment of those who are unemployed and on relief and who the Government will likely have to provide jobs for anyway. The money will not be wasted.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Arkansas has again expired.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the committee amendment.

Mr. Chairman, this section was stricken out by the committee, as I stated in my presentation of the bill, because it would violate the fundamental principle that has characterized all Federal-aid highway legislation. It would result in a discrimination against the other 47 States of the Union.

The gentleman [Mr. McClellan], my distinguished colleague from Arkansas, is a member of the committee. The committee considered most carefully this section. We knew it was for the benefit of Arkansas. I represent Mississippi in part. Mississippi was unable to match her Federal aid last year. I think a lot more of the continuance and permanence of the Federal system than I do of the inability of any one State for any one year to match its funds.

If this amendment is not adopted, it will be a blow at the system. The chief virtue of the system is that all the States, the rich and the poor, the populous and the sparsely settled are treated exactly alike.

The gentleman from Arkansas spoke of taxes. I can appreciate that the taxes on gasoline and automobiles are high in the gentleman's State. I have before me the figures for 1935. But what about the State of Tennessee? gasoline tax in Arkansas, according to the figures of the Bureau of Roads for 1935, was 61/2 cents a gallon, whereas in Tennessee and Florida it was 7 cents. The gentleman stated in the excellent argument he made on behalf of the great State he so ably represents that gasoline and other taxes on automobiles are around $50 per year. They are largely in excess of this amount in other States. I have the statement for the calendar year 1934. Take, for instance, the great State of Florida. There they amount to around $62 per annum. According to the figures of the Bureau of Roads to which I am referring, the State of Tennessee has a tax in excess of that of Arkansas, the average per vehicle tax in Tennessee being $51.87 per annum. The tax in Mississippi equals the Arkansas tax and the tax in Louisiana exceeds it.

Mr. McCLELLAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WHITTINGTON. I yield.

Mr. McCLELLAN. The gentleman spoke of the State of Florida. This State was not able to match Federal aid last year, was it? At least it was not able to match very much of it.

State may not have fully matched funds last year, but I am sure this year it will do as Mississippi intends-match the Federal funds.

Mr. McCLELLAN. But they were not able to match funds last year.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. I do not know the reason of the inability to fully match the funds. The gentleman must bear in mind that inability rises from different causes. Frequently it comes from poor financial management. Again it may be as in the case of the State of Mississippi, where we have been paying as we built our roads. Instead of pledging our gasoline income for years to come, we try to pay as we go.

If this section remains in the bill, Mr. Chairman, it will encourage States to divert their gasoline taxes and will absolutely break down and destroy the Federal-aid highway system. For this reason I feel that the amendment of the committee, thoroughly and carefully considered, should be adopted.

Mr. McCLELLAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. WHITTINGTON. I yield.

Mr. McCLELLAN. The gentleman spoke of departure from policy and principle. I ask the gentleman if during this whole administration the policy of the Democratic administration has not been to depart from previous precedent, principle, and policy?

Mr. WHITTINGTON. I confine myself in answering, Mr. Chairman, to saying that in Federal-aid highway legislation-and I must not be diverted-whenever there has been a departure it has been a departure for the benefit of all 48 States, not for the benefit of Arkansas, Mississippi, or any other State. We canceled the requirement to match Federal aid in the emergency highway legislation, but it applied not alone to the magnificent State of Arkansas but equally to every State in the Union.

Mr. McCLELLAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Yes.

Mr. McCLELLAN. Is it the gentleman's construction that Federal-aid highways are of local benefit to the States, or is it of universal benefit to all the people of the Nation to have a system of national highways over which they may

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Otherwise there would not be a Federal-aid highway policy and program. Being a national policy, it must be a policy whereby all of the States are treated alike. There must be no discrimination in favor of one State. The very thing that affects Arkansas would affect Mississippi and every State in the Union.

Mr. Chairman, I ask that the committee amendment be adopted.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the committee amendment.

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Sec. 2. For the purpose of carrying out the provisions of section 23 of the Federal Highway Act of 1921, there is hereby authorized to be appropriated for forest highways, roads, and trails the following sums, to be available until expended in accordance with the provisions of said section 23: The sum of $15,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1938; the sum of $15,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939: Provided, That one-third, but not less than $3,000,000, of the appropriation made for any fiscal year for carrying out the provisions of said section 23 may hereafter be expended for the purposes enumerated in the first paragraph of clause (a) of for the purposes enumerated in the first paragraph of clause (a) of said section 23.

Committee amendment:

Page 4, line 12, strike out "$15,000,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$10,000,000."

Mr. WHITE. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the committee amendment.

Mr. Chairman, this amendment goes directly to the proposition of building forest roads and trails. It is my information from the Forest Service that the $10,000,000 included in this bill, if the committee amendment is adopted, will barely

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Florida matched partially. That | maintain the forest roads. We must remember in dealing with the forest roads and trails that we are now concerned with arterial roads that cross the Western States. Many sections of these roads are through the forest and must be maintained by the Forest Service. They are arterial highways. When we consider the extent of the roads maintained by the Forest Service we will realize that $10,000,000 is a very small sum.

> I am told that the amount included in the committee's amendment will not take care of any new construction, and that the provision in the bill which provides that one-third, or not less than $3,000,000, made for each fiscal year for the carrying out of the provisions of section 23 will authorize new construction and open up new country in the national forests, which is very vital to the development of the West. It is vital to the resources of the national forests. It is vital to the transportation needs of the people of the communities that are dependent upon forest roads that the provisions of the bill remain intact and the committee amendment be not

> Mr. Chairman, I urge that the Members vote for the bill in its present form and vote down the committee amendment, because the provisions of this bill were drafted after careful consideration of the recommendations of the Bureau of Public Roads and the Forest Service. Opening of forest areas and development of reserves in the national forest is one of the most important things to aid business recovery. This means more than may be imagined. We should open up and utilize the resources of the national forests, and I refer particularly to the mineral resources contained in areas that are now barred from transportation, locked up as it were. We need every dollar that has been authorized in this bill for the utilization of these resources. Let me point out to you that durable goods and heavy machinery, including diesel engines and diesel fuel oil, will move into that country in large quantities with the improvement of these forest roads and trails. There will be an increase in the employment of labor. There has not been an item of appropriation considered by the House that means more to the recovery of that country than does this item which has to do with forest roads and trails. I, therefore, urge the membership to vote down the amendment and permit the opening of that country through this small appropriation of $3,000,000 annually.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Chairman, I rise in favor of the committee amendment.

Mr. Chairman, the distinguished gentleman from Idaho [Mr. White], my good friend, unwittingly, but, nevertheless, very accurately, stated that this committee amendment was well considered. Therefore, Mr. Chairman, I insist that the committee amendment be adopted.

There are 3,000,000 miles of roads in the United States. Less than 1,000,000 miles have been improved. Nearly onehalf, or, to be accurate, according to the statements made before our committee, 49 percent, of the forest highways dealt with in this item have been improved. The forest highways have been most generously provided for during the emergency legislation. The committee recommends that the authorization be reduced to $10,000,000. That is the amount contained in the authorization now in force and that has been in force during the past 2 years. That is the relative figure, and I ask that the committee amendment be adopted.

Mr. WHITE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WHITTINGTON. I yield to the gentleman from Idaho.

Mr. WHITE. The gentleman quoted me as saying that I stated previously this amendment was well considered. My statement was that the provisions of the original bill were well considered by the Director of the Bureau.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. I made the observation that the gentleman unwittingly made a correct statement. I know he did not mean it.

Mr. WHITE. I think, if the gentleman will inspect the RECORD, he will find that I said the provisions of the bill were well considered.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. The Director of the Bureau of Roads had nothing to do with this recommendation. That recommendation was from the Forest Service, and the bill was introduced by the chairman of the committee.

Mr. WHITE. Is it the gentleman's contention that representatives of the Bureau of Roads did not appear before the committee and give testimony?

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Of course, they did; but those officials did not undertake to tell the committee what the committee should do as to amount. All bureaus want everything they can get, and this includes the Forest Service; but your committee thought in fairness to the people of the country and all the States that this authorization should be reduced.

Mr. Chairman, I insist upon the adoption of the amendment.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the committee amendment.

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment: Page 4, line 13, strike out "$15,000,000" and insert "$10,000,000."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment: Page 4, line 14, after "1939", strike out the colon and the proviso down to the end of line 19.

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 3. For the purpose of carrying out the provisions of section 3 of the Federal Highway Act of 1921, as amended June 24, 1930 (46 Stat. 805), there is hereby authorized to be appropriated for the survey, construction, reconstruction, and maintenance of main roads through unappropriated or unreserved public lands, nontaxable Indian lands, or other Federal reservations other than the forest reservations, the sum of $2,500,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1938, and the sum of $2,500,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, to remain available until expended. expended.

expended.

SEC. 4. For the construction, reconstruction, and improvement of roads and trails, inclusive of necessary bridges, in the national parks, monuments, and other areas administered by the National Park Service, including areas authorized to be established as national parks and monuments, and national park and monument approach roads authorized by the act of January 31, 1931 (46 Stat. 1053), as amended, there is hereby authorized to be appropriated the sum of $7,500,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1938, and the sum of $7,500,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939.

SEC. 5. For the construction and maintenance of parkways, to SEC. 5. For the construction and maintenance of parkways, to give access to national parks, or to become connecting sections of a national parkway plan, over lands to which title has been transferred to the United States by the States or by private individuals, there is hereby authorized to be appropriated the sum of $7,500,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1938, and the sum of $7,500,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939: Provided, That the location of such parkways upon public lands, national forests, or other Federal reservations shall be determined by agreement between the department having jurisdiction over such lands and the National Park Service.

With the following committee amendment:

Beginning in line 17 on page 5 and ending in line 3, page 6, strike out all of the section \bar{b} .

The committee amendment was agreed to. The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 6. For construction and improvement of Indian reservation roads under the provisions of the act approved May 26, 1928 (45 Stat. 750), there is hereby authorized to be appropriated the sum of $4,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1938, and the sum of $4,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939.

With the following committee amendment:

Beginning on line 4, page 6, strike out all of section 6.

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 7. In addition to any other authorizations which have been made, there is hereby authorized to be appropriated to the several States, to be apportioned and expended under the provisions of the Federal Highway Act of 1921, as amended and supplemented: The sum of $25,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939; the sum of $25,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939; Provided, That the sums herein authorized shall be applied to secondary or feeder roads, including farm-to-market roads, rural free delivery mail roads, and public-school bus routes.

With the following committee amendment:

On page 6, line 10, strike out "7" and insert "5", and at the end of line 19 insert a colon and the following: "Provided further, That there shall be established in the Bureau of Public Roads a section of rural roads, subject to the direction of the Chief of the Bureau of Public Roads."

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word for the purpose of asking the chairman or a member of the committee a question regarding the section of rural roads which is provided for in this section. What consideration did the committee give to the functions that should be performed by this body?

Mr. CARTWRIGHT. I will ask the gentleman from Ohio

[Mr. Secrest] to answer that question.

Mr. SECREST. The Bureau of Public Roads for the past year has been conducting various surveys. Some States have not yet started the work, while others have practically finished such surveys with respect to rural roads in order to determine the number of houses on each mile of such roads in each county, and also to determine the traffic that goes over each one of these rural roads, trying to set up a method whereby they can intelligently approach the rural-roads problem and looking at it as a 10- or 15- or 20-year program.

Mr. WILLIAMS. And this provides, as I understand it, for aid to farm-to-market roads, or the ordinary rural roads?

Mr. SECREST. That is right. The section provides that there shall be three or four engineers, or perhaps a group of them, now employed by the Bureau of Public Roads set aside in a separate section to handle farm-to-market road problems. The township trustees of any township, the road supervisors of any county, the county commissioners of any county, and the 50,000 mail carriers in the United States can then write to this one place for information, and this one group will be designated to do nothing else.

Mr. WILLIAMS. The main thing I have in mind is whether or not this particular body set up here in connection with the public roads would have the say-so as to the location of these farm-to-market roads.

Mr. SECREST. They would not. They would have an influence only in approving them, but no more say-so than there is now in the Bureau.

Mr. WILLIAMS. The county court or the State, as the case may be, or the appropriate local authority would locate the road.

Mr. SECREST. That is right.
Mr. WILLIAMS. That is the main thing I was inter-

Mr. SECREST. This provision has nothing to do with that whatever.

Mr. GREEN. And the State road department would retain its authority, and the matter would be handled just as other Federal funds are handled.

Mr. SECREST. That is right.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman vield?

Mr. WILLIAMS. I yield.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. I should like to call the gentleman's attention to the fact that this proviso stipulates that a section devoted to the study of rural roads shall be established in the Bureau of Public Roads, and shall be under their supervision.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Yes.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. It is my personal view that there is no occasion for this proviso, but our colleague the gentleman from Ohio proposed it, and inasmuch as under existing law, I think, the Bureau would have authority to establish such a section or division, there is no objection to it.

I may say to the gentleman from Missouri, if he will pardon me for detaining him further in his own time, there are at present divisions of design, construction, bridges, highway laws and contracts, control, information, tests, highway transport, and management. These divisions were set up without legislative authorization under the highway act, and I think this provision for future studies, with respect to secondary roads, is in order, and I may say that this was the view of the committee.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I can see no objection to the provision, | provided they do not assume authority to go down into a locality where they are establishing a farm-to-market road and say, "You have got to build it here", regardless of what the local authorities may think about it.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. May I say to the gentleman that under our Federal aid for highways legislation the location of all highways and grade crossings must be initiated by the State and local authorities, and I favor this principle and think it should be preserved.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. DEROUEN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words in order to ask the gentleman a question.

I am wondering if the gentleman can tell us whether this language will necessitate the employment of additional employees or whether the establishment of this section on rural roads will cost the Government more money?

Mr. WHITTINGTON. It will not, and it was so stated in the argument on the bill in chief.

Mr. DEROUEN. Could they not do this without the authority contained in this proviso?

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Undoubtedly, and I have so stated. Mr. MITCHELL of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the pro-forma amendment, and I do this for the purpose of asking the chairman of the committee a

Referring to section 5 of the bill, can the committee give me definite figures as to what amount would be allocated to Tennessee for farm-to-market roads?

Mr. CARTWRIGHT. I may say to the gentleman that we have a break-down of that here, and the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. Whittington] will tell the gentleman what Tennessee gets. They get plenty.

Mr. MITCHELL of Tennessee. I am interested in seeing that they do.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Chairman, I may state in response to the inquiry of the gentleman from Tennessee that I shall insert a table in the RECORD showing not only what Tennessee will receive but the amount that all the States in the Union will receive.

Mr. MITCHELL of Tennessee. And this is allocated under a definite program?

Mr. WHITTINGTON. There is a definite yardstick set up under the Federal Highway Act and all States are treated

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the committee amendment.

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 8. For the elimination of hazards to life at railroad grade crossings, including the separation or protection of grades at crosscrossings, including the separation or protection of grades at crossings, the reconstruction of existing railroad grade-crossing structures, and the relocation of highways to eliminate grade crossings, there is hereby authorized to be appropriated, to be apportioned on or before the 1st day of January of each year preceding the fiscal year for which it is authorized among the several States (including the Territory of Hawaii and the District of Columbia) in accordance with the provisions of the Federal Highway Act of 1921, as amonded and supplemental ascent that such apportionment shall. amended and supplemented, except that such apportionment shall be one-half on population as shown by the latest decennial census, one-fourth on the mileage of the Federal-aid highway system as determined by the Secretary of Agriculture, and one-fourth on the railroad mileage as determined by the Interstate Commerce Commission, and to be expended in accordance with said Federal Highway Act, as amended and supplemented, except that no part of such funds apportioned to any State need be matched by the State: The sum of $50,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1938; the sum of $50,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939.

With the following committee amendment:

Page 6, line 23, strike out the figure "8" and insert the figure "6."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

Mr. GREEN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I understand the funds in the bill would allow about as much money for road purposes this year as was allowed last year.

Mr. CARTWRIGHT. Yes.

Mr. GREEN. The rural farm market roads provision is new in this bill.

Mr. CARTWRIGHT. In a way we have always got it under an emergency amendment. This is new inasmuch as the rural farm market roads are now recognized in the regular bill.

Mr. GREEN. In passing this bill our plan is to go back to the old method of authorizing Federal road funds and do away with the emergency funds that we have been using.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. This is a continuation of the aid which we have been giving in the past.

Mr. GREEN. Except for the past 3 years we have used some emergency fund, and now you revert to our established method of appropriation and allocation. Will there be any change in the distribution?

Mr. CARTWRIGHT. No.

Mr. GREEN. Public funds spent for roads represents one of the very best investments made by the Government. Mr. CARTWRIGHT. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

After section 6, page 7, line 19, insert a new section, as follows:

"Sec. 7. Every contract for the construction or repair of any highway growing out of an appropriation of Federal funds made under this act, heretofore made or hereafter to be made, shall contain a provision that in the performance of the work the contractor, subcontractors, materialmen, or suppliers shall use only such unmanufactured articles, materials, and supplies as have been mined or produced in the United States, and only such manufactured articles, materials, and supplies as have been manufactured in the United States substantially all from articles, materials, or supplies mined, produced, or manufactured, as the case may be, in the United States. The fact that articles, materials, or supplies have been produced or manufactured in this country from articles, materials, or supplies which have been imported into this country shall not make them eligible for use in the performance of any such contract. This section shall not apply to articles, materials, or supplies which are not mined, produced, or manufactured, as the case may be, in the United States in sufficient and reasonably available commercial quantities and of a satisfactory quality: Provided, however, That before the use of any such imported articles, materials, or supplies is authorized under any contract the head of the department or the independent establishment making a contract for such imported supplies shall give public notice that such an exemption is being contemplated, and after due opportunity has been given for domestic suppliers of such articles, materials, or supplies to be heard, a public record shall be made of the findings which justify such exception."

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of After section 6, page 7, line 19, insert a new section, as follows:

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order against the amendment that it is not germane to the bill nor to any section of the bill. The bill is formulated upon the theory that the Federal Government, as a Federal matter, is interested in national highway construction and in the maintenance of the system. The proposed amendment, I may say parenthetically, was offered by the distinguished chairman of the committee, considered by the committee, and rejected. The amendment is for the benefit of certain oil producers in the United States. It undertakes to deal with the question of materials and whether foreign or domestic shall be used. This bill has nothing to do with materials. The provisions of the bill are limited to the matter of Federal financing of highway construction. I make the point of order that the amendment is wholly foreign and not germane to the bill or any part of it.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Oklahoma desire to be heard on the point of order?

Mr. CARTWRIGHT. Mr. Chairman, I wanted to get that before the Committee of the Whole. If it is not in order. I ask for a ruling.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I desire to be heard on the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Michigan is recognized.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I believe the amendment is in order, inasmuch as this is a bill to amend the Federal act as approved July 11, 1916. In that act and acts amendatory thereto we provide that this allotment of funds may be made under certain conditions, under regulations promulgated by the Department of Agriculture, and this amendment merely writes into the law certain restrictions and certain regulations which the Secretary of Agriculture is now authorized under the general law to do at the present time. Surely, if we have the authority to give the Secretary of Agriculture power to regulate the disbursements, we have the authority to write into the act the conditions under which this money shall be distributed, and for that reason I think it is germane.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Chairman, I may say in response that the pending legislation does not undertake in any manner to amend or to alter any part of previous highway legislation with respect to the power and authority of the Secretary of Agriculture or the Director of the Bureau of Roads, to promulgate any necessary regulations, and in this connection I remind the Chair that Congress a few years ago passed substantive legislation providing for the use, as far as Congress intended to go, of domestic materials in manufactures or Government expenditures. This amendment has no place in this bill, it is not germane to the bill, and it is not germane to any section of the original highway act brought forward and amended in the bill. It is in no sense a limitation, as it in nowise contemplates any reduction whatsoever in the authorization or the appropriation.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, this is merely a limitation. We have the authority to and do frequently limit the use to which appropriations are put, and in this particular are merely providing a limitation under which the money authorized under this act shall be expended.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Chairman, I believe this amendment is entirely germane, because the bill itself is an amendment to the Federal Highway Act of 1916, and that act specifies the terms and conditions under which Federal allotments shall be given to the States. The amendment of the gentleman from Oklahoma under consideration merely adds another term or condition to those allotments. I believe it is germane.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair rules that the amendment is not germane to the bill, and, therefore, is out of order. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 9. With the approval of the Secretary of Agriculture, not to exceed 1½ percent of the amount apportioned for any year to any State under sections 1, 7, and 8 of this act may be used for surveys, plans, engineering, and economic investigations of projects for future construction in such State, either on the Federal-aid highway system and extensions thereof or on secondary or feeder roads.

With the following committee amendment:

Page 7, line 20, strike out the figure "9" and insert "7", and in line 22, strike out the figures "1", "7", and "8" and insert in lieu thereof the figures "1", "5", and "6."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the committee amendment.

The committee amendment was agreed to.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to include in the extension of my remarks a table showing the number of grade-crossing eliminations which have been made under the $200,000,000 under the Relief and Emergency Acts for railway and highway crossings.

Mr. CARTWRIGHT. Mr. Chairman, I have already inserted that in my remarks and it will not be necessary.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Very well, I withdraw my request.

Mr. COLE of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word for the purpose of asking a question. In section 1 (a) of this bill, as I understand, all Federal-aid money must be expended within 1 year from June 30; that is, the fiscal year for which it is appropriated, and I ask some member of the committee to answer that question.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. If I may be permitted, it does not have to be spent in the 1 year. Subparagraph (a) provides that the funds must be matched in 1 year from the expiration of the fiscal year. Congress appropriates funds for the current year. That year will expire June 30. The State of Maryland will have 1 year thereafter within which to match these funds.

Mr. COLE of Maryland. In the case of my own State, it is a matter of common knowledge that money available under the Federal Highway Act for the past year has not been expended as it should have been. Roads are not being built. Under this provision, as I interpret it, I am wondering if, because of the failure of the State Commission of Maryland, for instance, to use this money and expedite the road program which has been approved in Washington months ago, that money will revert to the Treasury and be reapportioned as the act provides, and the State of Maryland will lose money by it?

Mr. WHITTINGTON. The gentleman is correct. If the State of Maryland, or any other State, fails to comply and match the Federal aid, it reverts to the Treasury and is distributed among all the other States of the Union. That is a penalty. That provision has obtained in all Federal highway legislation. The limitation at one time was 2 years, but, in order to do just what the gentleman has in mind, Congress in recent years provided that the limitation should be 1 year instead of 2 years which previously obtained.

Mr. COLE of Maryland. I can say that if in every State of this Union there was the laxity in meeting the Federal program that there is in my own State at the present time, I have little doubt there would be some mandatory provision in this legislation to compel the more expeditious expenditure of the money. For instance, in Maryland, we have this situation today. Although Congress, almost 1 year ago, made available for the elimination of grade crossings, as an outright gift to the States, $200,000,000, with a total allocation to Maryland of $1,025,870, not one single dollar of that money is under contract today. Of the $200,000,000 additional funds available for other road construction, $1,296,000 is now available to Maryland, but not a single dollar of it is under contract.

In the case of the annual Federal-aid funds of $125,000,000 per year, which law has been in effect for some time, and Maryland's proportionate share thereof being available in June 1935, which fund must be matched, and I understand has been matched and the money is now available in the State treasury, more than $1,000,000 of that money is not under contract. This makes a total of $3,945,000 available to the State of Maryland for grade-crossing elimination and other road-construction work of every kind for more than 1 year and not under contract today. This is totally inexcusable, in my judgment. It is easy for one to appreciate what the use of this money at the present time, or, in fact, for some time past, would have meant to unemployment and elimination of some of the disgraceful road conditions now existing in my State. I hope, in view of what the gentleman from Mississippi has said, he being a prominent member of the Roads Committee of the House, that the State Road Commission of Maryland will take to heart the inexcusable conditions now existing and realize that immediate action is demanded on their part to put into early operation every dollar now available for grade-crossing and highway-construction work in Maryland.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. There is a mandatory provision in the act. If any State diverts the gasoline funds to other purposes, that State forfeits one-third of its Federal-aid money.

Mr. COLE of Maryland. I mean in more definite terms than this bill provides.

The pro-forma amendment was withdrawn.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the rule the Committee will now rise.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. Scrugham, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill H. R. 11687, pursuant to House Resolution 484, he reported the same back to the House with sundry amendments adopted in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. Under the rule the previous question is ordered.

Is a separate vote demanded upon any amendment? If not, the Chair will put them en gros.

The amendments were agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the passage of the

The bill was passed.

On motion by Mr. Cartwright, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS-H. R. 11687

THE DEVELOPMENT AND IMPROVEMENT OF FARM-TO-MARKET AND RURAL POST ROADS AND SCHOOL-BUS ROUTES SHOULD BE A MAJOR PART OF PRESENT AND FUTURE STATE AND FEDERAL HIGHWAY PROGRAMS

Mr. BUCKLER of Minnesota. Mr. Speaker, without minimizing the importance of continuing the primary or trunk highway program it can be said with all truth that the phase of highway improvement that is attracting greatest interest today is that of farm-to-market road development.

This country needs more farm-to-market and better schoolbus and rural post roads. The passage of H. R. 11681, known as the Cartwright roads measure, will be a great step in the right direction and a great advance for better rural and country roads.

The highest authority that I can give as an indication that this subject is commanding the attention of America's foremost highway officials is to quote from an address delivered by Mr. A. W. Brandt, commissioner of highways of New York and immediate past president of the American Association of State Highway Officials, when he spoke at the last annual convention of the association at Miami, Fla., in December. Mr. Brandt said, in part:

Most of the States in the past have had a large majority of the motor-vehicle and gas-tax revenues for use on their State highway systems. The demand in many States is becoming more and more insistent that a certain definite percentage of these funds be allocated to the towns and counties for farm-to-market roads and to the cities not only for main arterial streets but for residential streets as well.

What should the attitude of the highway administrator be toward such proposals? Should he oppose them? I think not. He will only be butting his head against the proverbial stone wall. Rather than fight such proposals, we should take the lead in preparing the necessary legislation whereby the highway departments of the country, comprised, as they are, of the best-informed engineers and economists, will either construct farm-to-market roads and city streets or see to it that the money is spent in an efficient and economical manner. We are and should be leaders in not only highway construction but in highway economics and highway thought. City streets and farm-to-market roads are just as much arteries of transportation as are State highways, and the highway engineer should be as much interested in their proper and economical development and construction as he is in main State trunk lines. My advice to every highway administrator, therefore, is not to fight the inevitable, but to carefully work out the proper type of legislation for his particular State and work it out in such a way that he will have a great deal to do with its administration.

Naturally farmers are strongly in favor of improvement of the roads that connect them with their markets. County officials, for many years, have carried the burden of trying to improve farm roads, but their efforts have not been organized, and the results have been insufficient from a national standpoint. However, the demand for improvement of these roads has been so insistent that today we have the highest authorities in the highway world taking recognition of the fact that farm-to-market roads must be improved, as is evidenced by the above excerpt quoted from Mr. Brandt's recent address.

For purposes of getting the proper perspective of the task that lies ahead of those who are conducting the fight for improvement of farm-to-market roads, let us look at highway figures that bear directly upon this subject:

Rural highways in America—that is, highways outside of municipalities—total 3,065,000 miles. Of this total, approximately 423,000 miles are on the Federal and State systems.

Of the remaining approximately 2,646,000 miles of highways, 464,000 miles have been improved to some extent.

This leaves 2,000,000 miles of what are properly called "mud roads"—roads that are passable under favorable weather conditions, but which are virtually impassable for a considerable portion of each year.

More than 4,000,000 farms are located on these unimproved roads, which provide the only means of communication, and transportation of crops from farm to market.

It is readily apparent from these figures that most American farms still are on mud roads. Keep in mind that this tremendous road mileage has never received any improvement other than that provided through primitive methods, such as hand shovels, hand scrapes, and such drainage as is provided by these and machinery of the type that is used in farm work. It is an alarming thing to consider that the marvelous, efficient highway machinery that is so well known on America's trunk highway system is almost entirely unknown to more than 2,000,000 miles of roads in this country.

Figures obtained by me from the National Rural Letter Carriers' Association and the American Road Builders' Association disclose that 43,000 mail carriers each weekday use 1,250,000 miles of roads for the delivery of mail to 30,000,000 rural population; that the average route traveled by these carriers is 37.9 miles, of which the average mileage of hard surface is 7.5; that the average mileage of improved roads is 12; and the average mileage of mud roads is 18.4 miles.

In other words, America's rural mail carriers, like America's farmers, are more in the mud than out, from the standpoint of roads.

Reports made by these carriers list mud as the greatest single obstacle to travel, with the allied obstacles of snow, rutted roads, and bad drainage.

It is a fact that farmers and rural mail carriers today are paying the greatest penalty for delay in improving farm-to-market roads. This penalty, of course, is extended to rural school children. The drivers of 60,000 school busses that carry 2,000,000 pupils to rural schools could tell an amazing story of the handicaps suffered by those who must traverse mud roads to these schools—a report that would be confirmed by rural school teachers throughout America. A mere recitation of these discouraging statistics will get us nowhere unless it permits us to do our utmost to get the farmer and his family out of the mud. The question is, How can we do it with greatest speed and greatest efficiency?

Fortunately, in approaching this great task we are not without guidance. The United States Bureau of Public Roads and its allied organizations, the various State highway departments, and so forth, are conducting surveys that ought to make it easy to obtain a quick start in improving these roads when appropriate financial provision has been made. Also, the Works Progress Administration is in a position to supply information of great value in drafting a permanent program for farm-to-market roads.

Without going into the merits or demerits of the Works Progress Administration's operations in general, I am certain that all informed Americans can agree that the W. P. A. has performed a worthy task within recent months in connection with this farm-to-market road program. Thousands of miles of rural roads that heretofore never have received any organized improvement have been benefited through work carried on by the Works Progress Administration in every State. Thousands of farmers thus have received a taste of what improved roads mean, and it is a certainty that these farmers, along with thousands who have not yet received any such benefits, will never be content to be left out of consideration as highway programs are drafted.

The exact procedure under which farm-to-market road development can be financed is something that must be determined by highway officials and legislators, State and national. Opinion on this subject appears to be divided principally into two schools of thought. One is that the present set-up of Federal and State highway organizations should be permitted to extend operations to farm-to-market roads on a basis of gradual expansion. The other is that this work can be expedited most satisfactorily by extending Federal aid to counties and permitting county officials to conduct their own highway programs, subject, of course, to supervision by Federal highway officials. I shall not attempt to express an opinion relative to the merits of these proposals at present, but I do think it timely to say to State highway officials that unless they expand their programs more speedily than has developed to date, the demand for farm-to-market road improvement will move swiftly in another direction and undoubtedly counties will make progress in obtaining Federal highway aid. If this appears to be a rash statement, then let me ask that you take another look at the quotation from Mr. Brandt's speech, and you will see that he said virtually as much.

Getting away from the controversial phases of farm-tomarket road development, I now want to emphasize some of the reasons why rural-road improvement must not and will not be delayed longer than is necessary to provide the proper financial support.

Social welfare of the rural communities has always been hindered by lack of transportation and communication.

Relatively small amounts of money, properly spent on farm-to-market roads, will provide means of communication for communities that, due to lack of roads up to this time, have been impeded in their natural, social, and communal development.

Farm-to-market road systems coordinate with and extend the State and Federal systems, thus completing a highway transportation system which provides a means of bettering the social and commercial life of the rural sections.

The farm-to-market roads furnish facilities not heretofore provided for the development of educational advantages, as has been demonstrated in the few localities that enjoy these roads at the present time.

Improved farm-to-market roads mean improved rural mail service. Where there has been an improvement in the roads there has always followed a corresponding improvement in mail service, which has resulted in quicker mail delivery and a more economic operation, both for the mail carrier and the United States Government, under all weather conditions.

There are approximately 5,000,000 motor vehicles owned by farmers who are not now enjoying the advantages of improved roads, and who are compelled to endure the handicap of marketing crops when the weather permits, regardless of price range or glutted markets.

The poor condition of the farm-to-market roads further penalizes the farmer by compelling him to endure additional operating expense for his vehicle.

Prosperity follows improved roads, as is evidenced by the fact that there are fewer automobiles owned by the farmers on dirt roads than by those on improved roads.

The farmers on improved roads are able to haul full loads on twice as many days during the year as those who reside on the unimproved roads.

The improvement of rural roads will increase the value of farm lands. It will raise community standards and remove the isolation in the agricultural areas.

Improved rural roads will make possible fire protection and medical attention in rural areas.

Money used in highway construction is an investment, and returns higher dividends than any other form of public construction.

The farmers in my congressional district—the Ninthwhich consists of 15 counties in northwestern Minnesota, want better farm-to-market, rural post, and bus-route roads. As their Representative in the National Congress, I am glad to support and vote for this Cartwright-Hayden bill, which provides for increased additional rural roads in Minnesota and the Nation.

FEDERAL DEPOSIT INSURANCE CORPORATION

Mr. FORD of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks on House Resolution 485.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered. There was no objection.

Mr. FORD of California. Mr. Speaker, I am going to vote for House Resolution 485 because I believe that the F. D. I. C. is one of the greatest pieces of banking legislation that this House has passed and that the clause which we are extending for 2 years has added to its effectiveness. I want to make this observation: Every argument that is made here advocating the extension of this provision of the law is valid in support of the proposition for making that provision

The thing that troubles me most is that the expiration date arrives at a time when Congress is not in session. That, I am convinced, is unwise and dangerous.

Suppose, for argument's sake, that a crop failure occurred in some region or section dependent, let us say, on wheat, or cotton, or corn.

Farmers in debt to banks find themselves unable to meet their notes. The banks are forced to call the notes. Failure to collect would bring about a crisis. The provision authorizing the F. D. I. C. to meet this situation having expired, these banks would be permitted to fail, with tremendous loss to the stockholders-unnecessary loss at that-and some loss to depositors whose accounts were in excess of $5,000.

The contingency that this provision was designed to meet may arise any time. I am merely making this statement to keep the record clear.

INTERIOR DEPARTMENT APPROPRIATION BILL, 1937-CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado, from the Committee on Appropriations, submitted a conference report on the bill (H. R. 10630, Rept. No. 1927) making appropriations for the Department of the Interior for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1937, and for other purposes.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 2 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, today is really a historic day in the Department of the Interior. The President of the United States, Cabinet officials, and many other distinguished officials and representatives of a large number of foreign governments and many thousands of citizens were present at the dedication of the wonderful new Interior Department Building. Upon that occasion the President of the United States and the Secretary of the Interior delivered most eloquent, patriotic, and inspiring addresses. I feel that those addresses are historic documents. With the express permission of both the President and the Secretary of the Interior, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks by inserting in the RECORD those two addresses.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Colorado?

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, those speeches have already been inserted in the RECORD. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. MAVERICK] inserted them.

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Very well; if they have already been inserted in the RECORD, I, of course, do not want to insert them again.

INSPECTION OF STEAMBOATS AT MILWAUKEE, WIS.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 5 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Speaker, in going over the daily paper from my city I came across an item today that greatly aroused my interest. This item was headed:

Boats delayed at port of Milwaukee because not enough inspectors were available in the Steamboat Inspection Service to inspect all boats that will put out in the next few days as the result of the breaking up of the ice.

My first impulse was to "cuss out" the Department of Commerce because they were tying up in the port of Milwaukee nearly 50 vessels and thereby endangering the investment of the owners of those vessels, endangering the jobs and wages as well as lives of scores of seamen and other persons who work on those vessels when they cruise the Great Lakes.

We have heard a great deal about the Steamboat Inspection Service, particularly because of the disasters to the Morro Castle and the Mohawk. I represent a city that I say is one of the greatest ports on the Great Lakes; and when we get the St. Lawrence waterway it will probably be one of the greatest ports in the world. Incidentally, we are going to get the St. Lawrence waterway under a Democratic administration, since our great President will, I am sure, submit the question to the Senate again.

The newspaper article on the Steamboat Inspection Service at Milwaukee says this:

The situation, as explained by Abraham Auld, inspector of boilers, and Capt. Henry Erichsen, inspector of hulls, is this:

Thirty-seven freighters, mostly coal carriers, are prepared to leave port as soon as the ice breaks up, which will be within a week or 10 days. Another 15, general merchandise haulers, are also set for sailing. But until the Government inspection is completed they remain in port.

"And with our present inadequate force the inspections cannot be completed for at least another month", Capt. Erichsen said.

The Bureau force now consists of Auld, Erichsen, two assistant inspectors of hulls, an assistant inspector of boilers, and a temporary assistant. They can complete two inspections every 3 days.

This means it will take the present force nearly a month to complete the inspections of ships now ready to leave our port for various ports on the Great Lakes. The representative of the Steamboat Inspection Service goes on to say that the Department needs at least four assistants in each division.

We do not want any Morro Castle or Mohawk disaster on the Great Lakes, but it is perfectly conceivable that if this small force of inspectors have to rush the work-and there are thousands of dollars of tonnage tied up by any delaythat the work is not going to be well done; and it is also conceivable that some of these boats may put on the Lakes without proper inspection. I hope this will not occur and that no disastrous accidents will be charged up against our Great Lakes safety record.

In going over the Department of Commerce appropriation bill I find that the head of the Steamboat Inspection Service brought to the attention of the Appropriations Committee the total inadequacy of his force.

The Appropriations Committee raised the amount for traveling inspectors by some $22,000. This will provide for only eight more inspectors over the entire country. Right in Milwaukee, only one of the Great Lakes ports, we need four inspectors to get these ships out on the Lakes at a time when profits can be made from operating them. I hope the other body, in considering the Department of Commerce appropriation bill, will take into consideration the plea of the Steamboat Inspection Service for adequate personnel as provided in the House bill. It is costing my district and other Great Lakes ports thousands of dollars because boats are delayed awaiting inspection. To cut down the appropriation is to be penny-wise and pound-foolish; it is to charge the Department of Commerce with inspecting these boats and then not give them sufficient personnel to make the inspection.

Mrs. KAHN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. O'MALLEY. I yield.

Mrs. KAHN. Had the gentleman been present during the discussion of the appropriation bill for the Department of Commerce and listened to the very illuminating speech made by the gentleman from New York [Mr. Bacon] on this very subject and then noticed the item in the appropriation bill for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1936, I think he would have found that a very substantial increase was made to take care of additional personnel in this Service.

Mr. O'MALLEY. I may say to the gentlewoman from California that all I can read is the completed bill and the committee report, in which I find $22,000 of increased appropriation. This is the amount for additional traveling inspectors. I am hoping they will travel to Milwaukee and get these boats out on the Lakes in time for the early shipping business of the season.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 2 additional minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin?

There was no objection.

Mrs. KAHN. If the gentleman will yield further, he will find in the additional report that several new inspectors were provided for.

Mr. O'MALLEY. How many more?

Mrs. KAHN. I do not remember the exact number, but I will try to get it for the gentleman.

Mr. O'MALLEY. I hope they will travel to my city and get our boats out of port so the owners and seamen can make some money this year. The new inspectors will not be available this year in any event, but a deficiency bill item would help solve our problem.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'MALLEY. Yes.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. I simply want to observe that on Tuesday two bus loads of seamen who have received medals for heroic service at sea will call on the Secretary of Commerce to give him some first-hand information on the so-called safety at sea about which we hear so much.

Mr. O'MALLEY. I know there are operating on our Great Lakes today some boats that are not fit for operation. I know further that it is impossible for the owners and the seamen of the seaworthy boats to get employment unless they can get the boats inspected and out of the port of Milwaukee.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. O'MALLEY. I yield.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Is not the gentleman's difficulty, and that of his constituents, due to an unusual situation arising from the fact of the exceptionally severe weather conditions that have prevailed, the ice-locked condition of the Lakes?

Mr. O'MALLEY. The situation in the port of Milwaukee is the same as it is in all ports of the Great Lakes; inspections must be made just as soon as there is knowledge when the Lakes are going to be open for transportation. and they know fairly accurately for a month in advance when the ice will go out.

The Weather Bureau is pretty good at predicting the day. Mr. BANKHEAD. Has the gentleman taken this matter up with the Department of Commerce?

Mr. O'MALLEY. I have addressed the Department a letter about the matter, seeking the temporary services of additional inspectors for the coming weeks, and I hope the Department will take some recognition of the matter and send traveling inspectors in there. Ours is a seasonal port, and it would seem logical that extra help could be assigned for the opening of each shipping season.

RELIEF OF UNEMPLOYMENT

Mr. SCRUGHAM. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill (H. R. 12245) to amend the act entitled "An act for the relief of unemployment through the performance of useful public work, and for other purposes", approved March 31, 1933, be rereferred from the Committee on Labor to the Committee on Mines and Mining. This action has the approval of the chairman of both committees.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Nevada?

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, has the chairman of the Labor Committee been consulted?

Mr. SCRUGHAM. Yes. It was at his suggestion that I make this request.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Nevada?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mrs. KAHN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for one-half minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from California?

There was no objection.

Mrs. KAHN. Mr. Speaker, I should like to state to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. O'MALLEY] that in order to be perfectly sure I just went over to the Appropriation Committee room and I find that $167,000 has been added to the appropriation in this bill and earmarked, which will give between 40 and 50 additional inspectors and assistant inspectors.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Does the gentlewoman know whether those additional inspectors will be made available right now? Mrs. KAHN. This applies to the beginning of the next fiscal year. Mr. O'MALLEY. I know, but it will not have any effect on this year's business.

Mrs. KAHN. Retroactive legislation cannot be had in an appropriation bill.

Mr. O'MALLEY. But perhaps additional help could be taken care of in the next deficiency bill to provide for extra help used this year.

[Here the gavel fell.]

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. Shanley, for 1 day, on account of important business.

To Mr. Seger (at the request of Mr. Cavicchia), indefinitely, on account of the death of his wife.

To Mr. Farley, for 5 days, on account of important business

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED

Mr. PARSONS, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that that committee had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the House of the following titles, which were thereupon signed by the Speaker:

H. R. 6544. An act to conserve the water resources and to encourage reforestation of the watersheds of Santa Barbara County, Calif., by the withdrawal of certain public lands included within the Santa Barbara National Forest, Calif., from location and entry under the mining laws;

H.R. 9997. An act granting a leave of absence to settlers of homestead lands during the year 1936; and

H.R. 11327. An act to exempt from taxation receipts from the operation of Olympic Games if donated to the State of California, the city of Los Angeles, and the county of Los Angeles.

BILLS PRESENTED TO THE PRESIDENT

Mr. PARSONS, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that that committee did on this day present to the President, for his approval, bills of the House of the following titles:

H.R. 3806. An act to establish a commercial airport for the District of Columbia;

H. R. 6544. An act to conserve the water resources and to encourage reforestation of the watersheds of Santa Barbara County, Calif., by the withdrawal of certain public lands included within the Santa Barbara National Forest, Calif., from location and entry under the mining laws;

H. R. 9997. An act granting a leave of absence to settlers of homestead lands during the year 1936;

H. R. 11327. An act to exempt from taxation receipts from the operation of Olympic Games if donated to the State of California, the city of Los Angeles, and the county of Los Angeles:

H. R. 11691. An act making appropriations for the legislative branch of the Government for the fiscal year ending

June 30, 1937, and for other purposes;

H. R. 11968. An act relating to the authority of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to make rehabilitation loans for the repair of damages caused by floods or other catastrophes, and for other purposes;

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 4 o'clock p. m.) the House adjourned until tomorrow, Friday, April 17, 1936, at 12 o'clock noon.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

782. A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting for the consideration of Congress supplemental estimates of appropriations for the fiscal year 1936 in the sum of $60,000, and draft of a proposed provision pertaining to an existing appropriation, for the Department of State (H. Doc. No. 452); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

783. A letter from the Secretary of Commerce, transmitting, pursuant to the provisions of the act of Congress entitled "An act to authorize and provide for the disposition of the state of the Union.

useless papers in the executive departments", approved February 16, 1889, amended March 2, 1895, and June 19, 1934, a list of documents and files of papers which are not needed nor useful in the transaction of the current business of the Department of Commerce; to the Committee on Disposition of Executive Papers.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII,

Mr. COCHRAN: Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures. H. R. 11688. A bill providing for a change in the design of the 50-cent pieces authorized to be coined in commemoration of the one hundredth anniversary of the admission of the State of Arkansas into the Union; with amendment (Rept. No. 2418). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah: Committee on the Public Lands. H. R. 12212. A bill to quiet title and possession with respect to certain lands in Tuscumbia, Ala.; without amendment (Rept. No. 2419). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mrs. NORTON: Committee on the District of Columbia. House Joint Resolution 465. Joint resolution to amend the joint resolution of July 18, 1935, relating to the Seventieth National Encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic, to be held in the District of Columbia in September 1936; with amendment (Rept. No. 2420). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. CARPENTER: Committee on the District of Columbia. S. 3161. An act to amend section 13 (c) of the act entitled "An act to provide for the regulation of motor-vehicle traffic in the District of Columbia, etc", approved March 3, 1925, as amended; without amendment (Rept. No. 2421). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. COCHRAN: Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures. S. 4229. An act to authorize the coinage of 50-cent pieces in commemoration of the one hundredth anniversary of the incorporation of Bridgeport, Conn., as a city; with amendment (Rept. No. 2422). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. COCHRAN: Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures. Senate Joint Resolution 231. Joint resolution to authorize the coinage of 50-cent pieces in commemoration of the three hundredth anniversary of the landing of the Swedes in Delaware; with amendment (Rept. No. 2423). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. COCHRAN: Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures. S. 4335. An act to authorize the coinage of 50-cent pieces in commemoration of the centennial celebration of Cleveland, Ohio, to be known as the Great Lakes Exposition; with amendment (Rept. No. 2424). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. SOMERS of New York: Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures. H. R. 11371. A bill to authorize the coinage of 50-cent pieces in commemoration of the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the borough of Wilkinsburg, Pa.; with amendment (Rept. No. 2425). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. SOMERS of New York: Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures. H. R. 11533. A bill to authorize the coinage of 50-cent pieces in commemoration of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the Battle of Gettysburg; with amendment (Rept. No. 2426). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. SOMERS of New York: Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures. H. R. 11555. A bill to authorize the coinage of 50-cent pieces in commemoration of the one hundredth anniversary of the arrival of Marcus and Narcissa Whitman in the Walla Walla Valley, Wash., and the founding of the Wailatpu Mission; with amendment (Rept. No. 2427). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. SOMERS of New York: Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures. H. R. 12168. A bill to authorize the coinage of 50-cent pieces in commemoration of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the Battle of Antietam; with amendment (Rept. No. 2428). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. SOMERS of New York: Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures. S. 3842. An act to authorize the coinage of 50-cent pieces in commemoration of the one hundredth anniversary of the establishment of the Territorial government of Wisconsin, and to assist in the celebration of the Wisconsin Centennial during the year of 1936; with amendment (Rept. No. 2429). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII,

Mr. TOLAN: Committee on Claims. H. R. 12322. A bill for the relief of sundry claimants, and for other purposes; with amendment (Rept. No. 2416). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland: Committee on Claims. H. R. 12323. A bill for the relief of sundry claimants, and for other purposes; with amendment (Rept. No. 2417). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. BUCK: A bill (H. R. 12324) to amend section 723 (a) of the Revenue Act of 1932, as amended; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. DICKSTEIN: A bill (H. R. 12325) to protect, for American actors, vocal musicians, operatic singers, and orchestral conductors, the artistic and earning opportunities in the United States, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. McSWAIN (by request): A bill (H. R. 12326) for the relief of certain officers on the retired list of the Army, who have been commended for their performance of duty in actual combat with the enemy during the World War; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. BACON: A bill (H. R. 12327) to amend the Tariff Act of 1930; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. BURNHAM: A bill (H. R. 12328) to authorize the acceptance of certain lands in the city of San Diego, Calif., by the United States, and the transfer by the Secretary of the Navy of certain other lands to said city of San Diego; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. DUFFY of New York: A bill (H. R. 12329) to reenact section 259 of the Judicial Code, relating to the traveling and subsistence expenses of circuit and district judges; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. TONRY: A bill (H. R. 12330) relating to personalinjury suits by seamen; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. BLAND: A bill (H. R. 12331) to amend certain of the navigation laws of the United States, to remove inconsistencies and inequalities therein, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. LEWIS of Maryland: A bill (H. R. 12332) to authorize the coinage of 50-cent pieces in commemoration of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the Battle of Antietam; to the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures.

By Mr. McLEOD: A bill (H. R. 12333) to protect witnesses called by committees of the House and Senate to testify and furnish information concerning matters before such committees; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

MEMORIALS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, memorials were presented and referred as follows:

By the SPEAKER: Memorial of the Legislature of the State of South Carolina, expressing faith and confidence in the Honorable J. J. McSwain, Congressman from the Fourth Congressional District; to the Committee on Military Affairs. I zation having as its object the destruction of the American

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland: A bill (H. R. 12322) for the relief of sundry claimants, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 12323) for the relief of sundry claimants, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. BACHARACH: A bill (H. R. 12334) granting a pension to Mary A. M. Lafferty; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 12335) granting an increase of pension to Jennie Wood; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 12336) granting an increase of pension to Mary J. Goodwin; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 12337) granting an increase of pension to Rachel P. Thomas; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions. Also, a bill (H. R. 12338) granting an increase of pension to Amanda L. Dare; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 12339) granting an increase of pension to Cora C. Cheever; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 12340) granting an increase of pension to Eliza Adams; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. COLMER: A bill (H. R. 12341) for the relief of F. W. Elmer; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. GREENWOOD: A bill (H. R. 12342) granting an increase of pension to Elizabeth M. Cox; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. McCORMACK: A bill (H. R. 12343) for the relief of certain property owners within the Old Harbor Village area of Boston, Mass.; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. McMILLAN: A bill (H. R. 12344) for the relief of Benjamin Hume Simons; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. McSWAIN: A bill (H. R. 12345) for the relief of J. Roy Workman; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee: A bill (H. R. 12346) for the relief of Leah Levine; to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 12347) for the relief of William Allen; to the Committee on Military Affairs. Also, a bill (H. R. 12348) granting a pension to Carl D.

Waters; to the Committee on Pensions. Also, a bill (H. R. 12349) granting a pension to Lena M.

Burnett; to the Committee on Pensions. By Mr. TINKHAM: A bill (H. R. 12350) for the relief of John Lopez; to the Committee on Claims.

PETITIONS, ETC. Under clause 1 of rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerks' desk and referred as follows:

10735. By Mr. BEITER: Petition of L. T. Fox, president of the Bison City Lodge, No. 922, Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, urging the enactment of the Wheeler-Crosser bill (S. 4174 and H. R. 11609); to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

10736. Also, petition of T. R. Gibbons, legislative representative of the Bison City Lodge, No. 922, Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, urging the enactment of the Wheeler-Crosser bill (S. 4174 and H. R. 11609); to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

10737. By Mr. CULLEN: Resolution adopted by the New York City Housing Authority, endorsing the Wagner-Ellenbogen housing bill, which will help to improve housing conditions; to the Committee on Appropriations.

10738. By Mr. FITZPATRICK: Petition of the New York City Housing Authority, supporting the Wagner-Ellenbogen bill for the development of decent, safe, and sanitary dwellings for families of low income, and for the reduction of unemployment and the stimulation of business activity; to the Committee on Appropriations.

10739. By Mr. FULMER: Resolution of the House of Representatives, South Carolina Legislature, heartily endorsing the action of Senator REYNOLDS and Congressman STARNES in proposing legislation to the effect that aliens convicted of crime in the United States, aliens belonging to any organi-

Government, and aliens afflicted with certain diseases be deported and returned to the country from which they came; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

SENATE

FRIDAY, APRIL 17, 1936

(Legislative day of Monday, Feb. 24, 1936)

IMPEACHMENT OF HALSTED L. RITTER

The Senate, sitting for the trial of the articles of impeachment against Halsted L. Ritter, judge of the United States District Court for the Southern District of Florida, met at 12 o'clock meridian.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Sergeant at Arms will make proclamation.

The Sergeant at Arms made the usual proclamation.

The respondent, Halsted L. Ritter, with his counsel, Frank P. Walsh, Esq., and Carl T. Hoffman, Esq., appeared in the seats provided for them.

On request of Mr. ASHURST, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the Senate, sitting for the trial of the articles of impeachment, for Thursday, April 16, 1936, was dispensed with, and the Journal was approved.

Mr. ROBINSON. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Connally	Holt	Overton
Ashurst	Coolidge	Johnson	Pittman
Austin	Copeland	Keves	Radcliffe
Bachman	Couzens	King	Revnolds
Bailey	Davis	La Follette	Robinson
Barbour	Dickinson	Lonergan	Russell
Benson	Dieterich	Long	Schwellenbach
Bilbo	Donahey	McAdoo	Sheppard
Black	Duffy	McGill	Shipstead
Bone	Fletcher	McKellar	Smith
Borah	Frazier	McNary	Stelwer
Brown	George	Maloney	Thomas, Okla.
Bulkley	Gerry	Metcalf	Thomas, Utah
Bulow	Gibson	Minton	Townsend
Burke	Glass	Moore	Truman
Byrd	Guffey	Murphy	Vandenberg
Capper	Hale	Murray	Van Nuvs
Caraway	Harrison	Neely	Wagner
Carey	Hastings	Norris	Walsh
Chavez	Hatch	Nye	Wheeler
Clark	Hayden	O'Mahoney	White

Mr. ROBINSON. I announce that the Senator from Alabama [Mr. Bankhead], the Senator from Colorado [Mr. COSTIGAN], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCarran], and the Senator from Florida [Mr. TRAMMELL] are detained from the Senate because of illness.

I further announce that the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. GORE], the senior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY], the junior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Logan], the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. Byrnes], and the Senator from Idaho [Mr. Pope] are unavoidably absent.

The Senator from Colorado [Mr. Costigan] and the Senator from Maryland [Mr. Typings] have been excused from voting on the impeachment articles, having personally in the Senate made the request to be excused and assigned reasons therefor.

I have been asked to announce also that pairs are not recognized in this proceeding.

Mr. DIETERICH. I announce that my colleague the senior Senator from Illinois [Mr. Lewis] is detained on important public business.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Eighty-four Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

Mr. ASHURST. I ask that the Secretary read the order entered yesterday by the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the clerk will read.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Ordered, That upon the final vote in the pending impeachment of Halsted L. Ritter, the Secretary shall read the articles of impeachment separately and successively, and when the reading of each article shall have been concluded the Presiding Officer shall state the questions thereon as follows:

"Senators, how say you? Is the respondent, Halsted L. Ritter,

"Senators, how say you? Is the respondent, Haisted L. Ritter, guilty or not guilty?"

Thereupon the roll of the Senate shall be called, and each Senator as his name is called, unless excused, shall arise in his place and answer "guilty" or "not guilty."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will read the first article of impeachment.

The legislative clerk read article I, as follows:

That the said Halsted L. Ritter, having been nominated by the President of the United States, confirmed by the Senate of the United States, duly qualified and commissioned, and while acting as a United States district judge for the southern district of Florida, was and is guilty of misbehavior and of a high crime and misdemeanor in office in manner and form as follows, to wit: On or about October 11, 1929, A. L. Rankin (who had been a law partner of said judge immediately before said judge's appointment as judge), as solicitor for the plaintiff, filed in the court of the said Judge Ritter a certain foreclosure suit and receivership proceeding, the same being styled "Bert E. Holland et al. v. Whitehall Building & Operating Co. et al." (No. 678-M-Eq.). On or about May 15, 1930, the said Judge Ritter allowed the said Rankin an advance of $2,500 on his fee for his services in said case. On or about July 2, 1930, the said Judge Ritter by letter requested another judge of the United States District Court for the Southern District of Florida, to wit, Hon. Alexander Akerman, to fix and determine the total allowance for the said Rankin for his services in said case for the reason as stated by Judge Ritter in said letter, that the said Rankin had formerly been the law partner of the said Judge Ritter, and he did not feel that he should pass upon the total allowance made said Rankin in that case and that if Judge Akerman would fix the allowance it would relieve the writer, Judge Ritter, from any embarrassment if thereafter any question should arise as to his, Judge Ritter's, favoring said Rankin with an exorbitant fee.

Thereafterward, notwithstanding the said Judge Akerman, in compliance with Judge Ritter's request, allowed the said Rankin a fee of $15,000 for his services in said case, from which sum the said $2,500 theretofore allowed the said Rankin by Judge Ritter as an advance on his fee was deducted, the said Judge Ritter That the said Halsted L. Ritter, having been nominated by the said $2,500 theretofore allowed the said Rankin by Judge Ritter as an advance on his fee was deducted, the said Judge Ritter, well knowing that at his request compensation had been fixed by as an advance on his fee was deducted, the said Judge Ritter, well knowing that at his request compensation had been fixed by Judge Akerman for the said Rankin's services in said case, and notwithstanding the restraint of propriety expressed in his said letter to Judge Akerman, and ignoring the danger of embarrassment mentioned in said letter, did fix an additional and exorbitant fee for the said Rankin in said case. On or about December 24, 1930, when the final decree in said case was signed, the said Judge Ritter allowed the said Rankin, additional to the total allowance of $15,000 theretofore allowed by Judge Akerman, a fee of $75,000 for his services in said case, out of which allowance the said Judge Ritter directly profited. On the same day, December 24, 1930, the receiver in said case paid the said Rankin, as part of his said additional fee, the sum of $25,000, and the said Rankin on the same day privately paid and delivered to the said Judge Ritter the sum of $2,500 in cash; $2,000 of said $2,500 was deposited in bank by Judge Ritter on, to wit, December 29, 1930, the remaining $500 being kept by Judge Ritter and not deposited in bank until, to wit, July 10, 1931. Between the time of such initial payment on said additional fee and April 6, 1931, the said receiver paid said Rankin thereon $5,000. On or about April 6, 1931, the said Rankin received the balance of the said additional fee allowed him by Judge Ritter, said balance amounting to $45,000. Shortly thereafter, on or about April 14, 1931, the said Rankin paid and delivered to the said Judge Ritter, privately, in cash, an additional sum of $2,000. The said Judge Halsted L. Ritter corruptly and unlawfully accepted and received for his own use and benefit from the said A. L. Rankin the aforesaid sums of money, amounting to $4,500.

Wherefore, the said Judge Halsted L. Ritter was and is guilty of money, amounting to $4,500.

Wherefore, the said Judge Halsted L. Ritter was and is guilty of misbehavior and was and is guilty of a high crime and misde-

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Senators, how say you? Is the respondent, Halsted L. Ritter, guilty or not guilty? The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, which resulted as follows:

	G	OTT 1 09
dams	Chavez	Hatch	O'Mahoney
shurst	Clark	Hayden	Radcliffe
achman	Connally	Holt	Reynolds
ailey	Coolidge	La Follette	Robinson
ilbo	Couzens	Lonergan	Russell
lack	Dieterich	McAdoo	Schwellenbach
one	Donahey	McGill	Sheppard
orah	Duffy	McKellar	Shipstead
rown	Fletcher	McNary	Thomas, Utah
ulkley	Frazier	Maloney	Truman
ulow	George	Murphy	Wagner
lyrd	Glass	Murray	Walsh
apper	Guffey	Neely	Wheeler
araway	Harrison	Norris
	NOT	CITIT TO 20

BBB

BBBBBBC

Austin	Carey	Gerry	Johnson
Barbour	Copeland	Gibson	Keyes
Benson	Davis	Hale	King
Burke	Dickinson	Hastings	Long

Metcalf Steiwer Vandenberg Overton Thomas, Okla. Townsend Van Nuys White Minton Pittman Moore Nve

ABSENT, NOT VOTING, OR EXCUSED-12

Logan McCarran Bankhead Costigan Pope Trammell Barkley Gore Tydings Byrnes Norbeck

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. On the first article of impeachment 55 Senators have voted "guilty" and 29 Senators have voted "not guilty." Less than two-thirds of the members present having voted "guilty", the Senate adjudges that the respondent, Halsted L. Ritter, is not guilty as charged in this article.

The clerk will read the second article of impeachment. The Chief Clerk read article II, as follows:

ARTICLE II

That the said Halsted L. Ritter, while holding the office of United States district judge for the southern district of Florida, having been nominated by the President of the United States, confirmed by the Senate of the United States, duly qualified and commissioned, and while acting as a United States district judge for the southern district of Florida, was and is guilty of misbehavior and of high crimes and misdemeanors in office in manner and form as of high crimes and misdemeanors in office in manner and form as

On the 15th day of February 1929 the said Halsted L. Ritter, having been appointed as United States district judge for the southern district of Florida, was duly qualified and commissioned to serve as such during good behavior in office. Immediately prior thereto and for several years the said Halsted L. Ritter had practiced law in said district in partnership with one A. L. Rankin, which partnership was dissolved upon the appointment of said Pitter as said United States district judge.

which partnership was dissolved upon the appointment of said Ritter as said United States district judge.

On the 18th day of July 1928 one Walter S. Richardson was elected trustee in bankruptcy of the Whitehall Building & Operating Co., which company had been adjudicated in said district as a bankrupt, and as such trustee took charge of the assets of said Whitehall Building & Operating Co., which consisted of a hotel property located in Palm Beach in said district. That the said Richardson as such trustee operated said hotel property from the time of his said appointment until its sale on the 3d of January 1929, under the foreclosure of a third mortgage thereon. On the 1st of November and the 13th of December 1929 the said Judge Ritter made orders in said bankruptcy proceedings allowing the said Walter S. Richardson as trustee the sum of $16,500 as compensation for his services as trustee. That before the discharge of said Walter S. Richardson as such trustee, said Richardson, to the said Walter S. Richardson as trustee the sum of $16,500 as compensation for his services as trustee. That before the discharge of said Walter S. Richardson as such trustee, said Richardson, together with said A. L. Rankin, one Ernest Metcalf, one Martin Sweeny, and the said Halsted L. Ritter, entered into an arrangement to secure permission of the holder or holders of at least $50,000 of first-mortgage bonds on said hotel property for the purpose of filing a bill to foreclose the first mortgage on said premises in the court of said Halsted L. Ritter, by which means the said Richardson, Rankin, Metcalf, Sweeny, and Ritter were to continue said property in litigation before said Ritter. On the 30th day of August 1929 the said Walter S. Richardson, in furtherance of said arrangement and understanding, wrote a letter to the said Martin Sweeny, in New York, suggesting the desirability of contacting as many first-mortgage bondholders as possible in order that their cooperation might be secured, directing special attention to Mr. Bert E. Holland, an attorney, whose address was in the Tremont Building in Boston, and who, as cotrustee, was the holder of $50,000 of first-mortgage bonds, the amount of bonds required to institute the contemplated proceedings in Judge Ritter's court.

On October 3, 1929, the said Bert E. Holland, being solicited by the said Sweeny, requested the said Rankin and Metcalf to prepare a complaint to file in said Judge Ritter's court for foreclosure of said first mortgage and the appointment of a receiver. At this time Judge Ritter was holding court in Brooklyn, N. Y., and the said Rankin and Richardson went from West Palm Beach, Fla., to Brooklyn, N. Y., and called upon said Judge Ritter a short time previous to filing the bill for foreclosure and appointment of a receiver of said hotel property.

On October 10, 1929, and before the filing of said bill for foreclosure and receiver, the said Holland withdrew his authority to said Rankin and Meccalf to file said bill. Notwithstanding the said States District Court for the Southern District of Florida, but with the specific request to said clerk to lock up the said bill as soon as it was filed and hold until Judge Ritter's return, so that there would be no newspaper publicity before the matter was heard by Judge Ritter for the appointment of a receiver, which request on the part of the said Rankin was complied with by the said clerk.

On October 16, 1929, the said Holland telegraphed to the said Rankin referring to his previous wire requesting him to refer in

On October 16, 1929, the said Holland telegraphed to the said Rankin, referring to his previous wire requesting him to refrain from filing the bill and insisting that the matter remain in its then status until further instruction was given; and on October 17, 1929, the said Rankin wired to Holland that he would not make an application on his behalf for the appointment of a receiver. On October 28, 1929, a hearing on the complaint and petition for receivership was heard before Judge Halsted L. Ritter at Miami, at which hearing the said Bert E. Holland appeared in person before said Judge Ritter and advised the judge that he wished to withdraw the suit and asked for dismissal of the bill of complaint on the ground that the bill was filed without his authority.

But the said Judge Ritter, fully advised of the facts and circumstances hereinbefore recited, wrongfully and oppressively exercised the powers of his office to carry into execution said plan and agreement theretofore arrived at, and refused to grant the request of the said Holland and made effective the champertous undertaking of the said Richardson and Rankin and appointed the said Richardson and Rankin and appointed the said Richardson. son receiver of the said hotel property, notwithstanding that objection was made to Judge Ritter that said Richardson had been active in fomenting this litigation and was not a proper person to act as receiver.

On October 15, 1929, said Rankin made oath to each of the bills

On October 16, 1929, Said trained made data to each of the bills for intervenors which were filed the next day.

On October 16, 1929, bills for intervention in said foreclosure suit were filed by said Rankin and Metcalf in the names of holders of approximately $5,000 of said first-mortgage bonds, which intervenors did not possess the said requisite $50,000 in bonds required by said first mortgage to bring foreclosure proceedings on the part. by said first mortgage to bring foreclosure proceedings on the part the bondholders.

The said Rankin and Metcalf appeared as attorneys for com-plainants and intervenors, and in response to a suggestion of the said Judge Ritter, the said Metcalf withdrew as attorney for com-plainants and intervenors and said Judge Ritter thereupon ap-pointed said Metcalf as attorney for the said Richardson, the receiver.

And in the further carrying out of said arrangement and under-And in the further carrying out of said arrangement and understanding, the said Richardson employed the said Martin Sweeny and one Bemis, together with Ed Sweeny, as managers of said property, for which they were paid the sum of $60,000 for the management of said hotel for the two seasons the property remained in the custody of said Richardson as receiver.

On or about the 15th day of May 1930 the said Judge Ritter allowed the said Rankin an advance on his fee of $2,500 for his Services in said case.

On or about July 2, 1930, the said Judge Ritter requested Judge Alexander Akerman, also a judge of the United States District Court for the Southern District of Florida, to fix the total allowance for the said Rankin for his services in said case, said request and the reasons therefor being set forth in a letter by the said Judge Ritter in words and figures as follows, to wit:

JULY 2, 1930.

Hon. Alexander Akerman,

United States District Judge, Tampa, Fla.

My Dear Judge: In the case of Holland et al. v. Whitehall Building & Operating Co. (No. 678-M-Eq.), pending in my division, my former law partner, Judge A. L. Rankin, of West Palm Beach, has filed a petition for an order allowing compensation for his services on behalf of the plaintiff.

I do not feel that I should pass, under the circumstances, upon the total allowance to be made Judge Rankin in this matter. I did issue an order, which Judge Rankin will exhibit to you, approving an advance of $2,500 on his claim, which was approved by all attorneys.

by all attorneys.

You will appreciate my position in the matter, and I request you to pass upon the total allowance which should be made Judge Rankin in the premises as an accommodation to me. This will relieve me from any embarrassment hereafter if the question should arise as to my favoring Judge Rankin in this matter by an exorbitant allowance.

Appreciating very much your kindness in this matter, I am,

Yours sincerely,

HALSTED L. RITTER.

In compliance with said request the said Judge Akerman allowed the said Rankin $12,500 in addition to the $2,500 theretofore allowed by Judge Ritter, making a total of $15,000 as the fee of the said Rankin in the said case.

But notwithstanding the said request on the part of said Ritter and the compliance by the said Judge Akerman and the reasons for the making of said request by said Judge Ritter of Judge Akerman, the said Judge Ritter, on the 24th day of December 1930, allowed the said Rankin an additional fee of $75,000.

And on the same date when the receiver in said case paid to the said Rankin as a part of said additional fee the sum of $25,000, said Rankin privately paid and delivered to said Judge Ritter out of the said $25,000 the sum of $2,500 in cash, $2,000 of which the said Judge Ritter deposited in a bank and $500 of which was put in a tin box and not deposited until the 10th day of July 1931, when it was deposited in a bank with an additional sum of $600.

On or about the 6th day of April 1931 the said Rankin received sum of $600.

On or about the 6th day of April 1931 the said Rankin received as a part of the $75,000 additional fee the sum of $45,000, and shortly thereafter, on or before the 14th day of April 1931, the said Rankin paid and delivered to said Judge Ritter, privately and in cash, out of said $45,000 the sum of $2,000.

The said Judge Halsted L. Ritter corruptly and unlawfully accepted and received for his own use and benefit from the said.

Rankin the aforesaid sums of $2,500 in cash and $2,000 in cash, amounting in all to $4,500.

amounting in all to $4,000.

Of the total allowance made to said A. L. Rankin in said foreclosure suit, amounting in all to $90,000, the following sums were paid out by said Rankin with the knowledge and consent of said Judge Ritter, to wit: To said Walter S. Richardson, the sum of $5,000; to said Metcalf, the sum of $10,000; to Shutts & Bowen, also attorneys for the receiver, the sum of $25,000; and to said
Halsted L. Ritter, the sum of $4,500.

In addition to the said sum of $5,000 received by the said Richardson, as aforesaid, said Ritter, by order in said proceedings, allowed said Richardson a fee of $30,000 for services as such

The said fees allowed by said Judge Ritter to A. L. Rankin (who receiver.

The said fees allowed by said Judge Ritter to A. L. Rankin (who had been a law partner of said judge immediately before said judge's appointment as judge) as solicitor for the plaintiff in said case were excessive and unwarranted, and said judge profited personally thereby in that out of the money so allowed said solicitor he received personally, privately, and in cash $4,500 for his own use and benefit.

While the Whitehall Hotel was being operated in receivership under said proceeding pending in said court (and in which proceeding the receiver in charge of said hotel by appointment of said Judge was allowed large compensation by said judge) the said judge stayed at said hotel from time to time without cost to himself and received free rooms, free meals, and free valet service, and, with the knowledge and consent of said judge, members of his family, including his wife; his son, Thurston Ritter; his daughter, Mrs. M. R. Walker; his secretary, Mrs. Lloyd C. Hooks; and her husband, Lloyd C. Hooks, each likewise on various occasions stayed at said hotel without cost to themselves or to said judge, and received free rooms, and some or all of them received from said hotel free meals and free valet service—all of which expenses were borne by the said receivership, to the loss and damage of the creditors whose interests were involved therein. therein.

therein.

The said judge willfully failed and neglected to perform his duty to conserve the assets of the Whitehall Building & Operating Co. in receivership in his court, but, to the contrary, permitted waste and dissipation of its assets, to the loss and damage of the creditors of said corporation, and was a party to the waste and dissipation of such assets while under the control of his said court, and personally profited thereby in the manner and form hereinabove specifically set out.

Wherefore the said Judge Halsted L. Ritter was and is guilty of misbehavior, and was and is guilty of a high crime and misdemeanor in office.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Senators, how say you? Is the respondent, Halsted L. Ritter, guilty or not guilty? The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, which resulted as

	GU	JILTY-52
Adams Ashurst Bachman Bilbo Black Bone Borah Brown Bulkley Bulow Byrd Capper Caraway	Chavez Clark Connally Coolidge Couzens Dieterich Donahey Duffy Fletcher Frazier Glass Guffey Harrison	Hatch Hayden Holt King La Follette Lonergan McAdoo McGill McKellar Maloney Murphy Murray Neely	Norris O'Mahoney Radcliffe Reynolds Robinson Russell Schwellenbach Sheppard Shipstead Thomas, Utah Wagner Walsh Wheeler
Caraway		GUILTY-32	Wilderer Charles
Austin Bailey Barbour Benson Burke Carey Copeland Davis	Dickinson George Gerry Gibson Hale Hastings Johnson Keyes	Long McNary Metcalf Minton Moore Nye Overton Pittman	Smith Steiwer Thomas, Okla. Townsend Truman Vandenberg Van Nuys White

	ADSENT, NOT VOING, OR EACOSED—12
Bankhead Barkley Byrnes	Costigan Gore Lewis	Logan McCarran Norbeck	Pope Trammell Tydings
Dylues	TICATO	ATOL DOCK	-1 4

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. On the second article of impeachment 52 Senators have voted "guilty" and 32 Senators have voted "not guilty." Less than two-thirds of the members present having voted "guilty", the Senate adjudges that the respondent, Halsted L. Ritter, is not guilty as charged in this article.

The clerk will read the third article of impeachment. The legislative clerk read article III, as follows:

ARTICLE III

That the said Halsted L. Ritter, having been nominated by the

That the said Halsted L. Ritter, having been nominated by the President of the United States, confirmed by the Senate of the United States, duly qualified and commissioned, and, while acting as a United States district judge for the southern district of Florida, was and is guilty of a high crime and misdemeanor in office in manner and form as follows, to wit:

That the said Halsted L. Ritter, while such judge, was guilty of a violation of section 258 of the Judicial Code of the United States of America (U. S. C., Annotated, title 28, sec. 373) making it unlawful for any judge appointed under the authority of the United States to exercise the profession or employment of counsel or attorney, or to be engaged in the practice of the law, in that after the employment of the law firm of Ritter & Rankin (which, at the time of the appointment of Halsted L. Ritter to be judge of the United States District Court for the Southern District of Florida, was composed of Halsted L. Ritter and A. L. Rankin) in the case of Trust Co. of Georgia and Robert G. Stephens, trustee, against Brazilian Court Building Corporation and others, no. 5704, in the Circuit Court of the Flitteenth Judicial Circuit of Florida, and after the fee of $4,000 which had been agreed upon at the outset of said employment had been fully paid to the firm of Ritter & Rankin, and after Halsted L. Ritter had, on, to wit, February 15, 1929, become judge of the United States District Court for the Southern District of Florida, Judge Ritter on, to wit, March 11, 1929, wrote a letter to Charles A. Brodek, of counsel for Mulford Realty Corporation (the client which his former law firm had been representing in said litigation), stating that there had been much extra and unanticipated work in the case, that he was then a Federal judge; that his partner, A. L. Rankin, would carry had been representing in said litigation), stating that there had been much extra and unanticipated work in the case, that he was then a Federal judge; that his partner, A. L. Rankin, would carry through further proceedings in the case, but that he, Judge Ritter, would be consulted about the matter until the case was all closed up; and that "this matter is one among very few which I am assuming to continue my interest in until finally closed up"; and stating specifically in said letter:

"I do not know whether any appeal will be taken in the case or not, but, if so, we hope to get Mr. Howard Paschal or some other person as receiver who will be amenable to our directions, and the hotel can be operated at a profit, of course, pending the appeal. We shall demand a very heavy supersedeas bond, which I doubt whether D'Esterre can give"; and further that he was "of course, primarily interested in getting some money in the case", and that he thought "$2,000 more by way of attorneys' fees should be allowed"; and asked that he be communicated with direct about the matter, giving his post-office box number. On, to wit, March 13, 1929, said Brodek replied favorably, and on March 30, 1929, a check of Brodek, Raphael & Eisner, a law firm of New York City, representing Mulford Realty Corporation, in which Charles A. Brodek, senior member of the firm of Brodek, Raphael & Eisner, was one of the directors, was drawn, payable to the order of "Hon. Halsted L. Ritter" for $2,000, and which was duly endorsed "Hon. Halsted L. Ritter"—H. L. Ritter", and was paid on, to wit, April 4, 1929, and the proceeds thereof were received and appropriated by Judge Ritter to his own individual use and benefit, without advising his said former partner that said $2,000 had been received, without consulting with his former partner thereabout, and without the knowledge or consent of his said former partner, appropriated the entire amount thus solicited and received to the use and benefit of himself, the said Judge Ritter.

At the time said letter was amount thus solicited and received to the use and benefit of himself, the said Judge Ritter.

At the time said letter was written by Judge Ritter and said $2,000 received by him, Mulford Realty Corporation held and owned large interests in Florida real estate and citrus groves, and a large amount of securities of the Olympia Improvement Corporation, which was a company organized to develop and promote Olympia, Fla., said holdings being within the territorial jurisdiction of the United States district court, of which Judge Ritter was a judge from to wit February 15, 1929 tion of the United States district court, of which Judge Ritter was a judge, from, to wit, February 15, 1929.

After writing said letter of March 11, 1929, Judge Ritter further exercised the profession or employment of counsel or attorney, or engaged in the practice of the law, with relation to said case.

Which acts of said judge were calculated to bring his office into disrepute, constitute a violation of section 258 of the Judicial Code of the United States of America (U. S. C., Annotated, title 28, sec. 373), and constitute a high crime and misdemeanor within the meaning and intent of section 4 of article II of the Constitution of the United States the United States.

Wherefore the said Judge Halsted L. Ritter was and is guilty of a high misdemeanor in office

Adams

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Senators, how say you? Is the respondent, Halsted L. Ritter, guilty or not guilty? The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, which resulted as follows: GUILTY-44

AAUGHAN	Cupper	duncy	MOGTA
Ashurst	Caraway	Harrison	Norris
Bachman	Chavez	Hayden	Pittman
Bilbo	Clark	Holt	Radcliffe
Black	Connally	La Follette	Reynolds
Bone	Coolidge	Maloney	Robinson
Borah	Couzens	McAdoo	Sheppard
Brown	Dieterich	McGill	Shipstead
Bulkley	Donahev	McKellar	Thomas, Utah
Bulow	Fletcher	Murphy	Walsh
Byrd	Frazier	Murray	Wheeler
	NOT	GUILTY-39
Austin	George	Long	Smith
Bailey	Gerry	McNary	Steiwer
Barbour	Gibson	Metcalf	Thomas, Okla.
Benson	Hale	Minton	Townsend
Burke	Hastings	Moore	Truman
Carey	Hatch	Nye	Vandenberg
Copeland	Johnson	O'Mahoney	Van Nuys
Davis	Keyes	Overton	Wagner
Dickinson	King	Russell	White
Duffy	Lonergan	Schwellenbach
A	BSENT, NOT VO	OTING, OR EXCU	SED—13
Bankhead	Glass	Logan	Pope
Barkley	Gore	McCarran	Trammell
Byrnes	Lewis	Norbeck	Tydings
Costigan	THE RESERVE THE PERSON NAMED IN		The state of the s

Murray

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. On the third article of impeachment 44 Senators have voted "guilty" and 39 Senators have voted "not guilty." Less than two-thirds of the members present having voted "guilty", the Senate adjudges that the respondent, Halsted L. Ritter, is not guilty as charged in this article.

The clerk will read the next article of impeachment. The Chief Clerk read article IV, as follows:

ARTICLE IV

That the said Halsted L. Ritter, having been nominated by the President of the United States, confirmed by the Senate of the United States, duly qualified and commissioned, and, while acting as a United States district judge for the southern district of Florida, was and is guilty of a high crime and misdemeanor in office in manner and form as follows, to wit:

That the said Halsted L. Ritter, while such judge, was guilty of a violation of section 258 of the Judicial Code of the United States of America (U. S. C., Annotated, title 28, sec. 373) making it unlawful for any judge appointed under the authority of the United States to exercise the profession or employment of counsel or attorney, or to be engaged in the practice of the law, in that Judge Ritter did exercise the profession or employment of counsel or attorney, or engage in the practice of the law, representing J. R. Francis with relation to the Boca Raton matter and the segregation and saving of the interest of J. R. Francis therein, or in obtaining a deed or deeds to J. R. Francis from the Spanish River Land Co. to certain pieces of realty, and in the Edgewater Ocean Beach Development Co. matter, for which services the said Judge Ritter received from the said J. R. Francis the sum of $7,500.

Which acts of said judge were calculated to bring his office into disrepute, constitute a violation of the law above recited, and constitute a high crime and misdemeanor within the meaning and intent of section 4 of article II of the Constitution of the United States.

Wherefore the said Judge Halsted L. Ritter was and is guilty of a

Wherefore the said Judge Halsted L. Ritter was and is guilty of a

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Senators, how say you? Is the respondent, Halsted L. Ritter, guilty or not guilty? The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, which resulted as follows: GUILTY-36

Ashurst	Capper	Frazier	Murray
Bachman	Caraway	Guffey	Neely
Bilbo	Chavez	Hayden	Norris
Bone	Connally	Holt	Reynolds
Borah	Coolidge	La Follette	Robinson
Brown	Couzens	McAdoo	Sheppard
Bulkley	Dieterich	McGill	Thomas, Utah
Bulow	Donahey	McKellar	Walsh
Byrd	Fletcher	Murphy	Wheeler
	NOT	GUILTY-48
Adams	Duffy	Lonergan	Russell
Austin	George	Long	Schwellenbach
Bailey	Gerry	McNary	Shipstead
Barbour	Gibson	Maloney	Smith
Benson	Glass	Metcalf	Steiwer
Black	Hale	Minton	Thomas, Okla.
Burke	Harrison	Moore	Townsend
Carey	Hastings	Nye	Truman
Clark	Hatch	O'Mahoney	Vandenberg
Copeland	Johnson	Overton	Van Nuys
Davis	Keyes	Pittman	Wagner
Dickinson	King	Radcliffe	White
A	BSENT, NOT VO	OTING, OR EXCU	SED-12
Bankhead	Costigan	Logan	Pope
Barkley	Gore	McCarran	Trammell

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. On the fourth article of impeachment 36 Senators have voted "guilty" and 48 Senators have voted "not guilty." Less than two-thirds of the members present having voted "guilty", the Senate adjudges that the respondent, Halsted L. Ritter, is not guilty as charged in this article.

Norbeck

Tydings

The clerk will read the next article of impeachment. The Chief Clerk read article V, as follows:

Lewis

ARTICLE V

That the said Halsted L. Ritter, having been nominated by the President of the United States, confirmed by the Senate of the United States, duly qualified and commissioned, and, while acting as a United States district judge for the southern district of Florida, was and is guilty of a high crime and misdemeanor in office in manner and form as follows, to wit:

That the said Halsted L. Ritter, while such judge, was guilty of violation of section 146 (b) of the Revenue Act of 1928, making it unlawful for any person willfully to attempt in any manner to evade or defeat the payment of the income tax levied in and by said Revenue Act of 1928, in that during the year 1929 said Judge Ritter received gross taxable income—over and above his salary as judge—to the amount of some $12,000, yet paid no income tax thereon.

Among the fees included in said gross taxable income for 1929 were the extra fee of $2,000 solicited and received by Judge Ritter in the Brazilian Court case as described in article III, and the fee of $7,500 received by Judge Ritter from J. R. Francis.

Wherefore the said Judge Halsted L. Ritter was and is guilty of a high misdemeanor in office.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Senators, how say you? Is the respondent, Halsted L. Ritter, guilty or not guilty? The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, which resulted as follows:

Glass

GUILTY-36

Byrd

Ashurst	Caraway	Guffey	Neely
Bachman	Chavez	Harrison	Pittman
Bilbo	Coolidge	Hayden	Reynolds
Black	Couzens	Holt	Robinson
Borah	Dieterich	La Follette	Sheppard
Brown	Donahey	McAdoo	Shipstead
Bulkley	Fletcher	McKellar	Walsh
Bulow	Frazier	Murphy	Wheeler
	NOT	GUILTY-48
Austin	Dickinson	Long	Russell
Bailey	Duffy	McGill	Schwellenbach
Barbour	George	McNary	Smith
Benson	Gerry	Maloney	Steiwer
Bone	Gibson	Metcalf	Thomas, Okla.
Burke	Hale	Minton	Thomas, Utah
Capper	Hastings	Moore	Townsend
Carey	Hatch	Norris	Truman
Clark	Johnson	Nye	Vandenberg
Connally	Keyes	O'Mahoney	Van Nuys
Copeland	King	Overton	Wagner
Davis	Lonergan	Radcliffe	White

ABSENT, NOT VOTING, OR EXCUSED-12

Costigan Bankhead Logan McCarran Pope Gore Lewis Trammell Tydings Norbeck Byrnes

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. On the fifth article of impeachment 36 Senators have voted "guilty", and 48 Senators have voted "not guilty." Less than two-thirds of the members present having voted "guilty", the Senate adjudges that the respondent, Halsted L. Ritter, is not guilty as charged in this article.

The clerk will read the next article of impeachment. The Chief Clerk read article VI, as follows:

